If you want to find God, and enter into a personal, living communion with him, you do not need to read many books, nor go on pilgrimages to sacred shrines, nor build a Babel tower to climb up into his abode; you only need to go into your own soul. The kingdom of God is within you. God has been dealing with you from within, as the Apostle says: "It is God who worketh in you." The light that is in you is the light of Him, who lighteth every man coming into the world: the impulse of kindness and goodness and generosity is the fruit of the Spirit of God in you; the pull on your spirit, the upward reach and longing of your hopes and desires is the urge of God within you. The light that is in you is God.

"A picket frozen on duty;
A mother starved for her brood;
Socrates drinking the hemlock;
And Jesus on the rood:
And the millions, who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway have trod;
Some of us call it Duty.
And others call it God."

And I think God is the right name. And I think that if you will look within your own soul you will find God there. The only way for you ever to have a vital religion is to be brought face to face with the divine presence and power at work in your own soul: and the heart of religion, and your response to the call of the deep is to establish living relations with this Power.

Dr. Newton Finds America Friendless

Editor's Note: In his first sermon during July at the City Temple, London, Joseph Fort Newton, of Cedar Rapids, said that every visit between the two countries must be made a tie, because many dark and sinister influences were at work to provoke division and misunderstanding. A correspondent of the Chicago News visited Dr. Newton at his hotel and asked him to state more fully his ideas on America's standing in Europe. Dr. Newton will soon be London's leading preacher, as he will no doubt accept the call to the pulpit of the City Temple; this fact lends great significance to his recent utterances. The following is a portion of the Chicago newspaper man's interview with the famous preacher:

I MENTIONED Dr. Newton's allusion to the need for cultivating a better Anglo-American understanding, and asked why he made it.

"Because," he said, "next to the tragedy of world war—if not the last and worst calamity that could befall humanity—would be an estrangement between the two great nations having one language, one tradition and one common ideal of civilization."

"Do you think we are in imminent danger of such an estrangement?" I asked.

"I do, if things are allowed to drift," said Dr. Newton. "Frankly, I was not prepared for the feeling against America which exists in England today; and yet I can understand it. It is widespread and it is sometimes so intense as to verge on anti-Americanism—though I am told it is less bitter than earlier in the crisis.

AMERICA'S GREED FOR DOLLARS.

"My English friends say that it is not so in any way that really matters; but I know better—and Americans here confirm my impression. It is perhaps not so manifest among the discerning, but with the man in the street it is different. He feels that America betrayed the common cause of humanity in behalf of dollars."

"Do you think that what Americans have done privately, in the way of money and personal help for the allies, has modified this feeling in any degree?" I asked.

"Doubtless the fact that we did at least something has prevented the feeling from growing more intense than it is. But we cannot set a few good works over against our apparently sordid effort to preserve a safe balance in our attitude between right and wrong.

"After all, what have we done privately? Hardly enough to be very impressive to the allies by comparison with the enormous volume of their own private good works in this struggle. I understand that we contributed $7,000,000 to our own Belgian relief commission during the first year. Do you happen to know how much the commission received from this side?"

"I was told last summer that about $16,000,000 had been received in cash from entente sources," I replied.

"That would, of course, be almost entirely Great Britain and France," Dr. Newton reflected; "if we put the combined population of those countries at, say, 80,000,000, it would figure out—wouldn't it—that the British and French contributed to our own commission about 20 cents a head, as against 7 cents a head on the part of our own people. Of course, the British and French have subscribed liberally to all sorts of relief funds of their own, for Belgium, Serbia, Poland and what not.

MORAL RESPECT OF ALLIES LOST.

"Do you think the feeling here is due to our not getting into the war?" I asked.

"From what I can gather it was not so much that we were kept out of the war—that hurt, and still hurts—but the appalling way in which it was done. The seeming selfishness, not to say moral callousness of it all, first bewildered and then enraged—the more so because the war is manifestly, in large measure, in defense of democracy.

"Nothing is surer than that we have forfeited the moral respect of the allied nations—and most of all France, to whose aid we owe our existence as a republic. Having lost that respect, our republic will have no part in the settlement after the war; and our suggestions to that end will be keenly resented.

"The feeling against America will continue, no matter what the future of our politics may be; nothing can erase the past. It is too late to go into the war—even that would be resented now as having a selfish purpose. Therefore it behooves us to do all within our power—to see that this feeling of bitterness does not grow and gather force. As it is, conditions conducive to actual hostility are not far away, distrust having given away to dislike, in large measure."

"What are the dark and sinister influences at work to provoke misunderstanding, to which you referred in your sermon?" I asked.

INSIDIOUS PROPAGANDA IN U. S.

"Most obvious of all has been the insidious propaganda with which our country has been flooded and which began even before the war, with the patent purpose of creating misunderstanding between us and England. Fortunately, it has not deceived our people very much as to the facts, but it has presented to our man in the street such a persistent, distorted picture of English motives as to be very harmful. Harmful also has been the disposition of England to preserve too much silence toward us in the face of this thing. But I understand that this disposition is now happily changing."

"What would you suggest to counteract these influences?" I asked.

"There must be frankness, for one thing. We must speak plainly, in behalf of a clearer understanding of conditions as well as of motives. The facts must be made known on both sides and the real feeling of the people. Our American press must allow its correspondents to present not only the facts, but the background and interpretation of the facts. Our people must be made to feel the meaning of it all and how the people on this side feel and think.

ISOLATION NO LONGER POSSIBLE.

"For another thing, we must wake up to the fact that isolation is no longer possible on this earth. Our traditional policy is no longer possible, even if it were desirable. The world is too small, interests too identical. If we are to have peace on earth—and not a mere truce—it must be a peace of co-operation, kept by a league of the world.

"Nor is that all. Our republic will find itself at the close of the war without a friend on earth. We now know, if we have learned anything, that anything may happen. If America means to stand alone she must be strong enough to do it. In any case no neutrality, be it ever so profitable and benevolent, will exempt us from the results of the European anguish."

The Fundamentals of Jesus

By W. A. Moore.

THIS is the day of opportunities before unknown. Just the other day the Pilgrim Fathers came to our eastern shore, but they never saw a sewing machine, although in your day 1,000,000 are made annually; they never saw a writing pen, although today a single factory manufactures 150,000,000 every week. They never saw a buggy nor a locomotive; the first horse car was not used until 1831; the cable car until 1873; no trolley car until 1883. They never saw a bicycle; never heard of a Packard, a Cadillac, or an Overland; never saw a watch, although today we can buy one for $1; never saw a pin; never even saw a button, although 2,000,000,000 will be released from service tonight when the people of the United States get ready for bed. What would life be without these things? Lamech lived to 777 years, Adam 930, Noah 950, Jared 962, and Methuselah 969, but you, in 50 years, will live 1,000 times more than these of another day.

* * *

True, the teaching of the Saviour of the world had come to our Pilgrim Fathers, but they had no way of communicating it to others. These are marvelous days. Your opportunities are unlimited.

Here are our Saviour's fundamentals: "A man's life consists not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them." "Look not every man on his own things, but every man on the things of another." "Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good." "He that believeth on Me shall never die." What will you do about letting the rest of the world know what God has said to us? Will you give no life of service in this day of such marvelous possibility?

* * *

Today the world is waking to the advantage of his principles in national as well as individual life. Nations are no longer to be considered great because of their many miles of railroad, their great bridges, their wheat and coal fields; not even to be considered great because of their great canals, cities and battleships. Nations now are to be considered great only when they do much for their people; when they produce great men; when they teach [illegible]; when they trust in justice rather than in might; when they live the newer patriotism which treats with kindness every immigrant to their shores. Your great joy in life will be to help the wide world to know more fully the fundamental facts of the religion of Christ.

* * *

Not only have you the opportunity to help teach the world, but this life is your opportunity to get ready for the life that is to come. Do not fail to observe this important fact—all must die. Ask "What then?" Infidel said to Christian, "Like the ox in yonder field I die without fear of death." "But," replied Christian, "have you any hope?" Infidel was silent. Christian continued, "You are twice like the ox; you neither fear death nor have you any hope for the life to come." Be not deceived; you are infinitely more than the brute about you. Give some attention to your own personal soul. Life is given you that you may bless your fellow men and that you may get ready for the life that is more than this.

First Christian Church, Tacoma, Wash.

A Triumph of Modern Surgery

AMONG the many marvelous feats of delicate and skilful surgery achieved in the modern war-hospitals some of the most striking, as the rarest, have been those in which the operator relieved the heart itself of the presence of an intruding body, such as a bullet or a bit of shell. Two such are recorded to the credit of a French surgeon, Dr. Beaussenat. In May, 1915, this physician presented to the French Academy of Medicine a wounded man from whose heart he had removed by cardiotomy a fragment of a grenade which had lodged in the cavity of the right ventricle. The case was considered unique. It demonstrated an unexpected tolerance of the heart for foreign bodies, for a considerable period of time had elapsed between the wound and the operation. It showed, too, that other similar cases may be operated on with a chance of success.

By an extraordinary coincidence another almost identical case fell into the hands of the same surgeon. This was presented to the Academy of Sciences on April 10. It is thus described in a recent magazine:

"Corporal D., aged thirty-one, infantryman, was wounded in a charge at Eparges, September 7, 1914. He was observed to have a wound in the left side of the thorax. A radiograph showed no missile, and the wounded man was discharged in a fortnight with the strange diagnosis of peritonitis."

But his health failed to return. His breathing was difficult, he could not lie down, and he had other distressing symptoms:

"In consequence of these a new radiograph was made, this time under better conditions. The picture revealed the amazing fact that a shrapnel-ball was in the same locality as the heart, probably in the interior of the ventricular cavity. On the 8th of September, 1915, just a year and a day after the entrance of the bullet, Dr. Beaussenat operated to remove it. A large flap was cut and folded so as to lay bare the heart. By exploration with the fingers the ball was discovered to be in the right ventricle, near the point. The surgeon lifted the heart from the pericardium and seized the point solidly between the middle and index fingers of the left hand, pushing the projectile toward the summit of the organ, where it was held firmly.

"Two silk threads were then passed through the thickness of the ventricle, parallel and nearly half an inch from each other. While an assistant drew these apart, thus lifting and holding the ventricular wall, Dr. Beaussenat made an incision between the two threads at the level of the projectile; on arriving at this he seized it and extracted it. There was a formidable hemorrhage. . . . But the middle and index fingers, aided by the thumb, quickly stopped it, and the two threads, brought toward each other this time, were crossed and tied.

"Five stitches were taken to bring the lips of the incision together, the heart was replaced in the pericardium, this was sewed up, and finally the flap on the thorax was folded back and sutured."

The first symptoms after this wonderful piece of work were very disquieting. There were great pain, agitation, delirium, a rapid and intermittent pulse, "precordial anguish." However, on the fifteenth day, the patient was out of danger, and when he was presented before the Academy in April, 1916, seven months later, he was perfectly well. He is incommoded only by a slight difficulty in breathing when walking fast. On auscultation the heart appears normal. His case will be kept under observation, however, to see whether the cardiac scar will not trouble him more in the course of time. Similar cases are reported both from England and from Germany.

God's Masterpiece

By Hubert W. Kelley.

When I have seen the sun melt in the west,
In scarlet, gold, and sometimes blue and gray,
I think that God is mixing colors there,
To paint the beauties of the coming day.

And when, at last, with even's curtains drawn,
I lie amid the darkness and the hush,
The night wind's rippling rustle through the trees—
Methinks the swishing of a mighty brush.

And when I feel the harbingers of dawn,
And know, to calm pure night, a day is born,
I pull the draperies of light aside,
And there behold God's masterpiece, the morn.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among union churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union church that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

Federated Church of Ottawa, Kan.

THE Federated Church of Ottawa, Kan., was organized January 1, 1915. As finally constituted, it is composed of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches, and an increasing number of members of other denominations who hold membership in the federated church directly, without regard to the federating bodies. The federation was considered by the Lutheran and United Presbyterian churches without having it go to a vote. It is probable that the United Presbyterians will come into the federation later. The Disciples, with whom the movement toward federation started, finally refused cooperation.

* * *

With respect to the faith and purpose of this church, the by-laws state:

"1. We believe in God, the Father, whose will is the perfect law of life, which, obeyed, will insure the coming of the true social order—the Kingdom of Justice, Righteousness and Peace.

"We believe that the deepest need of this age is the realization in all human relationships of this will as revealed in the life and words of Jesus.

"Firm in this belief and seeking through Jesus that faith and love adequate to sustain us in doing the Father's will, we unite our efforts under the inspiration and the guidance of the Divine Spirit to the bringing of the Kingdom of God on earth, and we invite and welcome to our fellowship of service all who are in sympathy with these aims.

"2. Members are expected to be faithful in all the spiritual duties essential to the Christian life, attend the services as regularly as possible, give regularly to its support and share in its organized work.

Any person may become a federated member of this church by furnishing to the board of deacons satisfactory evidence that he or she is a member of some other Christian church in good and regular standing. Federated members shall have all the rights, privileges and duties of other members.

"3. Requests for letters of dismissal may be acted upon at any of the public services of the church, and, when granted, a certificate of dismissal shall be issued to another church.

"4. Any member, upon application, may be released by the church at its discretion from covenant obligation to it.

"5. All requests for the use of the church buildings other than the regular services or meetings, shall be referred to the church owning the building."

* * *

As is usual in such federations, each church maintains its own organization and is at liberty to withdraw from the federation by giving notice of such intention a stipulated time in advance. Each church elects five trustees upon the board of trustees of the federated church. A board of ten deacons is chosen in a similar manner.

The federated church assumes its responsibility for, and seeks to discharge its duty to the community with regard to all social and moral problems. It is aggressively identified with all movements looking toward general progress. It is at the present time seeking to secure for the community the services of a visiting nurse and a public welfare officer, and the establishment of a community center.

* * *

The pastor of the church is the Rev. W. A. Powell. In a recent communication Dr. Powell says, "I am interested to learn what the Disciples' 'Plea for Union' means today from representative men. The solution which some of their ministers propose is that all from other churches be admitted at first on equal terms, but that thereafter all received shall be immersed. The Christian church here voted down the Articles of Federation, which originally provided for an equal liberty for their practice of immersion and weekly observance of communion with the practice of the other churches. I was informed that they would lose fellowship with the Disciple churches if they participate in the federation. I believe, however, that we are helping to answer Christ's prayer 'that they all may be one,' but am disappointed in finding sectarian prejudice or inertia so strong in some quarters."

* * *

Dr. Powell here voices the challenge to the Disciples which is presented with ever increasing insistence by the actual problems of Christian Union in our time. The future of the Disciples of Christ depends upon whether or not they have the courage to undertake the solution of these problems inductively. Let not the pioneers of Christian Union relinquish their leadership. Let them not fail to make as constructive a contribution to the solution of the religious problems set by the opening years of the twentieth century as did their fathers to those of the earlier decades of the nineteenth.

The above is one of a series of articles describing various union churches in the United States. The Christian Century desires to know of other churches striving to practice Christian Union. Correspondence with such churches is solicited by Dr. Jensen, who is conducting this department. Any reader will confer a favor upon us who will advise us of the names and location of such churches. As a suggestion of the kind of information desired we append the following list of questions:

1. Name of organization.
2. Date organized.
3. Number of members.
4. Average attendance.
5. Location (if rural, give direction and distance of nearest station).
6. What were the reasons for forming the union?
7. What denominational organizations were represented?
8. How was the union formed, and what difficulties were met, if any?
9. How is the property of union congregation held?
10. How are the church's current expenses provided for?
11. How is the minister chosen, and what are his relations to his denomination?
12. What has been the effect upon:
    a. The spiritual and moral life of the community?
    b. Attendance at Sunday school and preaching services?
    c. Upon the proportion of men in attendance?
    d. Upon the proportion of young people?
13. How are new members admitted:
    a. From other churches?
    b. By primary obedience?
14. Does the church contribute to the support of state, national and foreign missionary, educational and benevolent societies? How and to what extent?
15. Give brief sketch of the church's program for religious worship, education and social service.
16. Will you enclose copies of plans of union, constitution, by-laws, etc.
17. What advantages have been gained by union?
18. Disadvantages?
19. What is the outlook for the future of your church?
20. Do you know of other congregations of similar nature? Give names and addresses of correspondents of such churches, where possible.

Remarks:

The Moral Leaders of Israel

BY HERBERT L. WILLETT, Ph. D.

FIRST VOLUME NOW READY, AT $1.00

Address

Disciples Publication Society

700 E. 40th Street Chicago, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

EDITORIAL

WHAT MAKES A CHURCH CATHOLIC?

THE Disciples of Christ have sometimes talked of themselves as "the ultimate Protestantism." There is a deeper sense in which they may be a section of the ultimate Catholicism.

Dr. William A. R. Goodwin has written a book on "The Church Enchained." He protests against the "high church" claims of his denomination, the Protestant Episcopal, and insists upon a more historical definition of the word "catholic" than has obtained in a certain party of his communion. A truly "catholic" church is tested by its willingness to be the mother of all Christians. In the Reformation, a Protestant church was often more catholic than the church that claimed the complete and only catholicity.

Some churches willingly adopt a sectarian attitude. Saying frankly there are other denominations for those who do not agree with their peculiar teaching or practice, they exclude all but those who are of like mind with regard to creed or ordinance.

The Disciples of Christ in the beginning adopted a point of view toward creeds which was truly catholic. Proclaiming a catholic creed, "Jesus is the Christ," they have never been regarded as denominational in this particular. At many other points the catholicity of the Disciples can be demonstrated.

In one matter alone, their unwillingness to give fellowship in their local congregations to those Christians who have received baptism in a manner which they regard as defective, they departed from a truly catholic or denominational point of view, and became sectarian. The word sect implies division, and any attitude that keeps Christians apart is sectarian and not catholic.

It is a great ideal these days for a church to put itself in accord with the best of Christian history. We can never leave behind the lessons of the Reformation, but we must not lose the even more valuable lesson of a church struggling through history against division. It is essential to the very being of Christianity that the church be not only evangelical but, in the deeper meaning, catholic. What Christian unity waits upon is the appearance of a fellowship of undenominational churches willing to "mother" all Christians.

The Disciples of Christ were meant to be just that thing.

ALTERED RELIGIOUS OPINION

RELIGIOUS opinion is often confounded with the deep foundations of religion. The history of doctrine is a most illuminating and a most hope-inspiring discipline. In every age when people have been really alive, there has been a doctrinal crisis. Think of the age when the church might easily have become Unitarian, or to be more exact, Arian. Think of the significance of the changes that arose in St. Augustine's time.. History has a sobering effect upon the bombastic claims of some who think that our age is unique in the matter of its doctrinal flux.

Yet we are not to discount the idea that Christianity is now undergoing a new formulation.

There is a new thought about God. Under an evangelical sentimentalism, he had been degraded in our thought to the level of an American papa, good-natured and easy-going. We are beginning to think of God in a deeper way than this..

We think with new appreciation of the humanity of Jesus Christ. This was in the past emphasized equally with his divinity, but we had forgotten it.

The Bible, too, is no book of magic. "The divinity of the Book" is fast becoming an obsolete phrase. We no longer open it at random to find in the prophecies a prediction of a present course of action for ourselves. The Bible is now for the church the record of the experience of men who walked with God. It reveals both the mind of God and the possibilities of human life.

Our thought of the church is undergoing a change. Instead of regarding the church as a kind of appendage to Christianity, under the whip of the social viewpoint we are coming to conceive the church as invested with unique dignity and worthfulness.

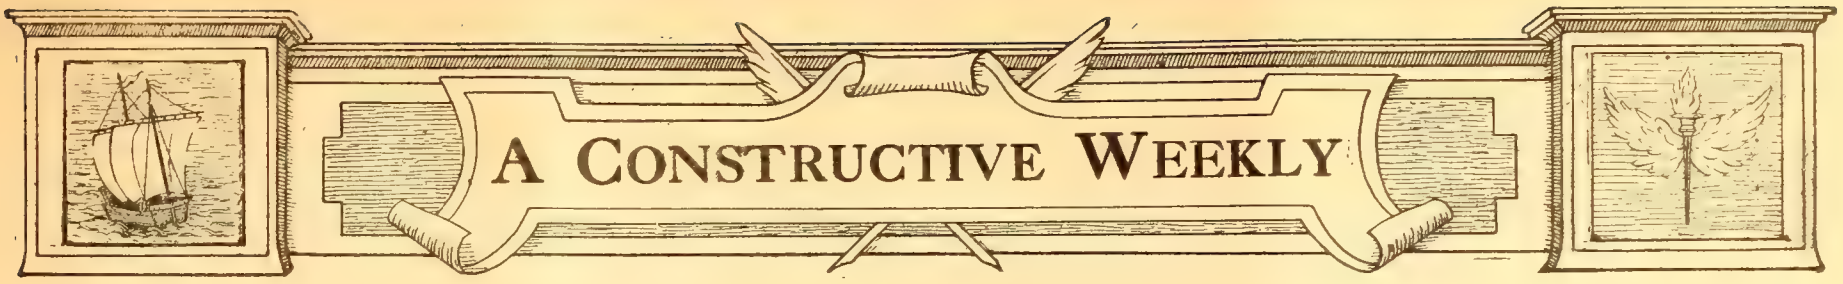
God has not left his world. The truth is able to take care of itself without any steadying hand on the ark. Our current change is bringing about better and not worse conceptions of religion.

WHERE ARE YOUR CHILDREN?

IN Cologne, Germany, a score of boys and girls were arrested on the street late in the evening recently. In the court they were defended by their parents on the ground that these parents had allowed them to go to a moving picture show and that the children had a right to be upon the street. The court admonished the parents that this night life for children was unwholesome and was producing evil results. The parents were warned to keep their children at home.

In a town in Central Illinois the Catholic priest saw a fourteen year old girl of his flock on the street at night acting in a flirtatious way. He took the girl across his knee and spanked her and sent her home with the message that he hoped he would not have to do a mother's duty again.

Any one who is about the streets of an American city in the evenings finds these very conditions. Moving picture show crowds are turned out upon the streets with young children unchaperoned to find their way home any way they will. The harvest requires no stretch of the imagination to conceive.



There is a kind of good natured optimism in the American home. It assumes that "no one of our family ever did that." This seems enough guarantee that no one in that family ever will go bad. Yet heredity is a far less potent force in life than environment. A moral contagion in a group of young people will break down all the inhibitions that have been built up by a careless and easy-going family.

The solution is not repression, but interest and participation in the life of the growing children of the family. The father owes part of his time and conversation to his boys. The mother has no deeper social obligation than to give her daughters wholesome and strengthening views of life and duty.

RELIGION AND THE SAVING HABIT

A HOMELY proverb warns the bride that, "A woman can throw out of the back door with a spoon faster than a man can bring in at the front door with a shovel." At periodic intervals, Americans confess their national sin, the sin of waste.

A church we know has adopted a plan of conducting a savings bank for the children where deposits of one cent are received. Involving considerable labor for the promoters, in a single year the children of that parish save hundreds of dollars. The moral lesson of that experience will never leave them.

The Northwestern Banker, of Des Moines, urges that the banks begin a campaign of encouraging boys to save their money. The paper says, "practically every downfall, every wrecked career, every worthless, useless, abandoned derelict of a young man, drifting aimlessly in the muddy pool of his own making" owes his condition to his lack of care for money.

It is a religious exercise of value in Lent to have self-denial offerings. The luxuries of life are often harder to dispense with than the necessities. The absurd habits which most people cultivate, which cost money, can often be shown up by such an appeal.

A certain working man who never had a wage of over a dollar and seventy-five cents a day now owns two houses in a city of fifty thousand inhabitants where he lives. A man in Chicago bought and paid for a home on an income of fifty dollars a month. This is no argument for low wages, but it shows the possibilities that lie before determined souls. Such an experience has great moral value.

It is the luxuries of the world that prevent the church from having funds for her work. The church could live bountifully and every good cause could go forward if the sinful waste of Christ's followers might be garnered for the building up of the kingdom.

JOHN BARLEYCORN AT COLLEGE

THERE was a time when the drinking customs of students were perfectly respectable. The alumni reunions brought liquors to the table in memory of the past practices.

There is now a decided reaction against such use of liquor. The reunions of Yale, Dartmouth and Williams colleges will be "dry" functions henceforth. Princeton's president is urging that the same action be taken by that institution.

In England, in these days of terrible struggle, there is a saying: "A treater is a traitor." It will not be long until the whole world, both at peace and at war will recognize the truth of this saying. If there is any level of society where total abstinence ought to come first, it should be in the ranks of the men who have the scientific training to realize all the harm that comes from the use of alcohol.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

THE problem of sin is one of the most troublesome in the whole Christian system. In the past a great Manichaean heresy arose by reason of Persian influence, matching an Infinite Good against an Infinite Evil. The church rightly decided that evil was not to be dignified in that kind of way.

A passing type of evangelicalism urged that sin was born of a personal Devil, a Prince of Evil. This was in reality a revival of the Manichaean heresy, due perhaps to the subtle influence of Milton's "Paradise Lost." It had the effect of taking away the proper sense of personal responsibility for conduct. Not every one believing in the Prince of Evil resisted him as valiantly as did Martin Luther, who is said to have thrown an ink-well at his majesty.

Theological doctrines once demanded a belief in the doctrine of original sin. The "sin of Adam" was something under which we were all born. There was a deep truth in the doctrine. The sin of all our ancestors has an influence upon us. None of them has been perfect, not one. They have left upon us a heritage of evil. Written in our very bone and marrow is the record of their wrong doing. Yet every story of a great man arising from the lower levels of society proves that heredity is not absolutely determinative. A man may fight against original sin as against every other kind.

In the New Testament, there is a Trinity of Evil, as there is a Trinity of Good. We are warned against the World, the Flesh, and the Devil.

The world is not our physical world, but our social environment. Christianity never reacted in an ascetic way against our world in the modern meaning. But the evil social order, with its immorality, its luxury, its vanity, its utter emptiness, is to be resisted continually. We are not to do in Rome as Rome does.

The flesh and its lusts are opposed to the higher values of our mental and moral life. To be carnally-minded is death. Sin often has its tap root in our physical nature.

Yet sin is not strong but weak. It is to be utterly overcome by sharing in the Eternal Life through Christ.

DIOTREPHES

DIOTREPHES is mentioned only once in the New Testament, in the Third Epistle of John. He might have remained in utter oblivion had he not resisted the spirit of fellowship in the early church. He opposed the hospitable reception of brethren who were visiting the church and for this he is rebuked and condemned by the writer of the epistle.

Did he believe in the monarchical episcopate which arose soon afterward, and was this the first assumption of a power of the keys, resisted indeed, by the better minds of the church, but soon to prevail in church practice?

Or was this man a Gnostic, representing the heresy that only a man with some supernatural illumination might be recognized in the fellowship of the church? Our biblical scholars can give us no certain word about the reasons for his stand. We only know that the principle of close fellowship was abhorrent to the apostolic age. They spoke ever of receiving the brethren in love. It was moral heresy alone which was visited with the terrible punishment of the withdrawal of privileges of the communion feast.

It has been easy for men in our day to think of the perils involved in a too liberal extension of fellowship. It has been hard for them to see that the greater danger is in the refusal of the privileges of the Christian community to any earnest soul. Some have required supernatural conversions and experiences; some have demanded confirmation; the Lord's table has been made a fence, and not the open arms of a welcoming Christ.

Neither the robe a man wears, nor the opinions he professes, nor the forms by which he comes to God should alienate him from the love or fellowship of the Christian community. The ordinances of the church are not to express division, but rather are the symbols of unity. If there be any man who would hold himself aloof from any believer in Jesus Christ, he stands in danger of the condemnation justly given to Diotrephes.

A GOOD REPORT

WE are not interested in the recent prognostication of Seventh Day Adventists that Russia and Japan are to over-run the United States because of our apostacy from the Bible. We are interested, however, in the evidences of devotion in this little sect. It has 749 workers in Asia. It has 2,100 workers in 72 countries and circulates literature in 87 languages. This small body has contributed in one year $706,293 for outside mission work.

The Sunday School

A PRISONER IN THE CASTLE.

Lesson for September 17.

Golden Text: He is my refuge and my fortress; My God, in whom I trust. Psalm 91:2.

Lesson Acts 22: verse 17-29 printed..

Memorize verses 27-29.

(17) And it came to pass, that, when I had returned to Jerusalem, and while I prayed in the temple, I fell into a trance, (18) and saw him saying unto me, Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem; because they will not receive of thee testimony concerning me. (19) And I said, Lord, they themselves know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee: (20) and when the blood of Stephen thy witness was shed, I also was standing by, and keeping the garments of them that slew him. (21) And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee forth far hence unto the Gentiles.

(22) And they gave him audience unto this word; and they lifted up their voice, and said, Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live. (23) And as they cried out, and threw off their garments, and cast dust into the air, (24) the chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, bidding that he should be examined by scourging, that he might know for what cause they so shouted against him. (25) And when they had tied him up with the thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned? (26) And when the centurion heard it, he went to the chief captain and told him, saying, What art thou about to do? for this man is a Roman. (27) And the chief captain came and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? And he said, Yea. (28) And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this citizenship. And Paul said, But I am a Roman born. (29) They then that were about to examine him straightway departed from him: and the chief captain also was afraid when he knew he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

* * *

VERSE BY VERSE.

17. While I prayed in the temple. The world-wide commission came to him while he was in communion with God.—I fell into a trance. It is not clear on what visit of Paul's this trance occurred, but possibly the one mentioned in Acts 11:30 and 12:25.

18. And saw him. There is no name mentioned but Paul certainly meant Christ.—Quickly. No time to be wasted among rejectors.—Testimony The main testimony was that he was the ever living son of God.

19. They themselves know. The pronoun is emphatic in this connection. The answer indicates that the non-Christian Jews would hearken to his appeal.

20. And when. An additional reason why his message should be received. A good proof of his sincerity.

21. The Gentiles. This word confirmed all their worst suspicions, and fell like a spark on the inflammable mass of their fanaticism..

22. They gave him audience unto this word. They gave him attention to the Gentiles. They could not hear him further for they hated the Gentiles.—They lifted up their voices. The spectacle of an oriental mob, wild with rage.

23. Threw off their garments. They may have either thrown the loose garment off or shaken it, this was an expression of rage.—Cast dust into the air. This was another way of manifesting their wrath.

24. Chief captain. His name was Claudius Lysias, see Acts 23:26.—The castle. The fortress of Antonia.—Examined by scourging. Paul was to be scourged until he told what he had said to the crowd.—That he might know. The chief captain did not understand Hebrew and hence did not know what Paul said.

25. When they tied him up with thongs. While this process was going on Paul called attention to his citizenship.—Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned? This process laid the magistrates liable to punishment, so the thing was stopped at once.

26. What art thou about to do? A word of caution to the chief priest who was about to have him scourged.—This man is a Roman. Paul's veracity was not questioned; a false claim would be easily detected and its punishment would be certain death.

27. Tell me, art though a Roman? He was surprised that Paul could have been a Roman citizen. He underestimated Paul.

28. With a great sum obtained I this citizenship. Some persons in the Roman Empire were permitted to sell the title of citizenship. The chief captain purchased his citizenship.—But I am a Roman born. His father may have been taken captive in war, and reduced to slavery, and then for some special service set free. The sons would inherit this citizenship.

29. They that were about to examine him. The lictors who were about to torture out of him a confession.—Because he had bound him. This was illegal. The magistrates were in danger.

* * *

TEST QUESTIONS.

1. What was the name of the chief captain?
2. How did he secure his citizenship?
3. Of what was Paul's speech a defence?
4. How did Paul become a Roman citizen?
5. Give the argument of Paul's speech.
6. What words enraged the Jews?
7. Why could not the chief captain understand Paul?
8. How was a man examined by scourging?
9. Of what was the Roman scourge made?

Our Citizenship

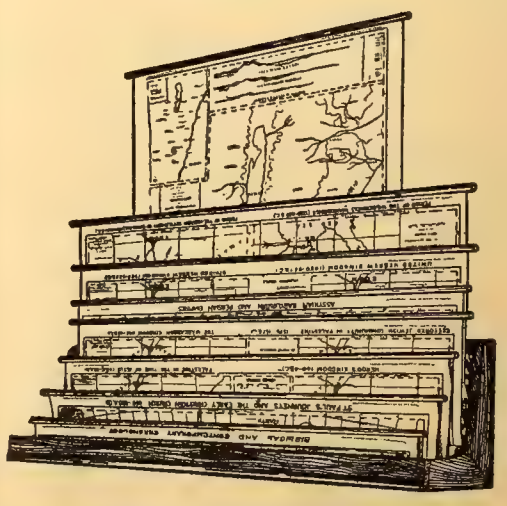
The Lesson in Today's Life.

BY ASA McDANIEL.

IN Paul's day Roman citizenship was a great possession. It was an object worthy of being aspired after by persons of highest rank. It contained rights and privileges that were large and varied.

Yet even this is small when compared with our citizenship in heaven whose sovereign is the King of kings, whose vice-gerent is the Lord of glory, whose laws are righteousness and truth, whose revenues are the resources of the universe, whose mission is to bless humanity, whose citizens dwell together in the family of the redeemed, and whose dominion, ruled by love, shall one day be universal.

There are some interesting parallels to be noted in these kingdoms. Both might be acquired by aliens. The chief captain seems to have secured his citizenship at a great cost. Paul informed his Roman friends that "while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." The way to the kingdom was made plain and sure through Jesus who is the way, truth, and life. "Whosoever will may come!"



* * *

Both kingdoms conferred great privileges. The Roman citizen had many social advantages; the citizen of heaven has the best in any social group. He has an inner place that cannot be secured by one not in harmony with Jehovah the ruler of the heavenly kingdom. He has a freedom not obtainable by Roman or American citizenship. It is the freedom of a life in harmony with the best in heaven and on the earth. It is the end of our quest for the highest type of manhood, and the privileges such a life secures.

Both secure protection. Paul was protected from the rage of an Oriental mob, by quietly announcing his Roman citizenship to the centurion, and the howling mob quieted and lictors' hands were stayed. But Paul's citizenship in heaven protected him in many other ways. No matter what the external punishment he had a calm of spirit that gave him courage and joy in life. No higher protection from the temptations of this world can be secured than mind and heart filled with the spirit of God, obtained through Jesus Christ.

There are a few contrasts which may help us to appreciate our spiritual inheritance. Roman citizenship is now a thing of the past; heavenly citizenship is a vital reality in the present, to ever increasing numbers. Men and women are coming to see the value of the unseen realities of life. They are interpreting life in terms of the eternal. Again, Roman citizenship might be purchased with money; but a place with the people of God must be secured through Jesus Christ. Roman citizenship conferred social and political privileges; but heavenly citizenship secures privileges that are spiritual and religious. And these are to be realized here and now just as far as our natures will enable us to go and our wills enable us to secure the blessings of God. The attainment lies with man; God is willing to do for us more than we can ask or think. Finally Roman citizenship protected the body; but heavenly citizenship protects both body and soul.

Best Maps for Bible Classes

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

Disciples Table Talk

Illinois Convention--Peoria Sept. 11-14

Peoria Disciples are expecting over a thousand delegates at this year's convention of Illinois Disciples, to be held at the new Central church, Sept. 11-14. The program committee consists of E. M. Smith, Homer E. Sala and H. H. Jenner. Entertainment will be on the usual plan—75 cents for lodging and breakfast. Good hotel accommodations at the usual rates. The following are some of the features of the convention, by days: On Monday evening, Sept. 11, at 5 o'clock a Young Woman's Circle conference and luncheon will be held at the Y. W. C. A headquarters; addresses will be given by Mrs. E. M. Bowman, of Chicago; Miss Allena Grafton, of Indianapolis; and Miss Myrta Pearson, of Eureka. The chief event of the evening service at the church will be an address by S. G. Inman on "The Panama Conference and the New Missionary Opportunities for Latin America." The State C. W. B. M. will have charge of the day sessions on Tuesday, with the president, Mrs. Lura V. Porter in the chair The president's message and an address by Miss Allena Grafton, international secretary of Circle work will be features of the morning; Mrs. E. M. Bowman will give an address in the afternoon on "A Layman's Look-In on India Missions," and S. G. Inman will speak on "The Disciples of Christ in Latin America." Beginning Tuesday evening the I. C. M. S. will be in charge, the chief feature of that session being the address of the president, Edgar D. Jones, of Bloomington. On Wednesday morning Stephen E. Fisher will give the first of his addresses on "The Church that Jesus Started," speaking at this session on "Its Beginning." The State Program will be discussed by Secretary John R. Golden, W. D. Endres, E. W. Akeman and W. E. Hall. A symposium on "Church Activities" will be participated in by D. N. Wetzel, L. G. Huff, C. C. Carpenter, S. W. Crabtree, C. W. Ross, W. W. Vose and Amelia Gerke. On Wednesday afternoon the Christian Endeavor address will be given by B. H. Bruner, and Mr. Fisher will give another talk on "The Church that Jesus Started—Its Creed." At the afternoon Educational Session, F. D. Kershner will speak on "Education the Paramount Issue"; L. O. Lehman will give a report. Music at this session will be furnished by the Department of Music at Eureka. At 6 o'clock will be held the Eureka Banquet. On Wednesday evening L. E. Sellers will give a temperance address, and F. D. Kershner will speak on "The Life Worth While." Mr. Fisher will give an address on "The Church that Jesus Started—Its Program," on Thursday morning, G. W. Muckley will speak on Church Extension ,and sectional conferences will be held; City Redemption will be considered under the leadership of Austin Hunter, and R. B. Doan will lead in the conference on the Rural Problem. On Thursday afternoon Sunday-school sectional conferences will be held and addresses will be given by Miss May Young, Prof. A. W. Nolan and Meade E. Dutt. At the Thursday evening session E. W. Thornton will give the Sunday-school address and M. L. Pontius will speak on "What Must the Church Do to Be Saved?" W. E. M. Hackleman will lead the singing through the convention; and Bible studies will be given by W. S. Rounds, Ernest Reed and W. G. Winn. The complete program will be published next week.

Sixty-One Graduates at Bethany Park Training School.

Garry L. Cook, Dean of the Bethany Park Training School, at Bethany Assembly, reports that at the conclusion of this year's session sixty-one persons received diplomas. The present class is the seventh to be graduated from the school. E. W. Thornton gave the commencement address this summer. At the school this year four denominations—Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist and Disciples—were represented in the list of graduates, and the students in the school were from twelve states and the District of Columbia. Indiana churches lead again this year with thirty-eight candidates for graduation. Missouri is second with eight advanced students. The District of Columbia and North Carolina were represented in the school this year for the first time. Six ministers are included in the graduation list. Diplomas were awarded to ten Sunday-school superintendents, two directors of religious education, four departmental heads four Sunday-school secretaries and twenty-four teachers. More than half of the class took the advanced work and several students worked for both elementary and advanced diplomas. More than 200 students were registered.

Disciples at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Walter M. White writes that more Disciples should attend the missionary conferences at Lake Geneva, Wis. These conferences are under the auspices of the Missionary Education Movement. The sessions were held this year at the College camp, the last session being held on August 7. There were 460 delegates in attendance, representing 17 states and 8 foreign countries. Eighteen denominations had representation, the Presbyterians leading with 102, the Congregationalists following with 82; the Episcopalians had 80 delegates, the Methodist 66 and the Baptist 59. There were 27 Disciples present this summer, an increase over last year of 16. The following churches were represented this year: Englewood, Irving Park, Douglas Park and Metropolitan churches, Chicago; Kankakee and Pittsfield, Ill.; Euclid Avenue, Cleveland; Kansas City, Cincinnati and Cedar Rapids, Ia. The Disciple group met each evening at 5:30 on a beautiful spot on the hilltop, and discussed mission work among the Disciples; among those leading were Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Shaw and Dr. Ada M. Gordon, all missionaries on the foreign field. Miss Hazel Lewis, of Cincinnati, also rendered fine service. Ben Holroyd, of Steubenville, O., who leaves next year for China, was also present. Howard Spangler, of Cleveland, O., was elected president and Miss Lillian Abbott, of Chicago, secretary of the Lake Geneva Fellowship of Disciples. Mrs. White thinks plans should be made for a Disciples' delegation of one hundred for next year's sessions.

C. W. B. M. Features at Kentucky Convention.

The Kentucky State Convention will be held this year at Winchester. September 19 will be C. W. B. M. day, and a fine program has been prepared under the leadership of M. B. Gay, state president. Mrs. Louise Loos Campbell will give her report of the year's work at the morning session. Reports will be given of young people's work by Mrs. Mary Walden, and the work of the Circles will be reviewed by Mrs. E. L. Williams. In the afternoon will be held a conference. Mr. D. W. Scott will speak in the interest of the Circles and the children. Mrs. Ida Harrison will bring a message from the Panama Conference, and Miss Myrta Pearson, one of the prospective missionaries to Africa, will speak of the work she is now doing at Bethany Social Center, Indianapolis. Mr. Horace Kingsbury will deliver the evening address, and others will contribute toward making this a helpful program.

• • •

—Lima, O., South church school, W. E. Parette, superintendent had the largest delegation in the recent Allen County Union Sunday-school parade.

—The Christian Endeavor Department of the Foreign Society made a good gain in receipts for the month of July. The receipts were $195.44 above July last. This brings the total gain on the year up to nearly $2,800. If the societies will continue their good work there will be no trouble in reaching the watchword of the year, "$10,000 from the Endeavor societies by September 30, 1916."

—W. T. Barbre, in leaving the work at Rockville, Ind, looks back upon a fruitful eight years of service. The congregation has grown during this time from a membership of 68 to one of 178; the missionary offerings have increased 400 per cent. When Mr. Barbre came to this field the church could afford only half-time preaching.

—The Christian Endeavor societies and other young people's organizations of Lincoln, Neb., and vicinity recently held a mass meeting in the interest of prohibition, with a special address on that subject.

—Among the speakers having part in the dedication program of the Howett Street church, Peoria, were W. F. Shaw of Chicago, H. E. Sala of Peoria and P. E. Olson of Minneapolis, the dedication address being given by the Eureka pastor, Verle W. Blair, who talked on the topic, "Building to Last."

—During the first twenty-three days of August the receipts of the Foreign Society amounted to $69,642, a gain over the corresponding twenty-three days of August, 1915, of $53,878. Some receipts came in that were credited in September last year. During the twenty-three days the churches gave $10,017, a gain over last year of $6,049. The Sunday-schools show a gain of $2,473, the Christian Endeavor Societies $3,079.

—E. M. Waits, of Magnolia Ave. church, Fort Worth, Texas, has been called to Magnolia Ave., Los Angeles. Mr. Waits would succeed R. W. Abberley, who has accepted a call to the leadership of the Southern California Christian Missionary Society. At time of writing no decision had been reported from Mr. Waits as to his acceptance of the western field.

—J. C. Archer of the Yale University School of Religion, had a place on the program this year of the Missionary Education Movement, at Silver Bay on Lake George, N. Y. Mr. Archer led two classes daily in the study of Stuntz's "South American Neighbors." Seventy-seven persons were enrolled in the classes. Mr. Archer writes that the Congregational, Baptist and Disciple churches of Garrettsville, O., are united for the summer on a tentative, experimental basis. This proving satisfactory, the practice will be continued. Mr. Archer preached for the united congregation July 30. At East End church, Pittsburg, where Mr. Archer is supplying the pulpit of John R. Ewers, great vigor and enthusiasm are reported.

—Miss Edith Apperson and Dr. and Mrs. Jaggard planned to leave Matadi, Africa, July 9. They will soon reach America.

—G. W. Brown reports the new session of the Bible College at Jubbulpore, India, opening. Mr. O. J. Grainger is one of the teachers, also an Indian Pundit.

—All branches of the Christian Endeavor work at Central church, Des Moines, Ia., are progressing well. The average summer attendance for the Senior society is from 60 to 75.

—W. R. Hunt reports nine baptisms at Chuchow, China. Mabel Hunt, his daughter, who has been in school in England for some years, has been called to the chair of Child's Psychology, in West Hill College, Birmingham.

—Central and Richmond Street churches, Cincinnati, have launched a new mission at 802 W. 5th St. The Front Street Mission has been consolidated with the new work and Robert Evans will have charge of the enterprise under the direction of a committee of six, three from each church. The Bible-school was organized Sunday, August 20.

—Sharon, Kansas, Bible-school has made a fine record this summer despite the hot weather. All previous records have been exceeded by 100 per cent, attendance growing in the past four months from 60 to nearly 200. A Home Department of one hundred members has been organized.

—On August 10, at Hamilton, Ohio, F. E. Harnar and Miss Blanche Davis were married by C. R. Sine, minister of the church. They are under appointment of the Foreign Society and will sail for India September 9. The Hamilton church will support Mrs. Harnar as their Living-link.

—A farewell reception was tendered Miss Anna Louise Fillmore at the Norwood, Ohio, church, August 13. It was an impressive service. Miss Fillmore was leaving for China as a missionary of the Foreign Society. She departed from Cincinnati the morning of August 16. Miss Anna Louise is a daughter of J. H. Fillmore, the well-known music publisher. The Norwood church and Sunday-school will provide her support in addition to the support of Mrs. J. C. Ogden in Tibet.

—The vacation school of Central church, Buffalo, closed with a total enrollment of 120, representing fourteen religious brotherhoods. There were thirteen teachers under the direction of Austin O. Long, of the Central Y. M. C. A., Buffalo.

—John G. Slayter, of East Dallas, Tex., church, was the chief speaker at a session of the Dallas Automobile club. His subject was "Business Courtesy."

—The recent Michigan state convention at Lansing adopted the following "Five Goals for Five Years": 1. Double Membership—25,000 by 1921. 2. Double Income for State Missions—$10,000. 3. Enter Five New Cities and bring present missions to self-support. 4. Clean up all premises and old debts. 5. Every Member Canvass in Every Church. Reports indicate that Michigan work is thriving under the leadership of J. Frank Green, state leader..

—Four pastors who have recently resigned are: Wm. Grant Smith, Edinburg, Ind.; C. M. Myers, First church, Findlay, O.; W. M. Davis, Central church, Ft. Worth, Texas, to accept work at East Austin, Texas; and J. A. Lord, First church, Milton, Ore., to take the work of the Bible chair at Spokane university.

—S. E. Fisher, of Petersburg, Ill., church, is spending a month in the Ozarks.

—H. C. Hobgood, of Lotumbe, Africa, and Miss Tabitha L. Alderson were married at Harrodsburg, Ky., her home, August 30, by Robert N. Simpson, the minister. The Harrodsburg church made it a joyous occasion. This is the home congregation of Miss Alderson, and the Harrodsburg congregation will support her as their Living-link. They will sail for Africa on the S. S. "Roma" Sept. 5.

—Leslie Wolfe, Manila, P. I., reports 35 conversions, twenty-four of these are lepers at the Culion Leper Colony. A church of lepers has been organized. The officers of the church are lepers.

ANY BOOK

You desire,—theological, devotional, historical, poetry, fiction, etc., etc.—we can furnish you.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street Chicago

Things Worth Seeing in Des Moines

The Iowa Capitol Building, a $5,000,000 structure in pleasing architecture, crowns one of the hills in the east part of the city.

The Eighty-three Acre State Park surrounding the Capitol Building. This park still is incomplete, and is the largest project of its kind ever undertaken by any commonwealth to give its state buildings proper setting and dignity. The land alone added to this tract within the last three years was acquired at a purchase price of $1,000,000.

University Place Church.

The State Historical Building. This is the storehouse of Iowa's historical documents. It is the historic museum of the middle west.

The East Des Moines High School Building is one of the largest and most modern school buildings in the United States. It is in East Des Moines, close to the Capitol Building and the Capitol Hill Church of Christ, the most modern of the church buildings of Des Moines.

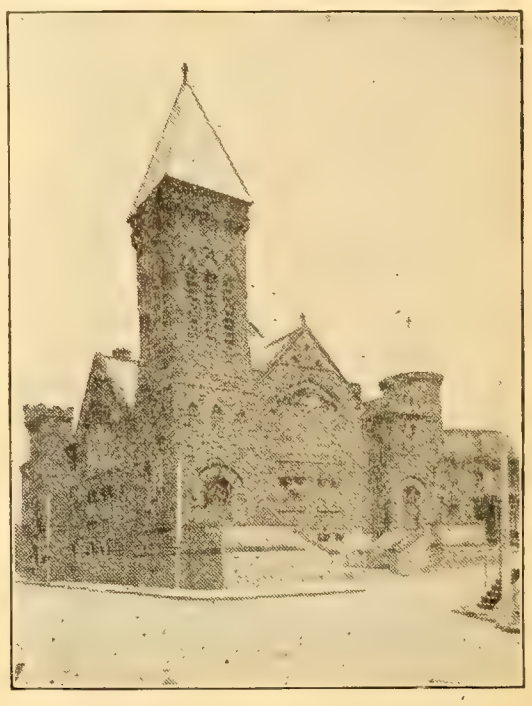
Any one of Des Moines' Five Largest Parks. The city owns 728 acres of park land, all but a small amount in constant use. Two of the best public golf courses of the West are located in these parks, one at Waveland and the other at Grand View.

The City Library, one of the units of the Des Moines civic center It is just across the street from the Coliseum, where the sessions of the convention will be held. On its shelves are placed 80,000 well selected volumes, and the reading rooms are supplied with the papers of many of the large cities of the United States.

The Largest Gun Stock Factory in the World. A place where walnut logs are turned into the blocks for the making of stocks for guns. This plant supplies many of the factories of the United States, and turns out hundreds of thousands of stocks each year to fill orders placed with the warring nations of Europe.

One of the Largest Cement Plants in the World. It is located on the outskirts of Des Moines, and can be reached only by auto. It is one of the gigantic units of this rapidly growing industry.

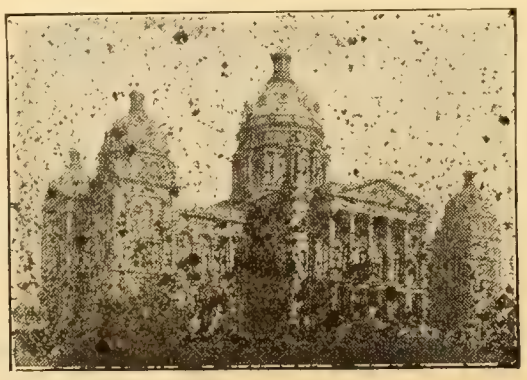
The Two Largest Farm Paper Publishing Plants in the World. Three of the largest farm papers in the United States are published in Des Moines, and the plants of all are close together and accessible from the street cars. In one of these plants, all the work of publishing 800,0000 papers per month, sometimes with as high as one hundred fifty pages per paper, is accomplished.



Many of the Churches of Des Moines are worth seeing. The churches first established are in a group near the business district. Among these one hundred eight churches of Des Moines are the buildings which house from ten to twelve thousand members of the Church of Christ in Des Moines. Of these, Capitol Hill is the most modern, Central the most historic, University Place the largest. The latter structure houses the largest pipe organ between Chicago and Salt Lake City.

The Iowa State Fair, with its massive buildings of steel, brick and concrete, is one of the best arranged expositions in the United States. It lies just to the east of Des Moines, and is worthy of the attention of men interested in the upbuilding of the fairs of their own states. The State and the Fair Association have spent approximately $200,000 per year in permanent buildings for each year of the last decade.

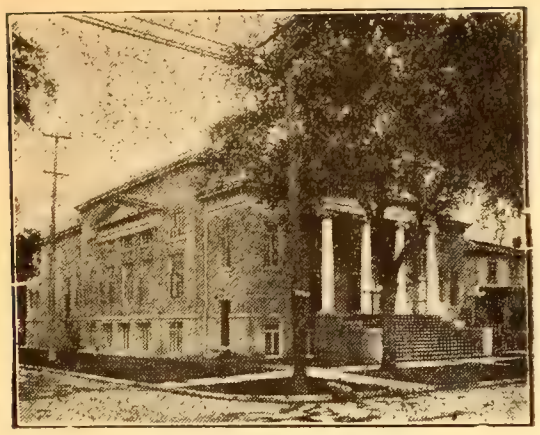
Fort Des Moines is one of the most modern of the Army Posts of the United States. It is planned as the home of a regiment of troops, and its final buildings were completed just before the troops were ordered to the Mexican border. While it is deserted at the present time, its buildings give a good idea of the arrangement and plan of the present posts.



Fort Des Moines is situated on a high plateau two miles south of the business center of the city. It can be reached by street cars, and its roads, the best the government builds, can be made a part of an attractive automobile drive.

Simpson College is located twenty miles south of Des Moines, in the town of Indianola. It is an hour's drive by auto from Des Moines, and is about sixteen miles south of Fort Des Moines, the drive being one well worth taking. Indianola also can be reached by a branch of the Rock Island railroad.

Central Church, Des Moines.



The Rake Stadium, one of the notable athletic fields of the country, is considered by many as the most unique structure in Des Moines. Its cement seats, capable of accommodating ten thousand people, builded on the sides of the hills in the shape of a gigantic horseshoe, rise above the track and surround the football field. The track

Iowa Capitol Building.

Drake Administration Building.

Capitol Hill Church.

Drake Bible Building.

is the center of athletic competition of the middle west.

Drake University is located in the northwest section of the city, and is the largest educational institution not only of Des Moines, but of the Disciples of Christ. Fifteen hundred students are in attendance during the school year. The convention comes shortly after the opening of school in September, so that convention visitors will see the large school in operation. The buildings are all in close proximity to the University church. Every arrangement will be made to allow visitors to see as much as possible of the working of the school during the week of the convention.

The Church Extension Program at Des Moines and What it Means

The Church Extension program at Des Moines this year will be the most comprehensive of any ever given. Aside from its regular work of making loans to erect church buildings in the mission fields of the United States the Board will, in substance, ask the National Convention to recommend the following new work:

First: That the Board of Church Extension be permitted to use all the church offerings during the year, October 1, 1916 to September 30, 1917, for the purpose of erecting a Community House for work among immigrants either in Chicago or New York. The house would be a donation to the community of immigrants but the Church Extension Board will hold title to the property and the American Society will furnish a competent American Superintendent for the work. The American Society and the Board of Church Extension proposes to do such a piece of work as shall be a matter of worthy pride to our churches. The Disciples of Christ have never done their share of work among the immigrant populations of the United States. Other religious bodies have been far in the lead in this work We must do a worthy share and the way we preach the gospel will certainly be welcome to these foreigners who have been so long under the domination of ecclesiastical yokes. To command the respect of these foreigners, however, we must put up nice buildings as well as practical ones. The Des Moines Convention must speak the word.

Second: Secretary Muckley was a delegate to the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America, held in Panama last February. At that Congress a group of Disciples present recommended that the Board of Church Extension be asked by the National Convention to extend its work into Latin America by assisting in the erection of proper buildings for this very important field. The Board would do this work by holding title to the property where buildings are erected and with its usual careful business methods. This must come before the Des Moines Convention for its action. The Board hopes the Convention will speak the forward word.

* * *

Third: Our first missionary to Alaska sailed from Seattle on June 25th. He is a graduate of Hiram College, Harry Munro. He ranks the highest in Mental, Spiritual and Business qualifications for this work. When he passed through Kansas City with Robert Hopkins of the American Society, whose Sunday-school department is sending him out, the Board of Church Extension met him and assured him of its support in the erection of buildings as they are needed. This support should be without stint. There are distinct opportunities in Alaska. At the proper time a Secretary of the Board of Church Extension will go to Alaska to help select church property and plan for the necessary buildings. The Convention at Des Moines will be greatly interested in this new and vital work in the two Americas.

Fourth: There are six great cities in the Western Provinces of Canada, where now the Board of Church Extension should be helping to erect church buildings worthy our great plea and worthy of these cities so that we may attract attention to a necessary work. They are Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge and Regina.

The conventions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta were jointly visited in July of this year by Grant K. Lewis, of the A. C. M. S. and G. W. Muckley, representing the Church Extension Board with a view of studying the fields needing aid and jointly doing the work. Already, as a result of this visit, a new building is now being erected in Saskatoon and the congregation will be provided with a pastor by the A. C. M. S. as soon as the building is finished.

Fifth: The Board must be helping in the usual mission fields of the United States,—in rural communities with a certain type of building, in cities with adequate buildings and in the smaller towns with chapels.

* * *

A consideration of these fields will make it worth while for Disciples to attend the convention at Des Moines.

The Church Extension Session will be from 11:30 to 12:30 on Thursday morning of the convention and the chief address will be given by Allan B. Philputt, of Indianapolis, on the subject, "The Church Made With Hands." Mr. Philputt was born in Tennessee, reared in Indiana, graduated from Indiana University, assistant professor there, pastor at Bloomington, Indiana, when the present building was erected, in Philadelphia, Pa., for nearly ten years during which period Russell H. Conwell's church building was purchased, the Sunday-school doubled and the membership greatly increased and strengthened. For the past eighteen years Mr. Philputt has been pastor of the Central church, Indianapolis. The membership has been doubled in spite of many removals, and the Sunday-school has taken the first place in the city. He is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, the Indianapolis Literary Club and Sons of the Revolution. He is president of the Alumni Council of Indiana University and a director of Butler College. But best of all he is a pastor universally loved, trusted and respected.

A Notable Success

The welcome that has been given by the leaders in the churches and Sunday schools to the little book just issued by the Disciples Publication Society:

"The Training of Church Members"

is evidence that this text has come to meet a very definite need in the churches.

The following are typical letters received from leaders concerning the book:

FROM REV. H. CLAY TRUSTY, Seventh Street Church, Indianapolis: "I have examined thoroughly the manual, "The Training of Church Members," and think it a very fine thing. We need to spend some time with young Christians on the fundamentals of our Christian religion and church life. This affords a splendid guide."

FROM REV. L. C. MOORE, Waterloo, Ia.: "This book is filling a long known need in our mid-week service. I am more than pleased with it. The attendance was doubled in four weeks by the use of the text."

FROM REV. IRVING BROWN, Sac City, Ia.: "I am much impressed with it. Shall introduce it either at the C. E. or mid-week prayer-meetings. We all need the training it supplies."

FROM REV. L. J. MARSHALL, Wabash Ave. Church, Kansas City, Mo.:

"This is a timely piece of work. Its clear and simple presentations of the lessons to be taught should make it popular among Christian workers."

How You May Use This Text:

(1) As a book of study in your mid-week or Endeavor prayer-meeting.

(2) As a text-book in your young people's Sunday school classes.

(3) As a text for study in a special "Pastor's class" organized for training of young Christians and meeting either through the week or on Sunday.

(4) As a teacher-training course.

Send for free sample of the new book today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St. CHICAGO

The Foreign Society at Des Moines

The Declaration and Address was published in September, 1809; the Foreign Christian Missionary Society was organized in October, 1875. Let no one think that in the sixty-six intervening years the Disciples of Christ did nothing to carry the gospel into the regions beyond. In 1849, the American Christian Missionary Society was organized to promote the preaching of the gospel in this and in other lands. While conducting work at home, it sent missionaries to Jerusalem, to Liberia, and to Jamaica. Owing to the Civil war and other causes, the missionaries in these foreign fields were recalled and the work abandoned. The Foreign Society was organized because the American Society was not prepared to renew its work abroad. Though organized in Louisville, Kentucky, it is incorporated under the laws of Ohio, and its principal place of business is in Cincinnati.

The missionaries on the field number nearly two hundred, and the native workers nearly a thousand. These preach the word of truth in many lands and in many languages. They preach in chapels, in schools, in temples, in theatres, in hospitals, in teahouses, on the street, in the market places, at the public wells, and in their homes. They do other things, but into the work of preaching they put the strength of their lives, because it is God's intention to save them that believe through the truth proclaimed. The preaching of the men and the women sent forth has extended the boundaries of the Redeemer's kingdom.

The agents of the Society heal the sick; they open the eyes of the blind; they cause the lame to walk; they give the people among whom they dwell some knowledge of hygiene and sanitation. They are doing what our Lord did when he went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. They have lessened the pain of the world and sweetened life for a great number.

The missionaries have opened schools of all grades, from the kindergarten to the college and university and seminary. The converts wish to be able to read and write. They want to be able to read in their own tongues the mighty works of God. The workers needed evangelists, pastors, teachers, colportours, nurses, and Bible-women must be educated and trained for their life-work. The children of the believers must be taught. One period of every school day is given to the study of the Bible and to worship. The pupils are taught to sing the great hymns of the church.

* * *

The converts are gathered into Sunday-schools and into Endeavor Societies. Others besides the converts are taught in the Sunday-schools. The children are more easily reached than their parents. In many cases the parents are satisfied with their religion and wish no change. They are not willing to listen to the message. The children are curious and wish to learn. They repeat at home the truths and the songs they learned in the Sunday-school and in many cases the parents are interested and come to hear more.

The missionaries prepare and circulate literature. They translate the word of God and hymns and other works. They edit magazines and weekly papers. They make good use of leaflets. The printed page can go where no missionary has gone or can go at present. The printed page can carry the gospel message. Every patient in the hospital and dispensary receives a Gospel or tract. One paper published in Manila is said to be the most influential publication in the Philippines. The book entitled "The Church of Christ by a Layman" has been translated into Hindi, Japanese, and Chinese. It can be read now by one-third of the human race, if they wish to read it. In Africa the language of the people has been reduced to a written form, and most of the New Testament and more than a hundred hymns and other works have been published on the Society's press on the Congo.

Many forms of benevolent work are carried on by the workers. Orphans are rescued and are prepared for lives of usefulness and nobleness. Some of these are taught trades, to be carpenters, blacksmiths, tailors, shoemakers. Some are taught to care for pigs and poultry. Some are taught farming and are given modern tools and machinery with which to do their work. The missionaries assist the people among whom they live in time of famine, in time of flood, in time of revolution. They minister to the leper and the beggar. . They have been leaders in community betterment. In one city under the guidance of a missionary the streets were cleaned, the pauper dead were buried, a macadamized road was built from the railway station to the heart of the city, parks and playgrounds for the children were opened. The women and girls had been gathered into Bible classes and taught many things they need to know. They were taught to prepare palatable and nourishing food for their families and for invalids, how to make their homes more attractive, how to make their own lives more noble, and how to dress and care for their little ones. . The missionaries are doing their best to bring in that new social order when the will of God shall be done, as in heaven, so on earth. They are doing what is in their power to enable the people to live complete lives under the leadership and under the loving favor of Jesus Christ our Lord.

At the Des Moines convention there will be evangelists who will tell how they preach the gospel, and how it is received, and the fruits of the Spirit that appear in the lives of the believers. Medical missionaries will set forth the facts as to their work, how it is conducted, and its influence among the people. They will explain how the medical work opens hearts and homes to the truth, and how it lessens human suffering, and how it reveals the beneficent character of our holy religion. . The teachers will tell of their work and of the readiness of the people to attend the mission schools, and to listen to the reading of the Scriptures as well as the teaching of science and philosophy and the other subjects taught. The missionaries will speak of what they have seen and know to be true. The audience will receive with profound interest reports of work done and difficulties encountered and overcome, of hardships borne, and some accounts of the unfinished task and of the duty of the church to address herself to it in earnest.

—George Rice, of Kansas City, Mo., sent a complete telephone system to his brother at Damoh, India, which will be used to connect the bungalows of the missionaries, the office, farmhouse, and the home of the house father. Such a gift is sure to be valuable.

—W. T. Fisher, formerly an Iowa preacher, and for three years Bible-school superintendent in the state, for the past three years a teacher in Phillips Bible Institute, Canton, Ohio, becomes pastor of the great church at Mason City, Iowa, September 1. He will have a building enterprise on his hands. The plan is to build a modern Bible-school building first, which will be used until the erection of an auditorium.

—Sumner T. Martin, pastor at Hobart, Okla., is suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident, in which his son was also injured.

—Last week the Foreign Society was fortunate in having an Annuity gift from a friend in Kansas of $7,200; also an Annuity gift from a friend in Ohio of $500, this being her third gift on the Annuity Plan. A friend in Arkansas also remembered the Society with a gift of $2,000, making a total of $9,700 for the week.

—E. E. Davidson, of Kansas City, will hold evangelistic services at Shreveport, La., next month. Claude L. Jones is pastor at Shreveport.

—First church, LaPorte, Ind., under its new pastor, H. M. Hale, is planning to spend several thousand dollars in remodeling the present building.

—Atlanta, Ind., church observed a homecoming of former members on August 27. C. W. Cauble gave the address.

—Red Bluff, Cal., congregation has called M. H. Cantrell, of Norfolk, Neb., to its pulpit, and he will begin his new service Sept. 1.

—There will be a new Disciples' church in Champaign, Ill. The Webber Street Mission was started by Stephen E. Fisher nine years ago, and the work is now thriving under the leadership of G. L. Cummings as pastor. A $10,000 building is now being erected. The excavation work was done by generous local teamsters who donated their labor and by members of the Webber street congregation.

—Pomona, Cal., church is conducting a Training Camp at Laguna Beach this week, among the instructors being C. R. Hudson, F. B. Ward and Dr. R. J. Dye and wife About fifty persons are enjoying the camp.

—The Library of Congress, at Washington, would like the issue of Nov. 28, 1912, of The Christian Century to complete its file. Any "Century" reader who can furnish this issue would render a favor by sending to this office.

—E. T. Cornelius, pastor at Princeton, Mo., spent his 1916 vacation, with his family, on a Montana ranch.

—For the ten months to August first the Board of Ministerial Relief of Indianapolis, reports total receipts of $28,910, a gain of $8,929, or 50 per cent over the same period last year. The regular receipts, available for immediate use, are $20,150, a gain of $4,049, or 25 per cent. That the increase is needed is shown by the statement that five cases of premature disability of ministers have been reported to the board within two weeks.

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You. Send Stamp for Booklet

THE CONSOLIDATED PRESS CLIPPING COMPANY

Manhattan Building, Chicago.

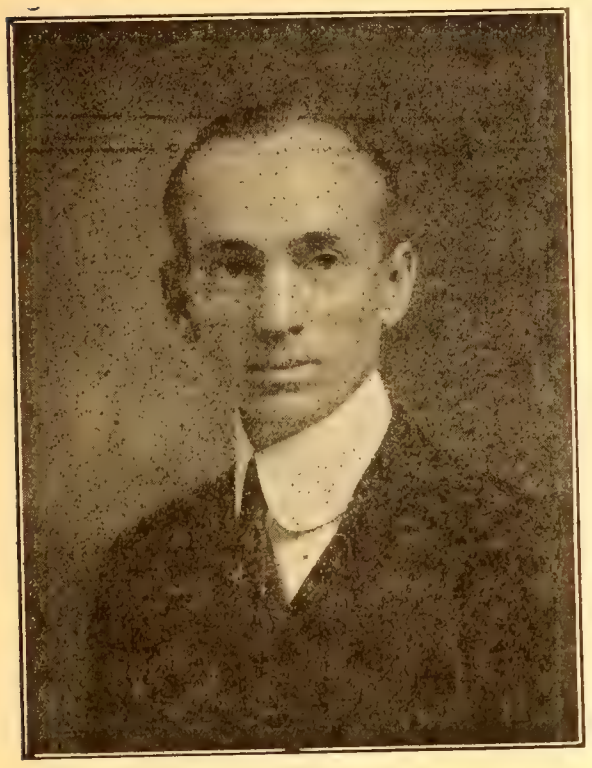
Three Books

For Building Up Your Church.

"SOCIAL PLANS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE," tells you how to get the new generation into your Church, how to develop and harness their latent power. 75c postpaid

"WORKABLE PLANS FOR WIDE-AWAKE CHURCHES" sets forth an enormous variety of plans, schemes, and methods for the practical use of this power in every department of Church work. $1.00 postpaid.

"CHURCH PUBLICITY" provides 1,500 pictured forms and other tested plans for advertising the Church and helping it to get a hearing for the Gospel. $1.50 postpaid.



All by Rev. Christian F. Reisner.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Charles M. Sharpe Available for Evangelistic Work.

It is not unusual for a man of Dr. Charles M. Sharpe's scholarly instincts and habits to be equally imbued with evangelistic passion. He says he is in a state of unstable equilibrium between the class-room and the pulpit, and that, moreover, he hopes ever to be in that situation. He does not believe that a theology which fails in the pulpit can be a success either in the study or the class-room.

Dr. Charles M. Sharpe.

During the past winter and spring Dr. Sharpe held meetings in Monroe City, Mo., and Harrison, Ark., in both of which fields he was eminently successfud both in point of numbers of accessions to the church, and of inspiration to the entire community. This fall and the coming spring he will be able to hold three or four meetings. Write him directly at the University of Chicago. His preference would be to serve the churches in educational centers, but as he does not deliver an academic message, his work is suited to any community.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27.

(Established 1858.)

THE C. S. BELL CO. : HILLSBORO, OHIO

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY

DES MOINES - IOWA

Maintains Colleges of LIBERAL ARTS, BIBLE, LAW, EDUCATION and INSTITUTE OF FINE ARTS, including a Conservatory of Music, and schools of Dramatic Art and Painting and Drawing.

Offers special courses in Christian Missions, Religious Education, Commerce, Home Economics, Physical Education, Education for all classes of teachers in the public schools.

Forty-five courses (nearly 7 years' work) for students preparing for the Ministry or the Mission Field, are offered in the College of the Bible.

The work of every department is accredited by the leading universities and standardizing agencies of America.

The faculty of each college is complete, and the members have been highly trained for their work in the best universities and schools.

DRAKE IS A GROWING INSTITUTION. Last year 1,532 students were enrolled, an increase of 166 over the year previous. This year the Summer Session alone will enroll nearly 500 students, an increase of at least 200 over that of last year.

THERE IS A REASON. In every department the highest standards of equipment and instruction are maintained.

Scholarships and Loan Funds are available for ministerial students.

Write for a catalog of the college or department in which you are interested.

Address, HILL M. BELL, President, Des Moines, Iowa.

The Bible College of Missouri

A biblical school of high grade. At Columbia, Missouri, the educational center of the state. Adjacent to the University of Missouri. Mutual interchange of credits. For catalogue, write G. D. Edwards, Dean.

William Woods College

A fully accredited Junior College for Women located at Fulton, Mo.

Two main departments: A Junior College for young women, all courses standardized by University of Missouri. A Preparatory Department for girls with the standard high school course.

Special departments of Art, Expression, Home Economics, Music and Physical Education. The Conservatory of Music is as good as the best.

Christian Character Emphasized Here

A chool that Cares.

For Catalog and Picture ook

Address— JOS. A. SERENA, Pres.

An Ideal Course

for your Adult or Young People's Class

The Life of Jesus

It is always in order for Sunday School classes to study the life of Jesus. Young people's and adult classes want the very best text that can be found. This is simply to remind them that there has never been offered to the Sunday School world a Life of Christ so practicable, so usable, sotrue to the best scholarship, so bristling with questions that wake up the pupils, so well proportioned, as Dr. Loa E. Scott's "LIFE OF JESUS" in Fifty two Lessons. This book is being widely used in Sunday Schools both of the Disciples and other religious bodies, and in Y. M. C. A. classes. This testifies to its popularity. You must have it in your school. It will create a new interest in Bible study among your young people and younger adults. Price of the book, 50c. In quantities of 10 or more, 40c each.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St., CHICAGO

Annual Offering for Church Extension

Begins Sunday, September 3rd

"AN APPEAL TO REASON"

Are figures dry? Not when they tell the story of a live subject. We challenge any person who loves the Kingdom of God, and wishes to see it permanently built up and its borders continuously extended, to read the following Church Extension facts and figures and not be interested in taking the Church Extension Offering in September.

GAINED.

1. In 27 years 1,814 churches have been built in the United States and Canada.
2. 1,156 of these paid their loans in full, aggregating $1,864,903.34.
3. There is $1,195,868.98 in the Fund.
   There is $1,864,903.34 returned on loans.
   Therefore $3,060,772.32 of work has been done in 27 years. The churches aided raise $2 for every $1 loaned. Therefore, the churches borrowing this $3,060,772.32
   have raised. $6,121,544.64 bringing into existence. $9,182,316.96
4. These Missions, while building their church homes at a cost of over $9,000,000 have given over $1,195,000 to missions, benevolence and education, 91 per cent of them gave.

LOST.

1. In the last ten years there have been 1,601 churches appealing, yet unanswered for lack of money.
2. Had we answered them as we did the 1,814 opposite, and had they given as well as the 1,814 they would have produced $8,000,000 of church property, and would have given $1,053,458 to missions and benevolences.
3. By failure to help these 1,601 The Kingdom has lost over $9,000,000.

RESOLVED, That to atone for past neglect our Church will raise a liberal offering for Church Extension some Sunday in September.

Remit to Board of Church Extension
603 New England Building - Kansas City, Mo.

Order supplies of literature and envelopes. They will be sent free

Ten Big Reasons Why

Bethany Graded Lessons are being adopted by so many of the best schools among Disciples

1. There is more to them—at least a third more—than is contained in any other series.
2. They are rich, vital and full of suggestion to teacher and pupil.
3. They are free from the sectarian spirit.
4. They are soundly and fervently evangelical.
5. They are truly artistic in all their illustrations.
6. They are printed on better paper with better binding and in better taste than any other series.
7. Every lesson writer is an expert of international reputation.
8. They are a monument to the modern spirit of unity—several leading denominations have co-operated to produce them and are now using them.
9. The Disciples possess full editorial rights, through the editor, Charles Clayton Morrison.
10. Every Disciple school that uses them participates in and promotes a great Christian union enterprise.

SEND FOR RETURNABLE SAMPLES.

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII September 7, 1916 Number 36

Religion and Architecture
Editorial

After the Great War
By Albert Parker Fitch

The Meetin'-House Must Go
By John H. Booth

The Washington Home Missions Council

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. If paid strictly in advance $1.50 will be accepted. To ministers, if paid strictly in advance, $1.00 per year. If payment is delayed ministers will be charged at regular rates. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but is continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Post Office, Chicago, Illinois, Under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to the Disciples is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to co-operate with the Christian people of all communions as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century, the chief publication of the Society, desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... ..... Address .....

A Paper That Readers Take Home.

The Conquest

Send for Sample Copy Today.

A Journal of Character Building

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK, Editor

For Adult and Young People's Classes and Christian Endeavor Societies

It Grips and Holds! Why?

The Conquest is an attractive paper. Gripping articles and stories have a place in each issue. The Good Cheer Club and "Chuckles" are delightful features.

The Conquest is an up-to-date paper. The articles used are not moss-grown. Its pages teem with facts of modern science and current history.

The Conquest is a useful paper in the work of the church. Its Sunday School page is unsurpassed. Its Christian Endeavor column is vital and suggestive.

The Conquest is a newsy paper. Its news is not merely small talk of Sunday-school attendance, contests, etc., but real news that builds up and helps. From four to six pages of each issue are devoted to news of churches, schools and Endeavor societies.

"Character Talks" form a unique feature of "The Conquest"

Send for Free Sample Copy.

Disciples Publication Society : : 700 E. 40th Street, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

Volume XXXIII SEPTEMBER 7, 1916 Number 36

Religion and its Architecture

RELIGION CALLS FOR APPROPRIATE BUILDINGS.

Religion is not a disembodied soul that need have no care about the tools with which it works. It has ever used the great arts for the promotion of its spirit. It might almost be said that religion has been the mother of the arts. Painting and sculpture have won their greatest victories in depicting beautiful religious ideas. Music has found in the praise of God its highest development. Even so architecture has found one of its deepest motives in building homes for the worship of deity.

Of course, architecture is not a fundamental necessity of religion. It belongs rather to the bene esse than to the esse of Christianity. There were no church buildings erected in the apostolic age. The religious spirit, however, was strong enough to triumph over this great handicap. The failure to build churches was not the result of lack of interest, but was due to the persecutions which were visited upon the infant faith.

✣ ✣

When persecution slackened and was succeeded by a sympathetic attitude on the part of the state, there followed a most interesting development of church building. The cross furnished the model and ground pattern of most of them, as, indeed, it does to this day in many sections of the world. The constructive genius of the greatest artists was turned in the direction of erecting the cathedrals which still provide one of the most attractive features of the art life of Europe.

A Philistine materialism has affected to sneer at these great buildings as a waste of money. Just as Judas Iscariot would have spent the money value of the precious ointment for the relief of the poor, instead of worship, so there are still those who regard money spent in beautifying a church as "wasted."

It would be interesting, however, to learn in what important ways the wonderful cathedrals and churches of Europe have kept alive the reverent spirit in the hearts of the people. There is a higher kind of practicality which justifies every dollar that has been spent in beautifying the homes of religion.

✣ ✣

Puritanism was fearful of beauty. Whatever useful contributions it made to religion—and they are many—Puritanism was all wrong in assuming that ugliness was religious and beauty was wicked. Quite the contrary is true, as we can all testify. The square boxes of churches of the Puritans are no adequate expression of the religious devotion of their souls and are to that extent architectural lies. That there did finally evolve a New England church architecture of some beauty only proves that even Puritanism was not able entirely to kill the artistic sense of religion.

The difficulties of church building have enormously increased in modern times. We have, of course, better mechanical facilities for building great structures with our modern use of steel beams. At the very moment when the engineering of building operations has reached a high state of development, we have become confused on the ideal side of the process.

Three considerations embarrass us. We want our churches beautiful, adapted to our activities, and within the reach of the congregations financially.

We have few models for churches that are both beautiful and modern. The medieval church was not built to house religious education, social service, and worship under one roof. It was built solely with reference to the needs of worship.

The Disciples have grown so rapidly that thousands of congregations have erected homes in the past two decades, and many of these congregations have built for the first time. These structures have often been erected under inadequate supervision and are imperfect. Sometimes differences of opinion have torn congregations asunder and sent faithful and hard-working preachers on their way. Disputes over title, loose handling of funds, and many other types of disturbance have followed church-building, and the erection of a house of worship has not deepened the spiritual life as it should, but has often lowered the spiritual tone of the community.

✣ ✣

The Board of Church Extension of the Disciples has looked upon this whole situation with awareness. Fundamentally an organization to give material aid to the congregations by means of loans, it has served in many other important ways to bring the architecture of the Disciples up to modern standards of beauty, utility and good sense.

A building with a Church Extension loan on it is always a building which has a good title, for the society sees to that. The plans are examined before a loan is approved, and without undue interference the board tries to insure a building operation that will prove permanently satisfactory to the congregation. Sometimes a building committee with loose methods may complain of "red tape" but in the end it lives to bless a group of men whose experience has shown them how to avoid the pitfalls of building operation.

The prosperity of the Disciples of Christ, and their recent development in the large cities, has created a demand for larger funds to be used in church building. Real estate in cities is enormously expensive. If proper buildings are erected, it is only at great expense. This means that demands for larger and ever larger loans will be made if our success continues.

There is need, also, for a fund from which foreign-speaking missions and other congregations, laboring in exceptionally difficult circumstances may secure outright gifts. Such a fund would be accepted gratefully by the Board of Church Extension, without doubt, and would make well-nigh perfect the service which this agency is rendering our religious movement. When our story is finally told, it will be apparent that much of the credit for the progress of the Disciples will be given to the wise administration of the Board of Church Extension.

After the Great War

Portion of an Address Delivered at the University of Chicago.

By Albert Parker Fitch, D. D.

Of Andover Theological Seminary.

IT IS a mad world in which we live today; it is only because so few of us possess imagination that we fail to realize the insanity of the hour. If you had been told two years ago that the most enlightened nations of Europe would deliberately set themselves to destroy the fertility of the land, the chief source of their sustenance—if you had been told that they were about to dig up, to a depth of twenty feet over an area anywhere from twenty to thirty miles in width and nearly a thousand miles in extent, the barren subsoils, throwing them out upon the tillable soil, rendering great sections of the most fertile land of Europe unproductive for years to come—would you not have said that they were mad?

Yet this is the very thing that we are witnessing today!

THE WASTE OF MONEY.

If you had been told that these nations would not only throw away vast sums of money in the making of munitions and engines of destruction but in so doing would also waste vast sums of capital, the basis of an industrial civilization—throw away not merely wealth but the means of producing wealth as literally as though they were dumping gold by the bagful into the depths of the unplumbed sea, wasting capital just as water is wasted when it is poured upon the hot and thirsty sands of the desert—would you not say that they had gone mad? Yet this very thing the nations of Europe, who still represent the source and center of Western civilization, are at this moment doing!

And what would you have said had you been told that these same nations would deliberately throw away their youths, the young men who should be the begetters of the coming generation, upon whom civilization with all its complicated structure must depend for the boys and girls of the next generation? Would you not then have said that such nations must be mad? And ours is a mad world, my masters, for at this very moment civilization is thus committing suicide, and Europe is plunging the sword into her own heart.

IDEALISM THROWN ASIDE.

And finally, had you been told that the carefully built-up, insecure ethical idealism of our modern world, the slowly growing laws and customs of justice and mercy and national good-will, respect for righteousness, protection of the helpless, would by common consent be repudiated and thrown aside, would you not have said that the soul of the world had lost its bearings? Yet at this very moment we see our boasted civilization more effective in its savagery and no less ruthless in its practices than those primitive communities out of which it has slowly and faithfully issued.

Yes, ours is a mad world.

We must try to get at something of the nature of the forces which are now operating about us and to forecast their probable effects upon the new world in which we are about to play our part. And , first, it is clear that out of this far-flung madness will come large and significant changes in the social and economic order. Two facts of first-class importance invite our attention.

The first is the ever-intensifying strain and bitterness born of the social and economic injustice which represents one of the characteristic problems of our hour. Two apparently exclusive theories of the state, the capitalistic and the socialistic theory, are struggling for the social and political mastery of our democracy. I suppose that no one who has read and pondered the history of human movements believes that one of these theories will by violent and spectacular means suddenly overcome and crush out the other, or that either of them can be ignored and suppressed and scorned and forced to remain unheard. Rather, I suppose that we expect a new state slowly and painfully to emerge out of the present democracy, in which some way shall be merged many of the ideas and claims found in both of these opposing camps. And then we expect this new state to become the field of another battleground of conflicting ideas as, through the dust and turmoil of such successive conflicts, the political and social expression of a democracy grows.

TRENCH LIFE.

The other fact of first-rate importance is this. For eight million men the sword of war has cut the Gordian knot of an extreme and artificial civilization. These men have been removed from those habits, routines, conventions, those influences of home and church and state, which are the chief means of inhibiting radical and independent action. They have left behind all that unconscious pressure of local public opinion which keeps men inert, respectable, and dull.

They have gone to live in the almost indecent simplicity of the trenches, where they have learned with what independence of those multiform luxuries which they had become to believe were necessities their days may be spent—where they have learned how easy it is for men, if they will, to exert their personal force and use their own initiative. Some of these men have not left behind luxuries, but have come to them. Peasants, accustomed to wooden shoon, now wear custom-made boots, with another pair ready for instant use dangling from their cartridge belts; men who go cold and shivering through the winters of Central Europe now have their corduroy and sheepskin jackets; men who have never known more than one hearty meal a day are now receiving three.

Most of all, the masters of these men are now impressing upon them by every device of exhortation, example, and command that there is only one way to settle important disputes and that the way of violence. It is impossible to estimate the psychological change which this fact is going to make in the civilization of Europe. Did I not say that it was a mad world, my masters!

AFTER THE WAR—WHAT?

For soon the war will end, and these eight million men, lean of body, iron of nerve, steel of will, will be returning—to what? Some of them to ruined homes, to devastated industries, to industrial chaos; most of them to war taxes, already amounting to millions of pounds sterling, imposed upon those under which they already staggered before the war was begun. And they will be returning to find a great multitude of the halt, the maimed, the idiot, and the blind, the terrible victims of their own strife, who must be accepted as charges upon their several communities.

Now, what think you, will these eight millions of men do? Will they sullenly accept the intolerable conditions of their life, endeavoring to repair their ruined industries by selling goods for less than it cost to make them in order to open new markets for their trade? Will they bend docile necks to the crushing financial burdens, paying out high wages in still higher taxes, eking out with their wives and families a starved and miserable existence? Will they come flooding into this country, which now has free trade in the most important of all commodities, the commodity of labor? Will they depress our inflated wages, will they make our strike-breakers, our restless and irresponsible army of the unemployed?

No man can say, but any one of us can say that with this new element of vast and sinister potentiality, added to the vexed and strained situation of this democracy, the RATE OF THE SOLUTION OF OUR SOCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS WILL BE MARKEDLY ACCELERATED.

TWO CONCEPTIONS OF GOVERNMENT.

Again it is quite clear that there is now being fought out on those tragic battlefields of Europe a strife between two hostile conceptions of human government, the autocratic-socialistic on the one hand, the democratic-individualistic on the other. It is part of the fatuous complacency of this republic that we are still on the whole serenely sure that the forces of democracy will win the day. Yet there is very little ground for such shallow optimism. We base it on our complacent belief that the government of these United States is of course Deity's last word in the inspired control of peoples, and that all men, when they see how admirably our democracy works, in municipal, in legislative life, for instance, will without hesitation accept its ways!

But, as a matter of fact, there is no real ground for any such unthinking hope. Autocratic governments are still the most popular and by all odds the most potent and effective upon the face of the earth, because they look to the present; they are based upon things as they are; supporting the autocracy is the indubitable if humiliating fact of the terrible inequality of endowment of human nature. Most men are not fit to govern themselves; many men who might be fit do not wish to govern themselves. They would avoid the strenuous joys and difficult obligations of self-decision; they prefer immediate efficiency to individual development; they choose the comparative ease of the present as against the uncertain glories of the future.

WHAT IS OUR PRESENT GOVERNMENT?

And as for the democracy, it represents precisely the opposite view, and the chief ground for its justification in the present is its unconquerable idealism. A democracy may be truly called a religious state because it is built, not upon things as they are, but upon things as in a far distant future we believe they are going to be.

What is the government of this republic at this moment? It may well be called the permitting, by the few and the fit, of their misgovernment by the many and unfit for the sake of the great-grandchildren of them all. Can anyone claim, who has followed the municipal politics of Chicago, or scrutinized the actions of our state legislature, or watched the doings of the federal Congress of this year of grace, that as a nation we are fit for self-government? No! To believe in the American democracy because of its achievements is as unintelligent as it is futile. To be complacent over it is lamentable. To believe in it as the early expression of a sublime faith in the future of the race, a determination to act the present in the light of that future, this is sublime.

It is glorious to be an American because America says, "We know that men are not fit for freedom now, but we believe freedom to be their inalienable right and their eventful destiny, and, therefore, they shall be given the chance to understand it. We know that universal suffrage is a lamentable failure, and yet we propose to multiply it by two and give it to all, both the men and the women of this democracy, because we say that the only way to make citizens is to make them in action, give them the chance to experiment with the opportunities and obligations of citizenship."

But such idealism as this is perilous because sublime, and who can say whether the day has yet come when mankind can accept and maintain it?

WHAT WILL BE THE OUTCOME?

It is then a dubious struggle, being fought out on the sodden fields of Flanders and the bloody plains of Galicia. And what its outcome no man can foresee! Yet, in any event, it means new sets of political influences, significant changes both in domestic and in foreign policies within this democracy. The war has brought us into the family of the nations; what place are we to take there? If the central powers win this strife, then an immense impetus toward further experiments in the socializing of industry, and the centering of the control of public utilities in the state will be felt here. If the "entente" are found victorious, then those radical experiments in pure democracy, such as primaries, the referendum, the recall, with which, without conspicuous success, we have been engaged, will be followed by others, more radical in content and more far-reaching in extent. The next twenty years are going to see the American democracy change and develop for weal or woe as it has not done in all its previous history.

Again, it is quite clear that, most significant of all, we are seeing today in Europe a spiritual renaissance of humanity, and this obviously for two reasons. Europe is drowned in blood and tears; the cry of her agony ascends even unto heaven. All the things of this world are being stripped from her; that which man sets his heart upon has gone up in smoke and flame or down into the bloody dust. And Europe, deprived of her material world, is discovering what Job in the ancient drama found, what in every age of storm and stress men have discovered, that behind the sham and misery of the material world, beneath its cruelty, its injustice, its delusions, is another world untouched by all the madness and the tears.

TURNING TO RELIGION.

It is to this world that the ancient home of our civilization is turning back! One cry ascends from the ruined homes and the stark battlefields of Europe: "If in this world only we have hope, we are of all men the most miserable"; and since it is the precise characteristic of religion that it offers most to men when they need most, it is now to religion that men turn.

And the other reason, infinitely moving, is this. These thousands of soldiers who are marching day by day to their death were, in the beginning, impelled thereto by a great wave of spiritual idealism, and in every sacrifice of life that idealism is regenerated and maintained. What do you suppose is making all these lads, many of them hardly old enough to be called men, lay down their lives like sheep on the slaughter fields of the western and eastern fronts? They are not fighting for trade considerations, or commercial rivalries. These motives may well actuate the men sitting in the easy chairs in the chancelleries. But young men do not die for a tariff! Nor are they fighting for houses or lands or goods, for none of these things, alas, shall they ever see. But all these men march singing to their death, they breast it as the sobbing runner breasts the rope, they go down scornful before many spears because they are giving up their lives for love, their very breath for an idea.

LAYING DOWN LIFE FOR AN IDEA.

As the German lads charge up those one-time pleasant slopes of France about Verdun, they see before them Germania, guardian of their sacred Rhine. They sing "Deutschland uber Alles," thinking of that Fatherland, all compounded of romance and legend and heroic deed, and for Germany the invisible entity, the real, because spiritual, fact they gladly die. And the nonchalant English Tommy, cool and imperturbable amid shot and shell, running laughing to the fray—what does he fight for? Why, England! The Empire of the Seven Seas on which the sun never sets, that unique Anglo-Saxon civilization, incomparable for all its defects and blunders, the corporate spirit of a race which produced Nelson and Drake, Tennyson and Kitchener and Brooke.

Why does the English Tommy die so well? Because his life has been given to something invisible, intangible, enduring from generation to generation—the spiritual ideal which fadeth not away. And so with the French lad fighting so sublimely for "la Republique," and the Turkish boy for Mahomet and the Crescent, and the Moujik for holy Russia—they are all laying down their lives for love, their breath for an idea.

A RENAISSANCE BEGINNING.

Now, out of such an immeasurable wealth of sacrifice, out of such height of vision and extremity of anguish, out of this love and these tears of a continent, is certain to issue by the inexorable law of the universe a profound spiritual change. It is not likely, I fear, to have any close connection with the organized expressions of religion; it is more likely indeed to shake them to their very foundations, and perhaps beneficently to remake them.

But the renaissance is already begun, and if this nation, complacent and indifferent, removed from this titanic struggle, receives nothing from the conflict but economic gain, then when exhausted Europe sheathes the sword, she will indeed be crippled in all those material means of civilization which we so egregiously overestimate, but she will be far, far beyond us in those things which make the real strength of nations and are the conditions of their endurance—moral courage, spiritual consecration, national visions and ideals.

Unless the next generation shall be able to restore to this democracy its old vision of moral and spiritual values, unless it shall be able to say, We will have no aristocracy here except the aristocracy of character, no wisdom here which is not founded upon the fear of the Lord, no laws and practices here which are not based upon righteousness and justice, no material means divorced from spiritual ends—unless it is able to say these things, the democracy is doomed.

The "Meetin'-House" Must Go

By John H. Booth

ONE of the greatest needs of the Disciples of Christ today is adequately equipped houses of worship. We have nearly 9,000 church buildings of which fully 7,000 are of the old-fashioned "meetin'-house" type. This type of church was adequate for use when we laid most of the emphasis in our work upon evangelization. The phase of religious worship being most emphasized has always dictated the kind of a church building in which the worship is to be carried on.

When the emphasis was laid upon ritualism and ceremonialism the cathedral was built and was perfectly efficient for that form of religious worship. Evangelism, especially the kind that characterized the beginning of the Protestant movement and the kind that characterized our own movement up until recent years, brought the old-fashioned "meetin-'house."

The emphasis today is placed upon Christian education and the demand, therefore, is for a building equipped for school purposes as well as for worship. There is an old saying that a great professor on one end of a log and a student on the other constitutes a college. There is just one thing wrong with that statement; that is, it isn't so; at any rate, if it ever was so it was in a day when the educational system was theoretical and not practical, all impression and no expression. Educators tell us today that impression without expression is stultifying. We have as a result of this new method of teaching a laboratory in which to demonstrate every science which is taught. The medical college has the clinic; the agricultural college, the farms; and the manual training school, the shop. This same principle of teaching is now being carried by our Sunday-school experts into the church and thousands of our congregations have caught the vision of what a real Sunday-school should be and are attempting to establish such schools. But it is impossible to have a real Sunday-school in an old-fashioned building, as much so as it would be to have a modern public school placed back in the "Little red school house that stands on the hill."

RURAL CHURCHES.

This impossibility is well illustrated by a story told by some settlement workers who were making a canvass of a tenement district in a large city. It is reported that they found five families living in one room, a family in each of the four corners of the room and a family in the center of the room. The household was asked what its domestic relations were. A family that lived in one of the corners volunteered the information that they got along very nicely until the family that lived in the center of the room got progressive and began to take in boarders, then it is reported that trouble began.

It is just as impossible to carry on the work of Christian education with a dozen classes or more in a church whose accommodation is largely in one room.

There is a slogan that has gone the rounds among us that we have nothing to do but teach the Bible and nothing to teach but the Bible. If this is true, if we are, indeed, the Bible people we claim to be, does it not seem as if we ought to have buildings equipped in which to do this great task, second to none among all religious peoples.

Much attention is being given today to the problem of the rural church. One of the great factors entering into the solution of this rural church problem is an adequate building, one equipped for real educational and social service and community work. The hour has come for the Disciples of Christ to revive their thousands of small town and rural churches by rebuilding their old-fashioned "meetin'-houses" into modern plants.

The Board of Church Extension is helping in a small measure to do this, but for lack of funds we cannot directly encourage the small town and the rural church to remodel their old buildings or to build new ones. The Board, through its fund and the work that it has done and is doing, has given to our people a great stimulus to build. But our evangelism has brought such a rapid growth that the Board has been able to answer less than half of all the appeals that have come and has been unable, therefore, to directly encourage our people to build or rebuild.

THE IMMEDIATE NEED.

The Board should have at once a fund of several millions of dollars that it might be able to say to these thousands of small town and rural churches as our Master said to the Disciples who had toiled all night and accomplished nothing," "'Launch out into the deep and cast your nets for a draught'; tear down the old buildings or remodel them in such a way that the Disciples of Christ throughout the whole land may become in practice as we are in name, a Bible people."

Every church in our brotherhood should remember the Board of Church Extension with a liberal offering during the month of September.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among union churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union church that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

The Washington Home Missions Council

The object of the Home Missions Council in the State of Washington is to promote co-operation in the organization and maintenance of churches in the state, and to prevent waste of resources and efforts in the smaller towns and to stimulate missionary work in the destitute regions.

The members of the council consist of three delegates chosen by each denomination co-operating with the council. The following are some of the principles by which the council is supposed to be guided in its operation:

1. No community in which any denomination has any legitimate claim should be entered by any other denomination through its official agencies without conference with the denomination having such claims.
2. A feeble church should be revived if possible, rather than a new one established to become its rival.
3. Those denominations having churches nearest at hand should, other things being equal, be recognized as in the most advantageous position to encourage and aid a new enterprise in their vicinity.
4. In case one denomination begins gospel work in a destitute community it should be left to develop that work without other denominational interference.
5. Temporary suspension of church by any denomination occupying a field should not be deemed sufficient warrant in itself for entrance into that field by any other denomination unless that suspension continue for a year, when the field may be considered abandoned.

* * *

Under the auspices of this council a survey has been made of western Washington, covering over 1,000 school districts having a total population of 702,-291, and a school population of 169,508.

"The general feeling manifested by the returns in this survey shows little care for denominationalism. Probably not more than three per cent give denominational preference. What these people want is some one to present Bible truths in an acceptable manner."

The returns show that there are in these counties about 70,000 people in scattering communities that have no religious work of any character; and about 120,000 more whose only religious privileges are those furnished by the Mormons, the Holy Rollers and other such "isms," or by an occasional visit from a Catholic priest or some one of the Lutheran faith.

* * *

At the beginning of its work nine whole days were spent by the Council in trying to work out some plan for dividing up this field. Effort has been made to use the pastors of overchurched towns to care for neglected districts, going in turns to different fields. One means of trying to meet the need devised by the Council is what is called a "Community Church" which is described as "a body of Christians worshiping in a certain district, representing all denominations co-operating with the Home Missions Council, and affiliated with one of the said denominations, but affording fellowship and Christian privilege for every Christian within its reach."

The Home Missions Council favors linking each church to some denomination, rather than the organization of what is called a "Union" church with no denominational affiliation. It uses its influence also to bring about exchange of fields, wherever such exchange seems expedient.

* * *

The difficulties in the way of the work of the Council are many and obvious to any one conversant with the history of denominationalism. Prejudice, bigotry, narrowness, jealousy, denominational prestige and ambition are met with on every hand. Hence the Home Missions Council has had rather rough sailing. In one instance it is the Methodists that are accused of taking a field in a way that the Home Missions Council disapproved of; in another a presbytery is charged with either not knowing or not caring about the comity principle of the Council. In two other instances the Baptists are accused of having violated the comity principles, and of giving no heed to protests, except "getting a little hot."

The Disciples of eastern Washington do not consider themselves under obligation to abide by any "agreement" and the Home Missionary superintendent of another denomination accuses Congregationalists of flagrant violation of comity in at least two instances. All of which goes to show that what is needed is a spirit of union and a conviction of our duty along that line which will sweep before it all obstacles.

* * *

Our study of the situation in Washington leads us to conclude that the one great barrier to union is that which is created by the official representatives of the denominations who seem to feel that they would be traitors to their trust unless they do all in their power to hoist their denominational flag in every place possible whether it is needed there in the interests of the Kingdom of God or not. We have reason to believe that there are many places where the surplus churches that now retard the progress of Christ's cause would never have come into existence had it not been for the officiousness of these denominational representatives.

Odessa, Wash. W. S. Pritchard.

A Poem From The Trenches

The following verses are reprinted from The Outlook, but they appear to have been published first in some English publication and are from the pen of a soldier in the trenches in Flanders, the heart utterance of one who stood face to face with eternal verities.

WE HAD forgotten You or very nearly,
You did not seem to touch us very nearly;
Of course we thought about You now and then,
Especially in any time of trouble,
We knew that you were good in time of trouble,
But we are very ordinary men.

And there were always other things to think of;
There's lots of things a man has got to think of—
His work, his home, his pleasure, and his wife.
And so we only thought of You on Sunday;
Sometimes, perhaps, not even on a Sunday,
Because there's always lots to fill one's life.

And all the while, in street or lane or byway,
In country lane, in city street or byway,
You walked among us, and we did not see.
Your feet were bleeding as You walked our pavements.
How did we miss Your footprints on our pavements?
Can there be other folk as blind as we?

Now we remember over here in Flanders
(It isn't strange to think of you in Flanders),
This hideous warfare seems to make things clear.
We never thought about You much in England,
But now that we are far away from England
We have no doubts, we know that You are here.

You helped us pass the jest along the trenches,
Where in cold blood we waited in the trenches
You touched its ribaldry and made it fine,
You stood beside us in our pain and weakness;
We're glad to think you understand our weakness
Somehow it seems to help us not to whine.

We think about You kneeling in the garden;
Ah, God! the agony of that great garden;
We know You prayed for us upon the cross.
If anything could make us glad to bear it,
'Twould be the knowledge that You willed to bear it,
Pain—death—the uttermost of human loss.

Though we forget You, You will not forget us
We feel so sure that You will not forget us,
But stay with us until this dream is past.
And so we ask for courage, strength, and pardon,
Especially, I think, we ask for pardon,
And that You'll stand beside us to the last.

REALIZATION.

Dear God, the light is come, our outworn creeds
Drop from us as a garment, and our sight
Grows clear to see ourselves and thee aright;
We trust thy love to meet our utmost needs,
And know thy hand sustains us. The foul breeds
Of nameless doubts and fears that thronged the night
Like phantoms disappear in Truth's clear light;
Self only, now our upward way impedes:
For thou hast given new bottles for Truth's wine:—
Hast given a larger faith to help us live
A larger life; new knowledge that will give
A lamp to lead us on to the divine:
And though our feet may falter in the way,
Yet shall our eyes behold Love's Perfect Day.

A Memorial for John E. Gunckel

ALL have heard of John E. Gunckel, the Newsboys' friend of Toledo, O., who gave his life to the welfare of the youngsters who are compelled to make their living as newsies. He built a Newsboys' Home in Toledo, and was the founder of the Toledo News Boys Association.

On Monday evening, August 14, a splendid company of Toledo's citizens gathered in front of the McKinley Monument, on Court House Square, to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. Gunckel.

The News Boys Band gave a program of music, which was followed by speeches of appreciation from representative citizens. The occasion was the 70th anniversary of the birth of the famous reformer. It was within two days of the first anniversary of his death.

* * *

John E. Gunkel will long be remembered as "The Children's Friend."

While the program was in progress, the children were having a delightful time on the Court House lawn. This of itself was perhaps as high a tribute as any that was paid by the orators of the evening. Nothing would have pleased John Gunckel more on an anniversary occasion, than to know that it was a time when the children were enjoying a wholesome and innocent good time.

In the absence of the Mayor, Welfare Director William Beatty made the opening address on behalf of the city. In the absence of the President, J. D. Robinson, R. A. Bartley of the Board of Juvenile Court and the community at large, spoke. Judge O'Brien O'Donnell spoke the closing word. Each speaker lauded the work that had been done by the News Boys' friend.

Mr. Bartley told the story of the method of discipline among the News Boys, as was practiced by Mr. Gunckel.

One evening as Mr. Bartley was going from business, he found a boy crying on the street corner, and on inquiry was told that the boy had lost his papers, to the value of 25c. He gave him the quarter to compensate him for his loss. He was congratulating himself that he had helped a boy in trouble. He had scarcely passed when he met a man who told him that the boy had played a trick, and said that this was the second time to his knowledge, as he had given him a like sum the day before; but the boy was gone, and the matter was allowed to pass. Next day, however, the boy came into his office, accompanied by another, and gave him back the 25c, and told him that "Gunk" said that boys mustn't take money that they had not honorably earned, and that he had done wrong, and he must make it right.

Judge O'Donnell pleaded for a monument in the form of a bronze statue, to be erected to perpetuate the memory of the man who had given so unselfishly and so generously for the boys and girls of Toledo who needed a friend.

RELIGION THE MOST HOPEFUL ASSET.

There was one phase of the life of John E. Gunckel that escaped the attention of any of the speakers. Mr. Gunckel himself spent most of his life outside of church membership, but his work with boys and girls, and his attempt to bring them to an approximation of his ideal of manhood and womanhood, led him to look in every direction for the forces that would be most valuable in the accomplishment of this end.

After many years of experience, Mr. Gunckel reached the conclusion that religion was his most hopeful ally. Having gathered boys and girls from every walk of life, and from every race and religious faith in the city of Toledo, it was not possible for him, at the News Boys Building, to be a religious teacher as such in the sense of offering religion in any creedal form, or in any ecclesiastical ceremony. He therefore formed a kind of partnership with the religious organizations of the city, and devoted much of his time in his later years to seeking the co-operation of church and Sunday-school in behalf of the boys and girls.

* * *

In conjunction with the Lucas County Sunday School Association, he sought to have appointed in every Sunday-school a representative from among the newsboys, who would work with him in getting every newsboy in the neighborhood to become a member of the Sunday-school. Sunday after Sunday, he went from school to school, church to church, urging that Christian men and women should bestir themselves in behalf of the religious training of the newsboys, and the newsboys' sisters. He was free from any spirit of sectarianism. His only concern was that the children should receive the help towards self-mastery that was offered through the channel of religious teachings and association.

Mr. Gunckel himself backed his own conclusion as to the value of religion, by uniting with one of the Toledo churches.

Since the opening of the war the rule excluding all but the nobility from rank in the Russian army has been abrogated and now the men of the middle class are eligible.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

EDITORIAL

CLEAN MEN IN PUBLIC LIFE.

FEW political questions at this hour are of more significance than the securing of clean men in politics. In many states there is a blanket ballot ready for the primary elections that are near at hand. It is a herculean task to pick out the right men. It is difficult to know on what principle candidates should be selected. There is no single criterion more important than just to vote for clean, good men who have always lived right.

Declarations of principles are grossly abused. The biggest charlatan in politics will often make the most satisfactory statement, only to repudiate his "principles" as soon as his election is assured. It is the record of a man, his character as a man and a citizen, that gives to every declaration its meaning.

A good man is a guarantee that unforeseen political emergency will be properly met. Life is such a changing kaleidoscope that the issues which we discuss this autumn may not be the issues before next year's Congress at all. How do we know that our candidate will act right in all the emergencies that lie before him? We do not know unless we can be assured that he is a good man.

When a bad man is called to leadership in public life, he encourages our young people to regard ethical standards lightly. When a president drinks, or a governor is known to be unfaithful to his family, or a congressman accepts a bribe, the youth of the country assume at once that these sins are not to be regarded as standing in the way of preferment and power. Goodness will be enormously strengthened when it is more appreciated by people in their choice of leaders.

A CASE OF MORAL HEROISM.

NO SOLDIER in Europe compares in valor with Dr. Karl Liebknecht, who has dared to offend against public sentiment in Germany. Before the war he was the redoubtable leader of the Social Democrats in the Reichstag. Everywhere he was regarded as the most brilliant of the living exponents of socialism.

Early in the war, he led in a vain effort to limit the war to a defence of Germany. He was opposed to the war budget because it was in every way out of accord with socialist principles. He had believed with millions of socialists that world war was impossible on account of the unwillingness of socialists to enlist in it. His party was caught by the mob psychology, and the only orthodox socialist in Germany today is Dr. Liebknecht.

Lately Dr. Liebknecht has been raising his voice against what he regards as German abuses. He is opposed to a war of conquest. He has been especially opposed to the occupation of Belgium. He has been saying that there is no use in prolonging a hopeless struggle. For this he was sentenced to two and a half years in prison. Appealing his case, he has received a heavier sentence of four and one-half years, his civil rights have been taken away for six years and he has been dismissed from the army. Though the latter is a great disgrace in Germany, it will probably not bring much chagrin to Dr. Liebknecht.

It is thus that humanity has ever treated her prophets. It was the disagreeable task of Isaiah to talk about a spoliation of his native land. Tradition tells that he came to a bloody end. It was the disagreeable task of Jeremiah to prophesy through a long life the exile of his people. His reward was exile in Egypt and at last a violent death.

Karl Liebknecht has taught Christians of this age a lesson in fidelity to conscience. Fortunately the government dare not take his life and he may yet live to lead the anti-militaristic hosts of Germany who have apostatised only for the moment.

A CAUSE OF UNBELIEF.

GENERAL GRANT was once told of a man called Charles Sumner who had no faith in the Bible. He promptly replied, "No, I suppose Sumner hasn't; he didn't write it." In this case he analyzed unbelief as nothing other than an exaggerated sense of egotism. How often this is the real basis of unbelief, it would be hard to ascertain.

More than one man has assumed to dismiss scornfully and with scant attention the sacred opinions of millions of the human race. We are now learning not to do that with any kind of religion, even the kind that was once called false. None but the egotist can flippantly say that millions have been mistaken and he alone is right.

The egotist is not afraid to arraign God for his faults! He finds many things wrong with the divine order. Ingersoll once complained because health was not as contagious as sickness. He missed the fact that it is. Every catastrophe that comes is further occasion for some one attacking religion.

One of the great essentials of religion is a humble spirit. Micah's definition of religion is "to walk humbly with thy God." Jesus blessed the poor in spirit. Only the man who is still teachable, in the spirit of the little child, is able to enter the kingdom of God.

Science has not dispelled the mysteries of the universe but has only increased them in number. These mysteries are not of special value in proving the claims of religion, but they are of some value in confronting the would-be omniscient fool. Life in every way is full of things not yet understood. No man will make progress who does not keep his mind open to new truth.

It is here that the reconciliation comes between the scientist and the Christian. Both are men of humility. Both recognize the presence of mystery in the world. In the great camp of unconscious mediocrity lives the man who thinks he knows it all..

MR. WILLETT'S RETURN FROM SYRIA.

MOST of our readers know that Mr. Herbert L. Willett, Jr., has spent the past three years as a member of the teaching staff of the Syrian Protestant College, the leading missionary school in Asia. The letters he sent to The Christian Century during the first year of his stay were most interesting.

But with the opening of the war communication with Syria was much interrupted, and for the past year word has been received from him only rarely, and then in the brief and fragmentary form insisted upon by the censor.

As it was known that the entire Syrian coast is mined and blockaded, it was doubtful if any of the members of the American colony in Beirut would be able to leave for home this year. Not until Mr. Willett reached New York was his family aware that he had been able to get away, and if they had known that he was compelled to make the entire journey overland—by train and military automobile, through the wild though romantic regions of Asia Minor, through cities like Tarsus and Iconium famous in New Testament story, through plague-stricken camps of prisoners, through Constantinople and the Balkan States, to Berlin and Copenhagen, and then by steamer far out to the north of Scotland and the Orkneys, to avoid the peril of submarines,—they would have been still more disquieted. But he has arrived safe in Chicago, and will remain now to complete his graduate studies in America.

Our readers will welcome the three or four sections of his story of the journey home, the first of which will be published in next week's issue of The Christian Century; also the later articles in which he proposes to give some account of conditions in Syria and Palestine.

We greatly regret the fact that the large collection of photographs he has gathered in the Orient had to be left in Beirut, together with practically all the rest of his possessions,—rugs, books, papers, notes,—for nothing but the most limited luggage could be brought, and he was repeatedly searched, and every scrap of paper was taken from him. How long it will be before his belongings in Beirut can be recovered he has no means of knowing.

Our chief regret is that the photographs which would have proved valuable in illustrating his later articles are out of reach. Of course, it goes without saying that no camera or photographs were permitted on any part of his journey home.

SERMONS FOR LABOR SUNDAY.

THIS year there was an embarrassment of material for Labor Sunday. The shock of industrial conflict was on and the problem of labor was easily first in the American consciousness, eclipsing every other.

In this situation there was one embarrassing feature. It was like undertaking to preach peace in Germany and France. The minds of men were not neutral. Every utterance was apt to receive a partisan interpretation.

No labor Sunday, however, ever presented a more sorrowful picture of the fruits of domestic discord and misunderstanding. This is a time when some most radical remedies are receiving serious consideration which a month ago would have been dismissed as visionary and impractical.

It is not the business of the church to be partisan. It is her business to teach men justice and mercy. There is a deep need for the fear of God to enter the hearts of all our leaders.

A GREAT CONVENTION APPROACHING.

THE International Convention of the Disciples of Christ at Des Moines promises to be one of the large conventions of our history. Conventions of recent years have been held at far distant points. This year the location at Des Moines brings the meeting within easy reach of three-fourths of the Disciples.

The convention will be the occasion of some great reports. Most of our missionary societies are showing real progress this year. Especially stirring is the declared purpose of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions to send a big force of new missionaries to South America. There will be the story of the progress of the Men and Millions Movement. Some of the colleges have fine reports to make of new endowment and equipment.

When our conventions dare to hear from all the great souls of the brotherhood, they will reach the maximum of their usefulness. It is one of the chief defects of our convention management at present that considerations of policy sometimes lead timid committees to put reactionary men on programs, because they are supposed to be "safe." Some day we shall see that our only safety is in progress.

WAS IT MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING?

THE discussion at Canton concerning the reception of the unimmersed to Disciple churches has been characterized by one conservative writer as "much ado about nothing." Apology is made by this writer that the valuable time of the brethren has been turned aside from discussions of doctrine, to a consideration of the practice of Christian union in the local congregation.

That the judgment of the rank and file of Disciples differs from this is manifest from the correspondence which pours in following the publication of the story of the debate from the pen of Mr. Jordan.

There is no more uneasy place in the Disciple conscience than with reference to our ungenerous treatment of our religious neighbors in the fellowship of the local congregation. This uneasiness now has many voices. There can be no settlement of the problem involved save that found in the prayer of Jesus for the unity of believers.

SUMMER CAMPS FOR BOYS.

MANY churches are learning that a summer camp for boys is an enterprise of deep significance. It is to be doubted whether there is in the whole realm of activity for boys anything which so appeals to the boy nature as this.

According to the recapitulation theory, which is not entirely devoid of truth, the boy lives through the successive stages of human history. In the early teens he is in the Red Indian stage of development. At this time, the tent, the open fire, cooking by primitive methods appeal to the deepest things in his racial memory.

Though the church leader may not be very much interested in this consideration, he does know that the camp life accomplishes a number of things for boys in the vacation period which are of the very greatest value.

First of all, the boys are compelled to work; but the work is for them like play because of its spontaneity. Often the boy has to cook his own meal along with all the rest. It requires labor to keep the camp up. Living under these conditions makes the boy see that labor is not a needless fad of older people but a deep necessity for life.

The democracy of the camp teaches the boys many moral lessons. His playmates will tell a boy the truth about himself more brutally and effectively than his parents ever would, and it comes with the authority of the gang, an authority as absolute as that of the Sultan.

Boys never fail to appreciate the organization that makes the pleasures of the camping trip possible. A Sunday-school or a Boy Scout patrol fostered by a church can put the boys under an obligation to the church such as will guarantee their loyalty for a long time. Both from the standpoint of the church and of the boy, the summer camp is a success, when under the management of a man who understands the boy nature.

The Sunday School

Third Quarterly Review

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE?

Lesson I.

1. What did Paul teach in Thessalonica?
2. How was Paul supported in Thessalonica?
3. Why did Paul speak first to the Jews?
4. What was the main point in Paul's preaching?
5. What does "turning the world upside-down" mean?

Lesson II.

1. How long was Paul in Thessalonica?
2. Why did he leave the city?
3. What is meant by "our gospel?"
4. Were his converts Jews or Greeks?
5. Why did Paul write the letter to Thessalonica?

Lesson III.

1. Where is Athens?
2. For what was it famous?
3. What attracted Paul's attention in this city?
4. What two systems of philosophy prevailed in Athens?
5. What was the Areopagus?

Lesson IV.

1. What games were celebrated near Corinth?
2. What was Paul's trade?
3. Who were Aquila and Priscilla?
4. How did the Jews regard athletics?
5. What two letters did Paul write from Corinth?

Lesson V.

1. What did the Jews think of Paul's preaching?
2. What is the meaning here of "a stumbling block?"
3. What is meant by asking for signs?
4. What did Paul mean by "the foolishness of God?"
5. Who are the called?

Lesson VI.

1. What led Paul to write this hymn?
2. How does God estimate giving?
3. What are the two great commandments?
4. What is the greatest example of love?
5. What is meant by "tongues?"

Lesson VII.

1. What was the reason for having collections?
2. What is meant by "the ministry of the saints?"
3. What is God's "unspeakable gift?"
4. What kind of giving honors God?
5. In what benefactions are you interested?

Lesson VIII.

1. When was Paul first in Ephesus?
2. What sort of a man was Demetrius?
3. Why did he oppose Paul?
4. For what purpose were Greek theaters used?
5. What were the duties of a temple-keeper?

Lesson IX.

1. What was Miletus in Paul's day?
2. What does "bound in spirit" mean?
3. How did Paul point to his record?
4. For what purpose was Paul in the world?
5. What purpose have you in the world?

Lesson X.

1. Why does Paul give this account of his suffering?
2. What sufferings have been recorded?
3. Are Paul's words boasting?
4. Was Paul complaining?
5. Why did Paul write Second Corinthians?

Lesson XI.

1. With whom did Paul stay in Caesarea?
2. How was Paul received in Jerusalem?
3. How was his orthodoxy suspected?
4. How does unfounded slander grow?
5. Should we readily believe evil reports?

Lesson XII.

1. Of what was Paul's speech a defence?
2. How did Paul receive his Roman citizenship?
3. What purpose had Paul in addressing the Jews?
4. What were the objectionable words?
5. How was a man examined by scourging?

A Glance Backward

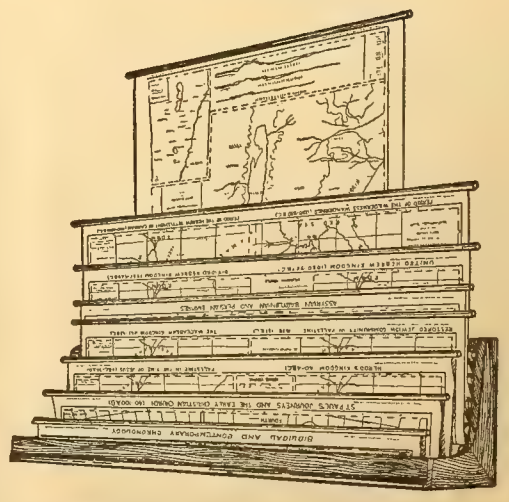
The Lessons in Today's Life.

BY ASA McDANIEL.

THE story of Paul's missionary work is a long and interesting one. We have been following his fortunes and misfortunes the past Quarter. It might be well at this time to take a glance back along the course to see what has been accomplished, and to gather the nuggets of gold that may have been missed along the journey.

The closing words of last Quarter's series of lessons gave a brief account of Paul's entering Europe for the first time, and the success he had in that city. Philippi was the first city in Europe to have a Christian church. It was founded by Paul and was especially dear to his heart. The once interesting city is now in ruins. It was not ready to receive the gospel, and it might not be far from the facts to suggest that this condition may have contributed to its present condition in no small measure. This is certainly true of the individual who rejects the gospel by any sort of method. If the ruin is not complete the condition of his mind and heart is such as to render him of little religious value to the community.

When Paul was driven from Philippi by a mob he came to Thessalonica where he reasoned in the synagogue at first. The people believed the gospel message in large numbers, and the Jews became very jealous. This spirit is not uncommon among us. It frequently happens that the success of another is especially displeasing. In the face of great opposition Paul succeeded in planting a church in that prosperous city. The city stands today, and is known as Saloniki. Because of his teaching that Jesus was the Christians' king, he was accused of treason to Rome, and of "turning the world upside down." At any rate, his life counted on the side of the kingdom of God. It might be a profitable thing to stand alongside of Paul and see how the influence of our lives compares with his.



Paul finally drifted to Athens where he hoped no doubt to meet more favorable conditions. Athens was the chief city of Greece. It still maintains this distinction. Paul was mightily stirred because of the great number of idols he saw everywhere, and in synagogue and in market place, to Jews and to Epicurean and Stoic philosophers, he preached Jesus and the resurrection. The Athenians took delight in hearing something new, and they brought Paul unto the Areopagus that he might explain his new teaching. Perhaps Paul's chief work in this city was his famous address before this council of Mars Hill. His treatment here was that of indifference rather than mob violence. This method of attack is peculiarly effective at the present time. People as a rule are not actively opposing the gospel of our Lord; they are just indifferent to it. This attitude is more difficult to deal with, on the whole, than the former.

* * *

From one of the three most renowned cities in the history of the world Paul went to the great commercial center of Greece. Corinth was situated on an isthmus between two seas. The ancient city is in ruins, having been visited by a violent earthquake; but New Corinth has a population of fifteen thousand only three miles away. Here Paul remained a year and a half. It was a difficult field. But here Paul founded his largest church. He did not escape persecution in the worldly city. From Corinth the two letters to the church at Thessalonica were written by Paul. A study of the letters shows that he praised them and comforted them in their work. While Paul was in Corinth he made his home with Aquila and Priscilla. By them Paul was encouraged to larger and better things.

The next monument to be mentioned in this backward glance over Paul's career is his work at Ephesus, a city on the Aegean Sea. It is now in ruins. Paul spent nearly three years there and founded a church. He wrote the Ephesian letter to this church while in Rome some years later. Here he burned the books of magic, and disturbed the business of the silversmith, who caused a riot and in consequence Paul left the city. The man who does his duty need not expect all the people to be his friends. What we need today is more men who dare to disturb the worship of gold and silver idols.

Best Maps for Bible Classes

Send for Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE :: By Orvis F. Jordan

Methodist Veterans Meet at Bull Run.

Northern and Southern Methodists met recently on the battle-field of Bull Run. Dr. John F. Goucher was present representing Bishop Cranston and spoke. Bishop Eugene R. Hendix, the senior bishop of the southern branch of Methodism, made an address. The two speakers clasped hands over the Manassas peace tablet. Near by was the Sudley Methodist Episcopal church, South, in which General Jackson stopped for prayers during 1862. The company repaird by motor for a visit to this church.

Iowa Pastor Goes to London.

The story of the circumstances under which the committee of City Temple, London, became acquainted with Rev. Joseph Fort Newton is a very interesting one. The Iowa pastor has been printing his sermons for a number of years and finally one was reproduced in the Christian World, a London periodical. His utterances in this journal were of such character that the British public became interested in him. The evangelical note is being sounded in Mr.-Newton's sermons in England these days. His hero is David Swing, whose biography he wrote as the first of his books. The British say of him that he is "frankly rhetorical in the American style of rhetoric" and "his eloquence rushes along like a torrential cataract."

Theological School Turns Away Students.

Men who would enroll in the Boston School of Theology (Methodist) must now go on a waiting list. Fifty new students were accepted this fall but forty were turned away for lack of room. These students came from all parts of the country. This indicates that there is not a lack of theological students to the extent that has been reported.

Plan Union of Russian and English Churches.

Archdeacon Rogers of Fon du Lac contributes to a recent number of a German theological journal an article on proposed co-operation between the English and Orthodox churches. The archdeacon visited Russia in 1903 and is conversant with the customs of the Orthodox church of that country. The German editor represents the "old" Catholics of Germany. The German editor resents what seems to him an effort to establish the English and Slavic peoples in a place of leadership that would be quite as objectionable as the leadership of the pope has been in the past. He demands a separation of religion and politics.

University Studies Indians.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Shortridge are full blooded Chilkat Indians of Alaska and they have been educated in the mission schools. They have been selected by John Wanamaker and the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania to make an exhaustive study of the history, ethnology and language of the Chilkat Indians. In addition to the contribution to science, this will be a great service to the future missionary operations in this section of the world.

Close Sunday Schools in Philadelphia.

The plague of infantile paralysis in the east has resulted in an order from the health department of Philadelphia closing all the Sunday-schools of the city. No children under sixteen years of age will be permitted to attend the church services. It is also a possibility that the public schools will not be opened on schedule. The whole city is living under a most rigid quarantine.

More Money for French Protestants.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has secured $60,000 of the $150,000 fund needed for the French Protestant churches. Secretary Macfarland has been very insistent that the total amount be raised, for the close of the war these churches will face the greatest opportunity of their history Without aid they will in many cases perish utterly.

Raise Monument to Secretary.

The London Missionary Society will gather as a monument to their late secretary, Dr. Wardlaw Thompson, a fund with which to educate and support higher native agents in the fields of the society. It is proposed to secure fifty thousand dollars, the interest on which will equip and support about thirty workmen.

Missionary Review Changes Hands.

The Missionary Review of the World has been a standard publication which was edited by the late Dr. Arthur T. Pierson and published for many years by Funk and Wagnalls. It will be published by the Missionary Review Publishing Company, of which Dr. Robert E. Speer is president, after Sept. 1. Dr. Speer will give character to the journal and this guarantees that it will treat Missions in an up-to-date fashion entirely.

Theologian Visits Orient.

Dr. A. H. Strong, the veteran theologian of the Baptist denomination, and president emeritus of the Rochester Theological Seminary, will sail for the orient on Sept. 23. He will be accompanied by several members of his family. His party will spend considerable time in Japan, China and India. They plan to be in India in the cool season. Dr. Strong will refuse all speaking engagements. He will spend eight months on the trip.

Pastor Assists Consul.

Rev. George R. Montgomery has resigned as assistant pastor at Madison Square church, New York, to remain in Turkey as assistant to Ambassador Elkus. Mr. Montgomery went to Constantinople as charge d'affaires when Ambassador Morgenthau returned to this country last winter. Mr. Montgomery is peculiarly qualified for his new task by his thorough knowledge of the Turkish language—gained through his experience in Smyrna as a missionary.

Protestant Parade for Pittsburg.

The churches of Pittsburg held a Protestant Parade on Sept. 2. Numerous lodges and patriotic fraternal organizations also participated in the parade. A committee has had the enterprise in hand for a year. It is reported that there were about 100,000 people in line.

Missions Bring Peace in Latin America.

The feeling between Indians and Spaniards in Latin America has been the opposite of cordial in days gone by. Indians have often been characterized as dumb as mules, and the Indians on the other hand have regarded Spaniards as haughty and over-bearing. The evangelical missions have brought better feeling between the races. In Guatamala there has recently been passed a minimum wage law in behalf of the Indians of the country.

Bishop Heads Dry Movement.

The Rt. Rev. Thomas Nicholson, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church in Chicago, has accepted the position of president of the Dry Chicago Federation. He is now in the mountains of the west recuperating his health but in the early fall an active campaign will be begun. The effort of the organization is to get the question of licensing saloons on the ballot in the city election next spring. Rev. Philip Yarrow is the Superintendent of the organization.

Lutheran Young People Meet.

The Luther League which held a convention in Toledo recently has joined most heartily in the movement to honor the great founder of their denomination next year. They also seek more unity for the Lutheran movement in this country.

Kent and Madsen Maps

A New Series of Historical Maps

For Sunday Schools, Bible Classes and Individual Students

Because of the combined attractiveness, accuracy, adaptability, compactness and cheapness of these maps, the series should find a place promptly in the classrooms of every progressive Sunday School.

The maps, both in detail of drawing and coloring, are superb, Size, about 17x25 inches. Not sold separately. Complete set mounted on wooden roller, to fit on music stand tripod. The low price of $5.00 includes maps, tripod, boxing and delivery charges in continental United States.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. Chicago.

Disciples Table Talk

Kentucky's State Convention

Kentucky Disciples will hold their annual meet this year at Winchester, Sept. 18-21. S. Gano Buckner is president of the convention. A. L. Boatright, of Paris, will be leader of song. The sessions will begin on the evening of Monday, Sept. 18, with addresses by R. H. Crossfield, Homer W. Carpenter, J. W. Hardy, J. W. Porter and E. B. Bourland as features.

On Tuesday the C. W. B. M. will have charge of the sessions. On the morning program are W. G. Eldred, Mrs. Mary Walden, Miss Willie Boardman, Mrs. E. L. Williams, Mrs. Louise L. Campbell and Miss Myrta Rierson; and in the afternoon conferences will be held under the leadership of Mrs. Louise L. Campbell. Mrs. Ida M. Harrison will give a talk on the Panama Conference and D. W. Scott will speak on "The Enlistment of Life." Horace Kingsbury will give an address in the evening on the theme, "Not Disobedient to the Heavenly Vision."

The following day's program will have such speakers as Dr. Buckner, Ira M. Boswell, H. W. Elliott, C. W. Cauble and Hall L. Calhoun, in the morning; Clyde Darsie, R. A. Doan and S. J. Corey in the afternoon; and Leroy M. Anderson, W. R. Warren and A. W. Fortune in the evening. Professor Fortune's address will be on the theme, "Kentucky's Supreme Demand of the Disciples."

Thursday will be Bible School day. F. F. Grim and President R. N. Simpson will have part on the morning program. A Review and Outlook service will be held also in which state officers and department superintendents will participate. The following special features will be included in this period: Recognition of standard Bible-schools, the award of the county banner and the recognition of standard rural churches. W. N. Briney will lead in a period of intercession and E. L. Powell will preach a sermon. Early in the afternoon will be featured an Orphans' Home session, conducted by J. S. Hilton. John Christopherson will speak on the rural church institute, and J. D. Armistead on the Lexington School of Methods. Three talks will be given on Bible-school extension in Kentucky and P. H. Moss will tell the story of "Bible School Work Among the Negroes;" W. C. Bower following with an address on "National Bible School Work." At 5:30 will come the Adult Bible Class Banquet, with J. H. Richmond as toastmaster. Addresses will be given by Roger T. Nooe and W. C. Pearce.

In the Special Adult Bible Class Session, in the evening, interesting features will be a demonstration session of an organized class, in charge of Glenn B. Murdock, State Adult superintendent, and with C. T. Hendricks, of Paris, as teacher. W. C. Pearce will give an address on the Organized Adult Bible Class.

Several conferences will be held during the convention.

Paris, Ill., Bids H. H. Peters Farewell.

What was originally planned as a Paris Chamber of Commerce farewell to H. H. Peters, its retiring president and pastor of First church, turned out to be a civic demonstration. The meeting was held Aug. 25. Mr. Peters has resigned from the Paris work to accept the leadership of the Illinois State Missionary Society. The mayor of the city presided at the farewell meeting, which was held at the Presbyterian church. Oscar Merkle, a leader in the business life of Paris, spoke of Mr. Peters as president of the Chamber of Commerce. He referred to the initial opposition to having a preacher in the office. Some one had said, "Oh, he'll turn the thing into a prayer meeting," but they soon found that the new executive did things as well as pray for them. "Mr. Peters' record as president of the Chamber of Commerce is too well known to you to need recounting at this time," said Mr. Merkle. "He needs no eulogy from me." He then eloquently and practically outlined some of the things for which Mr. Peters had striven and urged the citizenship of Paris to take up the work where it had been laid down by the retiring president.

Professor Athearn's New Work in Boston.

In a personal note written to a friend in Des Moines, Professor W. S. Athearn, now at Columbia University, tells something of his new tasks as the head of the department of religious education in the School of Theology of Boston University. He writes: "I am to have a wonderful opportunity in my new position. Six of the most outstanding leaders in the field of religious education have been called to the faculty, including Miss Margaret Slattery, celebrated author on adolescent girlhood, and H. Augustine Smith, authority on children's music. I will have a demonstration school, a model institute, and other features of which I have been dreaming and planning for so many years. This new position will not interfere with my duties as educational superintendent of the International Sunday School association." Professor Athearn and family will have church membership with the St. James Christian church, of which Mark Wayne Williams is pastor.

Fifty Years in the Christian Ministry.

It is an unusual record which has been made by John W. Allen, pioneer Disciple pastor and now living in Spokane, Wash., preaching as he has opportunity. Mr. Allen's friends in Spokane, in former charges, and elsewhere recently celebrated with him the completion of fifty years of service in the ministry. On this occasion his relatives presented him with 150 copies of a souvenir brochure containing memorials to his ministry. A committee also presented him with a purse of nearly $500 sent by loving friends. Following is the list of donors: Jacksonville, Ill., church, $38.85; First Christian church, Omaha, $25.00; Central Christian church, Spokane, $30.00; Chas. C. Chapman, $100; Charlie Roberts, $25.00; Geo. H. Grombacher, $10.00; Franklin Circle church, Cleveland, O., $78.50; Jackson Boulevard church, Chicago, $125. Mr. Allen preached his anniversary sermon from the same text from which he preached fifty years ago, "I am the way, the truth and the life." His late sermon was preached at Central church Spokane, of which he is a member and an elder emeritus. During the following week a union picnic was given, at which seven churches did honor to their friend. It was on this occasion that the gifts were presented to Mr. Allen. The churches served by the veteran preacher during the fifty years are: Johnstown, Pa.; Omaha, Neb.; Grayville, Ill.; Shelbyville, Ill.; Jacksonville, Ill.; Jackson Boulevard, Chicago; Franklin Circle, Cleveland; Dean Avenue and Jackson Avenue churches, Spokane. Mr. Allen was at one time president of the American Society.

Northwest Texas Camp Meeting.

The nineteenth annual session of the North-west Texas Camp Meeting was held late in August. Over thirty Texas counties and a number of States had representatives present. This organization is a unique one; its affairs are managed by directors chosen from different callings—lawyers, cowmen, ministers, etc. Revivals have been held each year, with the exception of twe or three, since the organization of the association nineteen years ago. The next one will be held at Spur in August, 1917. More than 3,000 persons have been added to the church by these efforts. About thirty are reported for this year. J. L. Haddock, of Erick, Okla., and J. T. McKissick, of Harriman, Tenn., did the preaching. The following were among the preachers present at the late meeting: Randolph Clark, Stephenville; G. W. Davis, Benjamin; J. E. Chase, Lubbock; G. W. Williams, Austin; J. S. Stockard, Cisco; Wm. Pearn, Snyder; Hilory G. Bedford, Midland; T. F. Weaver, Sweetwater; E. M. Douthit, Spur; S. H. Holmes, Vernon; F. G. Jones, Midland, and I. C. Fifield, Portales, N. M.

Community Work in Indiana Churches.

W. H. Newlin, pastor at Brownsburg, Ind., is engaged in a new community movement. A recent issue of the Brownsburg Record reports as follows: "What may be termed a Triangular Rural Church Chautauqua will be held in the Christian churches at Brownsburg, Jamestown and Advance, from September 25 to 29. Parallel sessions will be held in the three towns, and the program which is now being prepared by Ministers Newlin, Halstead and Kelley, will provide for the talent at the different points, the speakers being shunted back and forth for the different periods. There will be addresses on all different activities of Christian life and church work by specialists. To relate the program to the larger community life there will be addresses by the workers in the extension department of Purdue University, and the closing address on Friday evening, Sept. 29, by Dr. J. N. Hurty on 'Community Sanitation.' The entire program will be of such a nature as will appeal to all persons interested in church work and community uplift, and a large attendance is expected from this and adjoining communities."

* * *

—Joseph A. Serena, president of William Woods College, Fulton, Mo., reports that already the enrollment of the college has reached the capacity of the buildings.

—The Misses Josepha and Stella Franklin of Anderson, Ind., will depart this week for India, to take up their missionary work again. Miss Josepha Franklin, who is supported by Central church, Anderson, will go to Damoh, India, and Miss Stella Franklin will be stationed at Mungeli, India. While on the 10,000-mile journey the two missionaries will stop at Vancouver, British Columbia, and Hongkong, China.

—The Boys' department of Central church, Des Moines, Ia., enjoyed a five days' camping trip "up the river" last month. About twenty-five boys made the trip. Prizes were given the ones keeping the neatest tents.

—Norman Brighton, who has resigned the work at Park Avenue, Des Moines, has entered the evangelistic field.

—H. F. Rector, of Madisonville, O., began his new work at Plainfield, Ind., Sept. 1.

—John S. Zeran, who has taken the work of the state superintendency of missions of Arkansas, asks for the co-operation of all churches of the state in his important task.

—Danville, Ind., is planning large things religiously for this winter. A union campaign is scheduled for November 12 to December 19. Chas. O. Lee, of the First church, reports that Grover C. Little, of Chicago, has been called as recreational director for the year. Community center work will be carried on for eight months this year, rather than six as last year. Much new equipment is being placed in position for the community work, and about four times as much money will be expended upon this feature of the church's activity.

—Linn D. Cartwright, of Fort Collins, Colo., reports five persons added to the membership there at one service.

—Goshen, Ind., First church, will have a new building, to be erected in the spring.

—Charles W. Clark, of Sayre, Pa., has succeeded A. F. Sanderson at Central church, Syracuse, N. Y. The pulpit at Central has been supplied during the summer by D. H. Bradbury.

—F. A. Massey, of South Bend, has been called to take the pulpit at LaPorte, in place of D. L. Berry, resigned.

—Indiana Endeavorers met the last week in August in state convention at Muncie, and the largest attendance in the history of the state organization is reported.. Garry L. Cook gave an address during the session.

—William Oeschger, recently resigned from the chancellorship of Cotner University, Bethany, Neb., spent a brief vacation in Salt Lake City and Seattle. Mr. Oeschger is now president of the state missionary society.

—N. H. Robertson has resigned at Watseka, Ill. During his four years' pastorate the membership of this church has been doubled.

—At the farewell service conducted by H. W. Carpenter at Shelbyville, Ky., over $1,000 was subscribed to pay off a long-standing church debt. Mr. Carpenter becomes Chancellor of Transylvania this autumn.

—J. N. Haymaker, of Wichita, Kan., chairman of the location committee of the international convention of the Church of Christ, reports that four cities have already put in their application for the 1917 meeting: Kansas City, Mo.; Cincinnati, O.; Buffalo, N. Y. and Oklahoma City.

—Dr. Mary Longdon, who has secured a post-graduate medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania, sailed for India August 24. Miss Neva Nicholson, a graduate of Drake University and who has spent two years at the College of Missions, expected to sail with her.

• • •

A Banner Indiana County.

Chas. O. Lee, of the Danville, Ind., church, reports that Hendricks county is now thoroughly organized after the state plan; during the last year quarterly meetings of the board have been held, and a splendid mid-winter conference conducted. The county has become a living-link of the Foreign Society, raising about $750 for the work of Herbert Smith, at Lotumbe, Africa. During the coming year the county will also strive to become a living-link under the American Society. There are 13 churches in Hendricks county, all of them having regular preaching except one which has called a pastor. Three unusually successful meetings have been held in the county this year; at Pittsboro, where Frank Huston ministers; at North Salem, where Lee Tinsley leads, and at Brownsburg, under the leadership of W. H. Newlin, The county meeting will be held at Danville, Sept. 30-Oct. 1. E. E. Snoddy, of Transylvania, will deliver four lectures on this occasion, and a basket dinner in the basement of the church will be an interesting occasion.

Program of the Illinois Convention

Held at Central Church, Peoria, Sept. 11-14.

CHRISTIAN WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS PROGRAM.

Monday Evening, September 11.

5:00—Young Woman's Circle Conference and Luncheon at Y. W. C. A.. Addresses by Mrs. E. M. Bowman, Chicago; Miss Allena Grafton, Indianapolis; Miss Myrta Pearson, Eureka.

7:30—Central Christian Church.

7:30—Song Service, led by W. E. M. Hackleman. Scripture Reading and Prayer, Mrs Anna Barbre Colegrove, State Vice President, Taylorville. Naming of Convention Committees. Announcements.

8:15—Address—"The Panama Conference and the New Missionary Opportunities for Latin America." Rev. S. G. Inman, Executive Secretary Committee on Co-operation in Latin America. Benediction.

Tuesday Morning, September 12.

9:00—Praise Service, led by Mr. Hackleman.

9:15—President's Message, Mrs. Laura V. Porter, Carthage. Reports: Corresponding Secretary, Miss Jennie Call, Springfield. Treasurer, Miss Henrietta Clark, Jacksonville. Auditor, Miss Lillian Ross, Springfield.

10:15—Report, Young People's Department, Miss Effie L. Gaddis, El Dara. Address, "Our Juniors," by a Junior, Miss Frances Hunter, Chicago.

10:45—Round Table.

11:45—Address, Miss Allena Grafton, International Secretary Circle Work.

12:15—Adjournment.

Afternoon.

2:00—Song and Prayer Service, led by Prof. Hackleman.

2:15—Business Period: Recommendations of State Board, Miss Call. Report of Committees.

3:00—Song. Address, "A Layman's Look-in on India Missions," Mrs. E. M. Bowman, Chicago. Greetings from Jhansi, Illinois' Centennial Station in India.

3:45—"The Neglected Continent." Peoria Auxiliary Quartette. Address, "The Disciples of Christ in Latin America." S. G. Inman.

4:30—Announcements—Closing Service. Adjournment.

ILLINOIS CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Tuesday Evening, September 12.

7:00—Pictures.

7:30—Music.

7:45—Bible Study. Walter S. Rounds.

8:00—Welcome Address. Dr. C. G. Clarke, Peoria.

8:25—Music.

8:30—President's Address. Edgar D. Jones. Adjournment.

Wednesday Morning, September13.

9:00—Bible Study. Walter S. Rounds.

9:15—"The Church That Jesus Started—Its Beginning." Stephen E. Fisher.

9:40—Business and Reports: Report of Board of Directors. Treasurer. Permanent Fund. Bible School Superintendent. Elementary Superintendent.

10:20—State Program—Secretary John R. Golden. Missouri—W. D. Endres. Indiana—E. W. Akeman. Ohio—W. E. Hall.

11:15—Symposium on Church Activities. D. N. Wetzel. 1. Every Member Canvass.—L. G. Huff, 2. Getting a Crowd.—C. C. Carpenter. 3. Mid-Week Meeting.—S. W. Crabtree. 4. Missionary Education.—Charles W. Ross. 5. Saving the Weak Church.—W. W. Vose. 6. Personal Evangelism.—Amelia Gerke.

12:00—Memorial Service.

12:15—Adjournment.

Afternoon.

1:30—Bible Study. Ernest Reed.

1:45—Y. P. S. C. E. Address. B. H. Bruner.

2:15—"The Church That Jesus Started—Its Creed."—Stephen E. Fisher.

2:45—Educational Session. Music by Eureka Department of Music. Address—"Education, the Paramount Issue." F. D. Kershner. Music. Report.—L. O. Lehman. Music. Business Session. Report I. C. E. A.

4:30—Adjournment.

6:00—Eureka Banquet.

Evening.

7:15—Pictures and Music.

7:45—Temperance Address—L. E. Sellers.

8:15—"The Life Worth While."—F. D. Kershner.

Thursday Morning, September 14.

9:00—Bible Study—Ernest Reed.

9:30—Business, etc.

10:30—"The Church that Jesus Started—Its Program."—Stephen E. Fisher.

11:00—Church Extension—George W. Muckley.

11:30—Sectional Conferences: 1. City Redemption—Austin Hunter. 2. Rural Problem.—R. B. Doan.

12:15—Adjournment.

Afternoon.

1:30—Sectional Conference on School Problems: 1. Elementary—Miss May Young. 2. Secondary—Richard Heilbron. 3. Adult—E. W. Thornton.

2:15—Bible Study.—W. G. Winn.

2:30—"The Child."—Miss May Young.

3:00—"Men and the Church."—Prof. A. W. Nolan.

3:30—"The Preacher and His Responsibility to the Church."—Meade E. Dutt.

4:00—Entertainment.

Evening.

7:00—Pictures.

7:30—Bible Study.—W. G. Winn.

7:45—Bible School Address—E. W. Thornton.

8:15—Sermon—"What Must the Church Do to Be Saved?"—M. L. Pontius. Adjournment.

ANY BOOK

You desire,—theological, devotional, historical, poetry, fiction, etc., etc.—we can furnish you.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street Chicago

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders

Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

THE PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Fletcher Cowherd.

From its very beginning the Church Extension work has been in the hands of business men. The original Committee which laid the basis of its organization was composed of such men as General Drake who founded Drake University; Francis S. Smith a wholesale grocer of Cincinnati; Governor Bishop of Ohio; Judge Ranshaw of Covington and Mr. Boyd of Covington. The two preachers on the Committee were A. I. Hobbs and D. R. Vanbuskirk. I suppose the preachers were put on to give the Committee religious tone.

The present Board is composed of five business men and two ordained ministers. The business methods that characterize the Church Extension work are very largely due to the men of affairs on the Board.

Mr. Fletcher Cowherd.

The Board meetings begin at 1 P. M. on the first Tuesday of each month and no business of the Board is hurried. No meeting of Bank Directors was ever more deliberative. Meetings often last half a day. The case of every church's need that is applying is carefully considered. The security it offers for the loan is investigated. To this the Board attributes its slight losses of $1,993, in 27 years, during which time the Board handled over $3,000,000 in making 1,823 loans in 44 states.

In getting loans returned to the amount of nearly $2,000,000 the Board appealed to the religious and benevolent side of the church that the money should come back and go out to help the other waiting homeless churches. The Board has also aided the churches by helping them in their business methods. David O. Smart, one of the wisest business men Kansas City ever had was president of the Board for 18 years, when he died in 1906.

The present head of the Church Extension Board is Fletcher Cowherd, one of the best and most highly respected business men of Kansas City. He has been president of the Board for 10 years.

He has given $5,000 to the work, establishing a Home Fund in memory of his brother whom he dearly loved.

Fletcher Cowherd was born on a farm near Waverly, Lafayette County, Missouri, was educated at Missouri State University, graduating from the Law Department of that institution. Located in Kansas City, Missouri, and practiced law for one year and then went into the real estate business, continuing in same ever since.

He is president of the Fletcher Cowherd Real Estate & Mortgage Company. He has operated largely in buying up tracts as raw land, platting same, improving streets, etc., and then building houses on same for sale. His company has also conducted a general real estate and loan business.

He organized the Safety Savings and Loan Association, a mutual savings institution in 1894 and has managed it from the beginning, being first the Secretary and now its President. This institution has assets of two and one-quarter million dollars. He is director of the Commonwealth National Bank and the Kansas City Title & Trust Company..

He takes great interest in Kansas City's civic affairs. He was formerly president of the Kansas City Real Estate Board and is now chairman of its Public Utilities Committee. Last March on his own account he visited Cleveland and Detroit to examine into the public utilities of those cities, the cost of electric lights, city water, street railway fares, etc., and made a report on same to the Kansas City Real Estate Board. He is a member of the special committees of the Commercial Club on a new municipal lighting plant. He was recently appointed by the Mayor of Kansas City as a member on the Charter Commission to frame a new charter for the city.

He is president of the Joint Board of Christian Churches of greater Kansas City, a deacon in the Linwood Boulevard Christian church and teacher of the Men's Bible Class. He is also a member of the City Missions Committee of the Christian Churches of Kansas City and is a director of the Y. M. C. A.

J. C. Hill, vice-president of the Board owns and actively operates the Street Car advertising in Kansas City. He is a bank director and has other large business interests. He managed the building of the Linwood Blvd., church in Kansas City.

Langston Bacon the Attorney of the Board controls large business interests with his law practice. Our Treasurer, Mr. Gray was an active business man and is as accurate in figures as any expert accountant. T. R. Bryan was the former Treasurer for 21 years, W. F. Richardson is pastor of the First Church and John H. Booth and the writer are the Secretaries.

The Board makes its appeal for the September Offering on the basis of its record as the Trustees of this Fund of $1,225,000 and upon the immediate needs. Paul says "It is required of a steward that a man be found faithful." There are no more competent business men than those on the Church Extension Board. Every dollar contributed will go into a permanent fund and will be faithfully handled in building churches for our faithful brethren scattered as sheep without a fold.

G. W. Muckley.

The Bible College of Missouri

A biblical school of high grade. At Columbia, Missouri, the educational center of the state. Adjacent to the University of Missouri. Mutual interchange of credits. For catalogue, write G. D. Edwards, Dean.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27.

(Established 1858.)

THE C. S. BELL CO. : HILLSBORO, OHIO

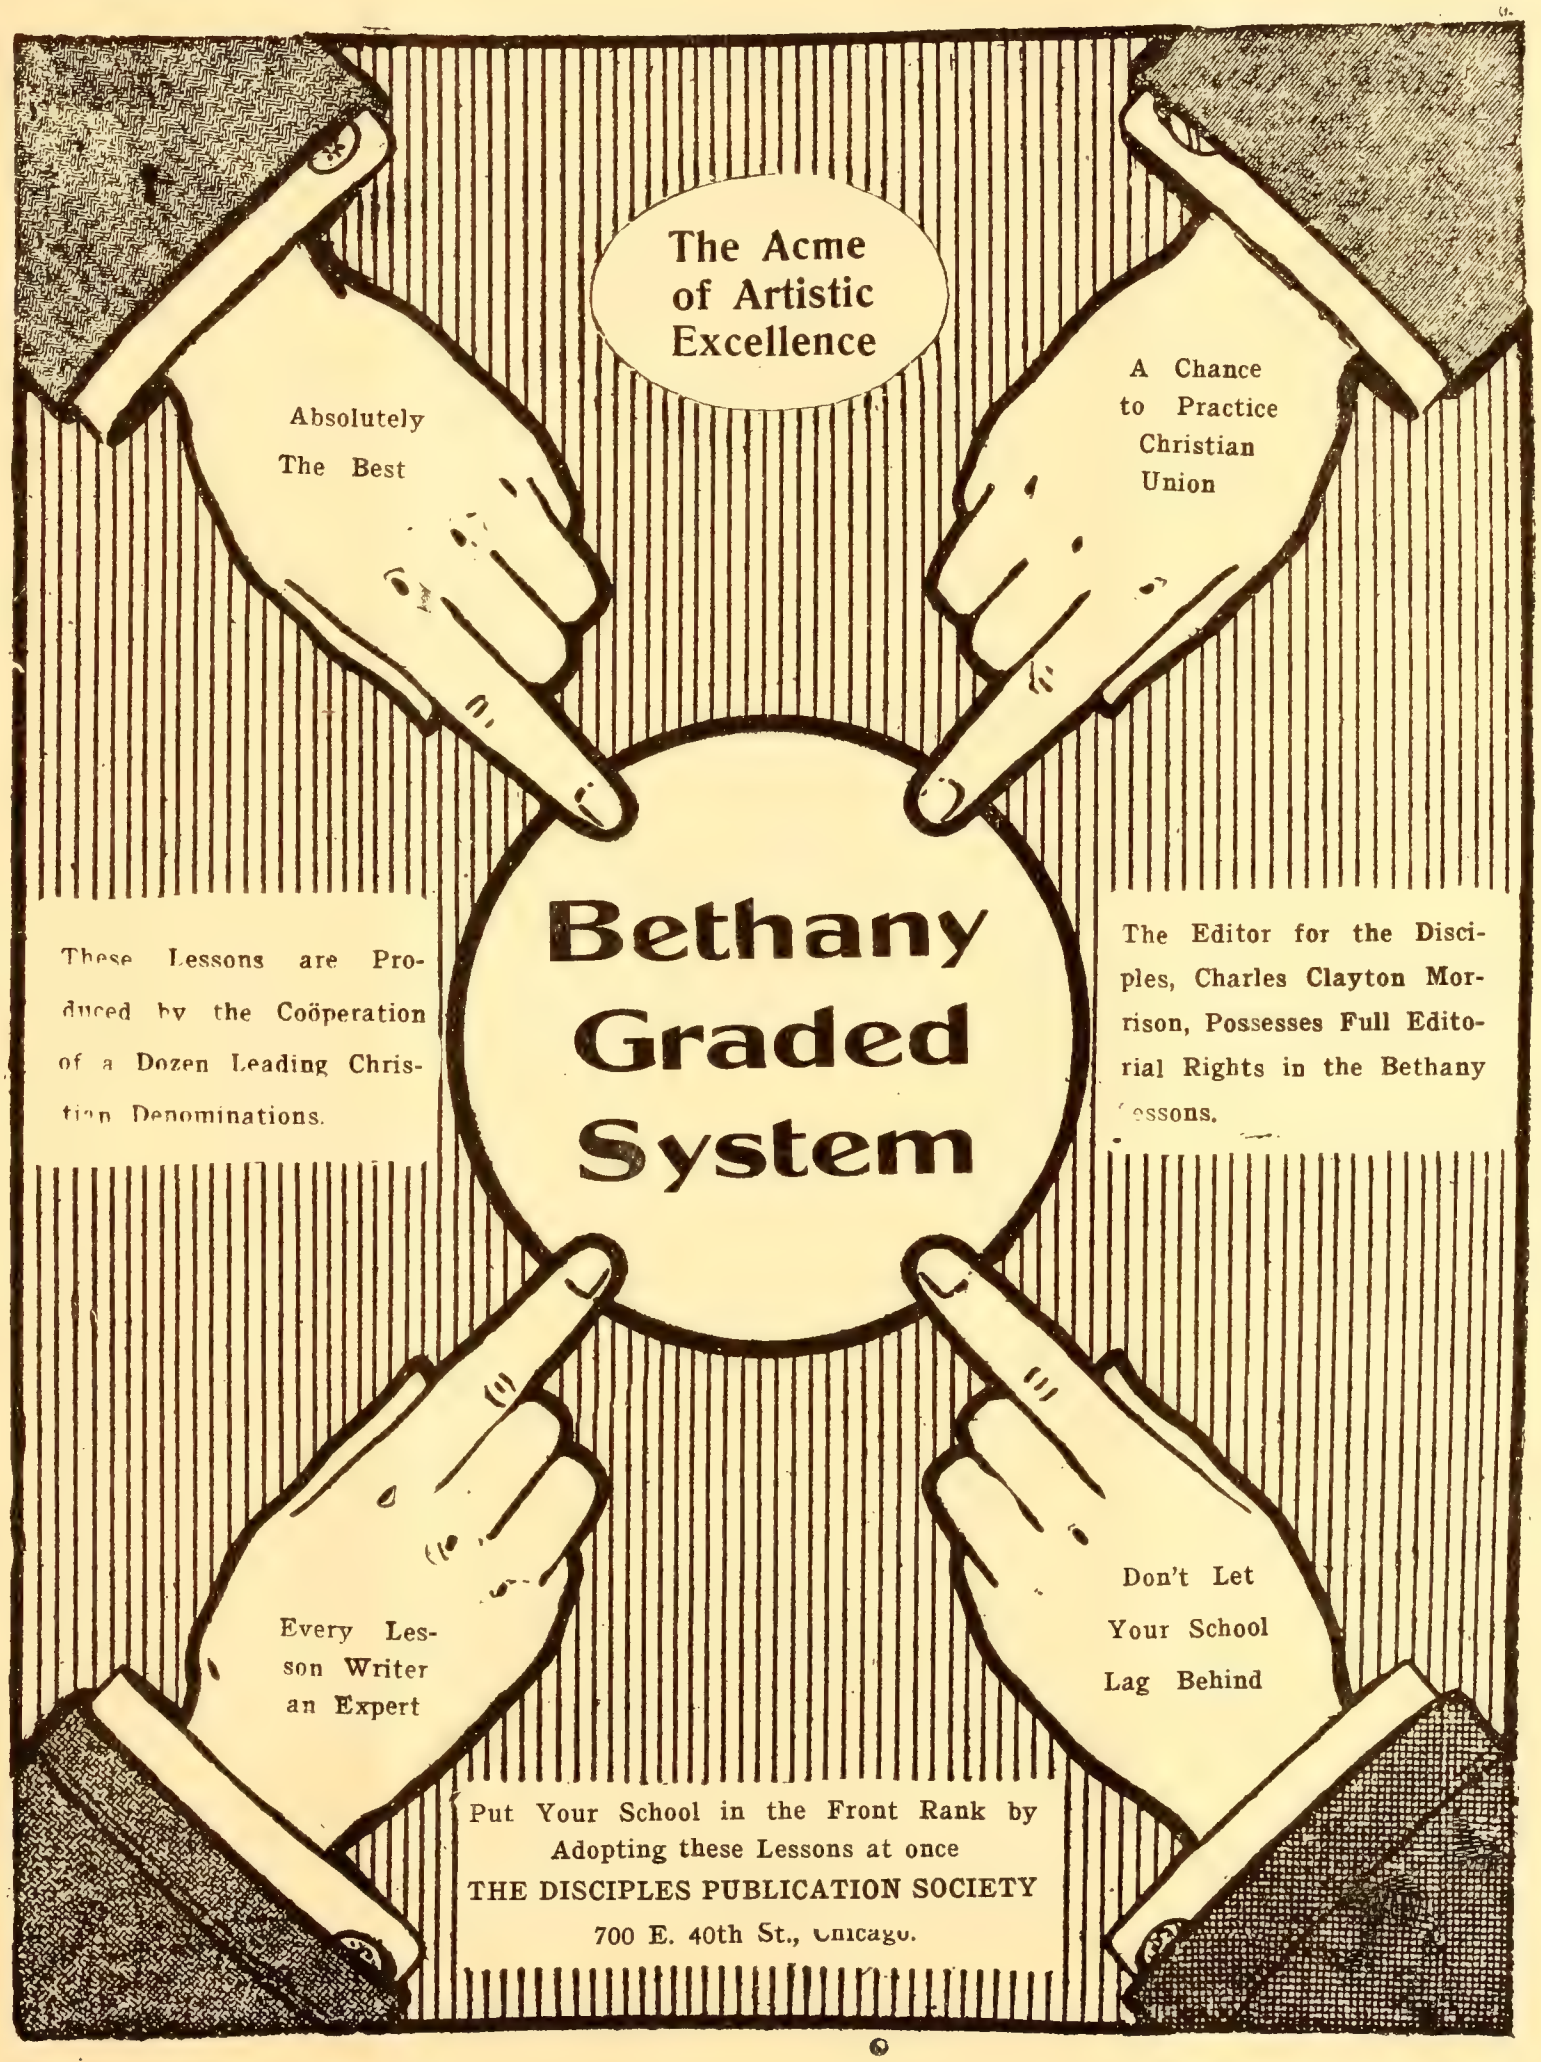
NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

"Held to Answer"

By Peter Clark Macfarlane.

This striking novel by Mr. Macfarlane has created a larger advance interest than any other novel ever put out by the publishers; and they have had to their credit some of the "best sellers" of the last few years. A slogan of "100,000 by Christmas" has been set as the selling slogan on this book for this year. The price of the book is $1.35, postpaid. Send your order in today and it will be filled at once. Address

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 East 40th Street. Chicago



Ten Big Reasons Why

Bethany Graded Lessons are being adopted by so many of the best schools among Disciples

1. There is more to them—at least a third more—than is contained in any other series.
2. They are rich, vital and full of suggestion to teacher and pupil.
3. They are free from the sectarian spirit.
4. They are soundly and fervently evangelical.
5. They are truly artistic in all their illustrations.
6. They are printed on better paper with better binding and in better taste than any other series.
7. Every lesson writer is an expert of international reputation.
8. They are a monument to the modern spirit of unity —several leading denominations have co-operated to produce them and are now using them.
9. The Disciples possess full editorial rights, through the editor, Charles Clayton Morrison.
10. Every Disciple school that uses them participates in and promotes a great Christian union enterprise.

SEND FOR RETURNABLE SAMPLES.

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

BEGINNERS
3-6 years.

THE SUNDAY KINDERGARTEN: GAME, GIFT, AND STORY

By C. S. Ferris.

Each lesson has its story, games, and handwork adapted to the child. The stories are from the Bible, from myth and legend, or from nature. Songs with music for each lesson are in the teacher's book. The leaflets make attractive gifts to be taken home.

☐ Teacher's manual, $1.50, postage extra, (weight, 1 lb. 14 oz.).
☐ Illustrated Story Leaflets for each pupil, 75 cents, postage extra (weight, 14 oz.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

JUNIORS
10-13 years
Grades 5-8

THE LIFE OF JESUS

By H. W. Gates.

A graphic, accurate, and well-selected arrangement of the life of Jesus from the hero viewpoint. It aims to "present the clearest possible picture of the personality of Jesus."—The author.

Pictures and maps are furnished with the notebook.

☐ Teacher's manual 75 cents, postage extra (weight 1 lb.).
☐ Pupil's notebook 65 cents, postage extra (weight 1 lb.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

JUNIORS
11-13 years
Grades 7-9

PAUL OF TARSUS

By L. W. Atkinson.

Paul is interesting to pupils of this age as a man, not a theologian. He is seen in his home, his surroundings, and later in his wide travels for the spread of Christianity.

☐ Teacher's manual $1.00, postage extra (weight, 1 lb. 4 oz.).
☐ Pupil's notebook 65 cents, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 4 oz.).
☐ Pupil's homework book 25 cents, postpaid 28 cents.

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

HIGH SCHOOL AGE.
14-18 years.

STUDIES IN THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK

By E. D. Burton.

☐ Text $1.10, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 8 oz.).

STUDIES IN THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL.

By H. L. Willett.

☐ Text $1.25, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 10 oz.).

The former is a careful study of the most graphic of the gospels. The latter gives a vivid picture of the social, religious, and political conditions of the times.

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

PRIMARY
6-8 years. Grades, 1-3.

CHILD RELIGION IN SONG AND STORY.

By G. L. Chamberlin and M. R. Kern.

Book I. The Child in His World.
Book II. Walks with Jesus in His Home Country.

Two interchangeable volumes, each completely equipping the teacher for primary work. Each manual contains fifty songs with music, a carefully planned order of service for each Sunday, stories, prayers, and texts—all arranged in groups about certain important ethical and religious ideas.

☐ Teacher's manual, each $1.25, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 12 oz.).
☐ Pupil's notebook, each 50 cents, postage extra (weight, 10 oz.).

Book I. ☐ Teachers' manual. ☐ Pupil's notebook.
Book II. ☐ Teachers' manual. ☐ Pupil's notebook.

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

The Completely Graded Constructive Studies For the MODERN SUNDAY SCHOOL

Published By

The University of Chicago Press

REMEMBER:

COMPLETE GRADATION
QUARTERLY PAYMENTS
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS

Tear off the titles you want and mail them with your check to 5808 ELLIS AVE., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

HIGH SCHOOL AGE OR ADULT BIBLE CLASSES

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

By I. B. Burgess.

Emphasizes those aspects of the life of Jesus which are most important for young people just beginning to think for themselves in religious matters.

☐ Text $1.25, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 8 oz.).

THE HEBREW PROPHETS

By G. L. Chamberlin.

The problems which the prophets faced and their manner of meeting them offer an approach to moral, civic, and social situations in our day.

☐ Text, $1.25, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 14 oz.).

A SHORT HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY IN THE APOSTOLIC AGE

By G. H. Gilbert.

The author of this course has chosen for emphasis living men, rather than dead doctrines.

☐ Text $1.25, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 8 oz.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

JUNIORS
9-11 years.
Grades 4-6.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE BIBLE FOR TEACHERS OF CHILDREN.

By G. L. Chamberlin.

The Bible rightly introduced to children commands their interest, respect, and deepest affection. So introduced, it enters into life. This course offers a survey of the whole Bible in one year, inspiring the pupils to read the stories for themselves.

☐ Teacher's manual $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 4 oz.).
☐ Pupils' notebook 25 cents, postpaid 29 cents.

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

INTERMEDIATES
11-13 years.
Grades 7-9.

OLD TESTAMENT STORY

By C. H. Corbett.

The story of the Hebrew people from Moses to Solomon is given in an interesting and continuous narrative. The course is filled with a genuine atmosphere of the ancient life. The artistic leaves in the notebook give variety as well as occupation to the restless children.

☐ Teacher's manual $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 2 oz.).
☐ Pupil's notebook 65 cents, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 2 oz.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

INTERMEDIATES.
13-14 years.
Grades 8-10.

HEROES OF ISRAEL.

By T. G. Soares.

This course emphasizes in a remarkable manner the religious values of the Old Testament for boys and girls in the early teens.

☐ Teacher's manual $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 4 oz.).
☐ Pupil's textbook $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 10 oz.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

HIGH SCHOOL AGE.
14-18 years.

THE PROBLEMS OF BOYHOOD

By F. W. Johnson.

A textbook based on the laboratory method—a course in applied Christianity for high-school boys.

☐ Text $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb.).

LIVES WORTH LIVING

By E. C. Peabody.

A series of biographies of biblical and modern women for older girls and young women today.

☐ Text $1.00, postage extra (weight 1 lb. 4 oz.).

Name. . . . . . .

Address. . . . . . .

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII September 14, 1916 Number 37

Sitting in the Seat of the Scorner

Editorial

The Educational Status of the Disciples' Ministry

By Alva W. Taylor

Across Turkey

Beginning a Series of Travel Stories

By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. If paid strictly in advance $1.50 will be accepted. To ministers, if paid strictly in advance, $1.00 per year. If payment is delayed ministers will be charged at regular rates. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid for, but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Post Office, Chicago, Illinois, Under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to the Disciples is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to co-operate with the Christian people of all communions as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century, the chief publication of the Society, desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... .... Address .....

Two Great Bible Courses

For Adult and Young People's Classes

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

BY DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

BY DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year

ADDRESS

Disciples Publication Society : 700 East Fortieth Street, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

Volume XXXIII SEPTEMBER 14, 1916 Number 37

Sitting in the Seat of the Scorner

THE SCORNER IS THE ENEMY OF MANKIND.

A sneer has often taken the heart out of an enthusiast or discouraged the ardent student. The scorner is neither productive nor is he willing that others should produce. He is a kind of gangrene on the body of society which is to be given heroic treatment whenever it appears. There are certain reasons why such sick souls are more numerous now than in other times. That they should not make their sickness to appear health, earnest-minded men must see clearly the fallacy and the evil of their state of mind.

The scorner is often begotten of sin. In a bachelor club of Chicago is a man worth more than a million dollars. Unlike many men so fortunate, he is a moral pervert. At the age of seventy, he makes one of his chief occupations the carrying of a camera to make lewd pictures forbidden by law. Surrounded as he is by men of the world with moral standards none too high, he has fallen to a depth abhorrent even to his companions in sin. Such a man affects to be a scorner. He has no faith in humanity or the world or God. His very sin and shame are a forceful expression of his contempt for life. Without courage to die, he commits a living death.

The scorner is an egotist. He lives under the ancient system of astronomy which makes the earth the center of the universe. Worse than this, his own life is the center of the earth. Sun, moon and stars revolve around him. Men, women and children must dance attendance upon his majesty. There is a kind of insanity which is called the exaggerated ego. In a certain sense all egotism involves a faulty mental process. Every teaching of modern knowledge is to show a man his dependence on humanity and on God. Only the scorner and the fool deny this dependence.

✣ ✣

All enthusiasms fall under the ban of the scorner. Yet every great advance of human life has come as an enthusiasm. Reforms must grow the wing feathers of a great passion before they can fly. The emotion of the abolitionist was once the butt of ridicule for the scorner. The prohibitionist succeeded him in the funny papers. The pacifist now provides a target for his cheap wit. On the train of progress the enthusiast is the engine; the scorner is the brakes.

Goodness is a fairy tale to the scorner. He believes that evey man has his price; and what is worse, that every woman has her price. It is easy to hunt for self-seeking motives in every good deed that is done. Perhaps we all act upon a variety of motives. The scorner interprets a good deed always by the worst motive that he can find in the mind of one who has sought for the good. When a man doubts whether there is a disinterested action in the world, he only confesses his moral poverty. There is a color-blindness of the soul. A man we once knew could never find strawberries because they were red and he could not see red. The scorner cannot find goodness because his vision is not adjusted to that kind of reality.

Beauty is an empty word with the scorner. We are well aware that beauty is not altogether an external matter, but lives in the soul of the artist. It is for this reason that two persons in an art gallery may have radical differences of opinion about a picture. There are people in the world who have lost their appreciation of good music. Paintings are only the accumulation of so much pigment, significant because other people are foolish enough to pay large prices for them. Poems are frothy nothings. The house built by married lovers as the expression of their ideals is only so much wood and stone. The scorner has his own reward. He lives in a world where he sees the mud but never the sunshine.

✣ ✣

It is not to be wondered at that the scorner has no use for God. What enthusiasm is to the reformer, goodness to the moral man, beauty to the artist, truth to the thinker, that God is to the soul of the religious man. A pseudo-scientist once declared that he had swept the heavens with a powerful telescope and found no God. He had examined a human brain with a microscope and found no soul. Most of us live unconscious of the wireless messages that agitate the air all around us. We have no ear to hear them. Only the aerial and the instruments can bring them in and translate them into sound which we can hear. Even so, a man can murder his religious consciousness. He then naively declares that there is no God.

Perhaps we are in danger of scorning the scorner. As his mental and moral and spiritual attitude stands as a pitfall, we have a right to make a wide detour around it. We ought to erect danger signals to warn away our fellowmen.

It will be easier to prevent such an attitude than to cure it. We all need to be taught the art of growing old gracefully. The scorner may be said to be a prematurely aged man who has lost interest in life. How to keep our interests alive, means much not in length of years, but in the satisfactions of the every-day.

Two old men of the Congregational fellowship show us how to do this. They are Lyman Abbott and Washington Gladden. We can imagine them looking for the newspaper very early in the morning. They know the Great Adventure is near for them, but they are not daunted. They look forward to it with curiosity and with a sustaining faith. But this interest in eternity, quickened by their years, has by no means obscured their interest in the here and the now. They will care profoundly who is elected for president this fall. The war news is fraught with deep significance for them. The great realities of the soul are not less certain but rather more so after the long years of their pilgrimage here. No accumulation of years and experience will take away their interest in life. They have found the fabled Fountain of Youth and will never grow old.

We cannot despise our world, nor humanity, nor ourselves, for all these things are of God. It is our faith in the Creator, the Father of all Souls, that makes us ever delight in the works of his hands.

The Educational Status of the Disciples' Ministry

By Alva W. Taylor

IN THE two years' time the writer has been working at this survey some 1,200 letters have been sent out to select men, asking their co-operation in filling out schedules of inquiry. Each was asked to select a distinct area, such as a county, a missionary district or a state, and to give the educational equipment of each and every Disciple minister within that area. This was expected to yield a cross-section analysis of the educational status of the ministry of the brotherhood that would be fairly accurate. In the absence of any means in the church's organization to make a complete enumeration, such as the Methodists and Presbyterians possess, this seemed the best that could be done.

SOME CONCLUSIONS ARRIVED AT.

Of the 1,200 men addressed, only about one hundred responded. But the schedules returned covered so wide an area and so considerable an amount of territory that they warranted the drawing of some conclusions. The correspondents were able to procure at least the entire number of college men in areas running from a city or county up to missionary districts and in several instances whole states. The total number of ministers covered in the reports was more than one thousand. The men who attempted inquiries found many difficulties. There was no fund to cover the expense of their inquiries; many refused to answer any questions about their educational preparation, some even resenting it; missionary secretaries, both of state and district, have not the means at hand to discover the facts in regard to the ministry of their fields. The difficulties were not without relief in humor, a striking instance of which was a long letter denouncing the whole attempt as an effort to play the bishop, adopt "Methodistic" ecclesiastical machinery and to steal the liberties of the free-born.

The results are not conclusive. Nothing less than a registry of the entire ministerial staff of the brotherhood would be accurate. But these figures are indicative and formulate, with some degree of trustworthiness, the facts in regard to the educational status of the Disciples' ministry.

DIFFICULTIES TO BE MET.

The computation of results was somewhat complicated, but every effort was made to do it accurately. It would have been easy to have taken the net returns on the number of college men, for instance, as compared with the total number reported upon and to have simply drawn the conclusion that there was that certain percentage of college men; but the results would have been ridiculous for several reasons. One of the most patent faults with such a method is shown by the fact that a correspondent could give easily the whole list of college and graduate men for his district, but would be unable to give any facts regarding a large number of less known men who did not have the privileges of a college education, who thus labor in humble fields and who did not care to relate the facts regarding their educational handicap. Then there are certain sections of the country where college men predominate and others where they are few. In the former reports were easily made complete while in the latter they were inevitably lacking in details. So computations were made to cover homogeneous sections of the brotherhood.

FULL RETURNS FROM SOME STATES.

The statistics of the Year Book were used as the basis for computations. Effort was made to discriminate between city and country districts as it was easy to get urban statistics and the percentage of college men runs high there; but the major portion of the ministers are in towns and villages and the percentage of college men runs much less there. This fact with the one above mentioned, i. e., that college men can practically all be found but others cannot, put it beyond doubt that the figures here given are liberal; there are doubtless fewer rather than more college men in the Disciples' ministry than these findings show.

Complete returns were made on Missouri, Virginia, Colorado and southern California. The western states run high on the percentage of college men and, together with reports covering smaller areas in the West, form a very satisfactory basis for making computations for all that territory. Virginia is representative of that eastern section where Disciples are few, and together with returns

Educational Status of the Disciples' Ministry

Editor's Note: The following table sets forth the results of two years of investigation carried on by Professor Taylor. The lack of statistical data and, more seriously, the lack of a statistical conscience among the Disciples makes the findings of Professor Taylor as important as they were difficult to secure. This is the first time any systematic attempt has been made to obtain such data. We are indebted to the Campbell Institute, which organization furnished the funds whereby Professor Taylor's work was done, for permission to publish his findings. The accompanying article explaining the significance of the figures in this table is worthy of careful study.

Total number of ministers (not including colored) 5,000
(Student preachers not counted.)
Total number ministers who are college graduates, 2,250, or 45 per cent.
Total number who had some college education but did not graduate, 1,150, or 23 per cent.
Total number who have done some post-graduate work, 400, or 8 per cent, (and about 18 per cent of all college graduates.)
Total number who were never in college, 1,600, or 32 per cent. (Of this number one-half were never in high school.)
Total number of ministerial students in colleges, 1,200.

from the territory to the north along the coast and east of Ohio forms a satisfactory basis for computing the results for all that section. Missouri is midway between the middle-western states, where Disciples are strongest, and those more southern states where there is a larger number of non-progressive churches and thus a larger proportion of ministers without a college education. Thus northern Missouri, together with returns covering whole missionary districts in surrounding states, gives very adequate basis for that territory; and southern Missouri, together with the rather inadequate returns from the states of Arkansas, Tennessee and the farther southeastern states (where "Disciples of Christ" are weak and the "Church of Christ" strong), gives a working, though not altogether satisfactory, basis for the findings for that section. From other sections, such as Ohio, Texas and Canada, the estimates are made on the basis of actual returns made from those states. This method seemed the most adequate that could be adopted and yields, we believe, fairly accurate indication of the educational status of the Disciple ministry. At least it is the most pretentious attempt that has been made to get at the facts.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

The Year Book lists 5,600 ministers. Among them it gives the names of a considerable number of students for the ministry, but does not accurately indicate just which are students in all cases. As it was desirable to reckon with ministerial students as a separate class a deduction of six hundred was made from the total ministerial list of the Year Book and computations made on the basis of 5,000 preachers over and above those studying for the ministry. The number of men who have done post-graduate work could no doubt be accurately determined by actual count of men who know each their own state well, but the classification cannot be so satisfactorily made. There are many men who have remained with their alma mater for a master's degree or for a year's graduate work. Ofttimes the college was not equipped for graduate work in any such way as are the larger graduate schools, and the work done could hardly be classed with that done in a regular graduate divinity school or university. Thus again the returns on the number of ministers having had graduate work over-rate rather than under-rate the facts.

The colleges report 1,004 students for the ministry. To this should be added a considerable number for those studying in graduate divinity schools and in other colleges than those of the brotherhood. The total would not fall short of 1,200, granting that all those reported as students for the ministry by the colleges have actually entered upon such preparation and are thus committed to preaching as their life work. There are several colleges, and among them those reporting the larger number of ministerial students, who do not discriminate between preparatory and actual colleges students. Thus the number reported as students for the ministry cannot be all called "college students" and no doubt a considerable number of them will go to the field without a college degree. Thus again the figures given err on the side of liberality rather than conservatism.

The total number of men in the ministry and preparing for it is thus found to be 6,200. Of the 5,000 who are on the field the Year Book lists 448 as men who are in business and preach occasionally and 223 as regular preachers who are also in business. The latter enumeration must be very faulty for correspondents in this inquiry state that from 10 per cent to 100 per cent of the preachers in their areas combine business with their ministerial work. In such states as Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee, where there are hundreds of small rural and village churches existing on preaching once per month, the overwhelming majority of the men who minister to them are compelled to piece out their incomes with business avocations. Even in such states as Indiana and Illinois whole missionary districts were found where every man preaching for the smaller churches also engaged in a secular occupation. The writer is willing to estimate that from one-fourth to one-third of all the men in the Disciple ministry engage also in some side-line of business or are business men who make preaching an avocation. This is an estimate and not a part of the serious findings of this survey.

A REPORT ON SALARIES TO COME.

The correspondents were also asked to give as nearly as they could the salaries of the men they reported upon. The results are interesting and will furnish material for a separate report.

All figures in this report are given in round numbers. If actual enumeration could be made exact figures to the digit would mean something, but where the findings are by computation through complicated figuring there is nothing gained by giving odd digits. The figures are approximations at the best, and though they are accurate approximations, round numbers serve all purposes and are much more easily used.

Homeward Bound From the Orient

By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

I. Across Turkey

NO LONGER is leaving Turkey for any other country, or even leaving one city to visit another part of the Empire, merely a matter of packing one's trunks and bribing the customs authorities to let them pass. No, one now starts a couple of months before he hopes to leave, and gently begins to pull the wires terminating in his Excellency, Jamal Pasha, Commander of the Fourth Army, Minister of the Marine, Military Dictator of Turkey, and thirty-two other things, all of which have to be mentioned,—and paid for,—in any telegram he condescends to receive.

Since the policy of mild speaking persistently pursued by our government makes its foreign officials useful as the recipients of requests, but useless when aid for American citizens is necessary, we sent our plea to Jamal Pasha, through informal channels, and were soon the proud possessors of a paper stating that four American teachers would be allowed to travel through Turkey, and were to have the use of all military trains and automobiles. The letter was signed by Jamal himself, and the necessity of permission to use military conveyances was soon made evident.

Having the document safely guarded, we approached the chief of police for permission to leave Beirut, and found that only three visits to the central station were necessary to get the required Vetheka, or local permit, without which no one could buy a train ticket nor cross the city boundaries.

Next we had to have our passports vis-ed by the consuls of the European countries we would have to traverse, and these officials required, in addition to the passport Washington gives, a statement as to our time and place of birth, signed by our consul; pictures corresponding to those on the passports; and a special endorsement of our signatures, also from the American consul. These vis-es completed the governmental requirements.

THE RUSH FOR THE TRAIN.

Food was the next item to be considered. The Turkish military trains are not provided with dining cars, and the country has such trouble providing for the army, that it is unsafe to trust to what one can find at stations. Therefore we bought a stove and saucepan, cups, saucers, spoons, oil, and various sorts of tinned food, completing the list with several dozen cakes of chocolate and enough jam to furnish a British afternoon tea.

These provisions bulged our suit cases and overflowed into two baskets, and we gravely considered leaving all changes of clothing behind because we feared that we might at times have to be our own porters, and a big demijohn of water was absolutely essential to our health in the cholera infested country between Beirut and Constantinople. But we decided that it was as easy to leave clothing along the way as to give it away before we started, and so we had thirteen pieces of hand baggage when we lined up for final inspection.

Money was another difficulty, for while Turkish five pound notes passing at a face value of about $22.20 are easy to get, change is a problem and must be bought slowly and at a considerable loss. So for three weeks I spent all my spare time changing money, getting what silver I could and taking half and one pound paper notes for the rest. The ninety pounds we finally collected made a pretty large and heavy bundle when we came to stow it away in our pockets.

Mr. Herbert L. Willett, who has recently returned to Chicago after spending three years teaching in the Syrian Protestant College, Beirut, Syria.

TREASON!

The day before we left we had to go to the station and present our Vethekas and answer innumerable questions before being allowed to purchase our tickets, and then we had to part with some of our precious small money because the government refuses to give change for tickets or stamps. From that time on someone or other wanted to see our papers every half hour day and night, and each put his name on the back to show that he had been attending to business.

On Monday, June 26, we were ready to start and after a five o'clock breakfast we rushed down to get an eight o'clock train. The rush was to prevent the hundred odd persons for whom no cars had been provided from taking the places we wanted, but to which they had an equal right. Tactics which we learned in football won the desired compartment, and the four who were homeward bound allowed seven other college men to help hold places intended for eight and to pile their luggage on top of ours.

When I add that the sun beat down in full warmth on the metal roof of the car, and that the thermometer registered 103 in the shade, the reader may form some opinion as to the temperature and humidity in the car. But we had determined to smile at everything and refrain from all complaint; so we piled the suit-cases for which there was no other room in the aisle of the compartment, put the demijohn and food baskets on top of them, covered the whole with two rug bundles, and set one man on the ridge thus formed. Then we propped the toppling mass with our feet, bought many fans, and broke into melody to cheer the spirits of those left behind.

THREATENED DISASTER.

In view of Beirut as one climbs the foothills of the Lebanons is always a sight to be remembered, but when every hundred feet decreases the heat several degrees, words cannot express the joy with which one feels the cogs slipping past. We took turns at the windows and as one man after another reached his station and left us, we gradually possessed ourselves of as much room as we had paid for, and prepared to enjoy instead of enduring.

Disaster threatened before we had been gone an hour, in the shape of an official who suddenly appeared at one window and demanded our passports. We were prepared for that, but not for the appearance of a letter which fell from one man's pocket and was immediately seized. What! We were carrying letters! A crime! Treason!! Ingratitude!!! We all explained at once—it was a note of farewell handed in just as the train pulled out. It was valueless. It should at once be destroyed,—and the action suited the words. But the soldier was unappeased. He, being the usual type of Turkish official in Syria, knew no Arabic, French, German nor English, and our Turkish was not ready for exhibition.

Things began to look serious when someone got an idea. With elaborate gestures he enacted the story of a person weeping in Beirut, and as a parting token giving to her best beloved this note which now he, poor soul, had been forced to destroy. We all looked sympathetic; the pseudo-lover gave signs of sorrow, and the soldier either understood or considered us hopeless, for he shrugged his shoulders and passed on,—a truly oriental method of solving the difficulty.

SOME APPRECIATED GIFTS.

Stops along the way were very long, because at each place wood had to be taken on in quantities large enough to run us a few miles further, since there is no coal left in Syria. We had railed for two years at the denuding of the Lebanons to provide the railroad, but on that June day we felt reconciled to the vandalism, since it was getting us started home. Several times friends were at the train to give us parting messages and provisions to add to our store.

One lady presented us with salad dressing, paper napkins and a lavender stick, begging us to tell her friends at home how she needed money. Chickens, bread and native cheese were presented, and even a cake made its appearance. At Aley, the military capital of the Lebanons, a former student of mine, now a subaltern in the army, whispered to me that about twenty-five soldiers were dying every day of cholera, and that two German drill-masters had recently been murdered for their severe treatment of the men under them,—a report like others that we had frequently heard from various parts of the country.

Reyak is the point at which the Aleppo branch of the railroad leaves the Damascus line, and is chiefly notable at present for the fact that several hundreds of Armenian refugees were there allowed to starve to death in the sun, for the furtherance of the Turko-German plan of extermination. No signs of any remnants of the unfortunate people met our eyes, but we did fall in with a group of German officers coming from the Suez Canal.

One of these, whom I had known as a school boy in ante-bellum days, rescued me from the crowded compartments of our new train, and allowed me to share with himself and two brother officers a very comfortable compartment set aside for them. From them I learned that the Kaiser is not insane, that Germany would win before October, and that the United States government deserved the worst fate their language could describe. I remembered that I was apt to be considered an enemy in a hostile land, and so reserved comment until music and the stars were mentioned.

AT ALEPPO.

Near Baalbek we met one of the chief army surgeons of the Lebanons, a Beirut friend, and he told us that their hospitals were full, but that there was no medicine of any sort to be had, and that nothing could be done for the soldiers other than cleaning them up before they died.

Morning brought us to Aleppo, and a more unalluring city I can hardly imagine. A glittering sun upon the white houses and yellow sand made a blinding glare, and we disliked the city even before we found no rooms at the hotel, no train out before the next day, and the place little but a concentration camp for Germans. We appealed to the U. S. Consul, and he lived up to his reputation of being the most useless man in the consular service. We camped out on a hotel piazza until late in the afternoon, and finally were grudgingly given a small room in which the four of us could scarcely move around. But true to our plan we grinned, even when ice water had to be passed by as dangerous, though we were parched. And when the vice-consul took pity on us and gave us the freedom of his cold shower bath, we decided to live until morning. Late in the afternoon we saw a deserter shot in the main street and decided that maybe we were not the saddest mortals alive. Nevertheless we voted Aleppo no place to live in, and were glad to get an early train on Wednesday morning.

It was at the Aleppo station that our Jamal Pasha paper came to our rescue. Health certificates were called for and we had none. Did we have permission to leave the city? Only our Beirut Vethekas, we answered. The officers were deeply desolated to inform us that we must see the local authorities before we could leave, and were gently pushing us out of the station when the guardian of the precious paper produced it. The change of demeanor was immediate. We looked well, health certificates could be dispensed with, and as we had the right to go where we liked, evidently we could leave Aleppo. So we all saluted, bowed cordially, and hustled our baggage into the rapidly filling train.

Two of us got into a compartment with several children who objected to the odor of the naphthaline bands we wore to ward off disagreeable animalculi, but we were hardened to public opinion on that subject and held our ground. We even got quite friendly when we learned that they belonged to a party of twenty-two wealthy Armenians being deported to the interior where any fate might await them. They were very brave about it and thoroughly won our esteem.

APPROPRIATIONS "FOR ARMY USE."

During the six hours we spent on the train, I sat with a Turkish Pasha and his Staff in a first-class coach, and watched them test the contents of a large number of bottles of perfumes and toilet waters that had been confiscated from Syrian merchants. Such wholesale appropriation of whatever appeals to officers has become quite the custom throughout Turkey, and it is said that ladies' silk stockings are among the items most in demand "for army use." This particular Pasha was evidently a devotee of exotic scents, for the combinations of odors that saturated that car, as one bottle after another was opened, was nearly overpowering.

The railroad from the Syrian coast to Constantinople is at present broken into three sections because the tunnelling of the Amanus and Taurus Mountains is not yet complete. Consequently one has to cross the mountains by some other method than by rail, and frequent changes are necessary. Islahiyeh, the end of the first stretch of the road, has no other distinction than that of being a temporary terminal, and boasts nothing but a station and military camps. Turks are encamped on both sides of the station, many of them segregated on account of cholera and typhus, and near them is an Austro-German barrack, the home of some fifty close-cropped Teutons who are in charge of the work of shipping provisions back and forth along this main artery of military strength.

SOME PITIABLE BRITISH PRISONERS.

About a quarter of a mile away are the English survivors of the Kut-el-Amara defense. We were very anxious to talk to the poor fellows, many of whom are seriously ill, but of course British prisoners are not easily approached, and so we had to content ourselves with silently wishing them well and hoping for them a speedy exchange.

We knew that large transport autos ran from Islahiyeh to the next stretch of track, and hoped to find one waiting for the train. But we discovered that one had left just before we got in, and as none of the Turkish officers around the station seemed to know when another might be expected, we hardly knew how to proceed. Dr. Haskins of Beirut and Mrs. Haskins and their two daughters were on the same train, and they stayed in the shelter of the cars, while the rest of us went to search for information and a place to stay. We discovered a distillery run by Austrians, but found that hotels, tents, or even trees were not to be found, and that another automobile was not due for an indefinite time. Even the German officers we had met could do nothing to help us, and so we had a rather gloomy message to take back to the train.

A BIT OF CHEER.

But help was at hand. Miss North, a nurse, on her way to Konia to help in the American hospital, was an accomplished traveler, and had cleared for herself a space on the floor of the filthy station, which was pretty full of native women and children, and there, surrounded by suit-case, provision box and stove, was calmly getting lunch. A hint was all we needed. In short order we had cleared out a corner, lighted our stove, begged some water from the distillery,—we had to prove that we were not English before we got any,—and were serving tea which tasted extremely good. Soup followed, and after our four cups had gone the rounds of the party we felt less gloomy about having to wait for an auto on which to try the value of our Jamal Pasha permit.

Some rash person ventured the opinion that a truck might be in by three o'clock, and so we piled all our baggage in the shade of the station as the crowd which had gathered to watch the train arrive thinned out, and there we set ourselves down, to be ready for instant loading when the longed-for time should arrive.

We scanned the road we could see winding down from the mountain, but no dust cloud arose. By three o'clock our eyes hurt; by four we were rather silent; and by five we four men ungallantly deserted the rest of the party and followed two of the German officers, who had invited us to share their room in the barracks. Even at the pitch of dolefulness we had reached by that time, we were still able to congratulate ourselves that our lot was better than that of the Armenian refugees, who were not permitted to leave the train and had only cold food.

MEMORIES OF ISLAHIYEH.

As Islahiyeh is scarcely a pleasant memory I shall be brief in recalling it. The barrack floor was hard and flies were many; the distilled water was warm while the pump water we did not dare drink was icy; the station agent was churlish and did not allow us to use the station as a camp, until we swept it out without permission and installed ourselves; and we stayed in that spot for forty-seven hours, which seemed a week. Fortunately no more trains came in to disturb us, and we could use the cars of the one which brought us, as dressing rooms. We men did our washing at the pump and used a picket fence for clothesline. Three of our four cups were broken during our stay, so that serving the meals became something of a problem; nevertheless we grinned, as per agreement, and kept our eyes on the winding road.

Friday noon the auto came and the German in command won our hearts.

"There is a train due in ten minutes," he said. "Officers will be on board. If the auto is still here they will take it. If you can leave before they arrive you may use it. Can you hurry?"

We hurried! Lunch, nearly cooked, we gave away. Baggage was packed with the contents hanging out, and literally thrown into the car. We climbed in pell-mell, and adjusted ourselves as the speedometer jumped to twenty, and we were off. I sat on a chain, an umbrella, and the corner of a suit-case, but I did not care. Islahiyeh was behind us!

Three Books

For Building Up Your Church.

"SOCIAL PLANS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE," tells you how to get the new generation into your Church, how to develop and harness their latent power. 75c postpaid

"WORKABLE PLANS FOR WIDE-AWAKE CHURCHES" sets forth an enormous variety of plans, schemes, and methods for the practical use of this power in every department of Church work. $1.00 postpaid.

"CHURCH PUBLICITY" provides 1,500 pictured forms and other tested plans for advertising the Church and helping it to get a hearing for the Gospel. $1.50 postpaid.

All by Rev. Christian F. Reisner.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

ANY BOOK

You desire,—theological, devotional, historical, poetry, fiction, etc., etc.—we can furnish you.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street Chicago

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

EDITORIAL

WHY CHRISTIANITY LIVED.

THE fact that Christianity has outlived most of the systems of the ancient world has always been a challenging problem for the historian. Gibbon felt this problem all the way through his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Later historians have made efforts to account for this interesting and for us most significant phenomenon. Looking at religion from the view point of history we must say that of all the religions of antiquity, Christianity was fittest to survive.

Christianity has within it just the opposite of what the Roman Catholic church claims. It has the power of change. Every century of history is full of the story of adaptations that were made to meet some new emergency. Heresies were analyzed and the truth absorbed from them and taken over into catholic doctrine. This is a commonplace to any student of doctrine.

The church is flexible with regard to the social structure. Beginning as a great democratic movement, it became monarchical in the period when there was but little government. With the founding of strong governments which came with the revival of learning, freedom came to the church again in the form of the Protestant reformation. Wherever the church has undertaken to assume the role of immutability, there it has soon grown weak and powerless. Catholicism is dying in Italy where it is conservative, and flourishing in America where it has so many new methods in operation.

The lesson of this history should not be lost on the present generation. Great demands are being made on the church by new ideas and new environment. Even if these new ideas be "heresy," the history of the church shows that heresy must be understood, and that hidden away in it somewhere is truth. The church in these days of new thought and new social organization may find a surer place than ever before in human life; by refusing the lessons of history it will condemn itself to hopeless obscurity.

LIBERTY AND EXPEDIENCY.

PAUL had the most astonishing freedom of mind. Having been born in the trammels of an extreme Phariseeisn, he emancipated himself completely from religion by law and became a convert to the principle of a religion of the spirit. When he was talking the theory of religion, he was opposed to all statutory law. When he faced practical situations, he limited this principle by another principle, that of expediency. The question of eating idol meat was not one that occupied him long on the intellectual side. An idol was nothing and never could spoil good meat. But the effect of eating idol meat on the conscience of the weak brother was another question.

If either of these principles is followed exclusively, religion suffers. An inconsiderate freedom would wreck the church. A slavish expediency would inhibit all progress.

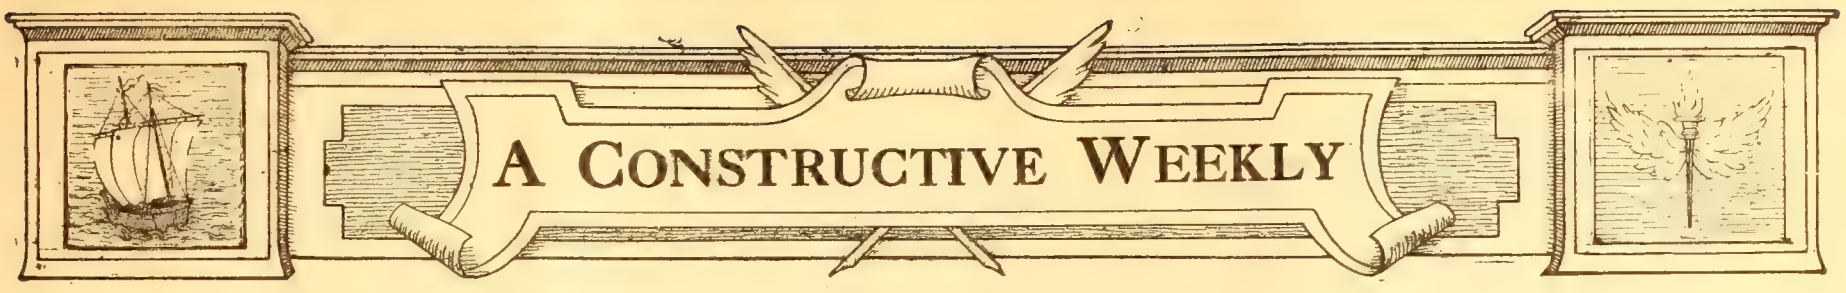
Alexander Campbell faced the same dilemma. As a foundation for his religious attitude, he declared, "In matters of opinion, liberty." Yet when a Universalist brother in the ranks of the Disciples wished to bear witness of what was for him the truth, Alexander Campbell reached the peculiar compromise that it was permissible to believe universalism—contrary to the sentiment of the brotherhood—but it was not permissible to teach it, for it would be divisive.

Many modern problems of the Disciples press for solution. We live in an era of the triumph of the principle of expediency. A state secretary once said in our hearing, "It doesn't matter how much anarchy the young preachers believe in, just so they don't 'anarch' any." From his point of view, the ideal minister is a man who is free in his study but in bondage in his pulpit. Probably the people in the pews would not vote for this kind of preacher.

There is such a thing as a pedagogical method of presenting truth. Not all truth is in season. But to shut the door in the face of new truth continually is treason to the Spirit of God.

CONSISTENT MUSIC.

IT WOULD be a ludicrous situation for a minister to preach a sermon on the moral influence theory of the atonement and then have the choir sing, "There is a fountain filled with blood." Yet something like that happens in most of our churches every Sunday. Religion has grown beyond the current hymnology. The hymn book is full of pictures of a very materialistic kind of heaven. The sermon is full of idealism and moral appeal. Unless this chasm is to be bridged, many a service will be a hodge-podge. Perhaps a good many of the people will remember the hymn more than they do the sermon.



There are several reasons why improper music continues to be used to such an extent in our churches. The first and most potent is the business ambitions of the music publisher. It is more profitable to publish new rag-time songs that can be copyrighted than it is to circulate the older classic hymns which are now the property of the whole church. Great fortunes have been built up by this prostitution of the music of the church.

Even the churches which have begun some reform of their music have often left the Sunday-school to be victimized by cheap doggerel. We have thought that the old hymns were incomprehensible to the mind of a child, while the new ones—we have not seen that they are incomprehensible to everybody! There are some Sunday-schools which have made selections of great hymns fitting the religious experience of childhood. These schools find that the children sing them with deep feeling. The children of the public school are given folk songs and not the latest product of the vaudeville stage. Reverence for childhood will give Sunday-school children uplifting music.

There is an inviting field waiting for the expert in religious education and that is the hymnology of the Sunday-school. When a hymn book is produced to fit the different departments of the schools, it will be hailed with delight everywhere.

A BETTER STATE ORGANIZATION.

THE STATE convention has been in session at Peoria this week and one feature of the program is worthy of special mention. This feature is the testimony of leaders who have formerly lived in other states as to the methods of organization of Disciple work found in these more fortunate sections. It is clear that dissatisfaction with the past methods of organized activity in Illinois is to have a thorough hearing.

The Illinois Christian Missionary Society once rightly conceived itself as an organization for the starting of new churches. In the pioneer days there was real need for aggressive leadership in planting new churches in destitute communities. Long since, however, that work has ceased to be needed in most sections of the state. If there is an occasional community where more churches are needed, there are far more where they need fewer churches.

In recent years there has been a rapid decrease in the number of Disciple churches in Illinois. The few new churches started have been a small fraction of the churches which have died. The loss has often been in country places where changes in the population have rendered the church useless. In too many cases, the churches have died through their unwillingness to co-operate with any reasonable program for supplying a ministry.

It is clear that the state missionary society has some bigger job on its hand than starting new churches, and that is simply keeping alive the ones already started and bringing them up to a condition of efficiency in their communities.

The office of a state missionary society in these days should be a headquarters for efficient methods of church work. It should have agents to organize the churches into co-operation in the calling of ministers. A state society functioning in this kind of way would cease to be a kind of weak imitation of a home missionary society and would have a dignified and worth-while job for all time.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS AND RELIGION.

WITH the opening of the high schools, in many communities a new class will go out of the Sunday-school. The high school age has been notoriously hard to reach. It is worth while examining why.

In the first place, the high school period of development is by nature a skeptical period. The opinions previously held, inherited from society, are given a fresh examination and for a time many of them are put in the discard.

A second fact that needs to give pause to obscurantist preachers is the distinction between the teaching of some churches and the teaching of the high school. When a student hears on Sunday that evolution is now dead and that reputable scientists no longer hold to it, and then that student goes to high school and finds the theory of evolution imbedded in every reference work, and the assumption of every science course which no instructor any longer takes the pains to prove, he naturally wonders.

There is a social fact in the organization of our Sunday-schools which is also significant. There are two classes of pupils which are of the same age. Part of these go to the high school. The remainder go to work. Immediately their thoughts and interests begin to diverge. Yet because of a similarity of age, they are often kept in the same class. This results in teaching and social life for the class that is not adapted to all its members.

The practice adopted by a few cities of arranging for credit work in the Bible, given by Sunday-school teachers who are approved by the public school, is a step in the direction of giving dignity to the study of religion. It is at this time of year that thoughtful church leaders are more than ever impressed with the need of something which will mean a better shepherding of the youth of our churches who are facing life's greatest intellectual crisis.

THE BOYS IN YOUR TOWN.

ANY fair-sized town may find in its town paper most any evening the story of a juvenile burglary or other misdeed. There are things going on which do not appear in the juvenile courts but which insidiously undermine the community life. Boys are more numerous among the juvenile offenders than the girls. What is wrong with the boys?

In an earlier day the boy spent his vacation working by his father's side, learning a trade, or learning how to farm. The factory system, the unionizing of labor, the child labor laws, these and many other innovations have divorced father from son in industry. The boy is idle where once he was usefully occupied.

It may be regarded as inevitable that where a gang of boys play together without supervision there is sure to be some evil spirit tending to corrupt the whole group. The first remedy for safeguarding the boy is the playground and supervised play. It costs money; but it costs less than crime and immorality cost, in the long run.

Some communities are using the remedy of vacation schools.

The Boy Scout movement, with its long hikes, its camping trips, its nature study, has helped to keep boys interested in wholesome things. The "big brother" movement of the Elks is another good thing for delinquent boys.

But the churches, which are supposed to promote higher ideals than these secular organizations, should leave no stone unturned to keep the boys of the community from becoming delinquent.

MUSIC IN THE HOME.

WHAT do you sing in your home? Do you sing at all any more? There are many things that have tended to displace the old-time "sing" of the religious home. The automobile takes the family away. The moving picture allures. And when the family is at home a kind of "canned" music from graphophone or player-piano has displaced the spontaneous musical expression of the past.

The effects of these changes is seen at church. People do not learn very many hymns in the average modern church. For the most part, fifty hymns would exhaust the list used in a given church. The reason it is hard to use more is that the old-time practice of learning hymns in the home has been dying out.

The question of what to do with Sunday was also answered in the old days of the Puritanical spirit by the use of music in the home. There could be no objections to going to the piano and singing the great hymns of the gospel. Today, along with our larger view of the function of the Christian Lord's Day, there is a real opportunity in the gathering of the family to sing the songs of the common religious experience.

Our homes need the ideal element. It is easy to grow crabbed and discourteous in the relations around the family table. The story read aloud in the evening, the music of the home, the reciting of the more beautiful elements in the family tradition help in building up a home spirit that is admirable and good.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE :: By Orvis F. Jordan

Y. M. C. A. Does Good Work.

Mr. Francis B. Sayre, the son-in-law of President Wilson, has been in the Rio Grande region investigating the work of the Y. M. C. A. among the soldiers and gives a very glowing account of it. He says the organization through its buildings gives the men a touch of home and serves their needs in various ways. The Illinois branch alone transmits three thousand letters a day.

Catholics Have Revenues Cut.

The ban of the archbishop on public dances and gambling devices has hit the church bazaar a hard blow in the Roman Catholic fellowship. A church in South Chicago has given up its annual bazaar and the priest will raise the money by direct assessment. He is asking that each person shall give one day's wage each month, for the next three months. It is believed that the churches will be strengthened by the direct giving.

French Protestant Fund Grows.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America in a recent report to the press states that it has raised sixty thousand dollars of the $150,000 which is needed for the aid of the French Protestant churches. A special request has been sent that money should be turned in during the month of September.

A Day for Armenian Relief.

The President of the United States has set apart October 21 and 22 as days for the relief of suffering among Armenians and Syrians. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America will send out material to the pastors on the subject. It is stated that nowhere in the world today is there greater need than in these two stricken countries.

Chicago Has "Night Church."

The Night Church of Chicago under the leadership of Rev. Ernest A. Bell and Rev. Myron E. Adams conducts services in Chicago every evening in opposition to infidel propaganda and vice. This is an interdenominational enterprise and Bishop Anderson of the Episcopal church is one of the vice presidents.

A Public Chapel for "Perpetual Adoration."

The new archbishop of Chicago has ordered a public chapel to be opened in which there shall be perpetual adoration. He states that the business and the pleasure of the city never sleeps and that the worship of the city should not cease. The chapel will be in charge of the Sisterhood of the Poor Clare-Coletines.

May Create Canadian Saint.

The Congregation of Rites at Rome has started the difficult process of creating a saint. The name of Father Isaac Jogues has been introduced for consideration. He died at the hands of the Mohawk Indians in 1652 and in 1903 he was declared to be a martyr of the church. Now that the name of Father Jogues is before the Congregation of Rites, it will be the duty of the "devil's advocate" to appear before the Congregation and show why the canonization should not occur. This "devil's advocate" is some priest appointed for this purpose. Once the priest has been canonized, it will then be lawful to offer him worshipful veneration.

Judge Hughes Goes to Church.

Charles Evans Hughes, republican candidate for the presidency, and Mrs. Hughes, worshiped in the First Baptist church of Spokane recently. After the church service an informal reception was held for the distinguished guests. Baptist newspapers have taken much interest in his candidacy.

Send Commission to Japan.

The Baptist Foreign Mission Society has decided to send three men to Japan to study the educational situation in that country. Professor Frederick L. Anderson, of the Newton Theological Institute, and Secretary James H. Franklin will sail early in September and several months later Professor Ernest D. Burton of the University of Chicago will follow and help put into operation the findings of the other two gentlemen.

Big Evangelistic Drive.

A meeting recently held in Chicago provides for a big evangelistic drive throughout the country with the aid of professional evangelists. The Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., is the head of a commission of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ and three district superintendents will work under him. A standard has been set up for judging evangelists and thirty evangelists with their teams will conduct a series of meetings in 731 cities, all of which have more than ten thousand of population. The Chicago Church Federation Council has shown much interest in the project.

Priest Opposed to Hibernians.

The priest of one of the largest Catholic churches in Philadelphia has come into the lime-light through opposition to the Ancient Order of Hibernians which held a national meeting at Pottsville recently. Father McDermott believes the Hibernians are similar to the Molly Maguires and un-American in tendency. When the archbishop issued permission for a corporate communion for the order, the priest protested it and resigned.

The Next Lambeth Conference.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has already sent out tentative announcements of the next Lambeth Conference which will probably be held in 1918. The only interference to this plan will result from a delay of peace. Should the war continue, the conference would probably not be held on the present schedule.

Girls' Class Movement Grows.

The Philathea Bible class movement has made great growth since it was inaugurated in 1895. Over 600,000 young women have been enlisted and the slogan has been raised for a million members in a campaign which will be started soon.

Moving Pictures Will Honor Luther.

The moving picture theaters will soon begin showing many reels of film in honor of Martin Luther and depicting the leading events of the reformation. This is part of the celebration of four hundred years of Protestant history.

Dr. Meyer Suffers Loss.

The many American friends of Dr. F. B. Meyer of England will be troubled to hear that his son who was a soldier in the British army is probably killed. He was last seen going over a German trench with a bayonet. He cannot be located in any of the prison camps. Dr. Meyer, the stricken father, is now eighty years of age and is overcome by his loss.

Professor Athearn Finds Place in Methodist School.

Professor Walter S. Athearn, author of several books in the field of religious education, and formerly an instructor in Drake University, has been engaged by the department of religious education of Boston School of Theology (Methodist) to conduct a model Sunday-school in the local church. He will make use of students of religious education in near-by churches. It is hoped that not only pastors but denominational secretaries and writers may be trained in this laboratory.

Honor Pioneer Preacher.

Peter Cartwright was one of the powerful pioneer preachers of Methodism. Recently the Illinois conference of Methodists in session at Springfield made a pilgrimage to his grave at Pleasant Plains, Ill. An address was delivered by Rev. S. H. Whitlock, D. D., who had had a personal acqaintance with the great preacher.

Speculate About Chinese President's Religion.

There has been much speculation about the religion of the new president of China, Li Yuan Hung. It has been stated he was a Roman Catholic and later this was denied. It has also been reported that he was a Baptist. The truth seems to be that he is not a member of a church unless he has joined very recently, though he is sympathetic with Christianity. His closest Christian friend is a former Jesuit priest, Ma Siang Beh. This man left the priesthood but not the church, that he might devote himself to the aims of the republic. If Li Yuan Hung should join a church, he would doubtless follow his friend into the Roman communion.

Federation of Presbyterians.

Though denominational reunion has not yet come to the Presbyterians, there is the beginning of such a movement in the south where churches of the northern and southern varieties that operate in the same town are federating and thus forming a practical union. Three such federations have been formed in the Ft. Worth presbytery in six months and some other cases are reported from different sections of the south. It is hoped that these federations will lead to a closer fellowship and ultimate reunion of this denomination, which has been divided since the civil war.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among union churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union church that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

Union Church at Hamilton, Mo.

Rev. F. W. Condit, Disciple pastor at Hamilton, Mo., a railroad town of 2,000 inhabitants, has succeeded in bringing about a remarkable co-operation between the local Disciple and Congregational churches.

The pastor of the Congregational church resigned and left his charge in April, 1915. In looking about for a successor, the thought occurred to one of the deacons of the Congregational church that they might co-operate with the Christian church in the employment of a pastor. A union service of Congregationalists and Disciples was held in the Congregational church, at which Mr. Condit outlined his views on the subject of co-operation. A series of conferences resulted, the outcome of which was the following agreement which was unanimously adopted by the two congregations and put into effect Oct. 1, 1915.

"This agreement witnesseth:

"That, whereas the First Congregational church of Hamilton, Missouri, and the First Christian church, of Hamilton, Missouri, both being desirous of the services of a pastor and minister: And, believing that it is possible for the two said Protestant Christian churches to worship together in peace and amity, without sacrificing any of those tenets or principles which distinguish the two organizations and without impairing the unity of either organization:

"Now, therefore, be it understood between the said two church organizations, and the individual members thereof, as follows:

"1. That the purpose of this agreement is that the said churches shall jointly employ and maintain a pastor and minister, whose duty it shall be to faithfully, impartially and equally serve the said churches and the members thereof, as a pastor and minister, to the best interests of each, not putting the interests of one above that of the other.

"2. That this agreement shall be in force and said pastor shall be employed for a term of six months, beginning October 1, 1915, and ending March 31, 1916, and the Rev. F. W. Condit is hereby employed as said pastor for said term, with notice to him on February 1, 1916, of the intention to renew or cease this agreement on March 31, 1916.

"3. That said pastor shall receive a salary * * * * * one-half of which shall be paid each month by each church.

"4. That the usual morning and evening church services shall be held each Sunday, and such services shall be held one Sunday in the church building of one denomination and the succeeding Sunday in the church building of the other, thus alternating, Sunday by Sunday, between the church buildings of the two denominations.

"5. That the church services held in said Congregational church building shall conform to the order of services which is now or may hereafter be established by the said First Congregational church and the practice generally in Congregational churches; and that the church services held in the said First Christian church building shall conform to the order of services which is now or may hereafter be established by the said First Christian church and the practice generally in churches of that denomination.

"6. That said churches shall conduct their Sunday-schools in their own buildings, separate and independent of each other.

"7. That the weekly Wednesday night meetings shall be held jointly.

"8. That doctrinal sermons or addresses including, or relating to, any proposition, tenet or belief not held in common by said two church organizations, shall not be delivered in either church building, unless the person delivering it shall be a member of the denomination in whose building it is delivered.

"9. Each church shall provide for heating, lighting and caring for its own church building, for the meetings herein provided.

"10. That the usual collections or free will offerings taken at the Sunday church services shall go to and belong to the organization in whose building the services at which time the said collections are taken are held.

"It should be the earnest aim of each and every member to so speak and act that this joining of hands shall be a happy event for each church and that the mutual respect and confidence shown by this arrangement shall continue as an example of Brotherly help.

"In witness thereof the said churches have caused these presents to be executed, this July 28, 1915."

* * *

This agreement was continued in force February 1, 1916, without a dissenting vote. In commenting on the agreement Mr. Condit says: "Neither church building is large enough to house both Sunday-schools or we should have but one. We may sell one building and enlarge the other. Should we use the Congregational building the members of that church have asked that we put a baptistry in their church and observe the Lord's Supper every Sunday."

The church's contribution to the enrichment of every phase of community life has been most pronounced. It has taken a leading part in developing the Parent-Teacher Association, the local Chautauqua, and other work of a social and educational nature. More charitable and relief work has been done by the church during the past year than formerly was done in any ten years. The missionary gifts of both congregations have increased. Both Sunday-schools are doing better than ever before in their history. Clear words and telling deeds on behalf of a united church have increased men's respect for the institutions of religion, and many men who have not cared to attend church heretofore have been enlisted in active support of this enterprise. The young people are attending church in unprecedented numbers.

Mr. Condit is actively engaged in furthering similar movments in other sections of his county. He is withal loyal to the historic ideals of the Disciples, and it is as a fitting tribute to his untiring efforts for their realization that he has been elected president of the Caldwell County Christian Missionary Association.

Disciples Table Talk

Points About Des Moines

Twenty milions of people can leave their homes in the afteroon of one day and reach Des Moines within an hour of the rising of the sun the next morning.

One hundred and forty-two passenger trains arrive and depart from the passenger stations of Des Moines daily. This is the regular schedule. With special trains it is possible to handle fifty thousand people through the passenger stations of Des Moines in one day.

Visitors to the convention can reach Des Moines in a night's travel from Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Lincoln, Kansas City and St. Louis. From most of these cities, it is possible to leave but little before midnight and reach Des Moines in the early hours the next morning.

Des Moines is within the twenty-four zone of travel of all but a very small percentage of the members of the Churches of Christ. In one day's travel it is possible to reach Des Moines from Albany, Philadelphia and Washington on the east; Memphis and Fort Worth on the south; Colorado and Montana points on the west; and Winnipeg on the north.

Des Moines is close to the great automobile highways across the United States. It is thirty-five miles from the Lincoln Highway, the best known auto route east and west, connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific. Good roads connect this highway with Des Moines at Nevada and Ames, the first named being the crossing of the Jefferson Highway. Tourists coming from the west will do well to follow the Lincoln Highway to Omaha, and to cross Iowa from Omaha to Des Moines on either the river to river road or the Great White Way Both of these cross Iowa, are plainly marked and generally are in good condition.

Des Moines is on the Jefferson Highway, the principal north and south road of the central United States. Throughout Iowa it follows the former Inter State Trail and is a well marked and well known highway. In general it runs from the Gulf of Mexico to Winnipeg.

Autoists in those sections of the country not served by the Jefferson or the Lincoln Highways can find well marked trails at all of the corners of the state. From the northwest, trails lead to central Iowa from both Sioux Falls, South Dakota and Sioux City, Iowa. From both of these towns well-marked and most of the time well-traveled, roads lead to Des Moines. From the northeast, Prairie Du Chien and La Crosse, both connect with good State Association roads to Des Moines.

Iowa can be entered from the southeast either from St. Louis, Keokuk or Burlington and the autoist can have his pick of roads to the center of the state. The Jefferson Highway taps the southwest at Kansas City, but travelers farther to the west can enter the state on good roads at a point near St. Joseph, Mo., or Nebraska City, Nebraska. The Lincoln Highway also is available at Lincoln or Omaha.

Auto tourists will find conditions ideal in Iowa during the month of October. Barring excessive rains, the roads are good, the weather is pleasant and the Iowa prairies, now practically all farm land, stretch away, the brownish-green of the ripening corn, the dull tan of the stubble fields and the green of the pastures and meadows being broken by occasional streams and stretches of woodland. The Iowa orchards (and Iowa has more bearing apple trees than any two of the coast or mountain states), each with its windbreak, surround comfortable farmhouses and capacious barns, each in its way telling of the prosperity of this center of the agricultural wealth of the United States.

Death of Mrs. G. W. Muckley.

Disciples everywhere will be grieved to learn of the sudden death of the wife of George W. Muckley, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension. Mrs. Muckley had been spending the summer at Macatawa, Mich., and had not been ill. On Wednesday, September 6, she was taken with a severe pain in the head, and died very soon, from apoplexy. Dr. Vaughn, of one of the St. Louis churches, was in Macatawa at the time, and did all that could be done for Mrs. Muckley. Mr. Muckley had just left St. Louis for Milwaukee to attend the Michigan convention, and while on the train he received a message from Dr. Vaughn reporting that his wife had passed away. The many thousands of friends of Mr. Muckley will feel for him and for his family the deepest sympathy in their time of sorrow.

Los Angeles Training School for Religious Workers.

A unique enterprise was begun last year by the Christian churches of Los Angeles and vicinity. A school was opened at First church known as the Los Angeles Training School for Religious Workers. It has completed its first year's work and will open the second year Tuesday, October 3. The School meets every Tuesday evening and continues for thirty weeks and offers eleven courses of study. The courses to be taught this year include, "The Life of Christ," Rev. Russell F. Thrapp, instructor; "Heroes of Israel," Rev. W. S. Crockett; "Bible Geography," Rev. Otto D. Lee; "Primary and Junior Methods," Mrs. Leonora Harper; "Adult Methods," Rev. Geo. C. Ritchey; "Extension Department," Rev. J. Ellsworth Coombs; "History of the Restoration Movement," Rev. C. F. Hutslar and Mrs. G. M. Anderson; "Story Telling," Mrs. Julia Cunningham; "Church Polity," Rev. F. M. Rogers; "Social Service," Rev. F. G. Tyrrell and Rev. L. M. Timmons. This is the only school of its kind among the Disciples of Christ, and is doing much to stimulate interest in all lines of religious work in Los Angeles, Russell F. Thrapp writes. The school is conducted by Mr. Edgar Lloyd Smith, Director of Religious Education for the Christian Missionary Society of Southern California.

Cotner Elects New Chancellor.

At a board meeting of the Trustees of Cotner, Professor Charles W. Erickson was elected to the position of Chancellor of Cotner University, which position was left vacant by the resignation of William Oeschger last spring. Professor Erickson has been principal of the schools at Detroit, Mich., for the last six years. He is a graduate of the Washington and Jefferson University both in the literature and law departments. Professor Erickson is an educator of no mean ability and the official board of Cotner feel themselves fortunate in being able to secure so excellent a man. Miss Catlin of the University of Minnesota has been called to the chair of Physics and Chemistry.

Mayfield, Ky., Church Appreciates Its Pastor.

For many years a dream of attending an Eastern school for a year has haunted J. J. Castleberry, of Mayfield, Ky., church. Recently he resolved to make his dream come true. He presented the matter to his people, and told them of his purpose. He informed them that the offer of a scholarship in Yale had opened the way for him to carry out his plan, and suggested that perhaps they had better secure another pastor, for the good of the work; he did not feel justified in asking them to grant him a leave of absence. Both church board and congregation at once suggested that resolutions be passed granting their pastor a leave of absence for a year, and arranging for a supply preacher. A series of evangelistic services is now being held at the Mayfield church, at the close of which Mr. Castleberry and family will leave for New Haven. The year just closing is Mr. Castleberry's seventh year of service.

More About the John W. Allen Anniversary Celebration.

In a recent issue mention was made of the celebration in Spokane of the fiftieth anniversary of the entrance upon the ministry of John W. Allen, now living in that city. J. E. Davis, of Central church, sends further facts concerning the unique event. There were over a thousand persons present at the picnic given at Manito Park in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Allen. The hero of the day made the chief speech, and was followed by Dean Hermon P. Williams, of Spokane University. A purse of $445 was given Mr. Allen as a testimonial of appreciation from his friends. Mr. Davis writes that the celebration came none too soon. Two weeks after the event Mr. Allen was stricken with an attack of heart trouble, and is fast failing. Mrs. Allen was stricken with paralysis six weeks before the celebration, and was not able to leave her bed for the exercises. The picnic was followed a few days later by a banquet of all the denominations of the city given in honor of the aged preacher.

• • •

—The Maywood Christian church of Oklahoma City, has called L. H. Otto of Bethany, Mo., to become its minister and it is understood he will accept and begin his work there at once. The Maywood church is just completing an $18,000 church home which they have erected while pastorless. G. W. McQuiddy, former pastor at Maywood, deserves the credit for this good movement, but he was forced to resign because of ill health just as the ambition of his four years' ministry was about to be realized.

—Pres. I. N. McCash and family motored from Spokane, Wash., to Enid, Okla., during the month of July. Dr. McCash is now actively at work in his new position of responsibility among the Disciples of the southwest at the head of Phillips University at Enid.

HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN The Aged Minister? The Disabled Missionary The Preacher's Widow and Orphans

Our year ends Sept. 30. Don't wait till then. Remit today.

Board of Ministerial Relief, 120 E. Market St. Indianapolis, Ind.

—Frank H. Lash, of El Reno, spent his vacation motoring through Oklahoma, Kansas, and Missouri renewing old acquaintances and visiting en route. He reports one addition to his congregation Sept. 3, the first Lord's Day after his arrival home.

—Galen L. Rose, of Cimarron, Kan., has been called to Chico, Cal., and has accepted, to begin the new task in October.

—J. C. Richards has resigned the work at Lancaster, O., after a pastorate of eighteen months.

—H. H. Peters, recently resigned at Paris, Ill., to accept the leadership of the state Missionary Society, writes that his work is starting off in good shape, and that he believes a splendid campaign lies before him.

—Prof. Colby D. Hall, of the Brite Bible College, Ft. Worth, Tex., has returned to his work there after spending the summer studying in Columbia University, New York City.

—The death is reported of Judge W. A. Evans, of Bonham, Tex. Judge Evans was a most useful citizen of Texas, and a well-known Disciple. He came from Kentucky to the Lone Star state in 1857. He was eighty-seven years of age at the time of his demise.

—The chief speaker at the yearly meeting of the Steuben county, Ind., churches of Christ was O. E. Tomes, who gave several addresses. Some of his topics were, "What Is a Christian?" "The Church of Christ Today," and "The Man Christ Jesus." Other speakers were Cecil Sharpe of Hammond, Ind., C. R. Scoville, and Miss Bertha Clowson, just returned from Tokio, Japan, where she serves as living-link missionary for the Steuben county churches.

—Grant W. Speer, of Toledo, O., Central, gave the leading address at the yearly meeting of the DeKalb county, Ind., Christian churches. The date was August 26 and 27. More than a thousand people were in attendance at the meetings.

—The Board of Ministerial Relief reports total receipts of $31;211 for the eleven months to Sept. 1. This is a gain of nearly $10,000 over the same period last year. But the advance of the Pension roll from 124 to 144 leaves the work under the same stress that has marked every year of its progress. The year ends Sept. 30, and this month is expected to bring in $15,000 besides the $6,000 of the 20 per cent proposition, which is already assured.

—W. Vernon Lytle closed his work with the West Union, W. Va., church August 27, in a union service with the other churches of the town. The large attendance at this service bespoke the high esteem and respect held for this spendid young man and his charming wife. Mr. and Mrs. Lytle leave to complete their work for the Ph.D degree at Yale University. J. R. Sloan of Bethany, West Va., has accepted a call to this church.

—Bruce Brown lectured at Surprise, Neb., recently and there was a total of $3,480 in paid admissions to the Chautauqua to hear him.

—State Secretary A. R. Spicer of Oklahoma, who suffered a serious breakdown in health, is improving slowly, but will not be able to resume his work for several months. Frank H. Lash, pastor at El Reno, sends this report.

—G. Lyle Smith, formerly pastor of the church at Chickasaw, Okla., has accepted a call to minister for the congregation at Bentonville, Ark.

—Charles D. Priest, pastor at Blockton, Ia., and Miss Wilma Waldrip, one of the young ladies of the church, were married on Sept. 3 at the home of the bride, Arthur Dillinger, pastor at Altoona, Ia., a classmate of Mr. Priest, officiating. Mr. Priest has been pastor at Blockton for two years and has been successful. Miss Waldrip was a member of his church. After a honeymoon spent in western Nebraska, where Mr. Priest will hold a meeting for one of our frontier churches. Mr. and Mrs. Priest will attend Drake University. Mr. Priest will finish the work for a B.D. degree this year. Mrs. Priest will take further work in music and art, in which she is already accomplished.

—A contract has been awarded to a construction company for the erection of a new church building by First church, Enid, Okla., where A. G. Smith ministers. The building will be a modern church and Bible-school workshop costing $34,700.

—Frank H. Lash, pastor of First church, El Reno, Okla., addressed the Hydro, Okla., Chautauqua, August 6, on "The Divine Philosophy of Life." Mr. Nash was recently elected president of the Ministerial Alliance of his city.

—R. N. Robertson, recently resigned at Watseka, Ill., has been called to the work at Shelbyville, Ill, to succeed W. G. McColley, who has taken the pastorate at Maplewood, Mo.

—M. E. Chatley, of Memorial church, Rock Island, Ill., spent the month of August in Ohio and Pennsylvania, preaching on one Sunday at Ravenna, O., where he spent several years of his ministry.

—The Lawrence county, Ind., churches gave a great picnic dinner as a feature of their annual meeting, and W. H. Smith, of Bloomington, Ind., and L. H. Graham, of Bedford, gave the addresses. The work at Bedford and in the other churches of Lawrence county, is reported in fine condition.

—The young people of the Disciples' churches of Buffalo, N. Y., recently held a union rally at Delaware Park. Over 125 persons were present. Japanese lanterns and an address by Austin Long were features. Another rally is planned for November.

—The plans for the new $100,000 building of Broadway church, Lexington, Ky., provide for a structure of four stories, including basement. Mark Collis leads at Broadway.

—Mr. Kalane, a young negro from the east cost of Africa, who has attended the Disciples' school in Edwards, Miss., talked recently at First church, Lincoln, Neb. The pastor explained that he was a native of Africa and lived there till after the outbreak of the Boer war when he fell in with a Christian man who influenced him to become a Christian and to seek an education. W. H. Book, pastor of Tabernacle Church, Columbus, Ind., is backing Mr. Kalane. It is reported that Mr. Kalane gave an interesting talk, showing the effects of education and Christian thinking. A free will offering was taken for him.

Education Contributions

Should reach the office of the Board of Education on or before

September 30, 1916

Credit in the Year Book

Will be given churches for contributions made between July 1, 1915, and September 30, 1916, and these reports will hereafter conform to the missionary year.

Board of Education
of the Disciples of Christ.

CHARLES E. UNDERWOOD, Treasurer
70 Layman Ave.
Indianapolis :: Indiana

THAT $500,000.

For some time the Foreign Society has been laboring for $500,000 within one year with which to evangelize the world. The prospects of success are now brighter than at any time in the past.

There has been a gain of more than 500 contributing churches. The churches as churches have given over $23,000 above their gifts of last year. The total gains from all sources to September 1 is about $70,000. This

Ten Big Reasons Why

Bethany Graded Lessons are being adopted by so many of the best schools among Disciples

1. There is more to them—at least a third more—than is contained in any other series.
2. They are rich, vital and full of suggestion to teacher and pupil.
3. They are free from the sectarian spirit.
4. They are soundly and fervently evangelical.
5. They are truly artistic in all their illustrations.
6. They are printed on better paper with better binding and in better taste than any other series.
7. Every lesson writer is an expert of international reputation.
8. They are a monument to the modern spirit of unity —several leading denominations have co-operated to produce them and are now using them.
9. The Disciples possess full editorial rights, through the editor, Charles Clayton Morrison.
10. Every Disciple school that uses them participates in and promotes a great Christian union enterprise.

SEND FOR RETURNABLE SAMPLES.

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

gain is more than the total receipts of the society in 1891.

August was a great month—the greatest for August in our history. The receipts amounted to more than $90,000. There were several most encouraging gains.

The present situation, briefly stated, is this: If the receipts during September are as large as they were in September, 1915, the $500,000 is assured. That means the income for the month must be about $149,000.

However, some receipts were received in August this year that were entered in September last year. These must be overcome to insure the $500,000.

We believe the friends will not permit this great opportunity to go by default. There is too much involved.

No one victory will count for more by our people just now than to reach $500,000 for Foreign Missions. We are almost sure never to give less again if we reach this mark.

Please let no church or Sunday-school, or Endeavor Society, or personal friend fail in this crucial hour.

The Living-link churches can be counted upon to do their duty.

Now that great host of churches that have not given anything this year ought to be heard from, and many will be heard from before September 30.

Will not the clear notes from the workers pierce our dull ears these closing days of the missionary year? Tibet cries from the roof of the world. The Congo cries from the submerged continent. India asks with a tenderness and grace to touch the dullest of us who abideth at home. The teeming millions of China call out of their darkness, long and loud. All the missionary force, in all the fields, are over-worked. The children and wives of the missionary wonder why we are so tardy in sending reinforcements when the opportunities are so great.

Please forward to the undersigned at once and he will return a proper receipt, promptly and gladly.

F. M. Rains, Secy.

Box 884, Cincinnati, O.

The American Society's Contribution to the Convention

At the coming International Convention of Churches of Christ in Des Moines the American Christian Missionary Society will present its past year's work covering nine great departments, as follows:

1. Evangelism; showing the results of the labors of its corps of Evangelists in cities, states and provinces throughout North America, including work in the far South along the Mexican border; in the far North in the Provinces of Canada and the states of the Northwest. This will be a splendid record of meetings held, of converts made and of new churches established.

2. Conservation; showing the fields in which the Society has rendered assistance in bringing mission churches toward self support and in conserving the results of evangelism. Strong churches in more than forty of our larger cities have thus been developed.

3. Educational. In its Bible school session the American Christian Missionary Society will set forth the work of its twenty-three field workers in twenty-five states; its trained specialists in departmental Bible-school efficiency and its schools of methods and labors of its Commission on Standardization.

4. Supervisory. It will exhibit an array of experts, otherwise known as National, State, Provincial and City Secretaries, covering practically every state and province of North America with men who have upon their hearts, as successors of St. Paul, "the care of all the churches."

5. Immigrant Missions. Half of Thursday afternoon will be devoted to the work of the Commission on Immigration, in a conference covering the field of immigrant missions, the equipment of the Disciples of Christ for immigrant work, the classes of immigrants most accessible to this religious body, the character of training required for leadership among immigrant forces and the equipment of our colleges for the preparation of such leaders. This great session will be under the leadership of Finis S. Idleman of New York.

6. The Commission on Foreign Relations will set forth the situation in the lands from which our immigrants come.

7. The Rural Church. Another half of Thursday afternoon's program will be devoted to a conference on the Rural Church under the leadership of Alva W. Taylor of Columbia, Mo. Eighty-two per cent of the churches of our brotherhood are in rural communities. This will be a great session.

8. Co-operation. The reports will show the fields of co-operative efforts in which our Communion, throught the Home Missions Council, labors with other religious bodies in America for bringing in the Kingdom of God.

9. Statistical. As statistician for the Disciples of Christ, the Society will show the growth of our people, indicating the fields of our comparative strength and those of our greatest opportunity.

The American Christian Missionary Society will report the opening of Alaska as a Home Mission field, the sending of its first missionary, Harry Munro, into that field in June. In the sessions of this Society the pioneers of our religious movement will be introduced, missionaries presented from the various fields of our frontier and from the great cities. Secretary Grant K. Lewis, in a map survey of the American field will use one of the largest and finest maps of North America, showing the distribution of the Disciples, which has ever been made. The address of President Burnham will set forth the present strategic needs and opportunities and outline the policy which should be pursued for the next five years. The day will be crowned by an evening address by one of our greatest evangelists, Brother E. E. Violett, who will speak on "America and the Next Religious Awakening."

No finer program was ever prepared for the American Christian Missionary Society than that which is in preparation for Des Moines. Thursday will be a high day at this Convention.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27.

(Established 1858.)

THE C. S. BELL CO. : HILLSBORO, OHIO

The Bible College of Missouri

A biblical school of high grade. At Columbia, Missouri, the educational center of the state. Adjacent to the University of Missouri. Mutual interchange of credits. For catalogue, write G. D. Edwards, Dean.

A Notable Success

The welcome that has been given by the leaders in the churches and Sunday schools to the little book just issued by the Disciples Publication Society:

"The Training of Church Members"

is evidence that this text has come to meet a very definite need in the churches.

The following are typical letters received from leaders concerning the book:

FROM REV. H. CLAY TRUSTY, Seventh Street Church, Indianapolis: "I have examined thoroughly the manual, "The Training of Church Members," and think it a very fine thing. We need to spend some time with young Christians on the fundamentals of our Christian religion and church life. This affords a splendid guide."

FROM REV. L. C. MOORE, Waterloo, Ia.: "This book is filling a long known need in our mid-week service. I am more than pleased with it. The attendance was doubled in four weeks by the use of the text."

FROM REV. IRVING BROWN, Sac City, Ia.: "I am much impressed with it. Shall introduce it either at the C. E. or mid-week prayer-meetings. We all need the training it supplies."

FROM REV. L. J. MARSHALL, Wabash Ave. Church, Kansas City, Mo.:

"This is a timely piece of work. Its clear and simple presentations of the lessons to be taught should make it popular among Christian workers."

How You May Use This Text:

(1) As a book of study in your mid-week or Endeavor prayer-meeting.

(2) As a text-book in your young people's Sunday school classes.

(3) As a text for study in a special "Pastor's class" organized for training of young Christians and meeting either through the week or on Sunday.

(4) As a teacher-training course.

Send for free sample of the new book today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St. CHICAGO

DISCIPLES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO SUMMER SESSION.

The University of Chicago has maintained its reputation for attracting an increasingly large number of Disciples at its summer sessions. During the quarter just completed, in which the attendance was approximately five thousand, a very large number of teachers, ministers, missionaries and others of our own communion enrolled for work. This fact is testifies more eloquently than words to the wide opportunities offered by the University, and to the increasing appreciation of the value of graduate work. Many of those in residence this summer have had wide experience in their various fields, but have either returned to the University in candidacy for higher degrees, or else have come for a brief time without thought of taking a degree, but merely for the intellectual stimulus of a few weeks in an academic atmosphere.

* * *

Among the Disciple members of the faculty in residence this summer were Prof. McClintock, Prof. Willett, Prof. Clark, Dr. Ames, Dr. Sharp, Dr. Kitson, Mr. Carr, and Mr. Henry. Among the visiting faculty members was Prof. W. A. Parker of Pomona College, California.

Our missionaries were represented by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. MacDougall, and W. E. Gordon, of India; A. F. Hensey and H. C. Hobgood of Africa; and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Robinson of Japan.

Among the teachers in residence may be mentioned: J. C. Caldwell and T. J. Golightly who are beginning their work at the Drake Bible College the former as dean and the latter in the department of Religious Education; Miss Pearl Ruby, instructor in Domestic Science at Drake; Carl Taylor of the University of Missouri; E. W. Delcamp of the department of Latin, at Transylvaia; Ralph L. Records, also of Transylvania; R. L. McQuary, recently called to the chair of Biblical literature at Eureka; W. O. Lappin, of Atantic Christian College; and Miss Louise O'Neill of the Lexington, Ky., High School. Mrs. Norton, Librarian at Transylvania and Miss Rae Stockham, Assistant Librarian at Drake, were also in residence.

Many of the ministers spent either one term or both at the university, including: A. L. Huff, Geo. F. Chandler, John L. Imhof, Howard E. Jensen, Mart Gary Smith, Jewel Mathews, Alvin E. Hottell, Robert C. Lemon, E. S. Bledsoe, Clay Trusty, C. R. Stauffer, and J. Leslie Lobingier.

* * *

Other summer students included: Charles J. Ritchey, Fellow in the New Testament department; Dr. E. T. Murphy of Chicago; Miss Estella Saunders, a student volunteer; Mr. Wiggins and Miss Zazel Lent of Eureka; W. B. Bodenhafer and William A. Crowley, both doing Doctor of Philosophy work; B. E. Holcolyd; H. B. Kilgour; Mrs. Harbison; Mrs. A. L. Huff; Misses Stella Buchanan, Jessica Spencer, Annie Fillmore, Bertha L. Merrill, Bessie E. Beckett, Nell Rice; Mrs. Records; Mrs. Phoebe F. Mathews, and Mrs. Bledsoe.

The Disciples' Club of the university offers an opportunity for fellowship and acquaintance. Under its auspices two outings were planned for the Lake Shore in Jackson Park. One was held to the delight of all who attended. The night set for the other was rainy and disagreeable, but more than thirty people met at the Hyde Park church, hurriedly set up tables, and tried to enjoy the picnic lunch and the extemporaneous speeches as much as they might have done in moonlight by the shores of Lake Michigan.

Two most interesting meetings of the club were held in Haskell Hall during the second term, Dr. Herbert L. Willett addressing the first, and Dr. Willis A. Parker of Pomona College the second. It is customary to hold similar meetings during the year at frequent intervals.

The officers of the Disciples' Club for the present year are: President W .C. MacDougall; vice-president, H. E. Jensen; secretary, Bertha Merrill; treasurer, Mart Gary Smith.

J. Leslie Lobingier.

A series on

Principles and Methods of Religious Education

Handwork in Religious Education

By ADDIE GRACE WARDLE, President Cincinnati Missionary Training School.

The first book in its field applying scientific study to the principles and methods of handwork for religious and moral education. It considers the pedagogy of handwork for growing boys and girls, even to and through the years of adolescence. It presents a progressive program of handwork appropriate to each stage of development.

175 pp., with 40 illustrations, 16mo, cloth, $1.00 postage extra (weight 1 lb.).

Graded Social Service for the Sunday School

By WILLIAM NORMAN HUTCHINS.

"This book recognizes that everybody can do something and finds that something for everybody to do." The author discusses the whole problem of social activity in a thoroughly scientific way and establishes fundamental principles through which teachers may formulate a social program for their own classes 48 pp., 16mo, cloth, 75 cents, postage extra (weight 0 oz.).

The Sunday-school Building and Its Equipment. By HERBERT FRANCIS EVANS, Professor of Religious Education, Grinnell College.

Recognizing all that is best in modern graded religious education, this volume is an up-to-date and scientific discussion of the essential features in church buildings. Its value is not only in directing the construction of new buildings, but in suggesting modifications for present church houses.

112 pp., with 42 illustrations, 16mo, cloth, 75 cents postage extra (weight 0 oz.).

The City Institute for Religious Teachers

By WALTER SCOTT ATHEARN, Professor (elect) of Religious Education, Boston University.

This is a practical manual for working out the details in the organization of community teacher-training movements for Sunday-school teachers. As outlined by this author, a city institute is the application of the common-sense business principle of combining effort and resources to the problem of preparing Sunday-school teachers.

166 pp., 16mo, cloth, 75 cents, postage extra (weight 0 oz.).

Order from

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

5808 Ellis Avenue

Chicago Illinois

The General Convention in Des Moines

BY GRAHAM FRANK.

As I came home from my vacation at Macatawa, Michigan, I spent a day in Des Moines and had a conference with the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of several of the local Des Moines committees. I am sure it will be gratifying to all the churches to know that the preparations for the convention are going forward in the most promising manner. Under the direction of President Hill M Bell, chairman of the Des Moines committee, all the local committees are working harmoniously and joyfully in preparation for the coming of a great host of Disciples to Des Moines, October 9 to 15. From all that I could see and find out, there will be nothing left undone to receive and care for the convention in the best possible way. They are expecting a great attendance. Counting on the fact that Des Moines is centrally located in reference to the great body of our people, they confidently expect one of the largest conventions of recent years.

There are many good hotels and comfortable homes where the attendants of the convention may stay. I suggest that those who expect to attend write soon to the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, Mr. B. D. Van Meter, Drake University, Des Moines, telling him what accommodations they wish and asking him to make reservations for them.

As the time for the convention approaches the churches should be planning to select their representatives. If we are ever to have any real co-operative life, it will come only by having the local churches take a vital part in it. It can never come by having the churches feel that they have discharged their obligations when they have given their money to the Missionary Societies. As well expect to have strong local churches when the members content themselves by meeting the financial obligations while they absent themselves from all services of the church. We should have representatives from at least two thousand churches at the Des Moines convention.

* * *

Another interesting matter that has recently come to my attention is that of the reports sent in answer to the request in the first letter of the Attendance Committee for names of those with whom the committee might correspond in regard to the Des Moines Convention. Great numbers of preachers responded. The Attendance Committee will correspond with all those whose names were sent. On the card provided for sending in these names was a line "Suggestions for the good of the Convention." I have gone over these cards and give here some of the suggestions. Each one is from a representative preacher. The ones I have selected are as follows:

"Provide time for discussion of business, secure participation of largest possible number, under proper control."

"Advertise every good feature thoroughly. Get information to the churches as well as to the ministers."

"Don't stress the General Convention too much—I believe you 'Gen. Con.' fellows are honest, dependable fellows, but a lot of us don't agree with you. We hope it won't be made a test of fellowship."

"Let us have fewer speeches and more conferences. It is a weariness to the flesh to try to listen to three long-winded addresses in one evening."

"You are hitting the nail on the head in the effort for a more general attendance."

"Do not have speaking and business sessions in such proximity. Whole days or parts of days exclusively for business."

"Put as many new speakers on the program as possible, men whom we have not had the privilege of hearing."

"Insist on a delegate convention. Make it a delegate convention. Less oratory—more business."

"Let brotherly love continue."

"A more democratic convention. Cut out fifty per cent of the big speeches—more discussion from the floor. A more strict delegate convention."

"Give more time for discussion from the floor. I think it is important. We always have to hurry too much."

"Try hard for a representative gathering. There is no plan as likely as the delegate plan."

"Shorter sessions. More time for discussion of business, more time for prayer. Unity."

"Urge that every church be represented. Give adequate time for business. Seek for spiritual values. Make us feel the seriousness of our task."

As I have gone over these suggestions, I have been greatly impressed with the deep interest our preachers have in our organized life and work and with their ability to help develop it and direct it. We have great unused power in our local churches and in our preachers. The General Convention was organized with the view of discovering and using this power for the progress of the kingdom.

Everything that I see now indicates that the Des Moines Convention will be both good and great.

If

YOU ARE PLANNING TO BUY A BIBLE OF ANY KIND, SEND TODAY FOR OUR

CATALOG OF BIBLES

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

Kent and Madsen Maps

A New Series of Historical Maps

For Sunday Schools, Bible Classes and Individual Students

Because of the combined attractiveness, accuracy, adaptability, compactness and cheapness of these maps, the series should find a place promptly in the classrooms of every progressive Sunday School.

The maps, both in detail of drawing and coloring, are superb, Size, about 17x25 inches. Not sold separately. Complete set mounted on wooden roller, to fit on music stand tripod. The low price of $5.00 includes maps, tripod, boxing and delivery charges in continental United States.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. Chicago.

An Ideal Course

for your Adult or Young People's Class

The Life of Jesus

It is always in order for Sunday School classes to study the life of Jesus. Young people's and adult classes want the very best text that can be found. This is simply to remind them that there has never been offered to the Sunday School world a Life of Christ so practicable, so usable, sotrue to the best scholarship, so bristling with questions that wake up the pupils, so well proportioned, as Dr. Loa E. Scott's "LIFE OF JESUS" in Fifty two Lessons. This book is being widely used in Sunday Schools both of the Disciples and other religious bodies, and in Y. M. C. A. classes. This testifies to its popularity. You must have it in your school. It will create a new interest in Bible study among your young people and younger adults. Price of the book, 50c. In quantities of 10 or more, 40c each.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St., CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII September 21, 1916 Number 38

Standards of Church Success
Editorial

The Modern Church School
By Frank Waller Allen

Train and Auto-Truck in Asia Minor
By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

The Illinois Convention

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. If paid strictly in advance $1.50 will be accepted. To ministers, if paid strictly in advance, $1.00 per year. If payment is delayed ministers will be charged at regular rates. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid for, but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is used add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Post Office, Chicago, Illinois, Under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to the Disciples is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to co-operate with the Christian people of all communions as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century, the chief publication of the Society, desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... .... Address .....

A Paper That Readers Take Home.

The CONQUEST

Send for Sample Copy Today.

A Journal of Character Building

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK, Editor

For Adult and Young People's Classes and Christian Endeavor Societies

It Grips and Holds! Why?

The Conquest is an attractive paper. Gripping articles and stories have a place in each issue. The Good Cheer Club and "Chuckles" are delightful features.

The Conquest is an up-to-date paper. The articles used are not moss-grown. Its pages teem with facts of modern science and current history.

The Conquest is a useful paper in the work of the church. Its Sunday School page is unsurpassed. Its Christian Endeavor column is vital and suggestive.

The Conquest is a newsy paper. Its news is not merely small talk of Sunday-school attendance, contests, etc., but real news that builds up and helps. From four to six pages of each issue are devoted to news of churches, schools and Endeavor societies.

"Character Talks" form a unique feature of "The Conquest"

Send for Free Sample Copy.

Disciples Publication Society : : 700 E. 40th Street, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

Volume XXXIII SEPTEMBER 21, 1916 Number 38

Standards of Church Success

WHAT IS SUCCESS FOR A CHURCH?

As soon as we ask one of our friends to name a successful church, we get in his answer his estimate with regard to the worth-while things in religion. Unconsciously he bares his soul to us.

It is at this time of year when a new season's work is being projected that we are most likely to ask questions as to what program our church shall adopt. Many churches will drift on aimlessly without a program, but it is better to consciously undertake something in religion and thus test its value in experience.

The time was when a Disciple would point to the church that had successfully managed a big evangelistic meeting as the outstanding example of church success. A pastor wrote us many years ago, "As the result of the blessed work of Evangelist Blank, things will be forever different with our church." Two years later he wrote, "I am resigning my church and would like to be commended to a new field. No one can ever do anything in our town until everybody forgets that Evangelist Blank was ever here." It is not thus with all evangelists nor with all revival meetings, perhaps, but we have no infallible criterion of success in the number of people that may be gotten forward to the front seat in church.

There have been waves of interest in many perfectly excellent movements. Once teacher-training was on everyone's lips. Short course manuals sold into the hundreds of thousands under the good advertising of publishing houses, and some congregations had about all the members studying these booklets. Then somebody discovered one day that the so-called teacher-training did not really produce good Sunday-school teachers, and the bubble burst. Teacher-training is a great idea but it now operates under some handicap from that mob movement of the past.

Right now many Disciple churches are very hesitant and many preachers have the blues. No one seems to give us a slogan this year. This very hesitation challenges us all to deeper thinking about the verities of religion and the standards of church success.

Before we can say what church success is, we must ask what the church ideally is. We will only succeed when we reproduce something like the ideal church of Jesus Christ.

✣ ✣

The early church began in a school, where the dearest of all human friendships were formed. The students in this school were trained for the ministry by the greatest of all teachers. When the teacher was taken away, they were dazed by their loss for a few days but very soon his Spirit fell upon them with such power that they became an invincible force.

Soon the school-like structure of the church developed into a proselyting agency of the greatest efficiency the world has ever seen. Jesus was preached as the fulfilment of both Jewish and Gentile hopes. He was set forth as the goal of humanity's struggle and people everywhere turned to him.

The very success of the church added new functions to it. The needs of the poor produced for a time a near-communism in the Jerusalem church. The needs of Jerusalem's poor became a bond of fellowship when Paul brought the offerings of Greek-speaking churches to relieve their necessities.

This early church was not lacking in world vision. Long before the work in Asia was done, Barnabas and Saul were ordained as missionaries to an island of the sea and when the great missionary Paul returned with his new name and new leadership, he saw the vision of the man of Macedonia pleading the cause of an unredeemed continent.

As the church grew, its leaders recognized the imperative need of the deeper spiritual experiences. Religion had still some unexplored continents and there was danger that speaking in tongues should usurp the place of true communion with God. Worship came to be interpreted in a deeper way. The weekly communion became more than a feast of memory. It became the bond of unity in the spiritual fellowship and the symbol of the presence of the ever-living Christ.

Thus, in a single generation, there were religious standards erected which roughly correspond to our modern religious tasks of Education, Evangelism, Social Service, Missions and Worship. In these forms of activity the church found her glory and her success.

✣ ✣

May not the modern church be losing her glory by erecting smaller and less glorious standards? Can the money of the budget, or the bricks in the building, or any other kind of mere mechanics of church life be compared to the five great and outstanding activities by which the church went forward when she was a conquering army?

If the church of this hour is to have success, it must have statesmanship.

We are living in an epoch that is more significant historically than that of the French revolution or of the Cromwellian movement of England. Whether the events of tomorrow spell reaction or progress is not yet certain, but they seem to portend a forward movement the most stupendous in the world's history.

What has the church to say in a time like this? When hatreds are burning up the world, how shall our holy religion preach love? When sectional loyalties obscure vision, how shall we preach the bigger loyalties?

It is clear that the church can deliver no convincing testimony against sectional loyalty while she herself is divided into sects. It will be hard for us to preach the spirit of love given us by our Master unless our theological hatreds shall cease. The church must take the beam out of her own eye.

But if we could go to our stricken world, which has crepe upon every door, with a confident message of life eternal; if we could speak to weary souls with the message of peace, there would come to religion such an increment of power as has not been since the days of the apostles.

The Modern Church School

By Frank Waller Allen

HOW would you like to have your Bible School, which has been your despair for years, made over into a human, alert educational institution? How would you like to see the leakage stopped; the teachers enthused over a program that is both scientific and religious; the pupils aware that the class room work is actually meeting a paramount need in their lives? How would you like to have this done quietly, without fuss or furor, enlisting the intelligent efforts of your people to such an extent that after this miracle worker has left your city for other parts, your home workers will keep right on about their task with confidence and hope? In other words: How would you like to feel that the Church School of which you are a part is faithfully and intelligently teaching people how to live every day in the terms of the best and truest? This is the program and the ideal which Miss Eva Lemert will bring to every church working with her to institute the modern Church School.

First of all, Miss Lemert possesses that rare and indefinable quality known as charm, and which Dr. Frank Crane defines as "personality plus." Second, she has high and intelligent ideals of both individual and social life that are thoroughly Christian. Again, she brings to her work the point of view of modern education and, as nearly as conditions will permit, makes an educational institution out of the old-fashioned Sunday-school.

EDUCATIONAL METHODS CHANGING

Science and the modern test of service for all our programs and institutions are changing the purpose and the method of education. The ultimate aim of education is no longer "learning," but fitness for life. Fifty-seven varieties of diplomas plus the lore of the ages does not mean education unless competency and the ability to apply it to life are there. "Book-learning," to use the old and yet easily understood expression, is worth while only as it promotes life. Education is directing the growing human being toward fitness for life. This means individual independency and social competency. It means the expression of a personality in the terms of self-maintenance and the co-operation of all in those things which make for beauty and brotherliness. It means "for each shall bear his own burden," and "bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Education for life must first of all recognize the difference not only in capacity but in tendency on the part of the individual. People are not all alike and to force a "machine made" education impersonally on a group of children is not only to rob them of personality but it is to develop some of them by sacrificing others. The old system had a tendency to "turn out" a lot of "dead-level" minds that must begin over again both to learn how to live and to develop whatever tendencies toward a distinct personality with which they were potential. Now democracy does not mean universal mediocrity. Democracy and the new education for freedom give opportunity for growth in that direction in which there is the greatest need and ability. (Undoubtedly the very best statement of this ideal of modern education is to be found in Dr. Dewey's "Democracy and Education.")

WHAT IS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION?

The best definition of religious education that I have seen is by Dr. Henry H. Meyer, Secretary of the Commission on Christian Education of the Federal Council of Churches. Says he:

"The purpose of religious instruction, the goal which is to be achieved through the curriculum, consists in the formation of life habits and the establishment of life attitudes. Religion is not a matter of obedience to certain rules of conduct, but it does imply an ordered life in which the mechanism of body and mind is the disciplined servant of a high ideal. Religion is not the accumulation of individual virtues; but its perfection presupposes virtue in the sense of a life attitude of sympathy, appreciation and good will, and the consciousness of thus bringing itself into harmony with the eternal purpose of the Infinite Father. Neither does religion consist of creeds, although its intellectual interpretation demands a clear statement of God's relation to the world and to the human soul. Nor is it a matter of ritual, though worship and communion demand forms of expression, as thoughts demand words.

"Religion is something much more fundamental than creed, ritual or rules of conduct. It is a matter of life—it is life itself in relation to other lives and to God, the Infinite Source of all life. Considered as a personal experience it is the response of the individual human life in its totality and as a unit to the touch and the challenge of the Divine. And the aim of religious education is to bring about in every individual pupil a full and strong response to this touch and call of God in terms of clear intellectual understanding of what it means to be a Christian, in a passionate heart devotion and loyalty, and in tireless activity in unselfish service."

WHAT WAS DONE FOR THE SPRINGFIELD CHURCH.

Now Miss Lemert thoroughly understands this ideal and has worked out a program for its attainment. Of course the success of this program largely depends upon the spirit and material in the church which she is serving. Fortunately the Springfield church was already in sympathy with such an ideal, giving Miss Lemert a free hand in so far as it was not limited by the lack of material, to institute the program which she loves profoundly and to which she is giving her life. Of course it must be understood that in so short a period as eight or ten weeks nothing more can be done than to give the Church School the point of view, the ideal, and the program with a hope that sufficient inspiration and vision have been created to carry on the work through the four or five years it is bound to take to bring it to a thorough and scientific basis. Miss Lemert did four distinctive things for the Church School at Springfield:

First, she organized the School along the lines of modern pedagagy as best set forth in that remarkable little volume "The Church School" by Dr. Walter S. Athearn. To those who are not familiar with this program no better service could be done them than to cite Dr. Athearn's book which sets forth the practical program and ideal a little bit better than any other work that the movement for modern religious education has produced.

Second, Miss Lemert won the entire school to her program and ideal, changing the point of view from that of hit-and-miss instruction to that of nurturing and developing of personality. Today the question is not, "What have you taught the pupil to know?" but "What sort of a person have you helped him to become?"

AN EDUCATIONAL CONSCIENCE CREATED.

Third, Miss Lemert created an appreciation and a conscience in the congregation itself concerning religious education. From a to-be-tolerated side-issue for women and children the Church School has become one of the paramount interests of the institution. An especial interest has been created among the adults for the study of modern social problems in the light of the teachings of Christianity. That the home may co-ordinate with the school, a class for mothers was instituted, meeting during the week, for the study of all problems relating to home and church, using as a text, "Religious Education and the Family," by Henry F. Cope.

Fourth, and of fundamental importance in forwarding and making permanent the program, "The School of Religious Education and Social Service" was organized. This is a night school meeting weekly for nine months in the year, the primary purpose of which is to give the teaching force a scientific training and background for their work. This is the type of school first organized by Walter S. Athearn in Des Moines, the work of which is outlined in his little book "The City Institute for Religious Teachers."

The school offers a three years' course in Biblical, Professional and Departmental work, after which a diploma is issued to those who have maintained the required standard. It may be of interest to know the text books and the qualifications of the teachers in the school organized under the auspices of First Christian Church, Springfield. In the Biblical department the courses offered are as follows: A Survey Course in the Bible and Old Testament, instructor, Rev. T. N. Ewing, pastor of First Methodist Church, text books, "The Bible, Its Origin and Nature" by Marcus Dods, "The Origin and Permanent Value of the Old Testament" by Charles Foster Kent; Life of Christ, instructor, Rev. W. J. Johnson, pastor First Congregational Church, text, "The Life of Jesus of Nazareth," by Rush Rhees; The Message of Jesus to Our Modern Life, instructor, Rev. F. W. Allen, text, "The Message of Jesus to Our Modern Life" by Shailer Mathews.

PROFESSIONAL TRAINING.

Professional: Sociology, instructor, H. S. Magill, Superintendent of Schools of Springfield, text, "Sociology," by John M. Gillette; Boy Training, instructor, Prof. F. O. Edwards, supervisor of Manual Training in the Springfield Public Schools, text, "Boy Life and Self-Government" by George W. Fiske; Supervision and Management, instructor, Prof. I. M. Allen, who is also Educational Director of the school, Principal of the Springfield High School, text, "The Church School" by Walter S. Athearn; Story Telling, instructor, Miss Emma B. Grant, Principal of the Teachers' Training School of the Springfield City Schools, text, "Stories and Story Telling," by Edward St. John; Psychology, instructor, F. W. Allen, texts, "The Pupil and the Teacher" by Luther A. Weigle, and "The Mind and Its Education" by George H. Betts. These instructors represent the Methodist, Congregational, Episcopal and Disciple churches.

Departmental: Beginners, Mrs. John O. Rames; Primary, Miss Bertha Kimble; Junior, Miss Carolyn L. Coffey; Intermediate, Miss Elizabeth Shaver; Senior, Hon. John A. Barber. These five departmental teachers represent the Baptist, Methodist and Congregational churches. The text in each instance is that portion of Dr. Athearn's book, "The Church School," which treats these respective departments. In the Adult Department the instructor is Miss Susan S. Wilcox, head of the English department of the Springfield High School, text, "The Religion of a Mature Mind" by George A. Coe.

MISS LEMERT'S HIGH QUALITIES.

Some two hundred pupils have already matriculated in this school which will meet each Monday evening from the first of October until the middle of June. It promises to do a unique and remarkable work in its field.

In conclusion, too much cannot be said of the high order of Miss Lemert's work. She is indefatigable, tactful and no one is more difficult to satisfy than she when it comes to thoroughness and the securing of the fittest individual to do the work. It is the opinion of the writer that if our churches would turn the money and time and attention which they have been giving to evangelistic meetings to the installation of the program and ideal which such people as Miss Lemert and Dr. Athearn stand for, the work of our churches would be much more permanent and of a higher spiritual order than we have ever known.

Train and Auto-Truck in Asia Minor

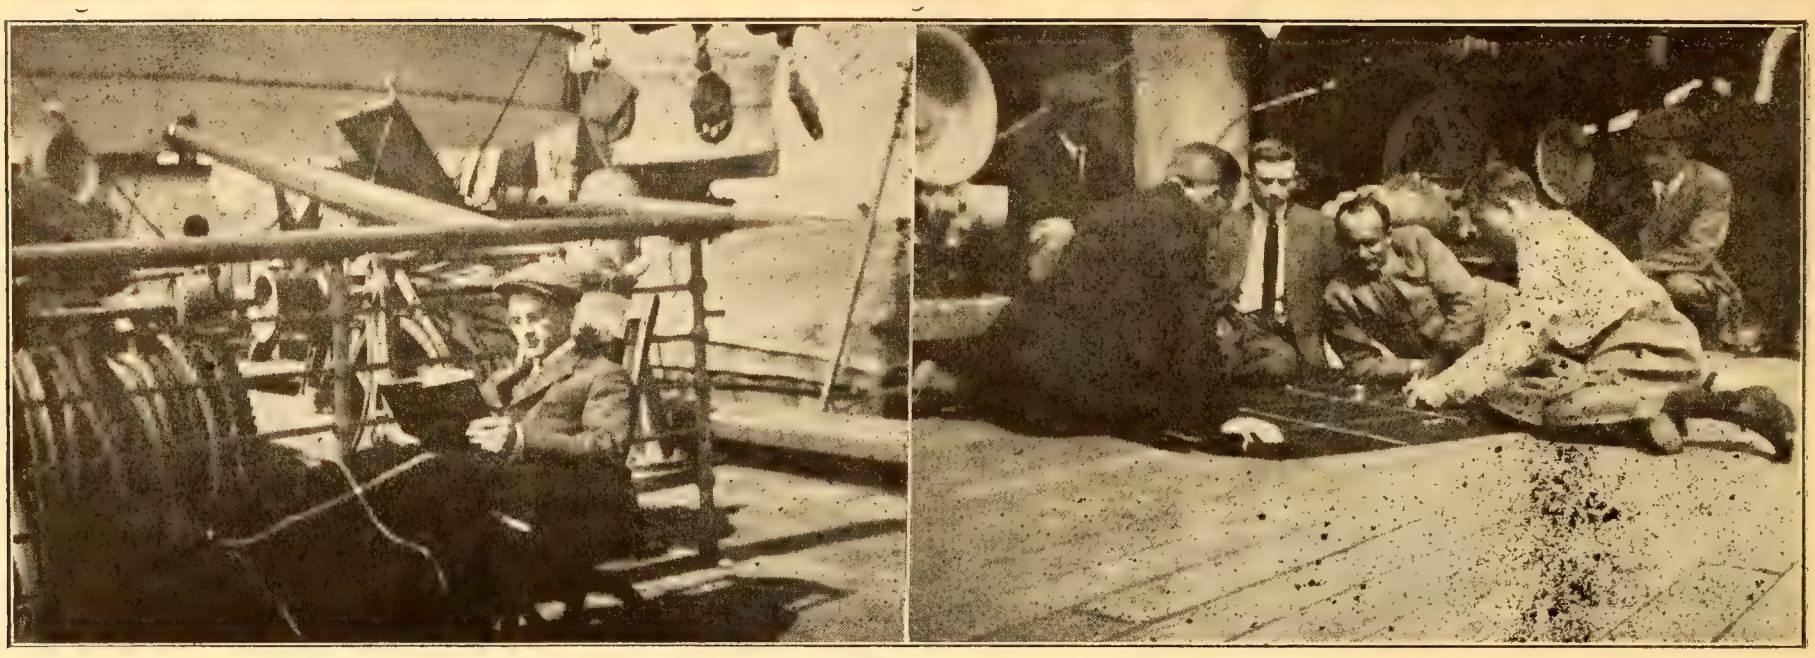
Continuing the Travel Stories of the War-Country.

By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

WE LEFT Islahiyeh, the terminal of the Syria-Palestine railroad, about eleven o'clock on Friday, June 30, in a military truck which had brought several Red Cross nurses bound for Beersheba, the headquarters of the Turko-Teutonic army fighting at the Suez Canal. We were whirled away from the station at a good rate and in a few minutes were climbing the foothills of the Amanus range of mountains. As we reached the higher levels the grade constantly increased, because the road has been constructed by the Germans for temporary use until the tunnel, now in course of construction, shall be finished, and, being made solely for the tremendously powerful auto trucks, is far steeper than an ordinary mountain road would be.

Often as we looked ahead and saw the angle that the car had to climb, or noted the sharp turn where there was not an extra foot of solid ground between the outer wheels and a precipitous cliff, we felt strongly inclined to jump out of the auto and take our chances at walking; but the chauffeur and mechanician were evidently accustomed to timid passengers, for they laughed at us and took the next turn by a six-inch margin. So we quickly learned to trust to their skill, which is evidently very great, and enjoy the novel experience. We were badly jostled and shaken, it is true, for the road is far from smooth, but so glad were we to escape the dust and heat of the Syrian plain that we had no desire to complain of minor discomforts.

We broke the journey at a mountain spring whose water was deliciously cold, and, after the tepid water we had been drinking for the past days, water which we carried with us because all that we could get on the way was likely to be infected with cholera, we all were quick to kneel down, like those whom Gideon could not trust, and take long draughts to make up for the thirsty days we had spent. Sardines, olives, jam, and bread made up for the cooked luncheon we had had to leave at Islahiyeh in our desire to get away quickly.



On the top of the Amanus mountains we saw many camps of Turkish soldiers, most of them men sent from the fighting fronts to recover from illness due to the severe strain of the war, or to the lack of sanitary arrangements in the camps where they had been stationed. A disreputable and pitiful spectacle they were, many of them half clothed, barefooted, filthy, and covered with the vermin that carry the typhus from one part of the country to another with devastating effect.

AN OASIS IN THE DESERT.

knew that, ill provided and ill led as they are, these same Turks are mighty good fighting men.

The dust on the western side of the mountains was very thick, since the rainless summer of the region was well advanced, and we were scarcely able to distinguish one another when we arrived at our destination, Mamure. This place, like Islahiyeh, is simply a railroad terminal at which the Germans have located a camp, and has no facilities for the entertainment of guests. But we gave no thought to the possibility of having to sleep out of doors until we had discovered a pump which we quickly turned into a washroom. We kept quite a line of soldiers, both German and Turkish, waiting while we took turns pumping for each other. In a few minutes the men of the party were in a condition to seek a lodging for the night, as we had learned that no train would leave before morning. The ladies guarded the baggage in the shadow of the station, while Dr. Hoskins and I went to the barracks to see what the commander would do for us. We found the major in command most affable, and he said that a room provided for the wives of officers was at the disposal of the ladies, while the rest of us could take possession of the mess-room of the petty officers who would be glad to dine outside that evening. A young orderly who spoke perfect English and told us that he had spent three years at Oxford, showed us the rooms, and it did not take us long to carry in our luggage, water bottle and all. Supper was a matter of a very short time, and we were all glad to make up our beds on the floor soon after it was finished.

The train that we found the next morning seemed as though it had been ordered especially for us, as we were alone in our car, until we found that it was to go only as far as Adana, and that from there on there would be no further train until the following day. We were anxious to get on as fast as possible, but saw no way to increase our mileage for that day, and so decided to make the best of it and visit the Adana mission school. But arrived there, a difficulty arose in the fact that no railroad official could or would tell when a train would pull out. As the schedules are all made with reference to the military necessities, they are not published, probably not known, from day to day. There was nothing to do but be on hand early the next morning and trust to luck. So the baggage that we could dispense with was checked, and after sending ahead word that we were coming, we drove across a half-mile of glaring dust and up several of the worst streets that a carriage ever had to traverse, to the school, where we were cordially made welcome and soon provided with tubs of hot water. How good they looked!

When Mr. Willett went three years ago to teach in Syrian Protestant College, Beirut, Syria, the world was not wrapt in war. The above peaceful scenes picture the voyage over. Mr. Willett in the left-hand picture.

STUDYING THE ARMENIANS.

Adana is one of the large cities of the Cilician plain, about an hour's ride from Tarsus. It contains a large Armenian population (or did before the war began), and was the scene of a terrible massacre in 1912, at which time an American missionary was shot to death in the streets as he tried to carry aid to some of those in peril. The race hatred against the Armenians is to a large extent due to the fact that they are excellent merchants, so skilful that they have taken most of the trade of the region into their own hands and thus made themselves unpopular with the less gifted Turks. Many of them perished in the massacres to which I have referred; others are constantly being drafted for the war, and those who are left live in constant fear of another outbreak against them. Even the girls in the mission school are not out of danger, because the sale of Armenian women and girls driven from their homes during the past eighteen months was so profitable to the ruffians who conducted it that it may at any time be repeated. We could not banish from our minds, as we watched the hundred or more girls in the school yard playing and singing at sunset, the fear that they might shortly be sent to the fate already suffered by so many thousands of their countrywomen.

Two good meals enjoyed at a table with a real tablecloth made Adana a stop to be remembered. But along with that I cannot forget that I sent all my traveling clothes to the wash, and when they came back, late in the evening, they had not been dried. We hung them out in the porches, and by morning a few were no longer wringing wet, but my coat and khaki trousers felt as if they had but a moment before been taken from the tub, and as a result I steamed for several hours after we started away.

A REAL TABLECLOTH.

In accordance with our plan we arrived at the station before seven, prepared to wait until fate, in the shape of an official with some soldiers to move, was kind to us. But when we reached the station and had concluded the inevitable fight with the drivers over the fare we were to pay them, we almost gave up the trip for that day. For on the street in front of the building, in the baggage room where our suitcases were checked, on the stairs leading to the platforms, and all over the tracks swarmed the dirtiest, most evil smelling crowd of men that I ever saw. There must have been nearly a thousand of them, poor farmers, beggars, woodcutters, charcoal burners, men of all types found in the country, being dragged away from their homes and families to fight for a power they hated. Each man had the clothes he had been in when he was taken, as most of them had not been allowed to go home after being called, and many of them had had no food for two or three days. Very wretched they looked. But no matter how much we pitied them, it was no pleasant matter to thread one's way among them at imminent hazard of picking up vermin of all sorts. We debated the question of going back to the school and waiting, in the hope that the next day the station would be more inviting. But when a porter told me that similar crowds had been sent out every day for over a week, and that probably there would be batches sent daily until the whole country was denuded of men, we held our noses and hastened to a corner of the platform where we would not have to be near them. Probably our naphthaline bags were as unpleasant to them as their various odors were to us. We hoped that we were not hurting their feelings by being so exclusive.

No train was due to leave for over an hour, and it probably was a good thing, because three of our bags were lost and we were told that we could not leave the city without an order from the governor. Our first concern was for the baggage, and in a quarter of an hour we located the missing pieces in the ticket-seller's booth. I presume that he thought we would never miss it in our haste to get away. But we thanked him for guarding it for us, and were so polite that he suggested that we ask the station master about the question of getting away without going back for the governor's vis-e. We had already decided upon that course, hoping that the Jamal Pasha permission would be sufficient, though he is not the dictator of that part of the empire. But when we asked for the official in question we found that he was still in bed and generally did not get up until after the train left. At once we decided that his habit was a bad one and must be broken. So we located the room in which he lived and opened the door as noisily as possible. Luck was with us. Instead of having us arrested or refusing point blank to talk to us, he opened one eye just wide enough to see Jamal Pasha's signature, and then jumped out of bed as though his Excellency were there in person, signed our vethetkas, (the police permission to travel), and health certificates, and ordered a porter to give us the best places on the train which was just being made up. We were mighty glad to get on board and away from that station, and I found that the excitement of rushing from one part of the place to another had almost dried my coat. So I was doubly thankful.

IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF PAUL.

As we crossed the Cilician plain and looked out over its fertile fields we thought of how often Paul must have seen those same fields and the mountain ranges almost surrounding them, and counted the armies that had traversed them, the soldiers of Assyria, of the Hittites, of Cyrus, of Alexander, of the warring successors of that great leader, of the Seleucid kings of Syria, and then of Pompey when he broke the power of the pirates who had their strongholds there. As we were talking a young man who had been sitting near us leaned over and asked:

"Can you name the last army that went this way?"

"Tell us," we urged.

"Well, a month ago eleven thousand Armenians from the interior were brought here to work on this railway. The men fixed the tracks under the direction of German officers, and the women and children carried materials for them. Three days ago the work was finished and the whole crowd was sent north under the guard of Turkish soldiers, supposedly to work on the tunnels dug under the Amanus mountains. Yesterday I saw the bodies of over fifty of the men, hacked to pieces, in a valley not ten miles from here. Who knows what became of the rest? They have not been seen, and Turkish soldiers are not noted for their kindness to women who fall into their hands."

GHASTLY TALES.

Such tales we had heard for over a year, but a butchery of the sort had never taken place so near to us. It was ghastly to think of what must even at that moment be taking place almost within calling distance, and we were as powerless to help as though it were on the other side of the world.

Because of the fear of cholera, Tarsus for some time has been quarantined against all who do not carry health certificates. To aid the authorities in enforcing this law, the trains no longer run into the city, but stop at Kulak, where the Germans have located a large military camp. These camps are the stations along the road from Constantinople to the Suez Canal and the Euphrates over which the Teutons throw the supplies of men, provision and ammunition needed in their Asiatic campaigns, and are models of perfection in equipment. As we drew into Kulak we saw numerous auto trucks like the one in which we had already ridden, running in and out of the camp, and we congratulated ourselves that we would have no delay here, but could go on at once.

ANOTHER DELAY.

But alas for our cross-country record. When one of the German officers who were traveling with us asked the commandant how soon we could leave, the latter said that the morning auto, which made the run to the other side of the Taurus Mountains without stopping, had left, and that we could not take the afternoon truck because it stopped for the night at a camp in the mountains that no non-Germans were allowed to see. Hence we must wait until the morrow and hope that their day's truck would not be full. The delay was bad enough, but in addition we were informed that it was against the rules for us to stay at Kulak, and that we must go on into Tarsus if the guards at the gates would let us, and if they would not, that we could camp any place that we liked on the road—cheerful permission.

Two of the party hired a very much weather-beaten cart and started for town to find lodgings for us and to get carriages to carry us in, and the rest stayed in the train and consoled ourselves with meat balls and bread brought along from Adana. An hour passed and then the explorers came back. They had been turned back, but wanted all the health certificates, Jamal Pasha's paper, and any other documents there happened to be in the party, with which they hoped to overawe the authorities. Another hour we waited, and then there appeared three antique carriages whose drivers said that they had been sent for us. We put naphthaline all over the seats, dusted out the vehicles as best we could, and gingerly took our places, the baggage being piled on a cart that was handy.

VARIOUS ADVENTURES.

That ride was a nightmare. One horse tried to die before we had gotten a hundred yards, and the driver got down and led him while one of the party drove. The second carriage went gaily ahead and paid no attention to the rest of us. Our driver wanted to gallop in, but the baggage had to be watched, and suddenly the dying horse decided running was better than double driving, and off he went at full speed, leaving the two of us in the last carriage to see that all our possessions were not lost. It took just two hours to get into the city, and all that time we were under a blazing sun, coaxing, threatening, forcing our driver and a friend he picked up to help persuade us to hurry, to stop at short intervals and let the baggage cart catch up with us. Our Turkish did not exist as a spoken language, though we understood what our tormentors were saying, and that made the argument seem all the harder. We were not at all sorry to stop at last at the signal of those who had gone ahead and found us a place to stay.

It was our good fortune that Mrs. Christy of the American Mission, was at home and has a large house. With the true hospitality of the missionary she welcomed us, though she already had five visitors, and even made room for the two German officers who, I was surprised to find, had decided to stay over rather than make the broken auto trip that afternoon. Extra cots and beds were set up for us, and I for one was glad to make up for the night before spent on the hard floor of the Mamure barracks.

Rector Against Episcopalian Exclusiveness.

A heresy cry has been raised against a prominent New York rector that he has broken his ordination vows in declaiming against the exclusive fellowship practiced by Episcopalian rectors. He does not mince words in his statement of attitude.

"This is the fact," says Dr. Reiland, "and it is amusing. From our official point of view therefore the ministers of other Communions (Roman Catholic excepted) are not in our class; they exercise no valid ministry; they cannot preach in our pulpits; we may preach in theirs—at least I think so. A Protestant Episcopal paper published in the West and called The Living Church would object to this and deceive many. I would like to know just where the official claim of the Episcopal Chuch justifies itself. What are the evidences of it? . . . This is the reason Lyman Abbott, Hugh Black, Dr. Jowett, and Dr. Coffin have not been invited to the pulpit of St. George's; and yet we all agree that St. Paul was the greatest apostle, read him, preach him, teach him as the chief exponent of Christianity, and he was ordained, not by the apostles, but by laymen, if he was ordained at all."

Ten Big Reasons Why

Bethany Graded Lessons are being adopted by so many of the best schools among Disciples

1. There is more to them—at least a third more—than is contained in any other series.
2. They are rich, vital and full of suggestion to teacher and pupil.
3. They are free from the sectarian spirit.
4. They are soundly and fervently evangelical.
5. They are truly artistic in all their illustrations.
6. They are printed on better paper with better binding and in better taste than any other series.
7. Every lesson writer is an expert of international reputation.
8. They are a monument to the modern spirit of unity —several leading denominations have co-operated to produce them and are now using them.
9. The Disciples possess full editorial rights, through the editor, Charles Clayton Morrison.
10. Every Disciple school that uses them participates in and promotes a great Christian union enterprise.

SEND FOR RETURNABLE SAMPLES.

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

EDITORIAL

SHALL RELIGION BE NARROW?

THE man outside the church in many communities makes his chief complaint against that organization that it is too narrow. In some cases he means by this the restriction which comes from the preaching of an ideal life. In such cases, we can feel no sympathy with his plaint. It is to be sadly confessed, however, that there is some ground for a charge of narrowness.

The ethical teaching of many churches is so out of proportion that peccadillos are made into monstrous sins and the real evil of the community goes unrebuked. Our puritan tradition has given us all a squint when we look at the amusement question. We are always nervous lest our amusements should prove to be sinful. When the Young Men's Christian Association puts in a billiard table, there is sure to be found some timid soul who fears that the Association has become a side-door of the gambling hell. The church that provides socials for its young people is suspected of being worldly.

In the doctrinal attitudes of many churches there is also a certain narrowness of outlook which is hindering their development. Our world is but little tolerant of dogmatism anywhere. It is especially antagonistic to dogmatism in religion.

Yet churches seem prone to develop little "isms." Preachers sometimes have fads which are presented in season and out of season. Whether it is the second coming, or faith healing, or any other kind of special interest, there is lack of balance and proportion in the witness of that pulpit. Such preaching is called narrow.

It is to be admitted that there is intensity in narrowness. The smaller the bottom an inverted pyramid rests on, the greater the pressure to the square inch, but also the greater the danger of its being upset by any chance gust of wind. Religion cannot afford to gain intensity at the expense of solidity.

Religion is the broadest of all human interests. It undertakes to give meaning to them all. To interpret it otherwise is to misinterpret it.

A MISSIONARY CHALLENGE.

NEVER in the history of the Disciples have we been given a missionary challenge like that coming from the committee continuing the work of the Panama Congress. We are asked to take charge of important sections of Latin America and to that end we are to furnish in the near future a force of forty missionaries.

It has been wise for the Christian Woman's Board of Missions to invite the Foreign Christian Missionary Society to co-operate in carrying out this assignment. It will tax the present resources of the Disciples heavily to make good in covering the great field that has been given to them.

The situation calls for the very best trained men and women among us. The missionaries who are to be sent out will sometimes be the advisers of presidents and government officials. They will be called on to direct educational enterprises. They must have a vision of what the proper evolution of Latin America is. No individualist in religion with a program of saving souls entirely as individuals, can hope to succeed.

Probably the men and women will be found before the funds are secured. This is not because we are poor. It is because we are still in the infancy of our missionary interest. Older communions are showing us how to give, by marvelous exhibitions of self-sacrifice. The Disciples of Christ have not many first rank capitalists but they have thousands and thousands of people who in their communities are known as well-to-do. These are to be taught to consecrate their resources to the building up of a better world.

Meanwhile we can all help by making this great challenge the topic of our religious conversation, and the interest which we take to God in prayer. We can only hope to succeed in this great forward movement when the rank and file of the church are well instructed in the new duty which is laid upon us.

THE MISTAKES OF MOSES.

ONCE religious people were being challenged by a lecture of Robert G. Ingersoll on "The Mistakes of Moses." No one is delivering that lecture now. The much-abused higher criticism has taken all the wind out of that bubble.

Of course Moses made mistakes. If the Old Testament means anything at all, it is the record of the religious development of a section of the race. That development is the more interesting because in many ways it outlines the path of progress for every race of men in the world.

A theologian with no sense of historic development, no sense of religious evolution, has every kind of trouble defending the Old Testament. A man that recognizes progress in religious knowledge, is rid at once of his troubles. Suppose we do find human sacrifice in the Bible. It stands at the beginning of the process, not at the end. Men are "hung up before the Lord" under the mistaken idea that Jahweh would be pleased and placated by such actions. We know now that the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ was never pleased with such methods of dealing with offenders.

The trouble the Bible has had in the past is that a definition was imposed upon it from without. Theologians had argued a priori that God ought to have given us such and such a book. Since he should have done so, he did. With certain theories of inspiration, with certain notions about a level Bible, the theologian exposed the faith of a generation to the merciless shafts of the unbeliever. Perhaps Ingersoll wrought better than he knew. We may come to see at last that he has been used to scourge us out of the untenable absurdities of an outgrown theological system.

Seen from the juster angle of universal history, the Old Testament men with their seeming faults (judged from our modern viewpoint) become noble souls which aspired ever to new light and truth. What they failed to do is not so important as what they accomplished.

THE PILGRIM TERCENTENARY.

NEXT year there will be a celebration of three hundred years of history since the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. There is to be a proper recognition of this by the Congregational denomination and in addition the state of Massachusetts has taken in hand the matter of a proper celebration.

Perhaps we were in danger for a while of having another world's fair. It has been characteristic of American life that we have chosen to celebrate our big national events by an exhibition of the biggest pumpkins we can raise! This danger in Massachusetts will be averted, for New England is the home of the traditions of idealism.

Of course there are some things to be said for the material things of New England. While the farms are poor, the inventive genius of that section has contributed much to the history of the race. It is not thus, however, that we best honor the Pilgrims.

The Pilgrims were men and women who came here with no illusions as to the kind of country they entered. They were not seeking corn, but the opportunity to pray. Their first winter would have convinced them all of the difficult industrial task ahead. In spite of famine and death, the brave company persevered in their quest.

New England's greatest contribution to the world has been in its thinkers. It seems impossible to recognize properly the brilliant men who have brought glory to Puritan history. The poets such as Lowell, Longfellow and Whittier have wrought to give America a place in universal literature. Novelists such as Hawthorne have given permanent form to New England tradition and depicted faithfully the New England conscience. Thinkers such as Emerson and Channing have made their contribution to religion and life.

If there is to be a tercentenary, let it be a celebration of the spiritual heroes of this great section of our country. It is in their achievements that the Pilgrim fathers have been most honored.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

A PRIMARY election has just been held in Illinois. The primary law which was passed a few years ago was regarded as a great step forward in the cleansing of politics. Perhaps every man in Illinois would admit a measure of disappointment with reference to its actual operation.

It is commonly rumored that the contest for governor of this great state has cost two millions of dollars and there is still another contest ahead before any man has won. How is such expenditure justified? The citizen who looks up the expenses of the state will find special appropriations of three thousand dollars per annum to house-clean the governor's house of forty rooms. He will find that it costs similarly absurd sums for mowing the lawn and doing the other jobs around the place. The co-operation of venal politicians makes the position of governor one which justifies a two million dollar primary campaign.

In the recent campaign, the church has shown its political inefficiency by a divided testimony. An acceptable candidate for governor pledged himself to the dry cause and was so announced by the Anti-Saloon League. The Rev. Johnston Myers circularized the state with a letter in behalf of a candidate who was admittedly the wettest aspirant for the office in his party. The wet man won.

In a fight against the Hon. Mr. Mann, minority leader of the House of Representatives, a preacher, Rev. Melbourne P. Boynton, was made a candidate. The vote recorded against the preacher candidate was overwhelming.

The lesson of the primary election is that the uplift forces of the community are badly organized and badly led. It is not a preacher's job to lead in the fight against undesirable political leaders. It is a job for [illegible] politicians with Christian ideals. Preachers have something to do with the process of giving such men to the world. We need to make politics a respectable profession for men with ideals.

MAKING RELIGION ATTRACTIVE.

WITHOUT taking away the sanctity of religion, it may be made more interesting. Sermons are often unspeakably dull, although not because of that any more truthful or biblical. The writers on our great magazines have mastered the art of securing and holding the attention of the reader. Why should the sermon not have a "surprise finish" for which the hearers will wait with deep interest?

There is something slipshod about some churches. We do not refer chiefly to their ill-kept grounds and dusty pews. We are not thinking of the window-light which should have been put in last year. We are thinking of the weary way in which the pastor makes his calls, in no house seeming like an apostle of a conquering faith. We speak of the finances always being behind. There is the music that drags, and the Sunday-school ever operating with supply teachers.

Religion really has a right to a better presentation. It need not ever be dressed in the somber black. Give it all the bright colors that God has given his world.

A GOOD TURN EVERY DAY.

THE Boy Scouts have as a part of their fundamental law the obligation "to do a good turn every day."

At first a boy finds this difficult to remember, and more difficult still to discover the good turn. He sometimes comes to older people for advice and suggestions. When he has caught the spirit of the practice, the world is full of good turns waiting to be done.

He soon discovers that doing a good turn is like charity, it is thrice blest. He receives more joy in conferring a kindness than any one possibly could in receiving it.

The idea is essentially religious. It breathes the delicate aroma of the Golden Rule. It is saturated with the concentrated essence of "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." If everyone in our world could with "Polyanna" "play the game," live gladly and happily and scatter kind deeds along life's pathway, our world might soon lose half her sorrows.

CHAIN PRAYER AGAIN.

A NEW epidemic of chain prayer has broken out. The thing comes through the mail with poor hand-writing and miserable spelling. Sometimes there is a threat in it for those who fail to conform to the request. These are being thrown out of the mail by the postal authorities when detected. Others promise some kind of peculiar blessing if the prayer is persisted in for a time and sent to others.

From the standpoint of religion, this descends to the level of magic. The hoodoos of the negroes are not different from the threat that comes with the chain prayer. A negro maiden asserted that a certain colored swain had stolen her handkerchief. When asked for the basis of her charge she stated that if a negro man stole a girl's handkerchief and wrapped it around a rooster and buried him alive the girl would never be able to resist his courtship [illegible] irresistibly drawn to the young man [illegible]

Union Churches

Christian Union in a Baptist Church

DISCIPLES of Christ, who recognize spiritual kinship with all who are seeking the practice of Christian Union, will be interested in the efforts of the First Baptist Church of Marley, Ill., to harmonize the traditional Baptist practice with the modern demand for a more comprehensive Christian fellowship. This church was organized in 1832 as a regular Baptist church. In 1914 it found itself in that lethargic condition which is so common to rural and village churches. For many years it had manifested no vital religious life. No baptisms had been recorded since 1908. The resident membership had decreased through death and removal until there were left in the community only about thirty members, several of whom were inactive. A canvass of the community showed that of its 97 families, 92 were of the Protestant faith, many of whom had no local church relations, whatsoever. The greater part of these unattached Christians were members of the Lutheran church, although Methodists and Congregationalists were largely represented. Many of these people, especially of the younger generation, attended the Baptist church, supporting it financially as well as taking active part in its Sunday-school, Young People's Society and Missionary classes.

Facing the above facts, this church, through its official board, set itself to the task of finding some way whereby the spiritual interests of the entire community might be provided for. It was generally known that a number of people would unite with the church provided they might do so by presenting letters from their respective churches, but they were not ready to unite with any church which would not heartily recognize their status as Christians.. A pamphlet issued by the official board in explanation of its action states the matter succinctly as follows:

"As a church we believed that the Christian life, in its essentials, is nothing less than the human expression of the Divine life in character and conduct. That the Divine life was expressing itself as fully in the character and conduct of many of our neighbors as in the membership of our own church was perfectly evident, even though some of them had never been immersed. Nor did we believe that the church was ever intended to be an end in itself. Our conception of the church is that it is a means to a greater end than itself, viz., the Kingdom of God. And no intelligent Baptist would for a moment claim that baptism is the door of entrance into the Kingdom of God. After much discussion the official board voted to recommend to the church the following propositions: (1) To receive members from other denominational churches upon their letters or Christian experience just as we do from churches of our own denomination. But as a church we would practice immersion only. (2) To extend an invitation to all Christians of whatever name to the communion table. (3) To grant letters of dismission from our church to any Christian church. (4) To adopt a beautiful ceremony of infant dedication whereby the mother may bring her child to the Master's feet and seek his blessing upon it as did the mothers of old. These recommendations were read to the church the following Sunday and announcement made that a month would be given for their consideration and for prayer for Divine leadership in the matter of adopting them or rejecting them as the case might be. Each measure was voted on separately and with the result that no more than two votes were cast against any one of the propositions. In other words, it was practically unanimous—the two dissenting voices being non-resident members.

* * *

"A month later a Membership Day was held and twelve of the best people of the community came asking for membership—three for baptism and nine by letter and statement. From time to time other membership days were announced and during the next few months twenty-six members in all were received—more than 80 per cent increase in membership. But the increase in membership tells only a part of the story. Interest along every line was awakened. Congregations grew. Interest in religious and social duties was increased. The missionary society enjoyed its share of renewed interest, as did also the Brotherhood, the Sunday-school and the Christian Endeavor. A sound, healthful, life-giving Christian spirit grew up throughout the community and manifested itself in various ways. More personal work was done in a few months' time than had been done in years before."

Here follows an interesting account of the way in which the earnest effort of this Baptist church to realize the prayer of Jesus, "that they all may be one" was received by sister churches of the Baptist denomination. "Our associational letter was prepared as usual—with a much better report than ever before—and sent to the association, only to be rejected—rejected because we had followed the Divine leadership as the Spirit led us to see our duty. We believe that we have done the only wise thing for our community and church. We have not sought to impose our views of church membership upon other churches. We have regarded the entire matter as one of internal and local concern. It is to be regretted that some of the brethren in the association are too short-sighted to distinguish between the letter and the spirit of Jesus. We do not question the right of the association (even though we do question its wisdom) to exclude our church. The thing against which we protest is the undemocratic and unchristian way in which our church was treated. It was perfectly evident (and so admitted by one opposed to us) that even the moderator himself was unwilling to give us a 'square deal.' For forty minutes the association debated in separate factions as to whether the Marley church should have five minutes in which to defend itself. This being declined for very evident reasons, twenty minutes more were spent in discussion as to whether Marley should be heard at all. Finally, the pitiful allowance of fifteen minutes was reluctantly granted or acquiesced in. All too inadequately a few of the many facts were touched upon in the brief time allotted. It was really ridiculous to see the disorder and the lack of correct parliamentary usage prevail in a meeting where both intelligence and Godliness were supposed to sit enthroned.

"Our church, after hearing the action of the association, is more convinced than ever that we are more Baptistic than some of the leaders. Whether these brethren were afraid for the rank and file of the Baptists to hear an open discussion of the action of our church to take back to their churches is, of course, unknown, but that impression was certainly left upon more than one who was. present. When one member of the committee on counsel presented a minority report, recommending that our church have the privilege of presenting its point of view to specially appointed messengers who should come in the name of the association and report to the association at its next meeting, it was voted down. But still, another motion was passed which amounts practically to the same thing after our church had been excluded. We shall be glad to have any intelligent, unbiased committee of Christian men come to our church at any time that may be agreed upon to ascertain the facts—all the facts—in the situation. But that our church can be coerced into a conformity that means death for itself and stagnation for our entire community is inconceivable. When the association is ready to re-admit us on our present policy we shall be glad to return. Until such a time, we have pledged ourselves anew and unanimously to stand by what the church has done and to continue to follow the Divine leadership, as in the past. It was a beautiful sight to see the unanimity of our people when the church had heard a full and fair pres-

(Continued on page 16.)

Disciples Table Talk

General Convention of the Disciples of Christ

Des Moines, Iowa, October 9-15

Monday, October 9.

Evening.

Devotional Service—First Vice-President, Edgar DeWitt Jones, presiding.

Prayer—Peter Ainslie.

Address of Welcome—Governor George W. Clarke, Iowa.

Response and President's Address—W. F. Richardson, Kansas City.

* * *

CHRISTIAN WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Tuesday, October 10.

Morning.

Opening Service—Mrs. A. M. Haggard.

Review and Outlook:

President's Message—Mrs. Anna Robinson Atwater.

Our Literature; Interdenominational Interests—Mrs. Effie L. Cunningham.

Development and Finance—Mrs. J. McDaniel Stearns.

Treasurer's Report—Miss Mary J. Judson.

Young People's Work—Mrs. Ellie K. Payne.

Devotional Period—Dr. Arthur Braden.

Address—"Results of Our Negro Work," J. B. Lehman.

Address—"India," W. E. Gordon.

Afternoon.

Symposium: Woman's Privilege and Duty as Related:

1. To Self-Development—Mrs. Louise Loos Campbell, Kentucky.
2. To the Home—Mrs. O. W. Lawrence, Missouri.
3. To the Home Church—Miss Mary A. Lyons, Ohio.
4. To the World's Womanhood—Mrs. Lowell C. McPherson, New York.
5. To World Evangelism—Mrs. C. G. Titus, California.

Report of Nominating Committee.

Devotional Period—Dr. W. C. Morro.

Messages from the Missionaries.

"Iowa's Hour."

Evening.

Address—"The Panama Conference," S. G. Inman.

Address—"The Regional Conference in South America," President C. T. Paul.

* * *

FOREIGN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Wednesday, October 11.

Morning.

Address—"The World Situation," W. A. Shullenberger, Iowa.

Address—"Our Increasing Resources," L. E. Brown, Indiana.

Address—"Our Responsibility Growing Out of the Work Already Done," W. C. Bower, Kentucky.

Address—"The Life and Work of F. E. Meigs, Mrs. Frank Garrett, James Ware and Dr. James Butchart," Earle Wilfley, District of Columbia.

Period of Intercession—Led by J. E. Pounds, Ohio.

Afternoon.

Addresses on "Medical Missions," Dr. E. I. Osgood, China; Dr. W. N. Lemmon, Philippines, Dr. L. F. Jaggard, Africa.

Symposium on "Laymen and Foreign Missions."—Led by R. A. Doan.

Evening.

Moving Pictures Showing the Work on the Field.

An Hour with the Missionaries.

* * *

AMERICAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY AND BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Thursday October 12.

Morning.

Devotional Period—Led by W. M. Baker, Marshalltown.

A. C. M. S. Business—Reports of Committees on Time and Place, Prayer Meeting Topics for 1917, etc.

Introduction of Pioneers, Missionaries and Workers.

Report of Board of Church Extension—Geo. W. Muckley, Secretary.

Church Extension Address—"The House Made With Hands," A. B. Philputt, Indianapolis.

Report of Board of A. C. M. S.

Map Survey of American Fields—Grant K. Lewis, Secretary.

The Look Forward—F. W. Burnham, President.

Afternoon.

Devotional Period—Led by John Christopherson, Kentucky.

Conference on the Rural Church—Alva W. Taylor, Secretary.

"Social and Rural Life Problems of the Disciples of Christ," Alva W. Taylor, Columbia, Mo.

Five Minute Messages:

1. "The Rural Church's Contribution to the Ministry and Missionary Force," O. L. Smith, Wellington, Kan.
2. "The Rural Church's Contribution to the City Church," O. F. Jordan, Evanston, Ill.
3. "The Rural Church and the Resident Pastor," J. H. Jones, Springfield, Mo.
4. "Financing the Rural Church," H. H. Peters, Bloomington, Ill.
5. "The Rural Church and Neighborhood Welfare," Arthur Dillinger, Altoona, Ia.

Summary.

Afternoon.

Conference on Immigration—Finis S. Idleman, Secretary.

Report of Commission on Foreign Relation—M. M. Amunson, Secretary.

Ten Minute Addresses:

1. "The Problem Stated," Dr. P. L. Prentice, Chicago.
2. "The Factors at Work," Prof. F. E. Lumley, Indianapolis.
3. "The Immediate Duty of the Disciples," F. D. Butchart, Cleveland.

Report of the Commission on Immigration.

Evening.

Devotional Period—Led by H. H. Harmon, Lincoln, Neb.

Address, "America and the Next Religious Awakening," Evangelist E. E. Violett.

National Benevolent Association Address—"The Fate of the Fatherless in the Faith of the Fathers," Milo Atkinson, Memphis, Tenn.

* * *

BIBLE-SCHOOL AND BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF.

Friday, October 13.

Morning.

Devotional—Leader, W. H. McLain, Ohio.

The Work of the Year:

Elementary—Miss Lewis.

Secondary—Miss Maus.

Adult—Mr Clark.

General Report—Mr. Hopkins.

A Symposium of Church Service Through the Bible-school:

"Serving a Community," C. M. Fillmore, Indiana.

"Serving a Country," C. L. Goodnight, Pennsylvania.

"Serving a State," David H. Owen, Kansas.

"Serving a Neglected Race," P. H. Moss, Mississippi.

"Serving the Last Frontier," W. A. Moore, Washington.

Supplemental Reports and Business Session.

"The Work of the Department," C. R. Stauffer, Ohio.

Ministerial Relief Address, W. H. Book, Columbus, Ohio.

Afternoon.

Board of Ministerial Relief, Annual Report, W. R. Warren, Secretary.

MEN AND MILLIONS SESSION.

Addresses: Adequate Giving. Stewardship. An Adequate Budget. Outstanding Features of the Every Member Canvass Achievements. Conference on Essentials of Every Member Canvass.

Evening.

A. McLean, Presiding.

Achievements of the Movement—A. E. Cory.

The Men and Millions Movement and the Disciples of Christ—Judge F. A. Henry.

The Men and Millions Movement and the World—J. Campbell White.

Closing Period of Intercession—R. H. Miller.

Business Session.

* * *

Saturday, October 14.

Morning.

NATIONAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

R. A. Long, presiding.

The Treasurer's Report—Lee W. Grant.

Report of the Board—J. H. Mohorter.

Report of the Nominating Committee.

THE AMERICAN TEMPERANCE BOARD.

David H. Shields, president of the Board, presiding.

Report of National Secretary, L. E. Sellers.

Address—Rev. P. A. Baker, D.D., Superintendent Anti-Saloon League of America.

Afternoon.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

President's Report—R. H. Crossfield.

Financial Status and Needs of our Colleges—Prof. Charles E. Underwood.

"The Student Situation in Our Colleges"—Pres. J. S. Serena.

"An Educational Conscience Among the Disciples."—Prof. Herbert Martin.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AND BIBLE SCHOOL.

Evening.

Claude E. Hill, National President, presiding.

Devotional Service—Frank Lowe, Jr., Kansas City, Mo.

QUICK! Year Ends September 30th. $8,508 For God's Veterans Must Be Received By Then Board of Ministerial Relief, 120 E. Market Street Indianapolis Ind.

Report of National Board of Christian Endeavor—Austin Hunter, President, Chicago, Ill.

Address—Dr Ira E. Landrith, Boston, Mass.

Bible-school Address—"The Sunday School as an Asset of the Church," Dr. Edward Blake, Cor. Secy. of the Board of Sunday Schools of the M. E. Church.

* * *

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 15.

Morning.

Demonstration Bible-school at the Coliseum.

Lesson taught, "The Appeal of Caesar," Acts 25. Fred D. Kershner, Missouri.

Worship and Preaching at the Coliseum.

The Convention Sermon—B. A. Abbott, St. Louis, Mo.

Afternoon.

Communion Service. Conducted by Ministers and Elders and Deacons of Des Moines.

The Lord's Supper.

Offering for Ministerial Relief.

(The doors will be closed at 3:10 and remain closed until the end of the service.)

Evening.

Great Christian Endeavor Prayer Meeting—Led by Frank M. Lowe, Jr., and participated in by all Christian Endeavor Societies of Des Moines.

COMMISSION OF CHRISTIAN UNION.

A Statement of the Work Peter Ainslie.

Address—"Christian Union"—Dr. Shailer Mathews, President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Evening.

GENERAL CONVENTION OF CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

Closing Session.

W. F. Richardson, President, Presiding.

1. Introduction of Chairmen of Des Moines Committee.
2. Introduction of officers elect of the Convention.
3. "World Voices" uttered through,

The American Christian Missionary Society.

The Foreign Christian Missionary Society, Bert Wilson.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions, Mrs. Anna R. Atwater.

The National Benevolent Association, J. H. Mohorter.

The Board of Ministerial Relief, W. R. Warren.

The American Temperance Board, Robert Sellers.

The Board of Church Extension, G. W. Muckley.

The Board of Education, H. O. Pritchard.

The National Board of Christian Endeavor.

The Council of Christian Union, Peter Ainslie.

The Men and Millions Movement, R. H Miller.

4. Response from the General Convention, W. F. Richardson.
5. Closing Song, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."
6. Prayer of Consecration and Appeal, Charles S. Medbury.

The Disciples Churches of Des Moines

THE CENTRAL CHURCH OF CHRIST.

A Mission of the A. C. M. S. Up to 1865.

The Central church is the Mother Church in Des Moines It was organized in 1860 with a membership of twenty. However, previous to this for some three years, services had been held in Des Moines by our pioneer preachers: Peter T. Russell, Aaron Chatterton, James P. Roach, George T. Carpenter and others. Peter T. Russell and George T. Carpenter were both in the employ of the American Christian Missionary Society. Peter T. Russell organized the church and he and James P. Roach preached for it occasionally until May, 1864, when James E. Gaston was called as the first regular pastor. Even then it was a mission point, and the brethren throughout the state assisted us in building our first church building which stood on Cherry Street, south of the Court House, (where now stands the Union Station) which was finished in 1865.

Rev. W. A. Shullenberger.

The Central church has had a splendid line of pastors: James E. Gaston, A. I. Hobbs, John Encel, John C. Hay, John W. Monsor, D. R. Lucas, B. J. Radford, A. P. Cobb, H. O, Breeden, Finis Idleman and now W. A. Shullenberger.

The present church building was dedicated in 1890 and was at the time considered the best one in our Brotherhood. The National Convention met with us that year.

The Central church has had some very remarkable evangelistic meetings. The first one was held by D. R. Lucas in 1875, before his coming as our pastor: then Prof. Black in 1888 with 246 additions; then Updike and Easton with 550 additions and Scoville with 306 additions. The Central Church has always been evangelistic, and especially during the pastorate of D. R. Lucas, H. O. Breeden and Finis Idleman the growth has been steady. During Brother Idleman's pastorate there were accessions at nearly every service.

Central Church established a record for long pastorates when Dr. H. O. Breeden remained with us over twenty-one years.

The Central Church was the first church among us to organize an auxiliary of the C. W. B. M. This was during Brother John C. Hay's pastorate.

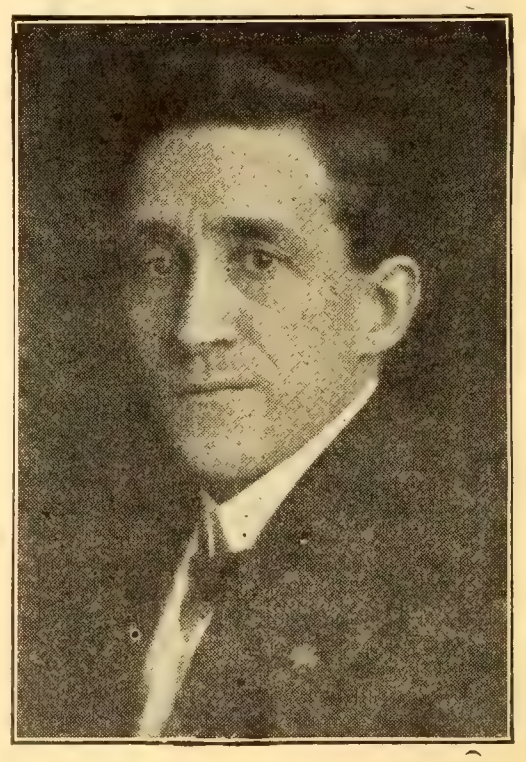
The Central Church established a church paper, the Christian Worker, in 1887 which has been published regularly every since, being now in its 30th volume.

The Central Church was the first to adopt the Living Link idea, when they sent H. H. Guy as their "pastor in Japan" in 1893.

In 1885 a church was organized in East Des Moines taking eighty-five members of Central. In 1888 over three hundred took their membership from Central to organize University Church; and in addition to this it has helped to establish the nine other churches in Des Moines. It has seen the small band of charter members of twenty away back in 1860 grow to near 12,000 members with twelve well equipped churches.

Members of the Central Church were among the prime movers in the establishing of Drake University, and have always had its interests at heart and have had a voice in its management.

During the last nine years of Dr. Idleman's pastorate, Central Church has undergone some changes. Realizing that we were face to face with the down-town proposition, we have endeavored to make it institutional in many ways, working especially with the young people until it has perhaps the largest body of young people of any church in the country. We have Mrs. Dessa Carlton, our Assistant Pastor, a most efficient worker, with these young folks.



Realizing the need of more room, Central Church is now undergoing a remodeling, and will be in splendid condition to receive the Disciples when they come to Des Moines to attend the great International Convention.

We now have in Brother W. A. Shullenberger a rare leader, a hard worker, a brilliant young man and a product of Iowa, having graduated from Drake University with honors in 1904, and after several years of successful work in Missouri he returns to the scenes of his schooldays, and we predict for the Central Church remarkable growth under his pastorate, and one that will reflect credit upon the Brotherhood at large and especially upon Drake Uuniversity, his Alma Mater.

* * *

UNIVERSITY PLACE CHURCH

The University Place Church of Christ is the outgrowth of a Sunday-school organized in the Chapel of Drake University in 1881. Later the organization held evening service in the chapel and the Sunday-school and evening service culminated in 1888 in the organization of the present church. The church from the beginning was a large organization as three hundred and four members withdrew their letters from the Central Church and placed them with the new venture. More than a score of these charter members still are active in the work of the organization. In the days before the organization of the church the men who served the congregation as pastors or leaders were Chancellor Carpenter, of the University, and Brethren Gaston, Dunshee, McCannon and Dungan.

Rev. Charles S. Medbury.

D. R. Dungan, of the teaching force of the University was the first pastor of the new organization. He was followed by H. B. Davis, J. B. Vawter, E. M. Todd, I. N. McCash, while the present pastor, enjoying his eleventh year as the leader of the church, is Charles S. Medbury. It is interesting to note that the four men whose combined pastorates almost complete the life of the church still are alive; D. R. Dungan, at Lomita, Cal., Earl M. Todd, as President of Christian University at Canton, and I. N. McCash, as President of Phillips University at Enid. Mr. Davis and Mr. Vawter served but a short time, the combined pastorate being less than a year.

The pastorates of Dr. I. N. McCash and of Dr. Charles S. Medbury extend over more than twenty-one years of the life of the church, and it is in this time that the church has taken its large place not only in the life of Des Moines but in the life of the brotherhood in the United States. Dr. McCash brought to the church exceptional pastoral qualifications. The membership increased by leaps and bounds, the church raised money to pay off its indebtedness and to complete the structure, which towards the close of his pastorate proved inadequate for the membership of the church. Dr. McCash presented his resignation in 1903 because of physical inability to continue the work he had been doing. The name of Charles S. Medbury was laid before the official board as the man most likely to make a success of the leadership of the church, and a call was extended before the end of the year.

Dr. Medbury commenced his work in 1904, and under his ministry the large auditorium has been builded, and a mammoth organ installed; while the life of the church in every way has kept pace with the physical advancement. Dr. Medbury in the almost twelve years he has been pastor of the church has become one of the leaders of the thought of the brotherhood, was president of the Centennial Convention at Pittsburg, the largest church gathering of recent years, while each summer he finds time to go out in the chautauqua field preaching a higher life and a higher level of living to all the people. During the last year Clarence N. Bigelow was called to the position of associate pastor, a position he is filling with exceptional ability.

* * *

Following his return from the chautauqua field this summer Dr. Medbury wrote a characteristic statement of the attitude of the University Church toward the Convention, an invitation in reality for the interest of every visitor to the Convention. The statement follows:

"The University Church is enthusiastically committed to the Convention plans. I have special joy in the thought of the Brotherhood noting the work of Drake University, around which great institution our people have colonized in the recent years. By no manner of means all has been attained that could be wished, and yet for the few years of the history of the Church and University it is felt that the showing will be to the joy of all visitors.

"The Church itself extends to all of our people its greeting of heartfelt welcome. It wants to be used. We are happy in our great auditorium and want it to be a thing of joy to those within our gates. We are sorry that we have not yet the great neighborhood house that provides for institutional and Bible School work, standing on the corner where the old building is. But we have the dream of that and invite suggestions as to the best possible equipment for work along the lines of religious education. It is in our hearts to establish here finally an experiment station or laboratory of Christian activity. With these lines of Church activity linked with what the University itself is doing, we believe an almost ideal condition can be worked out ultimately. Visitors are urged to give us suggestions as to the very best way to build the plant of which we are dreaming across from the campus and immediately adjoining our ideal auditorium.

"The hearts and homes of our people are opened cordially to the incoming delegates. We earnestly hope and pray that there may be joyful uplift for every life in the coming Convention in Des Moines."

(Other churches will be treated next week.)

CHEER FOR THE SUPREME EFFORT.

September 12 the receipts for Ministerial Pensions to a total of $34,787.34, of which $3,361.91 is interest on the Permanent Fund and $31,425.43 applies on the 20 per cent proposition. This wins the last $6,000 of that magnificent gift and makes a total of $27,377.51 which the one man will have given within the five years.

There is yet time for every church and individual to have a share in this sacred fellowship. Everything mailed on or before the 30th of September will be counted on this year's record.

Not by the restrictions of the donors in all cases, but by the wise custom of the Board, receipts from estates and annuities are added to the Permanent Fund. So over $12,000 of the splendid total receipts to date must go into perpetual service for God's Veterans and are not available for immediate use. This leaves us in absolute and present need of $8,508 from churches, Bible-schools and individuals to square up the accounts for the year.

Every one who takes a part in this supreme effort of this supreme fellowship may count himself honored by the linking of himself with those who are nearest the Throne. Whether one dollar or one thousand is your share, do not deny yourself by forgetting Christ's Heroes. Join the chorus of the brotherhood, "WE WILL NOT FORGET."

Board of Ministerial Relief,
120 E. Market St., W. R. Warren.
Indianapolis, Ind. Secretary.

A Distinctive Reason

What is the chief reason for the superiority of Royal Baking Powder?

There are several good reasons, but there is one which distinguishes Royal from other baking powders.

This reason, which every woman should know, is that Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, which comes from grapes. This means a healthful fruit origin. It means natural food as distinguished from mineral substitutes used in other baking powders.

There is no alum nor phosphate in Royal Baking Powder.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Impressions of the Illinois Convention

By Orvis Fairlee Jordan.

PEORIA is a city of contrasts. The leading whisky city of the United States is also the home of some leading prohibitionists. This city was once the home of Robert Ingersoll, the agnostic orator, and his secularist attitude toward life is written on many things. Yet it is said that a Y. M. C. A. was built on the site of Ingersoll's old home, and the city has an abundance of churches. On the river banks are huts hardly to be matched for squalor. Yet the social spirit seems abroad for there are numerous beautiful parks and conveniences for the people. There are hellholes full of nameless sin and there are reformers who hunt the beast day and night. Peoria is proud to be the former home of some great men, prominent among whom is President Hibben of Princeton University.

The Disciples have two churches and a mission in Peoria, Central church, Howett Street church and West Bluff chapel. The convention was held in Central church.

The difficulties of doing church work in such a city were well illustrated by the small attendance of local people at the convention. College presidents, famous missionaries, eloquent preachers alike failed to draw the blasé city dweller to the sanctuary in large numbers even in the evening sessions.

The church has not lost its sense of good old Illinois hospitality, however, for more homes were opened than were needed for the occasion. The generous hospitality of these people had a shadow cast over it by an unusual piece of exploitation. For the first time in Illinois history the space for booths in the basement was rented at a round figure and the money collected from Eureka College, the C. W. B. M. and the publishing houses by the pastor for the local church, after these organizations had spent money generously in other ways to make the convention interesting. Even the college banquet was announced as an occasion to help out the local Aid Society, much to the annoyance of those good ladies. Officials of the missionary society will endeavor to discourage any such practice in the future, should it by any chance develop again.

The convention opened with an address by Rev. S. G. Inman, former Disciple missionary in Mexico, and now secretary of the Continuation Committee of the Latin America Congress. He spoke the first evening on the whole task from an interdenominational viewpoint and the next afternoon on the Disciples' part in Latin America. I would go to Peoria again to hear two more such addresses. They helped to determine the atmosphere of the whole convention. When one remembers that a few years ago Mr. Inman was an obscure missionary hidden away in a forgotten country, and was there discovered by great interdenominational leaders, it is apparent that genius will find its reward under any conditions.

Mr. Inman pointed out the sin of failing to co-operate in Christian work. He did not fail to show to his Disciple audience that an interdenominational exchange of members on the foreign field was demanded. He went further and expressed a hope that such comity might at last prevail in Home missions. If there was no applause, there was no protest. He stirred something too deep in our souls for applause.

He told of the slogan once on a Methodist Home mission letter-head. "A Methodist church in every hamlet in the United States." The new spirit has removed this slogan.

* * *

The Disciples were challenged by a demand for forty new missionaries for Latin America. Four states of northeastern Mexico are assigned to the exclusive care of the Disciples, the southern Presbyterians retiring to make this possible. Northern Argentina and Paraguay are also assigned to the Disciples exclusively. This territory has eighty-five per cent of Indian population which is still mostly heathen. The F. C. M. S. is being invited to join the C. W. B. M. in cultivating the territory, but in any case the women will go forward heroically to meet the needs of their assignment.

Chicago people were delighted to see Mrs. E. M. Bowman honored with a place on the program. She reported her trip to India where she visited our missions. The Bowmans have been the tireless patrons of all good things in Chicago and their new enterprises in mission work, so unostentatiously begun, will make them known and loved throughout Discipledom.

Dr. C. G. Clark, pastor of the First Congregational church of Peoria, delivered the welcome address to the convention of the I. C. M. S. on Tuesday night. He has been leading the reform forces of the city in a fight for law enforcement. He told us that he did not care how people were baptized or how often they observed the communion, but he could join us in our missionary interest which he declared to be of the very essence of Christianity.

Rev. Edgar D. Jones delivered the president's address. His gracious presence and his beautiful literary style helped to adorn a plea for "togetherness" among the Disciples of Illinois.

The business sessions of the I. C. M. S. showed how incompetent has been the management of state affairs. A history of Illinois churches written at the request of a state convention has been published by the Standard Publishing Company. The society has a small warehouse full of unsold books and a debt of thirteen hundred dollars on the deal. Three thousand more is a debt on general administration. But for the Bondurant legacy, the society would be a hopeless bankrupt.

* * *

Into this situation comes Rev. Harry H. Peters as the new secretary. He has held good pastorates in various sections of the state. He did a great work in getting Eureka College on the up-grade. He comes now to another debt-ridden situation. He declares himself a theological independent. He proposes to visit every church in the state as fast as time will permit. No one has ever driven him with a blind bridle. He will either have his chance to make good or he will quit. He seems providentially raised up for a time like this.

The business of the convention was quiet and routine but for one exception. A nominating committee of five, recognized by all as predominantly conservative in character, brought in a unanimous report for Dr. E. S. Ames as president. Rev. N. S. Haynes, retired pastor of Decatur, and author of "Jesus as a Controversialist," got up and spoke his mind on "The Chicago Contingent." Rev. A. P. Cobb, staff writer on the Christian Standard, another retired pastor, seconded a motion of Mr. Haynes to substitute the name of Rev. Homer E. Sala, of Central church, Peoria, for that of Dr. Ames. Rev. Hale made a speech praising Dr. Ames fulsomely, but advising the convention not to accept the report of the committee. A standing vote showed seventy in favor of the substitution and a much smaller number opposed. The majority of a convention with over 500 enrolment did not vote at all.

After the session, there was loud indignation around the corridors, while Dr. Ames sat on his front porch at Pentwater enjoying a well-earned vacation and unconscious of the little tempest over his personality. He has honors enough in the big world not to miss any. It was the convention which failed to honor itself by choosing one of the foremost scholars the Disciples have ever produced.

It is of no use to be indignant. This is the sheep ethics that has been taught us by a certain type of leader among us. Let us have peace and pleasantness at no matter what cost!

The convention next year goes to Taylorville. Two years hence there will be a centennial celebration of Illinois' admission as a state.

One noon a lot of the delegates went over to Howett Street church where a new $25,000 institutional building is being erected. The pastor is an outstanding character. He is an ex-reporter, a labor unionist, and Grand Chaplain of the Odd Fellows. Few Disciple pastors in Illinois make as many special addresses in a year outside the home city. Rev. F. Lewis Starbuck has proven to be a people's man and everybody was interested in the struggle of his church to come into its own. He was prominent on the reception committee of the convention and was toastmaster of a Eureka banquet that rattled the shingles with college spirit.

Mrs. J. H. Gilliland came to my booth. It is her first convention since the death of her husband, the well-loved leader of Bloomington. "Where are my friends," she asked. "I don't seem to know these people." Then I remembered that in five years nearly every leading pulpit in Illinois had changed its pastor. New voices are heard on every hand. Only a few tall trees of the old landscape have survived.

Who are the new men? I found Union Seminary men who had village charges. The big churches are only beginning to estimate justly the worth of these alert young fellows. Of course, their day is coming soon.

They know the good books. They are ready for Christian union. They are preaching the gospel of our Lord in the language of moderns. As some of us begin to grow older, we take new courage. The progress of the Disciples is real. It is more. It is stupendous. Considering where we were twenty years ago, it excels that of any Christian body in America. I thank God for these men and take courage.

Illinois is one of the best states of our Discipledom. She has proven her abounding liberality in the Men and Millions Movement. She will soon prove she has a head as well as a heart.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES.

—H. A. Denton writes that the Chapman-Alexander evangelistic company has been engaged for a union evangelistic effort by eleven Protestant churches of Galesburg, to be held during the month of October. The new Armory, which is the largest auditorium in the city, will be used for the first time during these meetings. First church, of which Mr. Denton is pastor, is actively in co-operation with the other churches in this movement. This church will begin a follow-up meeting November 1 with R. H. Fife doing the preaching. Mr. Denton is chairman of the publicity work of the union effort.

—W. F. Richardson, of First church, Kansas City, Mo., writes that word has been received in Kansas City of the death of William Bayard Craig, beloved Disciple preacher for many years. His death occurred at San Bernardino, Cal. Further particulars will be published later.

—G. W. Morton, pastor at Beardstown, Ill., was nominated in last week's primaries as the candidate of the Republican party for State Senator. Mr. Morton defeated his opponent by a good majority. The liquor interests fought him fiercely, but he carried the city by nearly 2 to 1. He ran far ahead of any other "dry" candidate.

—The Herbert Moninger Memorial enterprise has been completed, and this endowed Chair of Bible School Pedagogy will be dedicated at Bethany College, September 28 and 29. Among those on the program are: E. A. Cole, E. W. Thornton, P. H. Welshimer, R. M. Hopkins, H. Newton Miller and President T. E. Cramblet, of Bethany. All are cordially invited to attend these exercises.

—Will H. Brown, well known in the Sunday-school field, has been elected president of the California State Sunday-school board.

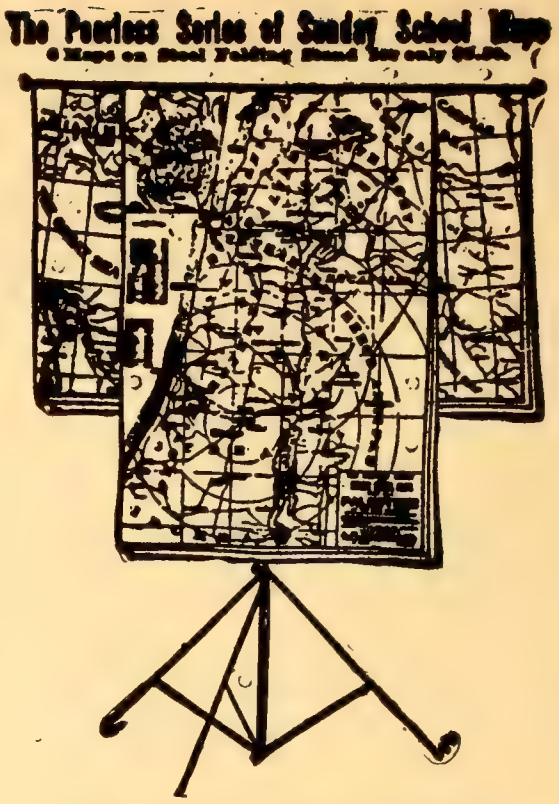
—H. A. Van Winkle, recently called from Tillamook, Ore., to Oakland, Cal., is a graduate of Eugene Bible University.

—The Young Men's Bible-class of the church at Greensburg, Pa., made the excavation for the foundati n of the new building to be erected there.

—Claude J. Miller and wife, of the church at Greeley, Colo., spent their vacation autoing to Yellowstone Park.

—E. L. Powell, of First church, Louisville, preaches the convention sermon at the Kentucky state convention held at Winchester this week. His subject will be "Method and Life."

—About a thousand persons have been added to the membership of Jackson Boulevard church, Chicago, during the seven years' pastorate of Austin Hunter. Mr. Hunter has begun his eighth year in this difficult down-town field. His work has proved remarkably successful at Jackson Boulevard. The Sunday-school has an average attendance of about 500, reaching high water mark a few weeks ago with 1,220 present.



—Frank W. Lynch, minister at Sharon, Kan., was united in marriage on August 30 to Catherine C. James, of Morgantown, Ky. The ceremony was performed at Bowling Green, Ky., by LeRoy M. Anderson, of the church there.

—W. H. Hendershot, of Huntington, W. Va., has been chosen to succeed W. H. Boden in the pastorate at Nelsonville, O.

—M. C. Hutchinson, of the church at Fulton, Mo., took his family for a vacation jaunt of 3,000 miles through Iowa and to the Dakotas. It was a Ford.

—James Small, of Hyde Park church, Kansas City, Mo., has received word of the death of another of his eight nephews serving in the British army. A nephew was killed a few weeks ago.

—Ernest N. Elliott, of Eustis, Fla., has accepted a call to the work at Glasgow, Ky. Mr. Elliott was for some time president of the Florida state society. He is a brother of H. W. Elliott, who has spent over a score of

The special feature of this excellent set of maps, are, their clearness. The names of places in large print, feint mountains, various styles of lettering so as to be pleasing to the eye and the tone of the colors, which are both attraactive and harmonious. From the latest explorations and discoveries

This grand set of six Maps consists of the following:

New Testament Palestine — Old Testament Palestine — Roman Empire showing Pauls Travels — Bible Lands of the Old Testament — The Exodus, Egypt to Canaan — Ancient Jerusalem.

Printed on linen finish cloth in 6 colors size 19x27. Mounted on folding steel stand can be raised, lowered or turned in any direction on the revolving frame so the largest classes can see them, being on a line with the faces of Scholars when seated. Making them the most practical Helps in Student and Class Work When not in use can be easily folded up Price $3.50 net and for 30c extra will be sent prepaid to any Express office. Single maps of the above sent prepaid on receipt of 60 cents.

Similar to abov on a larger Scale are 5 Ellers Sunday School Maps on a very strong Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand about 6½ feet high, 36x48 to 36x57 on linen finished cloth These Five thoroughly up to date Maps Consist of the following

New Testament Palestine,—Old Testament Palestine,—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf —The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Isrealites. Price of any single Maps $1.00

On account of its portability, this Stand and Maps are the most helpful aids in teaching Bible History. To avoid errors in ordering. specify Ellers Maps on Revolving Steel Stand Price $6.50 will be sent prepaid to anv Express office for 60 cents additional.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

years as leader of the state work in Kentucky.

—E. T. Cornelius, who has served as pastor at Princeton, Mo., has tendered his resignation. Mr. Cornelius, with his wife, will go to Indianapolis, where they will become students in the College of Missions.

—Over two hundred men greeted R. T. Nooe, in his Bible class upon his return from his vacation trip to his work at Frankfort, Ky. Mr. Nooe has had unusual success in working with men.

—M. B. Ainsworth has resigned from the pulpit at Georgetown, Ky., and Dr. Bower, of Transylvania University, has been called to succeed him, according to a local newspaper.

—Over $10,000 has been spent during the summer on refinishings, at Independence Boulevard church, Kansas City, Mo.

—E. E. Elliott has resigned his position as circulation manager of the Christian-Evangelist, St. Louis. Mr. Elliott will devote his time to business in Kansas City, Mo.

—W. G. Smith, who recently left the work at Edinburg, Ind., has been called to the pastorate at Monticello, Ind.

—The proposed $75,000 structure for First church, St. Joseph, Mo., will be erected at once, beginning this autumn. The auditorium is to have a seating capacity of 800.

—John S. Hill, evangelist of Paola, Kan., added 77 persons to the Christian church at Holt, Mo., and 13 to other churches, in a three weeks' meeting just closed.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, Chicago's most famous preacher, will deliver an address at the next union ministers' meeting in Chicago, which will be held Monday, September 25, at 10:30 a. m., in the First Methodist church, on the corner of Clark and Washington streets.

—J. J. Smith, of Cadiz, O., will be a professor in the College of Education at Drake University, and has already removed to Des Moines.

—State S. S. Superintendent W. H. McLain, of Ohio, addressed the workers of the Norwood, Cincinnati, Sunday-school on September 21, his theme being "The Task of a Church School."

—Fred S. Nichols, who accepted the chaplaincy of the First Iowa infantry at Brownsville, Tex., has tendered his resignation and will be back in his pulpit at Iowa City, Ia., at the close of the month.

* * *

THE LAST CALL.

Churches and individuals should hasten to send their offerings to the American Temperance Board before the books close on September 30. Nothing more vital is before our Brotherhood than the cause advanced by the American Temperance Board.

Brethren, please do not delay. We prayerfully await this assurance of your confidence and co-operation. Every church among us should have a part in voicing the convictions of our church in this time of national crisis.

Please take an offering at once and forward it to the American Temperance Board.

L. E. Sellers, National Secy.,
Indianapolis, Ind.

* * *

Fall Missionary Programs.

Rally Day and Promotion Day may slightly interrupt the missionary instruction of the Bible-school, but the first Sunday in October should see it freshly instituted in the program. The lessons in "Seeing America" planned for October are full of interesting things about the Canadian Northwest.

Some schools have not found it advisable to use the lessons during the summer months because of the absence of so many of their pupils. In such cases it will be well to combine the material, giving one Sunday to the "Cities' Coke Region," "Negroes," "Sunday School Missionary," and the "Northwest" in order that none of the fields of work may be left out. Every one deserves a place in the hearts of Bible-school people. This will put the school in readiness for the great "Alaska" lesson during November.

The "Seeing America" material (book, pictures and map) may be secured from the American Christian Missionary Society, 108 Carew Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, for ten cents. Additional copies of the Prayer Topics are furnished upon request.

* * *

THE ILLINOIS LETTER.

The people of Illinois read with interest the news-letters that go out over the signature of the State Secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society. The writer of this introductory has himself been a diligent reader of the Illinois Notes for a number of years. These shall be continued the best we can, but for the present there is a personal word I wish to speak.

On September 1, after a pastorate of four years with the church at Paris, Illinois, I accepted the duties and joys of the office of State Secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society. I am beginning this work with the feeling that it is to be the most delightful work of all my experience. If this letter should be somewhat personal I am sure my readers will pardon me for this time.

Twenty-five years ago this fall I began my service as a public school teacher in Illinois. After three years I entered the ministry and have held several pastorates in the State. All my work has been in Illinois. My life has been blessed by the gospel ministry in these, among other towns: Fairfield, Greenville, Rantoul, Rossville, Dixon, Washington, Mackinaw and Paris. For five years I was Endowment Secretary of Eureka College and during that time visited more than half our churches in Illinois. If there is any advantage in knowing the people of Illinois my work ought to be worth while. There have been many changes during the past four years, but at the end of my campaign for Eureka College I enjoyed the distinction of knowing as many people in Illinois as any other man in the State. I want to state here most emphatically, that all that I am and have shall be unreservedly dedicated to the program of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society.

I wish to take occasion, also, at this time to express my appreciation of both my predecessors. I was on intimate terms with J. Fred Jones for the eighteen years of his term as State Secretary; and during the two years Mr. Golden has held the office I have worked with him as a member of the Board and

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27.
(Established 1858.)
THE C. S. BELL CO. : HILLSBORO, OHIO

Education Contributions

Should reach the office of the Board of Education on or before

September 30, 1916

Credit in the Year Book

Will be given churches for contributions made between July 1, 1915, and September 30, 1916, and these reports will hereafter conform to the missionary year.

Board of Education
of the Disciples of Christ.

CHARLES E. UNDERWOOD, Treasurer
70 Layman Ave.
Indianapolis :: Indiana

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You. Send Stamp for Booklet

THE CONSOLIDATED PRESS CLIPPING COMPANY
Manhattan Building, Chicago.

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders
Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. . Indianapolis, Indiana

deeply appreciate all that he has done. No man was ever succeeded by more honorable and efficient servants of our Lord than myself.

The office is very fortunate in the assistant to the State Secretary. Miss Leta C. Davis of Paris, is the office stenographer and has general supervision of the office work. She has had an unusual training for work of this kind. For several years she was active in the First Christian church of Paris, being Superintendent of the Cradle Roll, a teacher of a young ladies' class in the Sunday-school and an aggressive leader in the work of Christian Endeavor. Professionally she has had a splendid training. After graduating from high school she was supply teacher and secretary to the Superintendent of the Paris Public Schools for two years. She then became assistant to County Superintendent of Schools Geo. W. Brown, now Professor of Rural Sociology in the State Normal at Peru, Nebraska. Following her service in the County Superintendent's office she had charge of a building and loan office for one year. During all of this time she did secretarial work for the pastor of the church and served as an officer in both township and Sunday-school associations. There is scarcely a phase of church activity with which she is not intimately acquainted. For three or four years Miss Davis has been anxious to devote all her time and energy to some phase of church work. This is her opportunity and six weeks' training under John R. Golden before he closed his administration put her in touch with the office before my arrival. Miss Davis with her mother and sister will reside in Bloomington.

There are many duties devolving upon the Secretary of the Illinois Missionary Society but one of the biggest things seems to be the bringing together of preachers and churches. I am frank to say that this is the only part of the work, so far, that has caused me any particular anxiety. If the brethren will remember that our churches are gracious in receiving advice from the Secretary and in many cases, just as gracious in rejecting it, it will help the situation somewhat. At any rate we shall be glad to hear from churches that want preachers and from preachers who are seeking a change of location. H. H. Peters, State Secretary.

Baptists and Christian Unity.

(Continued from page 10.)

entation of the action of the association. It was truly a spiritual service when our people crowded to the altar for reconsecration and to take a new pledge of loyalty."

This church's relations to the Baptist State and National Boards is in no wise affected by the action of the district association. Its loyalty to all really vital Baptist interests is attested by its gifts of $3.33 per capita to Baptist Missions and Benevolences. It remains loyal to the New Testament practice of baptism by immersion only. Its single heresy is the recognition of unimmersed Christians bringing letters from other churches.

The new program has been in successful operation for two years. During that time the Sunday-school attendance has been doubled. There has been a marked increase in the proportion of young people and men who are active in the church's work. No small amount of credit for the success of this experiment in the practice of Christian unity is due to the tact and consecration of the pastor, Rev. O. T. Anderson.

To Our Readers: The delay in mailing the "Century" this week was due to a broken press. Office Manager.

An Ideal Course

for your Adult or Young People's Class

The Life of Jesus

It is always in order for Sunday School classes to study the life of Jesus. Young people's and adult classes want the very best text that can be found. This is simply to remind them that there has never been offered to the Sunday School world a Life of Christ so practicable, so usable, sotrue to the best scholarship, so bristling with questions that wake up the pupils, so well proportioned, as Dr. Loa E. Scott's "LIFE OF JESUS" in Fifty two Lessons. This book is being widely used in Sunday Schools both of the Disciples and other religious bodies, and in Y. M. C. A. classes. This testifies to its popularity. You must have it in your school. It will create a new interest in Bible study among your young people and younger adults. Price of the book, 50c. In quantities of 10 or more, 40c each.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., CHICAGO

A Notable Success

The welcome that has been given by the leaders in the churches and Sunday schools to the little book just issued by the Disciples Publication Society:

"The Training of Church Members"

is evidence that this text has come to meet a very definite need in the churches.

The following are typical letters received from leaders concerning the book:

FROM REV. H. CLAY TRUSTY, Seventh Street Church, Indianapolis: "I have examined thoroughly the manual, "The Training of Church Members," and think it a very fine thing. We need to spend some time with young Christians on the fundamentals of our Christian religion and church life. This affords a splendid guide."

FROM REV. L. C. MOORE, Waterloo, Ia.: "This book is filling a long known need in our mid-week service. I am more than pleased with it. The attendance was doubled in four weeks by the use of the text."

FROM REV. IRVING BROWN, Sac City, Ia.: "I am much impressed with it. Shall introduce it either at the C. E. or mid-week prayer-meetings. We all need the training it supplies."

FROM REV. L. J. MARSHALL, Wabash Ave. Church, Kansas City, Mo.:

"This is a timely piece of work. Its clear and simple presentations of the lessons to be taught should make it popular among Christian workers."

How You May Use This Text:

(1) As a book of study in your mid-week or Endeavor prayer-meeting.

(2) As a text-book in your young people's Sunday school classes.

(3) As a text for study in a special "Pastor's class" organized for training of young Christians and meeting either through the week or on Sunday.

(4) As a teacher-training course.

Send for free sample of the new book today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St. CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII September 28, 1916 Number 39

An Appreciation of Alexander Campbell

Editorial

At Eleven O'clock Sunday Morning

By J. A. Adams

In the Country of St. Paul

By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

What Are Christians For?

By L. O. Bricker

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. If paid strictly in advance $1.50 will be accepted. To ministers, if paid strictly in advance, $1.00 per year. If payment is delayed ministers will be charged at regular rates. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid for, but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Post Office, Chicago, Illinois, Under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to the Disciples is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to co-operate with the Christian people of all communions as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century, the chief publication of the Society, desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... Address .....

Two Great Bible Courses

For dult and Young People's Classes

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

BY DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

BY DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year

ADDRESS

Disciples Publication Society : 700 East Fortieth Street, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR

Volume XXXIII SEPTEMBER 28, 1916 Number 39

An Appreciation of Alexander Campbell

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL'S BIRTHDAY WAS SEPTEMBER 12.

Had he belonged to some other communion, this day would not have gone unobserved. It is a part of the penalty of his broad and catholic position that he is today unremembered on the great anniversaries of his life. He did not wish his followers to be called by his name. He did not even wish them to live in bondage to his ideas. Had he foreseen our neglect in respect to celebrating his birthday, he might have rejoiced in it.

But have we not overdone the neglect of our great leaders? Is it not possible to remember them gratefully without leading ourselves into any slavish subserviency to the past? We have often talked of the doctrinal contributions of the great leaders of our movement. Do we not need to see them as human figures, great in many other ways than in the development of doctrine?

Alexander Campbell was a man of sound learning, interested in education. Though his course at the University of Glasgow was a short one, it left the very deepest impressions upon his life and the university spirit remained with him to the end.

It was the spirit of an educated man that led him to accumulate in the wilderness a large and respectable library in which were gathered together the books which he needed for the investigation of the problems which came before him. Those who opposed him on platform or in the press always had reason to acknowledge the soundness of his learning and the carefulness of his scholarship.

One of his earliest projects in the new world was the founding of a school which grew into Bethany college. To this enterprise he devoted more time probably than to any single enterprise of his life.

✣ ✣

Alexander Campbell was a journalist of power and vision. One wonders how a printing plant was transported into the hills of his beloved Bethany under the conditions that prevailed there a hundred years ago. First he was editor of the Christian Baptist, which circulated among the Baptists in large numbers. This was a history making publication. It defined clearly the issues for which the "Reformers" stood. The printed page was made to serve as the missionary of a propaganda which at last spread over a wide area. Later came the more pacific and spiritually minded "Millennial Harbinger."

As a preacher and home missionary, Alexander Campbell would have deserved eminence in American church history. The only surviving son still cherishes the old saddle bags which accompanied his father on long journeys through the states of the middle west. Alexander Campbell never received a cent for preaching as long as he lived, not because of any disbelief in such practice, but because he was fortunate enough not to need it and generous enough to refuse it.

In those days large numbers of pioneers heard no regular preaching of the gospel. They were scattered and lived away from the accustomed means of grace. This home missionary opportunity brought to the heart of Alexander Campbell a compelling appeal. He delighted to hunt up isolated communities and without money and without price deliver to them the word of life. The Christian Association as first organized was in reality a kind of home missionary society. Disciples can never afford to lose out of their life the inspiration of the apostolic zeal of one of the great leaders.

The title of "defender of the faith" has often been placed upon unworthy heads. If it could be given to Alexander Campbell, it would not be misplaced. He lived in times when religious conditions in America were chaotic. Tom Paine was then an American hero and his ridicule of religion was widely circulated. The French Revolution was giving us a back wash of infidelity and materialism. The time demanded an able defender of the Christian faith.

The debate of Alexander Campbell and Robert Owen takes on, therefore, a new significance in the light of this history. The great preacher made it once more intellectually respectable to be a Christian! Had he not accomplished this, it is hard to see now who would have stepped into the breach.

✣ ✣

The power of Alexander Campbell as a public speaker has never been properly appreciated. There are still living a few men who heard him preach. The experience is burned into their memories.

Nor are we to forget that Alexander Campbell was also a statesman with ideas upon the questions of his day. He was too good a biblical scholar to allow it to be said that the Bible explicitly taught anything against slavery. He was too good a Christian to be in favor of slavery. As a scholar he did his duty by showing what the Bible did really teach. As a Christian, he did his duty by ceasing to own slaves and by declaring himself to be an anti-slavery man, though not an abolitionist. Had his sane counsels in favor of gradual emancipation prevailed, our country would have been spared a terrible conflict.

That his ideas on public matters were respected, is to be seen in the fact that he became a member of the constitutional convention for the state of Virginia. He might have had an opportunity for political preferment in the democratic party, of which he was a loyal adherent. He chose, however, not to take his time away from the strictly religious activities of his life.

It is as a man of religion that we shall at last speak of the great reformer. It is a pity that the Disciples of Christ have loved his logic but have so little shared his piety. Every step in his life was Divinely guided. In the storm on board ship, he vowed his life to the service of the living God. He was faithful to pay this vow. In the reading of the Bible, in the practice of prayer, in the public worship of God, in the deeper experiences of communion with God, he was a man of the spirit. His ideas may in some cases be modified by new phases of thought. His spirit should be the imperishable heritage of the Disciples of Christ.

At Eleven O'clock Sunday Morning

J. A. Adams in the Congregationalist

"WHAT happens at eleven o'clock Sunday morning?" exclaimed an evangelist. The question startled me, for it was sprung upon us in a tone which implied that it was the wrong thing which happened, and in church. Then I began to search my memory for things of this kind. I found there a painful recollection of a service in which the power presiding in the pulpit made us stand up and sit down so often during the opening part of the service that I nearly lost my equilibrium. It was a chilly morning and I had surrounded myself with various articles which could not be worn in church but had to be hung, laid or disposed of somewhere. Some of them were in my lap, others wedged in beside me.

STANDING UP AND SITTING DOWN.

When the commanding officer in the pulpit ordered us to stand up I had to struggle through the impedimenta. My hat was in a vacant part of the pew, but when a stout woman was shown into the seat I had to snatch it from the impending peril. I wished that the preacher would let up, but he kept us on the move until sermon time. I don't like a preacher who makes a congregation stand up and sit down and then do it some more. I don't see the need of it, outside of a Catholic or Episcopal church. Nor do I see the need of so many small parts in the opening services of our Protestant churches. It is my observation that the preacher too often gets at his sermon rather late in the hour for the best effect. There would be more sparkle in the interest if all the dew had not been brushed off the grass.

In my further search for things which happen at eleven o'clock Sunday morning I remembered some very long prayers. Nearly all ministers pray too long. Why do they think it necessary to go over the universe and then slowly come back home? Why do they start up some new line as if they were afraid of leaving it out? I also remembered considerable tiresome talk in making the announcements. Can't a minister say what it is and stop? And then I had some painful recollections of rather trying performances in the choir, not that the singing in the churches is not good, for it seems to me that it never before was better or even as good as it is now. But I remembered the soprano with a weak voice and a high note dangling above her head. She had to creep where she was expected to fly. Some members of the choir ought to come in at a window of the tower above and alight on top of that elusive upper note or use a flying machine.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN THE SERMON COMES.

And the sermon! A variety of things happen then. There are preachers and preachers. A little while ago a writer in discussing Liebknecht, the noted German socialist who has just been put in a cooler for thirty months, remarked that the agitator seemed to be more in love with his theories than with the people whom he professed to want to help. I do not know how much truth there is in this criticism, but it is a weakness or danger which sometimes gets into the sermon. A man may stand in the pulpit with more interest in his theories or his latest views than in the men and women before him. He may be fascinated by an intellectual proposition and be indifferent to people. His preaching is a mental process, not a message to the fear and hope and up and down of the daily struggle. It is not difficult for such a preacher to make spectators of his congregation instead of hearers who want to be helped in their moral and religious life. When they have had enough of the exhibition they thin out, and the congregation weakens, and his friends wonder why so fine a thinker does not draw better. It often has happened.

THE DULL PREACHER.

The dull preacher also happens. He does not need to happen; he is a college graduate, a finished product of the seminary, a member of a live community and living in very stirring times. The air of these warring days is enough to make his blood tingle, his heart burn and his mind flash. The swell of the great restless human sea should lift him high, but he does not lift. You would think that he had come out of a deserted village. What ails him? He does not work hard enough on his job. He may not be lazy, he may even be very busy with a lot of little things, but he does not realize the importance of that engagement at eleven o'clock Sunday morning. He does not keep his forces marshaled toward it; his mind is not gathering suggestions, hints and helps for it as he comes and goes. Henry Ward Beecher so often remarked that he was always gathering sermon material. I may be mistaken, but I somehow have a feeling that a man who wants a hearing will have to do some thinking at night for it. A good deal can be done about the time the clock strikes the small hours of the morning. Anyhow, in the flood of speech which is now poured from platform and press a preacher must work hard to hold attention and make an impression. It is a man's job which he has on hand at eleven o'clock Sunday morning.

THE GREATER THINGS.

But I do not like this side of the subject, let us turn to the other side of it. Great things happen at eleven o'clock Sunday morning. There would not be any Sunday at all if it were not for the gospel which is preached at that hour. Sunday comes once every week, and yet it seems to me that there are few things so impressive as the pause which is puts upon the world, and the change in the whole human attitude. Christendom is the best part of the world, and Christendom is in its best clothes, its best frame of mind, its best tone of feeling and in the best path to its highest aspirations on the great day which its religion has made sacred to rest and worship. Take the preaching out of the day and how long would it be able to maintain its commanding authority over this toiling, struggling world?

Again, the human kind must come together. The process of civilization must mean growing unity. The progress, prosperity, peace and security of the race demand it. And at eleven o'clock Sunday morning there is a more striking exhibit of the come-together spirit than is found anywhere else. From end to end of the land men and women come together in the house of God. It matters not that there are different denominations, underneath is the great get-together principle. It rests on the deep unity of human existence; of moral and spiritual fellowship; it is down where man is brother and God is Father. The superstructure is incomplete, faulty, but the basis is fundamental, eternal. "The people are going to church;" yes, the human kind are on the way to final unity. And they will keep on going until the fellowship and the brotherhood reach the rim of the earth. Don't think it a light thing when you go to church; you are in the greatest of all processions. It will make the world its own by and by.

ORGANIZING POWER OF THE CHURCH.

"We must organize," is the word which men are continually passing along the line. But have you stopped to think what an illustration of organization you can see at eleven o'clock on any Sunday morning? Do you know of anything else which compares with this organizing tendency of believers in the Christian religion in its power to gather up moral and spiritual forces and put them into every important movement for the uplift of mankind? And the fine thing about it is that it is the organization of life. There is a good deal of organization which is like the assembling of sticks or stones. There is no throb of life in it, no heart or soul. In nature life organizes. In the church spiritual life organizes. There can be nothing better than that, nothing more responsive to the touch of the world's needs, or more obedient to the wisdom which directs to the expected end. You will not see it in its perfection at any one church, but you will see sufficient proofs of its presence and power to realize how unparalleled it is in the stupendous work of making this a better world.

THE PROGRESSIVE SPIRIT.

A new Methodist bishop has just told his people in Chicago that the church is very much behind other progressive agencies. But did the bishop carefully consider his statements? Of course, the Church does not chase off with every new thing which is sprung upon a harassed public. But if there is anything more progressive in the moral improvements of the world than the Church has been during the last hundred years, I do not know where it keeps itself.

What has been the awakening power in India? The Church. What awakened Japan? The Church. What started all the stir that there has been in China? The Church. Who gave the impulse and push to the great temperance movement which is now making the water wagon the band wagon? Members of the Church. When the sisters organized the Women's Christian Temperance Union there was something doing. Prohibition was a far-off hope until they put the power of their passion into it. Now the warring nations of Europe have been compelled to adopt it in order to make stronger men for the terrific strain of the great struggle. Does any good movement start up in any community that you do not find church members at the front end of it? Puncture the tire of one of these movements and you have to call in the Church to fix it. It makes one tired to hear the Church criticised as too slow and not up-to-date, when it is anywhere from ten years to a thousand years ahead of its generation, and when everybody who starts a reform either borrows his ideas from the Church or begs for its money to pay the bills. It is where the church bells are ringing that you hear the sound of the going.

There are other things which happen at eleven o'clock Sunday morning. There are men in the pulpit with tears in their hearts and great convictions on their lips pleading with their fellowmen to turn from the evil way and be reconciled to God. There are preachers of a glorious gospel presenting a wonderful Saviour to sin-sick souls. There are messages of comfort and blessing spoken to hearts of sorrow. God is there wiping away tears. It is all so sacred, so near to the tenderest and divinest feelings of the human soul that one hesitates to speak of it. Heaven alone could tell the full story of the stubborn hearts won to God, of the strengthened faith, of the holy resolutions, of the purposes which become power in this world and destiny in another world. Surely great things happen at eleven o'clock Sunday morning.

What are We Christians For?

By L. O. Bricker

"THE Passing of the Third Floor Back" is a profound and powerful sermon on redemption through understanding, on conversion, by expectation, and regeneration by appreciation. Into a boarding house in a crowded center of a great city—containing the usual heterogeneous mass of men and women likely to find lodging in such a place—came a new boarder, called "The Stranger," who is the Christ—come to show how his work of redemption can be carried on today, not only in boarding houses, but in offices, stores, shops, homes and everywhere. The drama is the story of how "The Stranger" influenced, lifted, transformed and redeemed as unpromising a lot of people as were ever gathered in a boarding house, or anywhere else.

In the conversations which "The Stranger" holds with each person in the boarding house, we see souls in the process of salvation, putting off the vulgarity and vanity and trickery they had mistaken for themselves, and putting on their Better Selves which "The Stranger" discovers and reveals to them.

HOW JESUS REDEEMED PEOPLE.

The method of "The Stranger" was the favorite method of Jesus, and here lies the whole science of human redemption. This is the way Jesus redeemed men and women; and the supreme need of today is for men and women who will adopt the method, assume the attitude, and take the part of Jesus in the midst of the human life by which they are surrounded. Why can't you do that in your little circle of human lives—in your boarding house, your store, office, shop, your little world of men and women?

The fundamental fact with which to begin such a redeeming mission is this: that goodness and generosity, virtue and chastity, honor and honesty, nobility and truth are the natural and inherent qualities of every human being. Whenever you find the opposite of these qualities manifested in any human life, know assuredly that those things are veneer, assumed, counterfeit and opposed to the real qualities that are for the time-being buried and inactive. No matter how wild and reckless, how drunken and depraved, how hardened and headstrong, how base and bad a man may appear to be, you can say to him: "You are really a gentleman, a fine, true, manly man; you are only acting a part now, you are not expressing your real, true self."

This is the first fact to hold in mind about anybody; and the second fact is that redemption must always come through Self Respect. The foundation of character is Self Respect. The only saving appeal that can ever be addressed to any human being is the appeal to Self Respect. No one was ever morally helped in his weakness, nor cured of his perversions by any method save one alone—appreciation. To see the good in a fellow human being, and love and appreciate that good, and then appeal to it—reaches a hand of healing help down into the soul and raises the prostrate will.

FINDING PEOPLE'S BETTER SELVES.

We must not stop with the possibility and the privilege of this, but we must lay the duty of it upon our hearts. What is going to become of the people all around us unless we discover and reveal their better selves to them? The nasty way of the devil is to get people to lose faith in themselves, to despair of themselves, and to believe the worst about themselves. Presently they take it for granted that their worst self is after all their natural self, their inevitable and fundamental self, and act accordingly. What is going to become of them if there is nobody to take the part and attitude of the Christ toward them, and follow the method of Jesus with them? Is the devil to have his foul and evil way with all the thousands of lonely and discouraged men and women in the world? Is he to have his way with all the boys and girls, with all the men and women, who are beginning to lose their ideals and are living today below the level of their better selves? What are we Christians for? Ah, fellow Christian, go out into your little world tomorrow as a living representative of the love and faith and spirit and methods of Jesus Christ. This is what your fellow men need of you, and this is what your Lord wants you to do and be.

WHAT DR. AKED LEARNED.

With commendable frankness the Rev. Charles F. Aked, D. D., pastor of Central Congregational Church, San Francisco, and one of the leaders of the Ford Peace Expedition, which last fall created a sensation and diversion amidst the world confusion—only that and nothing more—Dr. Aked has set forth in a somewhat lengthy statement in the Congregationalist the things he learned through his manifestly not altogether pleasant experience. The following is a convenient summary of his main points and contains food for thought at this time:

There is no short cut to the millennium.

A good "movement" must be steeped in prayer and saturated with devotion.

The tree whose very leaves are for the healing of the nations grows from the seed which fell in an Empty Tomb.

That in my life of which I have least reason to be ashamed is my devotion to the cause of peace.

There was too much money in the Ford Expedition. There was too much money in the Neutral Conference.

I have learned what I knew before, only I have learned it better, that the business of a preacher of the gospel is to preach the gospel.

* * *

You cannot teach the Fatherhood of God and not teach social opportunity. Jesus Christ is the great disturber of foundations that are wrongly laid.—Bishop W. F. Oldham.

In the Country of St. Paul

Continuing the Travel Stories of the War-Country

By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

WE LEFT Beirut on June 26, going across country because of the fact that the Allies allow no ship to approach the Syrian coast, and the Turks allow no ships to land. We had hoped all the year that we could get away on a United States battleship sent out with relief to the people of Syria. But a double series of mines guards the coast in addition to the double blockade, and so we had to leave as best we could.

I have told of our dislike for barren Aleppo, of the delay in Islahiyeh, of the automobile trip across the Amanus mountains, and of our visit to Adana. At every point we lost time, and when we found at Kulak, the railway terminal of Tarsus, that we must stay until the next day, we were sure that the fates were averse to our making a speedy trip. Nevertheless we were glad of the opportunity to visit Tarsus and to see the conditions under which Mrs. Christy is carrying on the mission work in these times of stress.

TARSUS IN DECAY.

Tarsus at the present time bears little resemblance to the brilliant city that rivalled Antioch, Alexandria, and Ephesus in the days of Roman dominion. It is not very clean, the streets are narrow, the houses are far from imposing, and the whole place has an air of poverty and squalor. But when one climbs a hill in the center of the city and looks out over a wide plain entirely circled by trees, with the Mediterranean toward the south and mountains in all other directions, he can to some extent understand why Tarsus was so famed for beauty.

A part of the mission compound in which the Christys live has been taken during the war for barracks. So when we reached the main gate which leads to the house and the boys' school we found a number of Turkish soldiers sitting and lying in the sunny roadway. They evinced no interest in us as we passed, and we learned that they were being cared for in the boys' dormitory, which has been converted into a temporary hospital. They were a sorry looking lot, but nothing to the crowd that lined the road a few steps further along. These men, some five hundred in number, were conscripts being taken to the army, and in many cases their wives and children were still with them, taking the farewells that were so likely to be the last. It is hard to see any body of men marched away to possible death, but when one is sure, as he generally is in the case of the Turkish forces, that if the men are not shot they will die of disease due to the improper provision for their needs, the sight is doubly harrowing.

RELIEF WORK AMONG THE TURKS.

The value of the work done by the school under the direction of Dr. Christy is so well recognized by the authorities that it has not been entirely stopped, as has been the case in some places. Indeed, there are still some students about the compound, and the school room itself has not been molested. Mrs. Christy, in the absence of her husband, is doing considerable relief work, such as is permitted by the officials, and stands high in the esteem of the Turks who are acquainted with her activities.

There are drawbacks to being on good terms with the officials, however. Mrs. Christy lives directly across the street from the governor of the province who often gives dinners or receptions for his political friends. Upon such occasions he almost invariably sends an officer to borrow something that the house he has commandeered does not contain. Of course, Mrs. Christy does not consider it good policy to refuse such requests, but in time they have become a burden. While we were in Tarsus the governor asked for a tablecloth, six glasses, a tray and two candlesticks, and as none of the articles is ever returned it is a rather unpleasant arrangement.

TRYING TO GET AWAY.

It was Sunday when we reached Tarsus, and our first care was to see the German officer in command to find out whether we could get away in the auto the next day. The Commandant assured us that he would do his best to send us on our way, but reminded us that the cars were for the use of the army, and that any officers, soldiers, or provisions that needed to leave would have first choice. We asked about carriages, and were told that only the auto trucks were allowed to cross the Tarsus mountains, and we could only muster patience and hope that we would be the only travelers.

The service at the school was in Turkish and so I did not attend. We walked about the city, repacked our baggage in an endeavor to discard one piece and so make ourselves less liable to the decision: "No room," which seemed to be ever on the lips of the automobile officers. In the evening we had a song service in the library, while the governor's private band made the night hideous outside the window. Turkish bands do not understand nor appreciate European music, and the reverse of the rule is equally true. So we were glad when the concert ended and we could hear our own efforts.

One of the German officers who had attached themselves to our party had been rather quiet during the evening, and I started to play "Ein Feste Burg" in the hope of rousing him to sing, as he had told us that he sang a little. I was successful and soon the most powerful and one of the sweetest baritone voices that I have ever had the good fortune to hear was rolling through the majestic strains of that great choral. It is no wonder that German soldiers singing in the field are renowned in this war, if such voices lead them, and they all put into the songs as much sentiment and passion as Feldwebel Selig put into Luther's song.

FURTHER DELAY.

Early Monday morning we piled the baggage into a cart and hastened to the office from which the auto was to start. But our hearts all sank as we saw that there were already several men in the car and that all of them were evidently very sick. Four could go and we were nine. It took quite a bit of discussion to decide whether it was better for the ladies to run the risk of riding with sick men or the risk of being held in Tarsus for an indefinite period. The nurse who was bound for Konia was eager to get away, and if she went Dr. Hoskins' family or the quartette of teachers who made up my party must be broken. The matter settled itself when the commander gave the word that the auto must start, and the four nearest threw in their baggage and climbed in over the back as the car started. The Hoskinses and I were left in the road, and sadly we retraced our steps to the mission to wait another twenty-four hours.

Perhaps it was providential that the party was so divided, for two of us were far from well, owing to the hours that we had been in the sun, and were glad of an extra day's rest. So we rested all day, and after dusk Dr. Hoskins and I called up the Major in command ostensibly to ask him about our chances for the morrow, really in the hope that he would get tired of the sight of us and so find a way to make room for us in spite of crowded cars. We asked about his family, and found that he had a wife and three children whom he had not seen for three years, and that he was very homesick. He has one German assistant in Tarsus, and except for him sees nobody to interest him. His relations with the Turkish officials are of the most formal character, for, like many of the German officers, he evidently has small regard for his allies, and so his time hangs rather heavily on his hands. We also mentioned our ailments, and he offered quinine, which is one of the hardest things to get in Turkey.

IN SEARCH OF QUININE.

Evidently we made a good impression, for when we arrived at the office the next morning, the young lieutenant beckoned us mysteriously to the back of the house, and there we found the auto—empty. Speedily we took the four seats just behind the driver and put the chief invalid into the front seat between the chauffeur and the mechanician, which is ordinarily forbidden. Then the car drove around to the front of the office and quite a group of Turkish officers and soldiers crowded in. Several had to stand, and one or two were left behind. We certainly felt deep gratitude to the Major who had apparently set aside the strict interpretation of the rules in our favor.

ACROSS THE MOUNTAINS.

That trip over the Taurus mountains was not at all the pleasure that the former one had been. The car was covered and we could not see out; we had to sit on benches rather than on our much softer baggage; and there were no stops for lunch. When we came to a camp in the saddle of the range, said to be one of the best that the Germans have, we were not allowed to get out; and the frequency with which the officers lost patience with the soldiers for some trifling fault and struck them across the face, nearly got me into more than one argument. But we remembered that it was all in the cause of getting further on our way, and tried to look pleasant.

About 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon we reached Bozante, where the railroad again starts, and there for the first time were asked for our American passports. Up to this time we had used only health certificates, vethekas, and Jamal Pasha's permit. Now the influence of European methods began to be felt, and as a result our passports received the first of a long list of stamps and signatures that now cover them. The formalities of baggage checking and vises attended to, we looked around for some place to spend the afternoon, as the train did not leave until 8 o'clock. Up on the hill, about half a mile away, we saw a small building flying a Red Cross flag, and were told that it is a rest room for Germans and Austrians who are stationed in Bozante. So we trudged up the hill to see what we could get to eat, and whether we could wash. The latter was impossible because the place was only partially completed and there were no rooms aside from the lunch room, but we were told that we could have supper at six. That hardly suited people who had not lunched, and so while some of us rested, the others went down to the baggage room and rescued bouillon cubes, tea, jam, and bread from the food bag. Then I collected a few shavings from outside the house, borrowed a stew pan, and soon had some rather smoky hot water. Our meal was hot and filling, but hardly tasty.

A GERMAN PREACHER'S GOOD WORK.

The man in charge of the rest room is a German preacher, who was captured at the beginning of the war. Being badly wounded he was exchanged, and since he can fight no longer he is taking this way to help his countrymen. When he learned that Dr. Hoskins is also a minister, he told us a good deal of his plans for the welfare of the camp, and spoke of his attempts to get the soldiers to services which he leads. His was something of the spirit which one finds in the relief work and Y. M. C. A. aid found throughout the camps of all the armies, and has a great deal to do with the morale and morals of the men.

The train was rather full, but I managed to preempt a section of four seats in a car filled with wounded or sick Austrian and Turkish soldiers from Beersheba, and held it successfully. The Hoskinses were in a first-class compartment in the same car, and we used that as a dining car where bread, jam, and sardines were to be had. The stove and the demijohn of water had gone ahead with the rest of the party, and so we could get nothing hot and the supply of drinking water was very low. To add to my discomfort, I had thoughtlessly checked my steamer rug and pillow, and the baggage wagon was so full that I could not get at my roll. So I got along without them, and had a pretty cold first night.

We wondered often, as we passed near the sites of Derbe, Lystra, Antioch of Pisidia, and other of the localities mentioned in connection with Paul's journeys, whether he had not many times touched the same ground that we were covering in so different a way. It was a temptation to get out of the train and visit some of the villages in the hope of finding some record or tradition of the Pauline activities, but of course such a thing was out of the question.

AT ICONIUM.

Wednesday afternoon we reached Konia, the ancient Iconium, Paul's visit to which is recorded in the thirteenth and fourteenth chapters of Acts. It has retained much of its early importance, and now ranks as perhaps the chief city of Asia Minor. During the war it has been the scene of violent persecutions of the Armenians, many of whom have been deported or put out of the way, because the governor is a despotic and very bigoted Turk who lets nothing stand in the way of his carrying out the silent as well as the spoken orders from Constantinople to destroy entirely those most unfortunate people. The cholera epidemic has been so bad in the Konia region that the city is quarantined against all outsiders, and we were not allowed to leave the station. But we found a very nice inn kept by a French woman who has not been able to leave, and there we made up to some extent for the short rations of the preceding day. There we saw Dr. Post, a medical missionary, who is bravely holding the fort in Konia against considerable opposition and in the face of no little danger. He brought us water and gave us what news he could of the situation. As in the case of so many people that we met, the chief note was loneliness for his family, sent away for fear of trouble.

CONTANTINOPLE REACHED.

The rest of the journey to Constantinople centers itself in my mind around one item—the fact that I caught cold, thought that I had cholera, and feared, more than the disease itself, that the inspector of health at the end of the line would suspect me and put me into the deadly Turkish quarantine. At every station the soldiers and other passengers would get out and drink the well water that I knew was ice cold, but I did not dare trust its cleanliness; beautiful cherries and fine, green apples made a most tempting appearance, but we had been warned to touch no fruit. So I ate nothing in preference to bread, jam, and tepid water. Every few minutes we stopped for an hour or so, and once we had three hours to get what we could to eat at a dirty restaurant with one waiter. But halfway through a very inferior meal we found that all our baggage was being put out of the car so that all compartments could be sprayed with insect destroyer. That ended the repast, for we trusted no one but ourselves to guard the valuable possessions in our bags, and so we guarded for an hour and then had to fight to get our places back.

A WELCOME SIGHT AT LAST.

To make a long story short, we reached Constantinople on Friday afternoon, after three days on that train, and twelve days after we left Beirut. Even then the delays were not at an end, for we had to wait over two hours to get a boat from the Asiatic side of the city into Europe. But when we got to the hotel and found the three men who had left us at Tarsus, our troubles seemed to vanish, and I, for one, was ready to do ample justice to a good bill of fare.

ADMIRAL BEATTY URGES BRITAIN TO TURN TO GOD

Vice-Admiral Beatty, Commander of the First British Battle Cruiser Squadron, whose ships defeated the Germans in the North Sea, has made a stirring appeal for a great religious revival in England as a necessary step to victory in the war. In a letter read at the annual convention of the Society for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge he writes:

"Surely Almighty God does not intend this war to be just a hideous fracas or a blood-drunken orgy. There must be a purpose in it. Improvement must come out of it.

"In what direction? France has already shown us the way and has risen out of her ruined cities with a revival of religion that is wonderful. Russia has been welded into a whole, and religion plays a great part. England still remains to be taken out of the stupor of self-satisfaction and complacency into which her flourishing condition has steeped her. Until she can be stirred out of this condition, until a religious revival takes place, just so long will the war continue.

"When she can look on the future with humbler eyes and a prayer on her lips, then we can begin to count the days toward the end. Your society is helping to bring the war to a successful end."

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

EDITORIAL

THE DEAD LINE FOR MINISTERS.

THERE has been much complaint that the churches discriminate unjustly against gray hair. Perhaps there is some truth in it. There have undoubtedly been cases where perfectly competent men have been rejected by churches on the theory that a young man would be more useful. In the long run, the churches must base this predilection for young men on experience.

The reason some men have reached the dead line in the ministry is that they have ceased to read. One minister of fifty remarked in our presence once, "I have reached the time of life when I do not buy books. I have enough to last me for the rest of my ministry." It is needless to say that he was one who complained of the dead line not a great while afterwards.

It is interesting, too, to note that the progressive men in any denomination retain their usefulness much longer than the conservatives. A forward-looking man adjusts himself to change as it comes. The man who reaches the dead line is out of adjustment with his environment. This never happens to a truly progressive man. There are preachers past eighty in America who influence religious opinion more powerfully than most younger men.

Experience counts in most professions. The engineers who are in positions of greatest responsibility in construction are not usually men just out of college. It takes time to season a physician and make his counsel most valuable. Experience counts in the ministry as well. The older minister has more tact. He is less likely to act precipitately. He has seen tried most of the things which the young college man imagines are brand new, and knows their value. It is for this reason and many others that the old minister is more useful when he has taken pains to keep himself in touch with the life of his day.

A DIVIDED CHURCH.

THE First Congregational church of San Francisco is suffering just now from a division of sentiment all too common among the churches. Dr. Aked has been pastor in recent years and he resigned to become a member of the Ford Peace party going to Europe. After the expedition ended in failure, Dr. Aked returned to this country and is now in New York City.

Meanwhile Dr. Henry Stiles Bradley supplied the pulpit of the church for four Sundays. A unanimous call was extended to him by the trustees, but the congregation failed to give a two-thirds vote in confirmation of the call, although a majority vote was given. A popular movement was then projected for the recall of Dr. Aked, but that also resulted in a failure to secure a two-thirds vote, although a majority vote was given him.

Both preachers have kept away from the scene of the misunderstanding and Dr. Bradley promptly withdrew his name from consideration. It would seem that the congregation will have to find its unity in considering some other candidate.

The division of a congregation over leaders is an ancient and also a modern evil. The Corinthian church tended to division over Paul, Apollos and Peter. Many a modern church is divided in its loyalty between the man who is now on the field and some previous pastor.

The minister who senses the delicate ethics of such a situation is as prompt as Paul to refuse to lead a divisive movement in any congregation. The pastor who goes back to the former field to gossip with the members about the new minister is lacking in sensitiveness in regard to a human situation of the very greatest importance.

One can but commend to the Christian world the refusal of both Dr. Aked and Dr. Bradley to be the occasion of further misunderstanding in San Francisco. It should be ever thus.

A COMMISSION FOR REVISED STATE PROGRAM.

ONE of the first acts of the new secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society was to ask for the creation of a commission to study the problem of revising the state program in Illinois. This was immediately provided and in all the districts this year there has been cordial interest in evolving a type of service more suited to modern needs.

In a time when the evangelistic meeting is largely being superseded in the churches with more acceptable methods of recruiting, there is need that the state missionary society should cease to regard its function as chiefly fulfilled in hiring men "to hold meetings." The Disciples of Illinois have a great trust which they are called to administer. More than seven hundred churches are an asset to the cause of Christ which it is important to conserve.

The bringing of these churches into efficiency and spiritual power is the real task of the state society. New congregations may be organized at times but such work cannot compare in importance with the utilization of the present forces for aggressive Christian work. This commission is entrusted with one of the most important jobs in the history of the state.

WRITE TO THE COLLEGE PASTOR.

THOUSANDS of young people are enrolling in the colleges and universities of the country this week. Many of them are leaving home for the first time. At home, they have been guided in their habits by the counsel of their parents and by the example of their associates. At school, they will fall into a social group which may or may not be friendly to the church.

In many college towns it will require time for the local pastors to get the list of Disciple students in the college. Before the list is completed, the student has already settled down in a measure to the habits which will characterize him throughout his educational career.

It is obvious that there is a responsibility on the family and on the home church to relate the new student definitely to religious activities in the college town. If the parents or the pastor of the home church would write on ahead, it would be possible to save many students for the cause of religion who are now annually lost.

Even universities which are endowed and controlled by religious denominations have a large number of students who do not go to church. There are many excuses given. Saturday is given to football or other sports and then Sunday becomes a day to study. The student is living through the doubt period and at this time there is a tendency to look at the religion of childhood critically. In the "sophomoric" stage, the student may even believe for a time that he is not religious.

If we are to have a strong church in the future, however, every effort must be made to conserve the future leaders. The young people entering our colleges are but a small percentage of all the young people of the country, but they are an exceedingly important percentage. They will be the physicians and teachers and leading business people of the communities where they locate. To keep them for the cause of religion is just now one of the most important tasks of the church.

THE CHRISTIAN TREATMENT OF EMPLOYES.

MANY of the great corporations now have a plan of relief and pensions for the employes which is astonishing in its generosity. It is defended by the corporations as "good business" but this defense should not take away from us the realization that this is really one of the results of a Christian civilization.

The Western Electric Company provides that a man who is hurt or taken suddenly ill shall be treated in the company hospital free. During thirteen weeks when a man is totally disabled for any cause he is given full pay and for six years of total disability afterwards he is given half pay. Sick benefit and care of the widow in case of death are also provided. Such treatment of employees is an effective preventive of strikes and begets good will and cordial co-operation in the working force.

This is by no means the only organization that has old age pensions and other practices for the relief of needy employes and their families. The idea is spreading throughout the country among the great corporations.

Meanwhile, we inquire about the treatment which the church gives to her employes. Can the church call itself Christian and be excelled by secular organizations in generosity? We have an old age stipend for men who are absolutely needy, but we have never made it sufficient to guarantee support. The younger men have before them always the ghost of retirement on account of bad health. The ministers of the church live by faith and escape many worries, but the church which will not justify this faith is not as Christian in the treatment of its employes as is the Western Electric Company or the telephone corporation.

Twenty millions has been raised as endowment for pension funds for the aged ministers of the Protestant denominations in a few years. How much of this is Disciple money? We all know how pitiably small is the amount, only a few thousands. With living expenses soaring and salaries lagging behind, we shall soon have far larger responsibilities in the care of unfortunate ministers.

ON LOANING BOOKS.

PREACHERS are commonly men who loan books. They are not able to enjoy the fruits of literary achievement alone, but long for the company of people who may appreciate these opportunities with them. By the intelligent circulation of books in the community, there may be a great service rendered. One preacher we know loaned "Polyanna" twenty-five times and the book is still going.

The preacher with his low salary should not be made to furnish the community with its reading matter entirely, however. The members of the church ought to be ashamed to borrow his books always and never buy any high-grade books to loan in return.

Furthermore, the church and its auxiliaries should build up libraries of needed books. The old-time Sunday-school library has passed away, with its impossible stories of good little Willie. There is need for a new library of religious education, an expensive equipment for the preacher to buy entire, but one which the Sunday-school can own with great profit and use among its workers.

The C. W. B. M. in many communities now has small libraries for working purposes. The literature of missions is an imposing collection of wonderful books. Few preachers have an adequate supply of these books. Yet they are always needed in the work of the local church. The missionary societies should be encouraged to build adequate collections of the literature of world conquest.

The public libraries of some communities are well stocked with up-to-date religious books. In other communities, the selection is badly made and the total number small. The books of a public library are collected largely in response to demand. If there is a persistent demand for great religious books, the demand will be met. Where the library board has no funds for such books, the local churches would do a service to the community to put several hundred dollars at the disposal of the board for such purposes.

Christianity now has a literature that is capable of making us all far more efficient. The problem is to give this literature to the people.

STILL OPPOSED TO THE GENERAL CONVENTION.

THE Christian Standard still professes itself to be opposed to democracy in the management of the common affairs of the Disciples of Christ and in favor of democracy. A recent editorial by the owner of the Standard Publishing Company on the subject leaves no doubt about the attitude of this man.

It is interesting that the Standard Publishing Company finds so many ways of getting in the road of the organization of a general convention. The time table of the convention special train managed by that journal is so arranged as to bring the constituency of the paper into Des Moines after the opening session of the general convention is over. We then have an editorial on the small crowd in attendance at this session.

METHODIST REUNION PROGRESSING.

THE process of reuniting the two Methodisms, north and south, seems to be making desirable progress. The discussion in the press of the two communions north and south is of a most fraternal and satisfactory character. The lay people of the two churches have been especially cordial in their attitude toward this effort to remove from Methodism its deepest reproach.

Meanwhile the Christian world watches the negotiations with almost equal interest. There are other reunions to be effected, also involving old sectional lines. Once we can show we have the good of the whole church of Christ at heart, the big loyalty will swallow up all the smaller ones.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among union churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union church that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

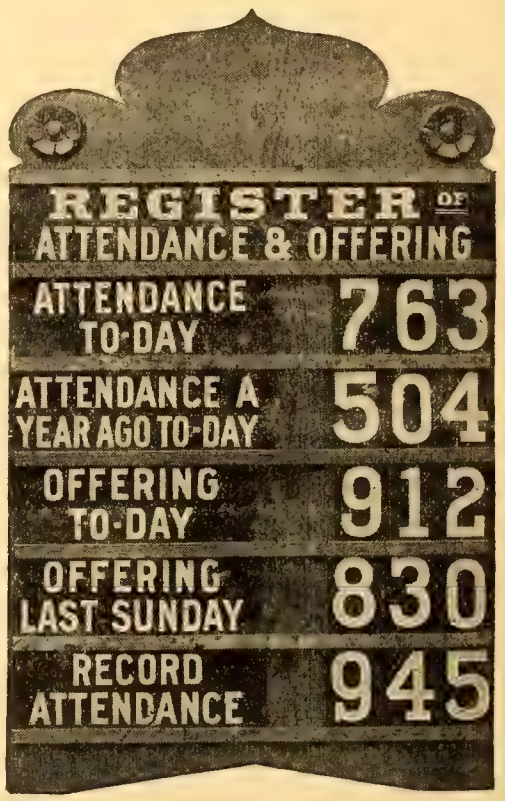
The Rural Community and Church Federation

IT HAS been well said, "The village church is often two or three churches which struggle for existence rather than struggle for accomplishment." This is a fact undisputed. Now the question is, can the condition be corrected? Can the principle of "Federation" which is receiving such practical consideration and application in business circles, and which is being emphasized in religious circles through the social effort plans of the federal council of American churches, have application in the rural community to the relief of the overchurched condition?

In any country place or village settlement, we seldom find a wider difference in religious opinions than is found in an ordinary ministers' meeting of any leading denomination. For instance, a "Baptist Association" is in progress; in its personnel are ministers from the seminaries in Chicago, in Rochester and in Louisville, Kentucky,—men grounded in different interpretations, exponents of somewhat widely differing ideas on scripture and in philosophy, but all feeling the life which cometh from the Spirit of Christ, and all fired by a common desire to see men freed from sin and its debasing entanglements. They sing together "Blest be the tie that binds," and feel the bonds of brotherhood (for they are united on ideals, not on ideas.) If differences are mentioned, it is done casually and without interference with their ultimate purpose.

Now, if the above is possible among men of the widely differing opinions of the group suggested, is it not just as possible for the different evangelical Christians of a village or country place, people who differ no more widely, nor on any more vital themes, to worship and to serve in a single church and under the guidance of one minister? That such can be done has been demonstrated in our experience; that such should be done is a proposition which needs little argument.

One of God's provisions for moral and intellectual uplift, both in the individual and in the community consciousness, is the influence of social contact, particularly that contact which the religious circle affords. This law finds its best results in groups of sufficient size to admit of considerable variety in disposition and talent, as also in that enthusiasm which only numbers seem to afford. As to the effect of numbers, it is now recognized in educational circles that the very small country school has not a sufficiency of pupils to stimulate each other in lesson getting and play activities; therefore the organization, where possible, of the larger district with the school wagon for transportation of children. Likewise it is found that the little country or village church, so often made smaller than necessary by the drawing of sectarian lines, (and that frequently through the efforts of an outside agent) is insufficient in numbers to secure the best individual development of its members or the exertion of an out and out community interest and influence; therefore the suggestion for "Church Federation."



* * *

Many of the possibilities of co-operative endeavors pointed out by specialists in rural conditions, endeavors which would greatly increase the happiness and desirability of country life, are made impossible because the neighborhood leaders are divided into sundry bands through the division of church interests, divisions more far-reaching than is often realized, and starting from points often unknown or meaningless to the people concerned. One difficulty with law enforcement in village and country places is in the difference that results from the too infrequent contact of the majority of the people. Citizens in small groups do not do their duty as easily and effectively as citizens in larger groups. Then, when by church groupings we divide the comparatively small number of interested citizens by two and three, as in many villages, or sometimes, as in the case of some country towns, by eight or ten, we can see how disastrous must be the result to the most effective life. How pitiable, how unpardonably foolish that not uncommon condition —the country community of three or four thousand people (counting the town and immediate surroundings) with a dozen or more churches, and not one regular gymnasium; with a dozen priests serving at their respective altars and not one trained physical instructor either in the schools or in the service of the public at large; spending from fifteen to eighteen thousand dollars annually in work which, under different arrangements, could be more effectually performed at an expense of from five to six thousand dollars, thus leaving a balance for other practical endeavors instead of squeezing out the last dollar for duplicated efforts. No denomination of Christians no matter how it cherishes a particular idea has any right to interfere with the God-intended method of development such as is afforded by the contact of men with men in sufficient numbers and in groups of sufficient variety to provide the varied lines of talent needed for mutual helpfulness. No item which any one church has to offer as in distinction from those offered by other recognized churches of evangelical faith can compensate for the division of neighborhoods into rivalling religious companies. In most instances even the sect which insists on separate continuance because of priority in occupation of territory is exacting a toll from the public good altogether out of proportion to the good it has rendered or can continue to render.

Continuance in unhappy conditions is the more inexcusable when re-adjustment can be accomplished without the sacrifice of principle or even denominational affiliation as is proven possible by methods of Federation which have been fully tested.

J. R. Hargreaves.

Hymn Boards
Register Boards
Collection Plates

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

ANY BOOK

You desire,—theological, devotional, historical, poetry, fiction, etc., etc.—we can furnish you.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street Chicago

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE :: By Orvis F. Jordan

Denominational Distinctions Obliterated.

The army chaplains in the trenches of Europe are having a most interesting experience in these trying days and when they return to private life they will have some wonderful stories to tell. The Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, the leading Baptist minister of England who is now at the front serving as army chaplain writes:

"Communion at the front is a pathetically simple thing. I wish you could have been at my last. A lad asked me to hear his confession, and when we commenced several devoutly crossed themselves as they took bread and wine. Life out here is too big for fine distinctions, and men never ask if the communion is according to the order of their church, but simply desire to meet their Lord. I wonder if we shall learn the lesson and prepare a welcome worthy of the lads who are teaching us things. We are one out here. What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

Says Catholics Do Not Have Liberty.

The American Federation of Roman Catholic Societies met this year in Boston. Two parties, an American party and a Vatican party, were seen struggling for supremacy. The Vatican leaders made some statements about Catholic interference in politics which have been widely quoted throughout the country. This attitude has been opposed by the other wing. Cardinal O'Connell brought in a bitter complaint of discrimination against Catholics. He said:

"We have not committed to this country the safeguarding of our lives, our future, our property with any other understanding than that in return for our loyalty you guarantee us protection in what to us is the most essential of all human rights—religious liberty. We ask no favor. Your protection of our liberty is no favor—it is a part of this dual contract between our country and ourselves. If you discriminate against us you are not keeping your contract; we are not getting true liberty. If, because a citizen is a Catholic a thousand plausible pretexts are set out to discard him and discredit him in your cabinets and your courts, you are not keeping your contract; this is not liberty. If you stand by inactive while under your very eyes, yes, through your very mails, which we pay for, we are insulted, scurrilously maligned and openly vilified, in filthy journals and nasty, indecent literature, unfit to be printed or read, spread broadcast that dupes and bigots may be poisoned against us, so that we may be robbed even of our public rights—then you are not keeping your contract—this is not liberty. You are only wounding the hand, the strongest hand held out to help you; you are spurning the aid of those who again and again you have found in your hour of direst need the most willing to die for you."

Ministers Quit Their Jobs.

The increased cost of living is driving ministers out of their positions all over the country. While the price of meat and flour soars, ministerial salaries are in most pulpits what they were five years ago. A graduate of both Yale and Hartford seminaries recently gave up his pulpit and a salary of $550 to go into a firearms factory at a higher wage. The Rev. Mr. Dunham, the man in question, hopes to get on a footing to go back into the ministry, such is his pathetic devotion to a church which has kept his family on a starvation basis.

Great Philosopher Dead.

Josiah Royce, Alford professor of natural religion, moral philosophy and civil polity at Harvard university, is dead at his home in Cambridge, Mass., after an illness of two weeks. Prof. Royce was the author of many books and magazine articles and his work had attracted much attention in this country and abroad. He was born in Grass Valley, Cal., Nov. 20, 1855. He was graduated from the University of California, studied abroad and received his degree of Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins. He taught for four years in the University of California and in 1882 went to Harvard university. He is known to the Christian World by such epoch-making works as "The Problem of Christianity." It will be a long time before anyone is found to take his place.

Iowa Pastor Declines Offer from London.

Dr. Joseph Newton, for the last eight years pastor of the Liberal church Cedar Rapids, Ia., cabled London declining to accept a call to the City Temple of London, which he received last June. Dr. Newton said he did not wish to leave the United States.

The many friends of Dr. Newton in this country will be glad that he will contribute his talents to the upbuilding of America's life.

Aged Minister Writes.

A striking example of vigor in old age is that of the Rev. David Jordan Higgins, of Pasadena, Cal. He has written a book at the age of 98 and now at the age of 99, the Methodist Book Concern has agreed to publish it. The book is on the theme, "Human Nature: a Psychological Study." The Rev. Mr. Higgins is pursuing special studies in the University of Southern California and still preaches on occasion. Hamline University of Minnesota will confer a degree upon him when he is one hundred years old.

Propose to Liberate English Church.

The government of the English is at present in a very peculiar state. It is in the control of parliament and parliament now has large numbers of members who are not members of the English church. A committee was appointed three years ago by the two archbishops of England to study the problem of the church and some of the leading publicists of the country were put on the committee. The findings of the committee were recently published in a volume and given to the people. The committee recommends that the church be freed from government control, but continue its present financial dependence upon the state. Three houses composed of bishops, clergymen and laymen respectively would handle the legislation of the church and a committee of the Privy Council would have veto power over the legislation. No change in doctrine or ritual could originate other than in the house of bishops. The proposal makes the government of the church rest with its members, which is proper, but it gives back into the hands of ecclesiastics a power which they have not had in England since the days of the reformation. The alternative of a complete disestablishment of the church will probably be presented in parliament when the other method of reform is discussed.

Kent and Madsen Maps

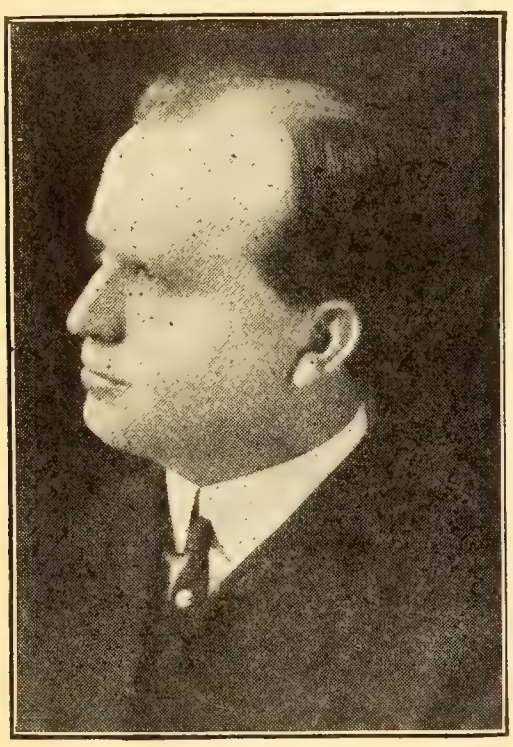
A New Series of Historical Maps

For Sunday Schools, Bible Classes and Individual Students

Because of the combined attractiveness, accuracy, adaptability, compactness and cheapness of these maps, the series should find a place promptly in the classrooms of every progressive Sunday School.

The maps, both in detail of drawing and coloring, are superb, Size, about 17x25 inches. Not sold separately. Complete set mounted on wooden roller, to fit on music stand tripod. The low price of $5.00 includes maps, tripod, boxing and delivery charges in continental United States.

DISCIPLES' PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.



Disciples Table Talk

Disciples Churches of Des Moines

CAPITOL HILL CHURCH OF CHRIST.

By B. W. Garrett, Pres. of the Board.

The Capitol Hill Church of Christ had its initial history in a Bible-school which was organized in the public school building on East Sixth and Racoon Streets, on May 13, 1877. George A. Jewett was the first superintendent. In February and March 1884, A. P. Cobb, pastor of the Central church, held a meeting in Fairall's hall adding eighteen new members. On December 21, 1884, the church was organized, taking the name of the Church of Christ at East Des Moines. 84 members took membership in the new organization. D. F. Witter and E. J. Fairall were appointed a committee to purchase a lot and make a canvass for funds with which to build a house of worship. On June 25, 1884, for the consideration of $2,350, the site so long occupied on the southwest corner of 12th and Des Moines Streets was purchased. On May 1, 1885, ground was broken and on July 25, 1885, the building was dedicated, G. K. Berry preaching the dedicatory sermon.

Rev. W. C. Cole.

Since its organization the following ministers have served as pastors: G. K. Berry, 1884-5; D. R. Lucas, 1886-7; F. Walden, January 1, 1887 to September 15, 1887; W. H. Johnson, 1887-90; A. I. Hobbs, 1890-92; J. L. Weaver, September 5, 1892 to May 20, 1893; James Small, October 1, 1893 to January 9, 1896; D. A. Wickizer, March 4, 1896 to October 1, 1898; J. M. Lowe, January 1, 1899 to September 1, 1900; E. W. Brickert, November 1, 1900 to October 1, 1901; T. J. Dow, October 1, 1901 to July 1, 1906; H. E. Van Horn, October 1, 1906 to January 1, 1913; G. H. Bassett, March 1, 1913 who, on account of failing health resigned July 1, 1913; T. F. Paris, July 1, 1913 to May 1, 1916; W. C. Cole, June 1, 1916.

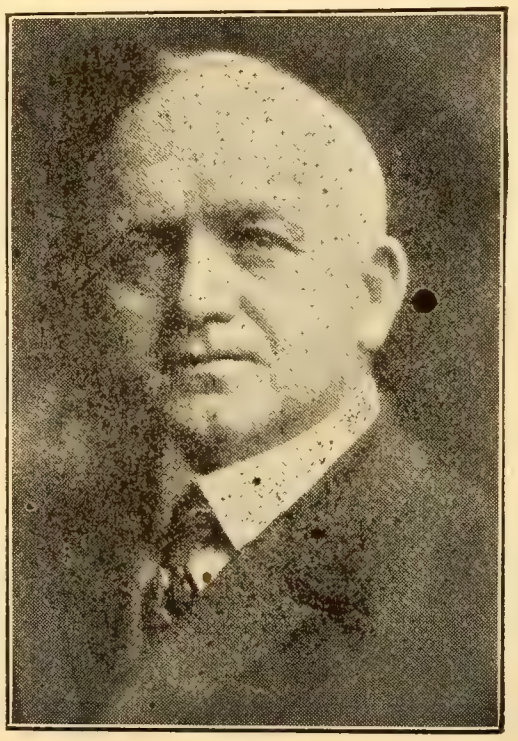
In May, 1907, the name was changed under the leadership of B. W. Garrett, President of the Board, from Church of Christ at East Des Moines to the Capitol Hill Church of Christ. When the Capitol Extension became a fact the building and site of the church were taken over by the state. The sum realized for the property was $15,000, a sum several thousand dollars under the real value of the location. This necessitated the purchasing of a new location. The property lying directly across the street east was procured for $5,000, and a new building was erected costing $60,000. This building is constructed of brick of a color in harmony with the state buildings on adjacent lots. The building is the most up-to-date of any church building in Des Moines. In its appointments for utility and the demands of the great congregation, it is unsurpassed in Iowa.

* * *

GRANT PARK CHURCH OF CHRIST.

(E. 25th and Capitol Ave.)

The Grant Park Church of Christ was organized in 1892 in a schoolhouse, with only a few members. The little band kept together, worked and prayed, until the first chapel was built.



A. B. Cornell and Dennis Ellis were preaching for the church when the first house was built. In 1893 Mr. Utz was minister for two or three years, then followed Pastors Kelms, Morgan, and Waite. Most of the preachers were students from Drake University. Since 1896 the following men have led the work: Brethren Pyle, Ellis, Parrish, Nelson, Johnson, Maxey, Horne and Clark. Then in 1910, August 16, the present minister, F. W. Mutchler, took up the pastorate. He is now in his seventh year.

No better type of constructive work has been seen in any church in Des Moines than that accomplished by Mr. Mutchler in Grant Park. He has a genius for organization, is an unusually capable executive, and in addition to this, he is endowed with those spiritual qualities that endear him above all others to his people.

During this time the church has made a steady growth; additions to the church of some 150 each year, and last year the Minges Company added nearly 400 to the church, until today there are nearly 1,000 members. During the last year a new building was projected 10 blocks northwest of the old chapel, east 25th and Capitol Ave. Six thousand dollars has been put into a permanent basement which will hold at present 1,000 people. The church moved into this basement in November, 1915.

The Sunday-school is lively and large. The record-breaking attendance was 700; but the general attendance is 300 to 450 and 500.

The Ladies' Aid Societies, two divisions, are two great factors. The C. W. B. M. and the various Endeavor Societies are in splendid shape.

Rev. F. W. Mutchler.

The new church when completed will be a community center. The building is open nearly every night in the week. The young men maintain a gym in their new quarters. The class enrollment is 80.

HIGHLAND PARK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Highland Park Christian Church was organized twenty-two years ago in a small building near the campus of Highland Park College. Hill M. Bell, at that time one of the young teachers of Highland Park, now the president of Drake University was the chairman of the first official board and one of the first two elders. The church organization met in rented rooms in Highland Park for a year and a half and then, under the impetus of a tent meeting by G. L. Brokaw, the church building which served them for twenty-one years was erected. Last fall, under the impetus of a tabernacle meeting by the Minges Evangelistic party a new building was demanded and September 17 of this year a rebuilt and modern structure was dedicated, this building being adequate for present needs and allowing for some growth. The building is unique among the structures of the Disciples in Des Moines, as a part of the new addition will be used as a business block, while the old building has been veneered with brick and made a part of the new, in appearance at least.

W. J. Gratton.

Charles Stearns was the first pastor of the church, remaining for two years and being followed by a period in which the pulpit was supplied by Father Mapes and B. E. Youtz. Clarke Bower was the next pastor, spending several years with the church and succeeded in turn by H. Morton Gregory. M. Lee Sorey, for many years a leading pastor of Kansas, was the next leader of the church, beginning his work as a student at Drake and continuing until after he had finished his collegiate and Bible work. He was followed by Clarence Eppard who worked out here many of the problems of his pastoral successes. Sherman Kirk of Drake University supplied the church for a time after Mr. Eppard resigned, being followed after a season by John McD. Horne. Mr. Horne remained with the church until called to one of the stronger churches of Illinois, being followed in turn by Wm. Knotts. Mr. Knotts remained with the church during a period of large growth and when he resigned to accept the work at Perry, he left a prosperous and growing church which called as its pastor, William John Gratton, then a senior in Drake. The Minges meeting followed shortly after Mr. Gratton took charge and the brilliant young pastor has been busied since with building plans and details, as well as for the reception of a young woman who crossed the ocean from London to become his wife, the wedding taking place in New York early in September.

The Highland Park church is located in one of the most rapidly growing sections of Des Moines and with its present substantial equipment and enthusiastic membership it is certain to remain a prominent factor in that part of Des Moines.

—B. A. Abbott, of Union Avenue church, St. Louis, spent his vacation at his old home in Craig county, Va.

Bible School Sessions at Des Moines

The Bible-school Sessions of the Des Moines Convention promise to be of unusual interest. The first session will be held on Friday morning, the 13th, and we propose to prove that this is the luckiest day of the entire convention.

The first hour, after devotions, will be occupied with the annual reports. They will treat of the dominant themes in the rapidly growing work of the Bible-school, teacher training, religious instruction and the public school, missionary education, standardization, local co-ordination of educational forces and the like.

The second hour is devoted to a symposium on church service through the Bible-school. In this intensely practical age the word "service" is becoming the paramount issue. We will hear of service to the community, the county, the state, to the neglected Negro race and to Alaska, our last frontier, from recognized experts in these various fields. The last Bible-school address will be given by C. R. Stauffer of Norwood, Cincinnati, upon the plans and problems of the Bible-school Department of the American Society which seeks to bring to all our schools a vision of the possibilities of the Bible-school cause throughout North America. The closing period of this session this year has been allotted to the address of the Board of Ministerial Relief.

On Saturday night in the joint Christian Endeavor and Bible-school session, Dr. Edgar Blake, Secretary of the Board of Sunday-schools of the Methodist Episcopal church will deliver the Bible-school address upon the theme, "The Sunday-school as an Asset of the Church." Dr. Blake is an attractive speaker and a vital force in the Sunday-school world. We are fortunate to have him as our guest of honor.

On Sunday morning in the Demonstration Bible-school at the Auditorium, the Uniform Lesson for the day will be taught by Fred D. Kershner, editor of the Christian Evangelist. There will also be held two early conferences on Thursday and Friday mornings, the first being led by Miss Hazel A. Lewis considering the new plans for missionary education in the Bible-schools and the second by O. A. Rosboro of Chicago, considering the problems of our Bible-schools in the great cities of the continent.

Bible-school workers will do well to make their plans to attend this great convention. In addition to these fine sessions there is to be a splendid exhibit of Bible-school materials which is being prepared by Clarence N. Bigelow of Des Moines. The Colorado Springs, Colo., Bible-school will present a banner to the school having the best exhibit there. There will also be awarded during the convention the Loving Cup from Kansas which goes to the State or District having the highest percentage of Bible-school efficiency. Come to Des Moines and get a new vision for your Bible-school work.

Robt. M. Hopkins, Bible-school Secy.,
American Christian Missionary Society,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

BRIEF NEWS NOTES.

—Friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Bowman, of Chicago, are congratulating them upon the news that has recently come from Paris that Robert Bowman, their son, has been decorated with the war cross and gold star for gallant action in carrying the Verdun wounded away from the battle front. The coolness and fearlessness of the young American Red Cross driver—he is but 27 years old—have won him the highest honor ever accorded an American combatant. The order of the day of the Army Corps read: "During the period from August 20 to August 30 he worked constantly in a zone peculiarly bombarded, never hesitating to face danger."

—Charles S. Medbury, of University Place church, Des Moines, reports that the evening of September 17 was observed at this church as an occasion for the introduction of several men who have been prominent as ministers of the Gospel among the Disciples, who are now taking their places as members of the faculty of Drake University. The following were the men introduced: Prof. Jesse C. Caldwell, the new dean of the Bible college; Prof. J. Walter Carpenter, who will have charge of the department of missions in the Bible college; Prof. T. J. Golightly, head of the department of religious education in the college, and Prof. John J. Smith, of the college of education. Each of the men spoke in a splendid way of their work, writes Mr. Medbury and the impression made by each of them was distinctly favorable.

—John Young has resigned the work at Petaluma and accepted a call to Turlock, Cal.

—H. A. Van Winkle, new pastor at Oakland, Cal., began his work on September 17.

—Miss Nannie F. Hopper, who for years was a missionary to Mexico under the auspices of the C. W. B. M., and was later assistant pastor to W. E. Harlow at Springfield, Mo., will be ready for a like position on October 1, because of Mr. Harlow's resignation at Springfield. She may be addressed at 1640 Washington Avenue, Springfield.

—Edward M. Waits, who has recently considered leaving his present pulpit at Magnolia Avenue, Ft. Worth, Tex., for the work at Magnolia Avenue, Los Angeles, will not go to California. Word comes that he has been chosen as president of Texas Christian University at Ft. Worth, and that he has accepted. Mr. Waits has ben a strong force for good in Texas. He has been a leader in a religious, educational, social and literary life. He has built three church structures in the state, those at Laddonia, El Paso and Fort Worth, Magnolia Avenue. While Mr. Waits has been pastor of the latter church, every other Christian pulpit in the state has changed pastors from one to three times.

Rev. E. M. Waits.

—The friends of Cotner University showed their appreciation of Chancellor William Oeschger by electing him president of the Nebraska Christian Missionary Society. H. L. Hill, former field secretary of Cotner, was elected state evangelist.

—Willaim Dunn Ryan is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Beacon Lights of the Twentieth Century." The following are the leaders being considered:

Sept. 17.—Thomas Mott Osborne, or The Prisoner's Hope. Sept. 24—Andrew Carnegie, or The Stewardship of Wealth. Oct. 1—Thomas A. Edison, or Redemption from Drudgery. Oct. 8—Booker Washington, or Lifting the Black Man's Burden. Oct. 15—Josiah Strong, or Harmony between the Old and the New Age. Oct. 22—Jane Addams, or Showing the Other Half How to Live. Oct. 29—Billy Sunday, or The Lure of the Sawdust Trail.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
Made from Cream of Tartar
NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

—Frank A. Higgins has begun his seventh year with the church at Tonawanda, N. Y. Since the first of the year there have been more than 100 additions to the membership. Ten of the young men members of the church who are enlisted in Company K, 74th Regiment, stationed at Pharr, Tex., have organized a Sunday-school class and meet for Bible study every Sunday morning. The congregation at Tonawanda has shown its appreciation of Mr. Higgins' services by increasing his salary

—Frank Waller Allen, of First church, Springfield, has planned three series of Sunday evening sermons for the fall and winter seasons. The first series considers "The Seven Deadly Sins of Modern Life;" the "deadly sins" being considered are Amusement Madness; Luxury and Poverty; Greed and Graft; The New Drunkenness; The Disintegrating Family; Compromise and Contentment; the last sermon of the series is on "New Morals for Old." Under the general title, "Makers of Men," are included sermons on Heredity and Environment; Books and Culture; Friends and Failures; Work and Play; The Arts and Crafts; Religion and Philosophy. A third series presents sermons on "Recent Books that have Made Me Think," the books considered being: "The Moral Obligation to be Intelligent;" "The Religion of Democracy;" "The Affirmative Intellect;" "Democracy of Education;" "What Is Coming?" "Why Not Give Christianity a Trial?" and "New Wars for Old."

—After four years' service with First church, Birmingham, Ala., Henry Pearce Atkins leaves the middle of October to take the work at Mexico, Mo.

—Mrs. Claris Yeuell, wife of the minister at New Cumberland, W. Va., recently addressed an audience of the women of New Cumberland, without respect to church affiliation, and secured a good offering for the work of the local C. W. B. M.

—Eureka College has opened with the largest enrollment in the history of the institution. The new library and administration building were dedicated last Wednesday evening. President Pritchard reports ground broken for the new Vennum science building. This will be modern in every respect and will be completed by next June. This gives Eureka a first-class college plant, one of the best in Illinois.

—Central church, Cincinnati, O., is arranging a home-coming, the especial guests of honor being the newly called pastor, W. A. Moore, of the First church, Tacoma, Wash., and a former honored pastor, the veteran, W. T. Moore.

—Ira C. Smith, of Streator, Ill., writes that he has recovered from his recent illness, and is ready for work as pastor or evangelist.

—R. M. Hopkins, secretary of the Bible school department of the A. C. M. S., writes that it is expected that all Bible schools will render the new mission exercise, "Farthest North," which has been prepared, in their schools on Bible School day for American missions, the Sunday before Thanksgiving. This program presents the work to be done in Alaska, to which the American Society has recently sent a missionary. The exercise may be secured from the office of the Society, at Carew Bldg., Cincinnati.

—A. M. Haggard, who just left his summer home in the Rockies, assisted in the funeral services of Chancellor W. B. Craig, which were held in Denver. The date of the funeral was Sept. 22.

—The new $30,000 building of Oak Cliff church, Dallas, Tex., L. B. Haskins pastor, was dedicated by F. M. Rains.

—R. Graham Frank has entered upon his fourteenth year of service with the church at Liberty, Mo. This is the record pastorate for Liberty churches.

—The Sunday-school of Portsmouth, O., First church, reports an enrollment of 1,193.

—Chas. M. Fillmore, of Hillside church, Indianapolis, preached two sermons on the public schools, attacking bitterly graft and politics in connection with this institution.

—J. R. Perkins, of the Sioux City, Ia., church, has organized an Open Forum, to be operated in connection with the Christian Endeavor Society.

—The latest issue of the Butler College Bulletin is taken up entirely with a paper by G. I. Hoover, State Evangelist Eastern District of Indiana, on "The Disciples of Christ and Their Educational Work in Indiana." This paper is a contribution to the Centennial History of the State, and was read at the late state convention. It is a most valuable document.

—John Ray Ewers, of East End, Pittsburg, Pa., writes that his congregation has just purchased a remarkably fine church building site for $35,000, and will proceed to erect a handsome colonial church and plant for religious education next spring, to cost about $150,000. Mr. Ewers is entering upon his eighth year as minister at East End.

—East End church, Quincy, Ill., recently celebrated the fifth anniversary of its organization. W. T. Endres, the pastor, is making an excellent record at the Quincy church.

National Benevolent Association at the Des Moines Convention

The National Benevolent Association of the Christian church is preparing a most attractive program for the Disciples of Christ that shall assemble at the General Convention in Des Moines, October 9-15. It will present the best annual report it has made in thirty years. It will report the largest number of persons aided in orphanage, home for the aged and in hospital. It will report the largest offering by several thousand dollars ever made in a single year for the work of Christian benevolence. It will report the opening of a new Home for the Aged on Signal Hill, Long Beach, California, the gift of one generous man. It will report the beginning of the erection of the new fireproof hospital building as a part of the equipment of the Christian Orphans' Home, Saint Louis, making it one of the finest institutions dedicated to child care in the country. It will report the completion, furnishing and opening of its magnificent new hospital building in Kansas City, at a cost of nearly half a million of dollars. It will present plans for the completion of its new forty thousand dollar building for the Cleveland Christian Orphanage at Cleveland, Ohio, and a new, permanent equipment at a cost of from forty to fifty thousand dollars for its Southern Home at Atlanta, Georgia.

Milo Atkinson, the eloquent minister of the McLemore church, Memphis, Tennessee, will deliver the principal address in behalf of the association's work. He will echo the cry of the widow and the orphan on Thursday evening, October 12. The annual social, banquet and get-together meeting of the association will be held on Friday evening from five to seven o'clock. The special friends of the widow and the orphan from every part of the country will contribute to the good fellowship of this delightful occasion and will plan for the future of the work. Every Disciple of Christ, interested in the association's work, is invited to attend and to enroll early at the association's booth in Exhibition Hall. The business session will be held on Saturday morning the 14th, at which time Mr. J. W. Perry, President of the Southwestern National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, Mo., and president of the association, will preside and make an address and the annual report will be submitted at this session, and the officers elected.

The story that the association will have to tell at the Des Moines convention will be one that will thrill the hearts of those who love Christ and who are interested in the coming of the reign of the spirit of brotherhood.

Contributions to the Board of Education.

Contributions to the Board of Education should be mailed in time to reach the treasurer on or before September 30.

Credit in the coming Year Book will be given churches for contributions made from July 1, 1915, to September 30, 1916, inclusive, and hereafter these reports will conform to the missionary year.

Charles E. Underwood.

* * *

A CHALLENGE.

The August receipts from the Bible Schools for American Home Missions were the best for the month in many years. They more than doubled August of 1915. But with all that they have not made up for that big slump in July.

We are in September—the closing month of the missionary year. This month comes as a challenge. A remittance of $3,000 from the Bible schools will guarantee $40,000 for the year's work. Of course they can do it—they gave $2,370.05 in September last year, but will they? Will your school do its part? Will you personally consult your treasurer or missionary secretary and make sure that the offering from your school for this year (since October 1, 1915) has been sent to the American Society and the receipt returned therefor? Do not take chances, the issues are great.

All our Bible school and missionary work in the United States, the new enterprise in far away Alaska and the very excellent work being done in war stricken Canada await your most generous help. DO IT NOW.

Robt. M. Hopkins,
Bible School Secretary,
American Christian Missionary Society,
Carew Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

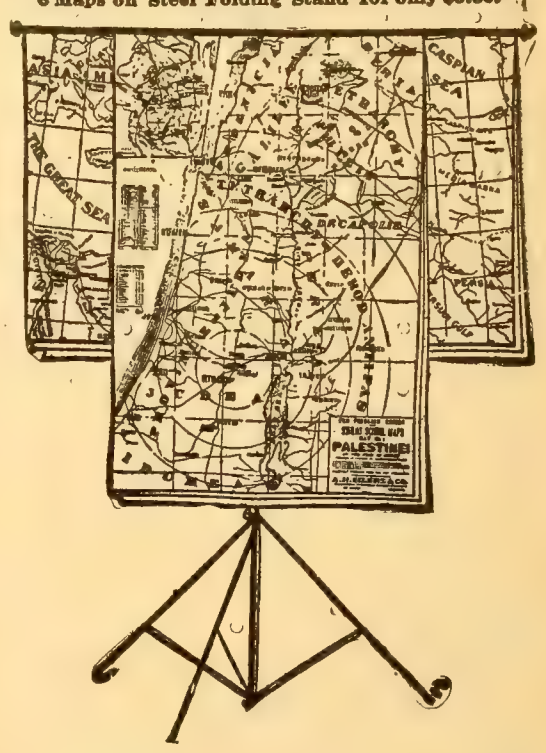
* * *

THE ILLINOIS LETTER.

Several times since the State convention we have been asked the policy of the State Secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society. No recommendations were introduced and no platform was drawn up at Peoria. This does not mean, however, that we are not thinking about a program. The people who are especially interested in this letter are entitled to know the progress we are making.

The first thing accomplished was the unity of the missionary program of the State. We now have three departments: State Missions, Sunday School work and Christian Endeavor. All of these activities will be directed from the central office and the State Secretary is to have general supervision of the program. The headquarters of the society will be 504 Peoples Bank Building, Bloomington, Illinois, as under the administration of Secretary John R. Golden.

The office will be glad at any time to answer communications pertaining to the work of our people in Illinois.



We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You. Send Stamp for Booklet

THE CONSOLIDATED PRESS CLIPPING COMPANY
Manhattan Building, Chicago.

The Peerless Series of Sunday School Maps
6 Maps on Steel Folding Stand for only $3.50.

The special feature of this excellent set of maps, are, their clearness. The names of places in large print, feint mountains, various styles of lettering so as to be pleasing to the eye and the tone of the colors, which are both attraactive and harmonious. From the latest explorations and discoveries

This grand set of six Maps consists of the following:

New Testament Palestine — Old Testament Palestine — Roman Empire showing Pauls Travels — Bible Lands of the Old Testament — The Exodus, Egypt to Canaan — Ancient Jerusalem.

Printed on linen finish cloth in 6 colors size 19x27. Mounted on folding steel stand can be raised, lowered or turned in any direction on the revolving frame so the largest classes can see them, being on a line with the faces of Scholars when seated. Making them the most practical Helps in Student and Class Work When not in use can be easily folded up Price $3.50 net and for 30c extra will be sent prepaid to any Express office. Single maps of the above sent prepaid on receipt of 60 cents.

Similar to abov on a larger Scale are 5 Eilers Sunday School Maps on a very strong Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand about 6½ feet high, 36x48 to 36x57 on linen finished loth. These Five thoroughly up to date Maps Consist of the following.

New Testament Palestine,—Old Testament Palestine,—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf —The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Isrealites. Price of any single Maps $1.00

On account of its portability, this Stand and Maps are the most helpful aids in teaching Bible History. To avoid errors in ordering specify Eilers Maps on Revolving Steel Stand Price $6.50 will be sent prepaid to anv Express office for 60 cents additional.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

There have been from time to time in recent years many suggestions pertaining to a closer co-operation between the State and District Societies. Such a plan will be worked out but naturally we cannot be in a hurry about it. The first step has been taken and the matter will be followed up as rapidly as possible. Upon the recommendation of the Secretary a special committee of six, three of whom are District Secretaries, has been appointed to work out the problem. We shall not wait until everything is agreed upon but will give out information from the office as we make progress.

The big item before us just now is "Illinois Day." If the churches will respond this year as they should, it will bring inspiration and encouragement to our people.

H. H. Peters, State Secretary.

* * *

NOTES FROM THE FOREIGN SOCIETY.

Last week the Sunday-schools gave as follows: Central, Des Moines, $500; Central, Detroit, Mich., $300; Richmond Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., $250; East Market, Akron, Ohio, $185; Hopkinsville, Ky., $210; Central, Lexington, Ky., $100; Seventh Street, Richmond, Va., $100.

The church at Eminence, Ky., becomes a Living-link in the Foreign Society, and will in the future give annually $600 for this cause, in memory of the late beloved R. Ray Eldred, who gave his life for Africa. W. G. Eldred, a brother of R. Ray Eldred, is the pastor of this historic and useful church.

At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Foreign Society, Cincinnati, September 9th, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Buck of China were present, also Miss Edna P. Dale, of China.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

During the first fourteen days of September the Foreign Society received $6,431 from the churches as churches, a gain of $3,069 over the corresponding time last year. There was also a gain of $1,619 in the gifts from the Sunday-schools. However, there was a loss of $19,014 in personal gifts. It is hoped this loss will be made up before the books close, September 30th.

Let all of the friends bear in mind that the books of the Foreign Society close at high noon, September 30. It is hoped no church, or Sunday-school, or Endeavor Society, or individual friend will fail to be represented in the offerings for the year. What you do in this matter must be done quickly. We are not without hope, even now, of reaching $500,000 by that day. Let all help, quick!

The Senior Secretary of the Foreign Society assisted in the dedication of the new church at Oak Cliff, Dallas, Texas, September 10. The property cost about $40,000 and $19,700 was raised to cover a debt of $18,000. This church is making substantial and rapid growth under the wise and efficient ministry of L. B. Haskins. It is his hope that this church will be in the Living-link column by the close of the missionary year 1917. His program for the church includes world wide missions.

The friends will be gratified to learn that the churches as churches have made a gain of $26,259 in their gifts for Foreign Missions, up to and including September 14th. We are now hoping that the gain will reach $30,000 in the next sixteen days.

Stephen J. Corey, Secretary,
September 14, 1916.

* * *

A FINAL WORD.

This is our final word concerning the offering for the work of the Foreign Society, for the missionary year ending September 30.

It has been a good year, both at home and on the mission fields. The churches as churches have done exceptionally well. It seems now that their gifts will be larger than in any former year. The same is true also of the Sunday-schools.

The $500,000 must be reached. We are too near the mark to fail.

Let us remind ourselves, one and all, that what we do in this matter must be done at once. Any receipts after September 30th cannot be counted on this year. This for obvious reasons. The reports must be audited and prepared and printed for the Des Moines convention.

Friends, will you act upon this matter, now!

Let every friend of the gospel have fellowship in the great work of the year. Please send to F. M. Rains, secretary, Cincinnati, O.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27.
(Established 1858.)
THE C. S. BELL CO. : HILLSBORO, OHIO

Ten Big Reasons Why

Bethany Graded Lessons are being adopted by so many of the best schools among Disciples

1. There is more to them—at least a third more—than is contained in any other series.
2. They are rich, vital and full of suggestion to teacher and pupil.
3. They are free from the sectarian spirit.
4. They are soundly and fervently evangelical.
5. They are truly artistic in all their illustrations.
6. They are printed on better paper with better binding and in better taste than any other series.
7. Every lesson writer is an expert of international reputation.
8. They are a monument to the modern spirit of unity—several leading denominations have co-operated to produce them and are now using them.
9. The Disciples possess full editorial rights, through the editor, Charles Clayton Morrison.
10. Every Disciple school that uses them participates in and promotes a great Christian union enterprise.

SEND FOR RETURNABLE SAMPLES.

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

FOR YOUR ADULT OR YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY MAKES A SPECIALTY OF STUDIES FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES AND TAKES PRIDE IN PRESENTING FOR THE ATTENTION OF ITS PATRONS THE FOLLOWING COURSES:

The Bible and Social Living. The latest and one of the finest of the courses presented in the Bethany Graded Lessons. Prepared by Harry F. Ward, the leader among church men in social service fields. Considers problems of the home, education, community life, etc. Teacher's book, 15 cents. Pupil's, 12 1-2 cents.

The World a Field for Christian Service. Deals with the problems of young adults, such as choosing a life work, etc. Teacher's book, 15 cents. Pupil's, 12 1-2 cents.

The Problems of Youth in Social Life. Questions of morality, temperance, business honesty, considered in this book. Will grow good citizens. Teacher's book, 15 cents. Pupil's, 12 1-2 cents.

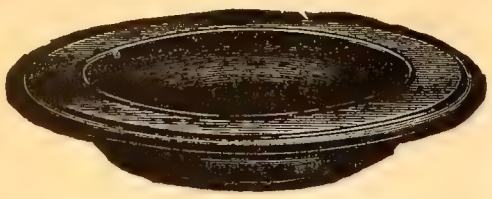
The History and Literature of the Hebrew People. No finer or more attractive course on the Old Testament has ever been presented. Teacher's book, 15 cents. Pupil's, 12 1-2 cents.

History of New Testament Times. Gives a thorough background for New Testament study. Is unsurpassed in attractiveness. Teacher's book, 15 cents. Pupil's, 12 1-2 cents.

The Life of Jesus. By Dr. Loa E. Scott. Positive, practical. Question and answer method of treatment. Requires genuine study of the Bible. Adapted to high school pupils, their parents and grandparents. In fifty-two lessons. Bound in cloth. 50 cents per copy; 40 cents each in lots of ten or more.

The Moral Leaders of Israel. By Dr. H. L. Willett. Thorough, and most attractively written. It stands alone as a text on this subject. In two volumes; volume I out at $1 per copy.

The Gospel of the Kingdom. A monthly magazine of social service. Founded by Dr. Josiah Strong. 10 cents per copy; 50 cents per year in classes.



The Training of Church Members. By Orvis F. Jordan. This is the text pastors have long been looking for, to give their young people proper knowledge of the fundamentals of church life. May be used in regular Sunday-school classes, in teacher-training classes, in prayer-meeting study or in special pastors' classes. 12 1-2 cents per copy.

The Conquest. Edited by Thomas Curtis Clark. A popular up-to-date weekly for adult and young people's classes. Contains studies of international uniform lessons. 15 cents per quarter; 50 cents per year.

SOLVE THE PROBLEM OF YOUR YOUNG PEOPLE BY ADOPTING ONE OR MORE OF THESE EXCELLENT COURSES : : : : : :

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street.
Chicago : : Illinois

Collection Plates

WOODEN COLLECTION PLATES IMITATION BLACK WALNUT.

Imitation walnut, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, Price, $1.25 each. 12 inches in diameter, $1.50 each. Expressage extra.

OAK, HOLLOW RIM, COLLECTION PLATES.

Oak, hollow rim, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, a handsome plate. Price, $2.00 each. 12 inches in diameter, $2.50 each. Expressage extra.

QUARTERED OAK AND BLACK WALNUT HOLLOW RIM COLLECTION PLATES.

A finer grade plate, made of light, quartered oak, or solid black walnut, plush lined. The rim is hollow, giving a rich appearance. Two sizes, 10 inches in diameter, $2.50 each; expressage extra. 12 inches in diameter, $3.00 each; expressage extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 East 40th St. : Chicago

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

A Notable Success

The welcome that has been given by the leaders in the churches and Sunday schools to the little book just issued by the Disciples Publication Society:

"The Training of Church Members"

is evidence that this text has come to meet a very definite need in the churches.

The following are typical letters received from leaders concerning the book:

FROM REV. H. CLAY TRUSTY, Seventh Street Church, Indianapolis: "I have examined thoroughly the manual, "The Training of Church Members," and think it a very fine thing. We need to spend some time with young Christians on the fundamentals of our Christian religion and church life. This affords a splendid guide."

FROM REV. L. C. MOORE, Waterloo, Ia.: "This book is filling a long known need in our mid-week service. I am more than pleased with it. The attendance was doubled in four weeks by the use of the text."

FROM REV. IRVING BROWN, Sac City, Ia.: "I am much impressed with it. Shall introduce it either at the C. E. or mid-week prayer-meetings. We all need the training it supplies."

FROM REV. L. J. MARSHALL, Wabash Ave. Church, Kansas City, Mo.:

"This is a timely piece of work. Its clear and simple presentations of the lessons to be taught should make it popular among Christian workers."

How You May Use This Text:

(1) As a book of study in your mid-week or Endeavor prayer-meeting.

(2) As a text-book in your young people's Sunday school classes.

(3) As a text for study in a special "Pastor's class" organized for training of young Christians and meeting either through the week or on Sunday.

(4) As a teacher-training course.

Send for free sample of the new book today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St. CHICAGO

An Ideal Course

for your Adult or Young People's Class

The Life of Jesus

It is always in order for Sunday School classes to study the life of Jesus. Young people's and adult classes want the very best text that can be found. This is simply to remind them that there has never been offered to the Sunday School world a Life of Christ so practicable, so usable, sotrue to the best scholarship, so bristling with questions that wake up the pupils, so well proportioned, as Dr. Loa E. Scott's "LIFE OF JESUS" in Fifty two Lessons. This book is being widely used in Sunday Schools both of the Disciples and other religious bodies, and in Y. M. C. A. classes. This testifies to its popularity. You must have it in your school. It will create a new interest in Bible study among your young people and younger adults. Price of the book, 50c. In quantities of 10 or more, 40c each.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St., CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII October 5, 1916 Number 40

The Vital Logic of the Disciples Movement

By Charles M. Sharpe

Random Shots Prior to the Convention

By Ellis B. Barnes

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. To ministers, if paid strictly in advance, $1.50 per year. If payment is delayed ministers will be charged at the $2 rate. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Volume XXXIII OCTOBER 5, 1916 Number 40

The Church's Duty to Her Ministers

DO YOU WANT YOUR MINISTER TO QUIT?

Last year thousands of Disciples heard with sorrow that their ministers had quit preaching and gone into business. He had married these friends, or buried their children, or perhaps he had been the man under God who led them into the religious life. It seemed like a profanation for a minister of God's word to be selling real estate or life insurance. They felt about it as one does when an old church building in the city is turned into a warehouse. Some men can sell real estate with dignity. Not so our family pastor.

Why did the minister go into business? Perhaps we felt at first rather sadly that the man had an inordinate love of money. He was not satisfied with his salary. It may be we were wrong. May he not have had cares which he did not tell us of, which it would have been easy for us to remove?

We wanted our minister to marry and have a family. It is never the bachelor minister who can get closest to the hearts of his people. We may even have taken the position that our church should never have an unmarried minister. Since we felt that way, did we do right not to provide for this family? The minister knew that if his health failed the Disciples as they are now organized could never take care of his loved ones. He knew that if he grew old in the service the Ministerial Relief would be but a small fraction of the support a man would need for his declining years. Our minister who went out into the world to sell things probably went with a broken heart to do his duty to his family.

★ ★

In other communions there has been recognition of the duty of the church to the retired minister. Roman Catholic priests are given a pension of six hundred dollars a year. The Protestant Episcopal church is just now raising millions for endowment of its old age pensions. The goal for the northern Presbyterians is ten millions of endowment. The total amount to be raised by the plans now in operation among the denominations will approximate fifty millions of dollars. How much of this money will go for the support of the Disciples ministers?

The most backward cause among us today is that of support for the retired minister. This is not because of any lack of zeal on the part of the devoted leaders of the Board of Ministerial Relief. This brotherhood of ours is young. We have had many things to do. Because we are young, we are the last of the great evangelical bodies to feel the obligation of caring for the old minister. Every year henceforth will rapidly increase our obligations.

If we do not make provision for the servants of the altar, we shall stand disgraced in the religious world. Our converts will be fewer. Our influence will be less. The very quality of our piety will be discounted in the eyes of the Christian world. Our Bible will be uncomfortable reading with its exhortation, "But if any provideth not for his own, and especially his own household, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an unbeliever."

The recruits to our ministry will decrease in numbers and ability if bright young men can see only a tragedy at the end of the service, a useless and needless tragedy. Our young men do respond to the call of ideals. They are willing to make sacrifices. They are not willing, however, to make sacrifices which have no other end than to increase the slothfulness of the church and to harden its heart.

If, on the other hand, the Disciples would make adequate provision for their ministers, there would be a renewed loyalty among our people to the leaders of the church. There would be possible an undivided service on the part of the ministers. There would be a public which would respect the church for doing the Christian thing with its own employes. The church might with propriety lecture other employers of labor after it had discharged its own obligations as an employer.

★ ★

The methods by which we shall go forward must naturally arise in the councils of the Board of Ministerial Relief, which has made an expert study of the problem from the Disciple standpoint.

Some communions are considering pensions instead of relief. They propose to pay to all ministers who reach a certain age a retiring pension and thus take away all stigma of charity from the help given to the veterans of the cross.

In other cases there is a plan of inviting the ministers to contribute to their own old age pensions, the church giving a generous addition to what the ministers themselves are able to save.

The relief method, with which the Disciples are familiar, has grown out of our antiquated methods of parish relief. It is cheap and inadequate, though a thousand times better than utter neglect.

A better day is at hand. Teachers are being pensioned. Railway employes, electrical workers and many other groups of employes are already provided for. Our America is unusually prosperous, and people with means now actually seek for good ways in which to invest their money for the good of humanity.

The hour has struck for a big drive forward in behalf of the veteran minister.

When the call comes to the Disciples of Christ, they will follow.

No warmer Christian hearts are to be found in the world than theirs.

They will yet pay their debt to their unselfish ministry.

EDITORIAL

A HIGH GOAL GAINED

GLADDER news has not been received in THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY office in many a year than that conveyed in a telegram from Secretary F. M. Rains, reporting that the half million mark in the annual receipts of the Foreign Society has been passed. This is a goal toward which the eyes and hearts and energies of our people have long been straining. To have at last gained it is ample occasion for a great shout of rejoicing and a song of thanksgiving to God.

Like all goals in Christian experience, it is not an end, but a new beginning. It gives the society faith and courage to undertake a yet further adventure—the quest of a million a year for the spread of the Kingdom in the ends of the earth. It is safe to predict that, under God's blessing, less time will pass in reaching the million than it took to go from the first hundred thousand to the half million.

THE CHURCH A SCHOOL OF CHARACTER.

TWO questions about church membership have agitated the Christian body from the very first. One is the standard to be required for admission and the other is the matter of excommunication. How good must a man be before he is taken in? How bad must he be before he is put out?

Puritan churches were signally strict with regard to these standards. More commonly, national churches were very lax. The latter sometimes had the idea of including the whole population without moral distinction within the scope of the national church.

On the mission fields the same question has pressed for solution. Shall a man be inducted into the church when he can assent to the Petrine confession? Or should there be a period of instruction and moral preparation for church membership?

The whole matter is to be determined from the viewpoint of our conception of what the church ideally is. Some view it as a school of character, a place to develop Christ-likeness through continual effort.

A school obviously has more than one grade of student. There is the beginner and there is the graduate. A beginner is not the disgrace of the school, but he is the hope of the institution for the future. A church has no more a duty to demand perfection in people entering its membership than has a school to ask a knowledge of calculus before a freshman is enrolled.

Should this school ever despair of its task? Is there any reason sufficient to bring about the excommunication of a member from the church? The New Testament church undoubtedly did separate outrageous offenders from its fellowship. There comes a time when the church must bear its testimony to the world by repudiating the actions of some unworthy member. The supreme duty of the church, however, is not to excommunicate evildoers, but to bring them to salvation.

GETTING THE CONGREGATION TO READ.

READING habits among the evangelical Christians are not what they once were. The ignorance of many intelligent Christian workers with reference to certain much-discussed books is pathetic.

We referred some time ago to the possibility of the preacher using his own personal library for the purpose of stimulating good reading by means of loaning books to his members.

The public library is now to be found in most small communities. These libraries often have many excellent religious books which no one discovers. The minister is the only one in the community who is equipped to judge these books. He ought to make a list of twelve of the best of them, with a brief description of their contents, and print this in the calendar or post it in the church and call attention to it. As soon as there came to be a demand at the library for religious books, more and better ones would be provided.

One church we know of has a bookshelf where religious books, especially those relating to that particular denomination, are sold. On some of the books a profit is made which helps to pay the expenses of maintaining the shelf. By this means the people of the church are being continually stimulated to read books that will make them intelligent in the religious life.

The missionary society should have its reading course, and the Sunday school teachers should be expected to read some good books in their fields every year. If each organization would do its part, religious intelligence might spread much more rapidly.

Not one family in five among the Disciples takes a church newspaper. What little church news comes to four-fifths of our members comes in the sermon or at the missionary society meeting. Very intelligent business and professional people can be found living in the most abysmal ignorance of the religious fellowship to which they are attached. It must be clear to our pastors that this fact makes their work harder instead of easier.

ENLARGEMENT AND PROGRESS

WITH this issue THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY enlarges the number of its pages and inaugurates a program of expansion and progress in which we invite the co-operation of all our readers. The fiscal year closing August 1 was the best this paper and the Disciples Publication Society have ever enjoyed. In the sale of its Sunday School supplies and books the publication department made a gratifying gain over any previous year. For the past four years every quarter of each year has marked a gain over its corresponding preceding quarter in the volume of patronage given by the Sunday Schools, and at this writing, the first week in the Autumn quarter of 1916, the mark reached at the end of the Autumn quarter of 1915 has already been passed. At no time has the gain been anything in the nature of a boom, but a modest, substantial and steady growth. It seems evident that the Sunday Schools and churches of the Disciples of Christ desire increasingly the materials which embody the ideals of this house, and they find satisfaction in giving us their patronage.

For the coming year—and years—it is our purpose especially to augment the energy with which THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY has been promoted in the past. In the face of an increase in the cost of white paper which is almost stunning the publishers of the country, we are adding permanently to THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY a fifty per cent increase in number of pages.

From this time on we shall hold strictly to our subscription price of two dollars a year. A considerable proportion of our readers have voluntarily paid this rate for some time, so that it does not seem strictly true to fact to state our new policy as an increase in the subscription price.

For the months immediately ahead we covet the active and earnest co-operation of our friends in enlarging the subscription list of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY. Announcement from the editorial department of new features, which will greatly strengthen the paper, is now being prepared and will appear in an early issue.

THE PUBLISHERS.

HOW THE OUTSIDER VIEWS THE CHURCH.

TO SEE ourselves as others see us is not always easy. It would astonish many ministers and many churches to learn in what ways they are criticised by the non-church-going element in the community. Occasionally this outside public shows a good deal of awareness in its judgments. More often it is mere condemnation born of ignorance.

Preachers undertake at times to test this sentiment by sending a form letter to the leading business and professional people of the town who are not going to church, asking them about their attitude toward religion. Sometimes a number of people will accept the invitation to express their views.

A test of the sentiment of the "outsiders" in any community will reveal two or three distinct classes. There are the people who were once related to the church in some way but have definitely renounced it. Some of them lost their faith. Others have had unpleasant personal experiences with some church members and have left in a huff. The person who has definitely renounced the church is often one of the most uncompromising critics in the community.

There is a larger group of "outsiders" who have known practically nothing about the church at any time in their lives. Though they live in a community where there are churches, they have never shown much curiosity about what goes on in these churches. They are not necessarily hostile. They are often good-naturedly tolerant.

The things these people say of us vary according to the taste of the individual. They often call religious people "visionary." Sometimes they complain of hypocrites. They accuse the church of being a class institution. Some complain of antiquated and impossible doctrines.

Meanwhile the churches in any community will do well to study the point of view of the more intelligent "outsider," to remove his misapprehensions and in some cases to accept his suggestions.

MINISTERIAL RECRUITING.

A FEW years ago there was a great cry that recruits for the ministry could not be secured. Just now the seminaries with good courses and competent instructors seem to have a large number of students. McCormick Theological seminary of Chicago reports eighty new men this fall, the largest entering class of its history.

It is also reported from several seminaries that men are coming from the state universities. The great increase of attendance at state universities was once thought to be adverse to ministerial recruiting, but it may prove otherwise in the end.

Young men today respond to ideals as always. If they are convinced that the ministry has a real chance to serve, they will enter the ministry. The more thoroughly modernized the church becomes, the more certainly will strong young men turn to its service.

THE CLERK'S BOOK

THOSE who would deny membership to some kinds of Christians in churches of Disciples often seek to mitigate the severity of their position by insisting that these people are allowed every right in the congregation except that of having their names upon the clerk's book.

In the most conservative Disciple churches we will find at times unimmersed people in positions of great authority. In a Chicago Church of vaunted orthodoxy a Roman Catholic has been a member of the board of trustees. In many churches in all parts of the land young souls are taught in Sunday School by people who had never been immersed. In other churches, the Aid Society had an "alien" for president. In all these churches unimmersed people sit at the communion table, contribute their means and share the common life of the church. If Paul had visited any of these churches, he would have supposed that these people were members, for in his day there was no clerk's book which was used to fence off Christians from one another.

In the church of the early centuries, admission to the communion table was the recognition of a person as a Christian. This is the simplest of all theses in church history. Disciple churches have almost everywhere received the unimmersed. What they have withheld is a practice not found in the New Testament, a formal right hand of fellowship and the enrolling of a name in the clerk's book.

It is dawning upon the Disciples in many communities that we cannot talk about Christian Union and still go on erecting sectarian fences. When we allow people an intimate place at the communion table and in our congregational life, but refuse to enroll them as members, we have made ourselves sectarian. The schism is ours and not theirs.

THE PREACHER'S DUTY.

THE young minister is apt to go out to his first charge with the idea that he has opinions which are to be given to the world at all cost. He feels that his first loyalty is to his theological seminary and to his doctrinaire opinions. This point of view leads him to preach sermons which are "Greek" in more than one sense to his long-suffering congregation. He has done his duty. But this performance has little effect save to weary many and to alienate a few.

What was wrong with this course? It started out with the wrong point of view as to what a minister's business is. His first loyalty is to his people. He has no right to do anything which will not contribute in a real sense to their spiritual development. He may preach sermons in which he departs from accepted doctrines, but if he does it will not be from any mere academic loyalty to a school or a book. He will more often take the accepted standards of his church and transform them by infusing into them a new spiritual meaning. His usual method will be that of evolution rather than revolution.

One reason for pastoral calling is to be found in the fact that the pulpit needs it. A sermon born out of commentaries is a different thing from a sermon born out of the heart cry of a human soul. The best sermons are given the minister by his people, or come to his soul in the moment of spiritual emergency in some humble home.

One day a minister went to a home where a patient Christian woman in a wheel chair had waited and prayed for twenty years that the end might come and relieve those who cared for her. She asked the minister if God had not made a mistake to keep her here all these years. In the tense moment that intervened before the pastor could reply there came to his mind an insight into this woman's higher ministry to the community. Her invalidism had made her a prophetess. After he had told her what seemed to him the meaning of her life, there grew in his soul a sermon on disease and suffering which went deeper than the thought that pain has no purpose. He went to the church with the lesson of this woman's experience and broke the bread of life to many souls that needed it.

And yet, were it not for the minister's books, he might never have learned this thing in his parish.

SECOND YEAR OF THE EVERY-MEMBER CANVASS.

FEW churches will doubt that the Every-Member Canvass was a success. There may be some who were pessimistic about the first canvass who will now suggest that the thing was a novelty and that it will not work a second time. It will be well for progressive people in every church to watch lest the church slip back to the old slipshod methods of church finance.

The second canvass may have less fireworks connected with it, but on the whole it works easier, for every one understands and expects it. The second canvass will often raise even more money than the first, and every canvass means a real revival of interest in the parish life. By all means keep the Every-Member Canvass method going.

CHURCHES AND CHARITY.

THE early church chose its first officers to increase efficiency in the relief of the poor. Paul found his collections among the Greek churches for the poor saints of Jerusalem the tie that was to bind two diverse elements of the church together. From that day to this, the church has never given up the idea of assuming responsibility for the poor of its membership.

In our time there has come a scientific study of the question of poor relief. It is now seen that indiscriminate charity is lazy charity which often increases the evil it is supposed to relieve. Giving to whomsoever asks is only another way of helping an army of tramps to live upon the public. The ideal of modern charity organizations is to study each case and to administer more than temporary relief. The great charities are now chiefly engaged in rehabilitating families.

If by the side of these charity organizations the church continues to administer indiscriminate charity, the work of the charity bureau may actually be undone. Sometimes more than one church helps the same family and the churches are not aware of the situation.

How can the church and the charity bureau cooperate? The time has not arrived, if indeed it ever will, when the church will discharge its obligation to the poor by giving money to a bureau. It is possible, however, for a church to report every case it helps and to seek the expert advice of those who specialize in this work. Sometimes a church with funds which it does not need for its own poor might seek assignments of cases from the bureau of charities, and under the direction of the local organization have opportunity to work in a way that accords both with scientific method and Christian spirit.

The bureau of charities needs more religion and the church needs more in the way of scientific method. Together they can be of great service to the poor in our communities.

THE PREACHER'S MOVING DAY.

SOME of the denominations are now studying the length of pastorate in the various states. Congregationalists have made the interesting discovery that the length of pastorate is greatest in the east and shortest in the west. In Connecticut 34 per cent of the pastors have been on their fields over five years; in New York, 24 per cent; in Ohio, 14 per cent; in Illinois, 13 per cent; in Kansas, 7 per cent, and in Iowa and Nebraska, 6 per cent.

This clearly indicates that the sections of the country which are stablest are having the fewest changes. Pastoral change bears a definite relationship to the newness of the country and the restlessness of its population.

It would be interesting to gather many other kinds of statistics. What is the average length of pastorate of a seminary-trained man, a man with college training only, and men with only high school training? Such statistics would surely be illuminating with reference to the matter of education.

Progressive thinking also bears a definite relationship to the length of pastorate. Most of the Disciples who have been advertised as being most progressive in their thinking have been a long time in their pulpits. Dr. Ames has been at Hyde Park church, Chicago, long enough to be an outstanding example of a pastor who stays by his task. Dr. Willett's relation to First Christian church, Chicago, now Memorial, extends over fifteen years. Men like Philputt and Goldner and Evers and Barnes and Bricker and Idleman and Jordan and Ainslie—to mention no more—men of broad vision and wide sympathy, these are the men who are able best to feed continuously the flock of God for a long period of years.

We think, also, that it could be shown that the size of the salary has some relationship to ministerial change. A church that underpays its ministry must expect frequent changes, unless the charge holds some unusual promise of early development.

Since a stable ministry is one of the surest guarantees of church success, the study of length of pastorate would greatly repay those who are interested in the welfare of the cause of Christ.

gether to hear the voice of God in the solemn stillness of the soul.

This is drawing a bow at a venture, but I hope the arrow will fell several offenders.

* * *

A MANUSCRIPT IS NOT A CRIME

Don't apologize for the use of a manuscript. It is as lawful as any other form of address. You have a company of the greatest preachers on your side, even if other great men found more freedom without the manuscript. Most of the prejudice against it arises from the uncouth notion that the preacher has stolen another's thunder, or "He ain't smart enough to tell what he knows." Some of the great orators have not been above enduring that suspicion. The manuscript shows that its possessor has been at work to do his best, and is not leaving anything to the inspiration of the moment that may not inspire. Its gains are more than its losses. "We miss the fire of the orator's eye," in all probability, but there is the possibility on the other hand that we may get the fire and miss many other things. No one form of address has a monopoly on all good things.

This is a bomb dropped from a Zeppelin.

* * *

THE UNCONVENTIONAL CONVENTION

Don't despise the groups on the sidewalks and the curb who may not seem to be enjoying the convention. They may be helping to settle some problems too sensitive for platform treatment. They may be encouraged by the similarity of each other's problems when each thought that his parish had the most difficult problems, and seemed to be a favorite location for Satan's seat. The convention is being held in unconventional places on many such occasions, but it is not impossible that on the street may be found a burning bush as well as in the place of prayer. That out-of-doors convention may be making history. Who knows?

And my preaching brother, this is for you particularly. Do you know that we, as a class, not we as a people this time, are the most miserable sinners on this planet in the matter of hearing? We have never had any training in the art, and are as restless and seemingly indifferent as a nine-year-old at church. If our hearers treated us as meanly as we treat each other we would rock those congregations with verbal bombardments for the depravity of their hearts. We would assail them with words that had in them the teeth of lions. The eloquent ear is as needful as the eloquent tongue. Indifferent hearing makes indifferent speaking. Following the advice of Prof. Hinsdale, we ought to compel ourselves to hear. The pith has gone out of many a man's ambition in the pulpit when he beheld the gaping, coughing, twisting audience before him. Of all hearers the preacher ought to be the most sympathetic and brotherly. He ought to do as he would be done by—and do it first. "He that hath ears to hear" is meant for us as well as for others.

This is a torpedo from a submarine.

The chorister will now lift a tune in honor of the wounded and slain.

In and Out of Constantinople

Continuing the Travel Stories Across the War Countries

By HERBERT L. WILLETT, JR.

THE Constantinople of the present time is not, to the tourist, noticeably different from the city in antebellum days. The crowds are as much a mixture of races and colors as ever; the shops are as gay; the parks are as full. Yet there is one apparent change, and the longer we stayed the more we were impressed with the fact. There are literally hundreds of German and Austrian officers constantly rushing in military automobiles from one place to another, and the deference with which they are treated by everyone indicates the power that they are felt to wield in public affairs. A fine-looking set of men they are, and we rather warmed to them, remembering the kindness of certain of their fellow officers on former occasions, in spite of the fact that they repeatedly and loudly voice their dislike of Americans.

APPARENT PROSPERITY

So on the surface we felt that we were in a city we knew, and the contrasts we felt were in comparing conditions with those that we had seen in Beirut. In the first place there are fewer beggars than ever before in the streets, and the crowds wear an air of thrift and prosperity that is rather pleasing. This is a distinct relief after one has seen starvation and death in the streets, and has stayed in the house in order not to hear the groans and cries of women and little children who have nothing to eat and no way of getting anything. Yet friends who are working at the relief headquarters in the capital told me that there are hundreds of people starving there, but that the policy of the government is to keep them out of the way.

Again, the paper pound of one hundred piasters cannot be legally exchanged for a cent less than that amount, while in Beirut one is fortunate in getting seventy piasters of change for the bill in open market. White bread can be bought, and everyone seems able to get it, whereas in Syria there is but little, and one has to have his name registered with a baker in order to get a share of that. Sugar, oil, flour, and commodities of all sorts are cheaper than in other parts of the empire, and generally of a better quality.

FOUR DAYS ILL SPENT

So Constantinople looked rather attractive to us until we tried to leave. Then we changed our minds.

Turkey has always been noted for the fact that the official to whom one went to was never the right one and could never tell the anxious tourist whom to seek. We were there in the time of Ramadan, when all good Moslems fast all day and feast all night. After the feast it is natural to want to sleep, and the sleep may last until the fasting time is over. But though no official may sleep all day, his office hours, generally from two to four in the afternoon, never change. Consequently he frequently does no business for the month. Now we had to get permission to leave the city, and all the officials we had to see were good Moslems. So we called on the chief of police in a dirty and rotting house up a little alleyway, in the morning; not office hours. We went that same afternoon; he was not in. We went a third time; he was asleep. At the next call we were told that we must have papers. We presented our vethekas; they were not right and we must get new ones from the police of our district. The latter were not ready to see us when we went, but promised to be in soon. We waited and at last were told that we had not been reported from the hotel. So the hotel keeper was sent for, questioned, abused, cursed, and fined by the police while we sat and waited.

At last the papers stating that we had a right to stay in the city were ready. But first they had to be signed by the head of the district and he was busy. An hour later he had seen and approved of us and we went back to the chief; office hours over. So we went for the fifth time the next afternoon and finally got permission to leave town, but in so doing were deprived of the Jamal Pasha paper, which had carried us across the country, and of the vetheka to stay in Constantinople. Now the papers had to be passed upon by the medical inspector and stamped by the railroad officials. These matters took less than two hours, and we were ready to leave. We felt pretty certain that after we had spent four days getting permission to leave, every official in the city knew that we intended to continue our trip.

PROFITABLE SPECULATION

Of course we had to have the money of the different countries we would traverse, in order to obviate the necessity of paying exchange at the borders. So we converted a large amount of Turkish paper into Bulgarian, Austrian and German paper at the booths of the money-changers and profited by the rule which keeps the paper at par. For only in its own country is any of the money of the central powers at par, and so we could buy what we needed at greatly reduced rates, and then spend it at par in the territory which had issued it. It was a real pleasure to buy German marks at nineteen cents apiece and spend them a week later at twenty-four.

On Wednesday, July 12, the four men who were to leave together took our baggage to the railway station. Dr. Hoskins and family were going to stay over a few days, and so our party was dividing. We took our papers, so arduously procured, and our passports, to an officer who must stamp them before we could buy tickets, and three of us were passed without trouble. But when Black came up the skies clouded.

"This is not right. You are Black. This paper says you are Khaf. You cannot go," this from the potentate at the table in all too perfect and comprehensible English.

BLACK OR KHAF

In vain Black explained. The police had had difficulty in writing his name in Turkish and he had helped them out by supplying the equivalent of the K, which is Khaf. This had been taken as the full form, and only an official who knew English had noted the mistake. He would be glad to pass it, he said, but at the frontier the paper would be examined again, Black would be sent back, and he would lose his place. So we bought no tickets that day. Instead, Black spent the day and a large amount of money for a teacher—in getting the paper repaired, and I had an ulcerated tooth lanced.

READING LETTERS UNDER DIFFICULTIES

On Thursday no fault could be found with our papers, and we were turned over to the mercies of the inspector of baggage. A very inquisitive chap he was, too. Everything was tumbled out of our bags and looked over. Then as soon as the inspection was finished and our pockets had been searched, we were told to move the stuff from the table so that others could have their turn. Of course there was no place to lay the things so as to pack them decently, and we had to throw them into the cases as best we could. Here again Black nearly had trouble, for he was the last one to go through the ordeal, and only made the train by carrying out his belongings over his arm, and being forcibly pulled into the train through a window, as the doors had been shut.

CARRYING MAIL A CRIME

I had a train letter in my pocket, slipped there after I had been searched in the station, and it was a rather delicate matter to read it, because carrying mail in the Turkish Empire is a crime, and there were people in the compartment who might be spies. Finally I solved the problem by going to the washroom for a shave that I did not need, and carefully burning the letter after I had read it. In such small precautions often lay our safety.

When lunch time came we had a shock. We had been told that bread would be hard to get, and so had laid in quite a supply of it, but some person had carefully taken it out of the steamer rugs in which we had had it wrapped, and thus we were breadless. We hardly felt it wise to inaugurate the trip by cooking in the train, and so we had bologna sausage and apricot jam for lunch. Good, but not very substantial, especially for the three who did not like sausage.

ON THE BULGARIAN FRONTIER

We heaved a sigh of relief when, about seven o'clock Thursday afternoon, we crossed the river that separates Turkey from Bulgaria, and rolled into Kóulélibourgos. But the sigh was a bit premature, if it expressed the idea that our difficulties were over. We were once more searched, rather superficially, and then put off the train. There is a through train from Constantinople to Berlin, which makes the trip in about sixty hours, but it is so strictly reserved for military persons and is generally so full, that we had decided not to try to get it, and so were traveling on the "Conventional," or local train, which made it necessary to change cars frequently.

This Bulgarian frontier town was the first change, and they greeted us there by taking away our passports and not returning them. We knew no Bulgarian, and so had to submit, rather with the feeling that our last doom was sealed. Nor were we happy when we saw the train into which we must crowd, for every place in the second-class was taken, and the third looked most unwholesome. We had wished not to travel first-class at any time, but there seemed no alternative, and so, after a council of war, we paid the difference and got a compartment by ourselves. The next day we learned that first-class generally has the largest number of creeping things, but our car was fairly clean and what we did not know did not disturb our dreams at night.

THE WAYS OF THE BULGARIANS

At Sofia our passports were returned to us at the station, and again we felt able to face the world, but we were told that we must have them stamped in the city. The only train of the day left at four forty-five p. m., and we planned to go on that day. Little did we know of the ways of the Bulgarians! I will not venture a full account of all that we did that day. We had to get a hotel porter's name on a registration paper, and as there were no empty rooms in the entire city, so far as we could find, no one would do the writing for us. Not until two o'clock did we find a man who was willing to help us out, and we bribed him to go around town with us, in an endeavor to get the train we wanted. Four visits were made to the common police, two to the secret police, one to the military police, and two to the medical inspector. At each place we had to tell the story of our lives and have it taken down in a big book, and we also had to leave two pictures of ourselves for some purpose that we never discovered. Finally the last formality was complete and we were at liberty to take the train—but our watches pointed to four-forty and we were half an hour from the station. So we got our baggage, took rooms that had been vacated since morning, and tried to console ourselves with Turkish baths. But consolation was hard to find when we were shut into a town where everyone looked askance at us and we could get no sugar for our coffee even by paying extra for it.

BREAD SCANT IN BULGARIA

I missed breakfast the next day in favor of a visit to a dentist, who spoiled my whole day. When she had done her worst I walked the streets in an endeavor to get something to eat, but finally had to content myself with hot milk and black bread. The supply of flour in Bulgaria is limited, and the people in general prefer a large quantity of inferior bread to using wheat alone, and we found only the large restaurants of the city able to give us palatable bread.

A CHAT WITH THE AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS

At two o'clock Saturday we were at the station, where we had to show our much stamped passports to the station commander for one more visé. That was easily obtained, and in a short time we found the train and got a good compartment, from which we watched a long hospital train, loaded with men, pull out. Where they had been fighting I do not know, but evidently there had been severe action somewhere in the vicinity. We were not destined to be alone in the compartment, however, for just as we were ready to leave two Austrian soldiers came in. They were very friendly — suspiciously so — and we talked with them until time to go to sleep. But as they hated America rather more than they did England, and wanted us to know it, we did not get along very well. Supper consisted of bread, bologna, and jam, and as my mouth was too sore for me to eat the bread, I was not enthusiastic about it. Nor was I happy over having to crowd five persons into a compartment where four can scarcely sleep comfortably, because I was the one in the middle. But we dozed a little, and somehow the time passed until three in the morning, when we had to get out at the end of the line, Lom Palanka.

A DREARY PLACE

That is a dreary place at that hour of a Sunday morning! We were herded into the station with some twenty other folk, to wait until our passports were recorded. Then we had to open our baggage for inspection, and pay to have it taken to the wharf where we were to get a boat, which was due to sail at three thirty. It was raining slightly, and there were only two dilapidated carriages to take all of us to the boat. It was a gay prospect, for our chance of getting away seemed pretty dim. Nevertheless we rode to the wharf as soon as we could and were relieved to see the masts of the ship still a little way down the river. So we looked around for our baggage with the idea of making a rush for the gangplank, when it occurred to us that the passports had not been given back. A crowd of our fellow passengers stood near a small house and we asked one who spoke French what we must do. "Get a visé and be searched," he answered. We walked into the house and were put out; the officer was not ready for us. We begged to be searched; the word had not been given. So we stood gloomily outside the door in the rain and thought of what a delight it would be to spend until three o'clock the next morning out there on that mud bank.

A MIRACLE HAPPENS

But still the boat stayed, though we were assured that it was not waiting for us, and suddenly a light gleamed as a shaggy soldier called a name. It did not belong to any of our party, but the fact that the commander was awake renewed a little hope. A moment more, and one of us was called. More hope. I was next, and I lost no time in getting into the Presence. Fortunately I resembled the picture on my passport, and was handed on to the shaggy soldier, who took me to a small booth and motioned to me to undress. I emptied my pockets in record time, took off my outer clothing, and explained the identity of some American paper money I had; then I jumped into my clothes, stuffed the contents of my pockets into my hat, and ran out of the place. There stood Black, not yet called! But our baggage was there and I seized all I could carry and started for the dock. A town boy carried more than he could normally lift; the other two Beirutians carried loads, and off we ran. Then a miracle happened.

The commandant saw that Black was in a hurry and sent him away without examination, so that he got to the boat just behind us. We shouted with joy—and then missed our water bottle. At once the boy who had helped us was rushed back for the demijohn, but scarcely had he left the boat when a whistle sounded and we were off. A Turk not fifty feet behind us was left standing on the dock after a valiant run for the ship, and our boy—well, I think the bottle was worth the work he did, and I hope that he is satisfied.

Henri Bergson

By Charles H. Forster

GERMANY has found a spiritual antagonist in Henri Bergson, the man who stands for what is best in the life and philosophy of modern France. His recent utterances are prophetic of the new philosophy which will ultimately pull down and utterly destroy the false ideals which are making a bloody ruin of Europe.

This philosophy of tomorrow will regard our present material civilization as a magnificently and marvelously developed brute. Science and invention have equipped its great body with many strange devices, and each new device is an artificial organ which extends, in a manner outreaching our farthest imaginings, the power of the brute. It can fly in the air and it can dive into the depths of the sea. It speaks over leagues of space and it hurls its deadly missiles over stretches of miles. It breathes deadly gases from its nostrils, and the flash of its eye reveals the enemy lurking in the darkness. But the development of the soul has not kept pace with the abnormal growth of the body. The whispering of the little soul that lives within our modern world cannot be heard above the terrible crunching and grinding of the wheels.

Our civilization is a complex system made up of highly developed primal functions. Our international relationships and diplomacy are often merely the latest stages in the evolution of tribal relationships, of primitive competition, jealousy and hostility. Commerce is merely the dickering of a Stone Age savage carried out on a big scale. We are on the scale of the twentieth century in body, but on the scale of the Stone Age in soul.

The future of the race depends upon the investment within the body of our material civilization of a soul large enough to harness and direct its wonderful mechanism, for without this higher spirit the great machine will get beyond our control, becoming the instrument of inborn, brutish impulses. It will turn upon us as the monster of our own making, bringing to ghastly ruin the things we dearly cherish.

There are two opinions in the background of men's minds in this age of crisis. The one is that the world has escaped from the control of the higher spirit, and the other is that our efforts to get it back under control will develop within the race a new strength of soul. The soul and the beast are wrestling together through this night, but the dawn shall be for the soul. Peace will bring into life a new and unheard of philosophy that will interpret life in terms that are strange to us, transforming our ways of thinking and transfiguring human relationships. The elements are melting in fervent heat, but out of it all will come a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Ministers' Children Are Patriotic.

Scotland is proud of the patriotism of its ministers and their families. The Free Church alone has given to the army service 687 ministers' sons and it is said that there is a large number of the daughters of ministers who are nursing in the military hospitals. These figures are presented to indicate the self-devotion which is begotten by life in the manse.

Three Friends Go To the Orient.

Three fellow students of Hartford Theological Seminary of twenty years ago are planning to go to the Orient together this winter. They are President Ozora S. Davis of Chicago Theological School, Rev. Frank S. Brewer, recently connected with Talladega College, and Rev. Dwight F. Goddard of Ann Arbor, Mich., once a missionary in China. These men will study mission work in Japan and China in an unofficial way, though they will be provided credentials by the American board. They will leave the last of this year or the first of next.

Friends Demand Different Treatment for Mexico.

The Philadelphia yearly meeting of Friends has spoken its mind with regard to the Mexican situation. A peace committee presented resolutions with regard to the Mexican policy which repudiates the big stick and asks "a force of educators, teachers, doctors, sanitary engineers, farmers and agricultural experts who will volunteer for two or three years in the spirit of service such as we rendered Cuba at her time of crisis." The committee insists that occasional depredations of outlaw bands across the borders are no occasion for war between the United States and Mexico.

Will Shorten Ten Commandments.

A commission will report to the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at St. Louis this autumn on ritual change, and among the alterations it will recommend will be the shortening of the wording of the Ten Commandments. These will take the briefest form consistent with clarity. It is urged that the original form was doubtless very brief and the commandments tended to become complicated by comments attached to them.

Christian Endeavor Grows.

Recently there was held the annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor leaders at Sagamore Beach, Mass., at which reports were given of the growth of the movement during the past year. In that time 3,500 new societies have been formed and the reports are not at all complete. It was the plan to organize 10,000 new societies in two years and it now seems that this goal will be easily reached. In many other ways the societies are approaching the goal set for the two-year campaign. In the South there is a new friendliness to the movement and 700 new societies have been organized there. The Southern Presbyterian Assembly endorsed the movement this year, for the first time in its history.

Great Missionary Educator Dies.

Rev. Daniel Bliss was the founder of the now justly celebrated Syrian Protestant College of Beirut. He died recently at the age of 92 years. The institution that he founded goes on to continually greater successes in educating the young men of a land which has not known the purity of the gospel teaching.

Friends Want Non-Resistance.

The Society of Friends in England have issued a public manifesto protesting against the war. They call on the nation to "give up the whole idea of defending their rights as Christ stood defenseless in the midst of possible enemies." They declare that "this plan would turn enemies into friends—a much better plan than defeating them." While the Friends have not enlisted in the army, they have performed many other dangerous duties in connection with the war in vindication of their patriotism.

Women Preachers for Church of England.

The place of women in the national mission which the Established Church of England is projecting is a question causing much excitement, and which in the end may get still more attention. It is stated that women will be allowed to speak to women and girls, but they must not speak from pulpit, lectern or steps. Only women sanctioned by the bishop will be allowed to speak. There are some who regard these simple permissions as destroying the historic testimony of the church. This is but one phase of the feminist controversy, which waits only the end of the war to break out with new fury.

The Family Altar League.

A few years ago the family Altar League was organized. The growth of the movement since has been very satisfactory. During the past seven years 300,000 covenant cards have been distributed, over 60,000 homes have affiliated with the movement, and it is estimated that more than 250,000 lives have been influenced for good. A monthly magazine has been published containing daily readings with comments and helpful suggestions for the home life. Cards and literature may be obtained without cost. Dr. Biederwolf, the founder, is raising an endowment fund of $100,000, of which $40,000 has been subscribed. The league has grown so rapidly that the directors decided recently to open larger headquarters and engage a general secretary, Rev. R. Howard Taylor. Since he took charge of the work, plans have been adopted for a country-wide campaign. The following well-known men are among the directors: Dr. John Timothy Stone, Dr. Francis E. Clark, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, Bishop Charles B. Mitchell, Marion Lawrance, J. Campbell White, Henry P. Crowell, Dr. James M. Grey, Judge McKenzie Cleland and E. O. Excell.

Union Project Finds Rough Roads.

The proposed union of northern and southern Methodism is just now finding some roads that are pretty rough. The friends of union have spoken in a free way but the obscurantist element has now gotten its howitzers into position. Bishop Candler of the southern connection will have nothing to do with any form of merger which will allow northern men anything to say about the government of the southern churches. His utterances are interesting as setting forth the mind of that element of southern churches which still puts sectionalism above the interests of the united church of Christ.

Observe Relief Sunday.

In response to the proclamation of the President of the United States appointing Saturday and Sunday, October 21 and 22, as days for the relief of the suffering Armenian and Syrian peoples, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is earnestly urging upon all of the churches of the thirty constituent bodies of the Federal Council, and upon all Christian people, that Sunday, October 22, be set apart for earnest intercession in behalf of the people of these races. The Federal Council will send to all the pastors of its constituency full informational material for use in presenting this cause and recommends that contributions at all services on this day be secured for distribution through the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian relief.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

Federation at Pullman

The Federated Church of Pullman, Wash., composed of Congregationalists and Baptists, is completing its third year under the leadership of its Congregationalist pastor, Rev. C. H. Harrison, and his Baptist associate, Mr. W. E. Shawen.

Three years ago these two congregations found themselves face to face with the usual problems of the small church in an over-churched town. Committees were appointed representing each denomination, from the joint conferences of which a plan of federation resulted. All members in good standing in each of the congregations formed the nucleus of the new church, to which new members are added according to the rules of the denominations federating.

This church has a very complete and efficient organization. A financial board of ten members provides for the annual budget and has general oversight of the financial affairs of the congregation. A treasurer and clerk perform the functions usual to those offices. The pastor appoints an advisory board of ten members to consult with him regarding the spiritual, social and educational work of the church. All officers of the church and members of its boards meet as an executive committee once each month. The officers are directly responsible to the congregation, and, with the exception of the advisory board, are elected at its annual business meeting.

In addition, each congregation in the federation has its own business meetings for the transaction of purely denominational business. All property is held by the congregations as denominations, but is at the service of the federation. The Congregational building is used for worship, while the Baptist Church forms a center for the federation's social work.

The federation supports the various benevolent and missionary enterprises of the denominations represented, each contributor specifying his denomination. All funds not so specified are divided equally.

The Articles of Federation provide that either party may withdraw by giving six months' written notice of such intention to the clerk of the Federated Church, a provision which, in view of the success of the movement, neither party is likely to utilize.

Unfortunately, the Baptist branch of the federation could not get the endorsement of the Baptist denomination to its participation at the inception of the movement, and has since been excommunicated because of it, but in spite of this slight unpleasantness the effect of the federation has been unqualifiedly good, and its success has surpassed all expectations.

* * *

Union Church at Seeley

BELIEVING that the Kingdom of God can best be promoted in the towns and rural districts of America by the co-operation of Christion believers of all denominations in one religious institution, the Christian people of Seeley, Cali., representing a half dozen or more different denominations, met on September 27, 1914, and voted to organize a union church. This organization has been consummated under the name of the Seeley Union Church of Christ.

The purpose of this church, according to its constitution, is "to maintain Christian work and worship and to foster the spirit of Christian brotherhood and social service throughout this vicinity." Its members consist of those who subscribe to the following covenant:

"I believe with all my heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Saviour of Men. I accept Him as my Lord and promise to obey Him in all things according to my knowledge of His will. It is my purpose, according to my ability, to cooperate with my brethren in the support of this church and in the extension of its influence."

With a profound conviction that this is the kind of a church Seeley ought to have, not only for the present, but for the future, the organization has been planned and the work inaugurated with a view to its permanence. In order to provide for the enlistment in Christian service of the greatest number of people in the vicinity it is understood and agreed that members of the Seeley Union Church of Christ may maintain denominational affiliation elsewhere.

Such officers and committees as the present needs demand have been selected. These constitute the cabinet or official board of the church, which meets upon the first Sunday of each month and submits its recommendations to the congregation for final action. As the work advances and members show their qualifications for special duties, other officers and committees are chosen.

The Lord's Supper is celebrated upon the first Sunday of every month, in which all who desire are invited to participate.

Seeley is a new and developing town in the Imperial Valley, situated on the new line of the San Diego & Arizona Railway. The church is sharing in the general community growth, having doubled its membership since its organization less than two years ago. For the information regarding this field we are indebted to Mr. George Ragan, of El Centro, Cal., who has been in close touch with the situation from the first.

It is a mark of spiritual insight to be able to recognize goodness everywhere, and assert kinship with it, to accept it and thank God for it, to claim fellowship with every good man, to share in every good work, however unauthorized by man, if only it have the stamp of God's approval.—Hugh Black.

October 15 is the date set for the publication of

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

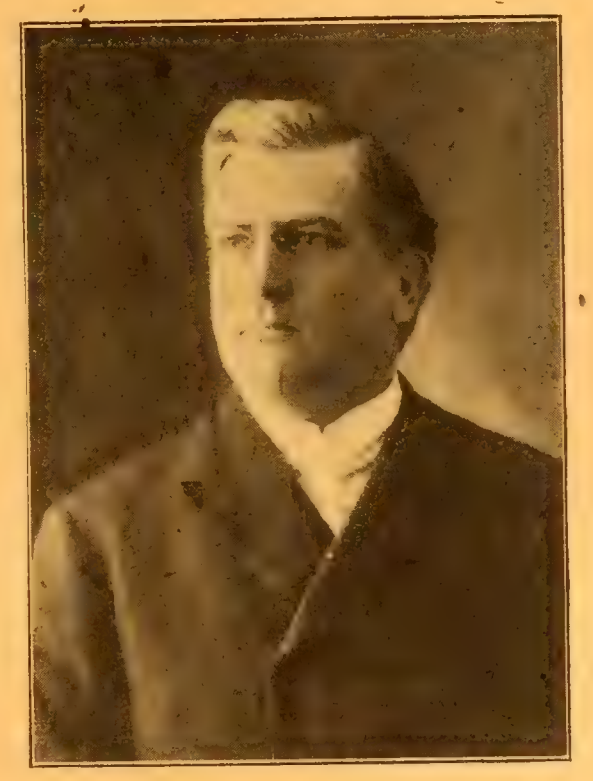
The Disciples Hymnal

Edited by Charles Clayton Morrison and Herbert L. Willett. The book is now on the press after some delay due to the incalculable conditions obtaining in the manufacture of the paper. Many requests for returnable copies have been received. These will be sent promptly. A wide-spread interest has been manifested in the appearance of this notable work into which five years of preparation have gone. The publishers regard The Disciples Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. Pastors or responsible officers of churches may write for returnable copy of the hymnal. Please state the approximate number of books your congregation will need. Address

Disciples Publication Society,
700 East 40th Street, Chicago

Disciples Table Talk

Dr. Ainslie to Celebrate Anniversary.



The twenty-fifth anniversary of the beginning of the work of Dr. Peter Ainslie at Baltimore, Md., will be celebrated on October 8. Dr. Ainslie will preach in the morning and Dr. Idleman, of Central Church, New York, in the evening. The goals for the day are: Twenty-five persons to take membership with the church, a thousand to partake of the Lord's Supper, and an offering of $1,000. Dr. Ainslie writes that he has been more or less of an invalid for nearly a year, but that now the physician has released him. He states that he feels stronger than ever before. Dr. Ainslie began his work in Baltimore as pastor of old Third Church, with less than one hundred members, and with a mortgage nearly the full value of the property. The first branch church was started in a hall in 1901, and became the present Twenty-fifth Street Church. The second branch was started in a Chinese laundry shop, and, as the Randall Street Church, was formally opened in 1902. The Christian Temple was formally opened in 1905. Calhoun Street Church was started by reorganizing the old Third Church; this was in 1905. The fourth branch church was started by the employment of Miss Edna P. Dale as the church's missionary to China, in 1906. The main building of the Christian Temple was opened formally in 1906. The fifth branch church—Wilhelm Park—was started in a prayer meeting, and the church was formally opened in 1909. The English Consul Church—the sixth branch—was opened early this year. The seventh branch was started by the reopening of the church at Fulton and Walbrook avenues. Two other branches, one at Reicester road and the other among the colored people, have been inaugurated since May of this year. From the church presided over by Dr. Ainslie ten ministers and missionaries have been sent out during these years. The present Christian Temple has a membership of 1,150 and property valued at $70,000; including the branch churches, 2,050 members, and including the property of these and Seminary House, $132,000.

"The Sun's Up in Mexico."

This is the message that comes from Randolph Cook, pastor at Albuquerque, N. M. He reports that during his first year there 87 persons have been received into the church membership, with a net increase of 74. Over $4,000 in money has been received, of which $350 has been expended for missions. Mr. Cook has delivered 135 addresses, and has made 1,631 calls. He has been called upon to address the Odd Fellows, the Grocers' Association, the State Chautauqua Association, the State Teachers' Association, and has charge of the Hanly-Landrith train for prohibition promoting. On three Sunday evenings of September, Mr. Cook gave talks to young people on the following themes: "Motorcycles," "A Talk With Girls," and "Climbing the Steeps."

Walter M. White to Go to Memphis, Tenn.

Walter M. White, for the past ten years pastor of the First Church, Cedar Rapids, Ia., has tendered his resignation and asked to be released not later than October 22. He has been called to the pastorate of First Church, Memphis, Tenn., and he has accepted the call. The announcement came as a complete surprise and something of a shock to the church membership at the close of the Sunday morning service, two weeks ago. Mr. White stated that seven weeks ago he had received a tentative call from

Rev. Walter W. White
Who Goes to First Church, Memphis, Tennessee

the Memphis church. He replied that he was contented and happy in his work at Cedar Rapids and that he could not consider a proposition to leave. But they wrote him a second letter, and a third, and finally wired him to go down for a conference. He went down and, after looking over the field and its needs, decided to accept the call. Mr. White has done a remarkable work in Cedar Rapids. The church membership has been greatly increased, a fine new church edifice has been erected, and the Sunday school activities have reached such magnitude that they have attracted attention over the United States. A few weeks ago Mr. Abbott Book, who has been Mr. White's assistant, and who had very much to do with the upbuilding of the Sunday school, was called to a larger field at Elgin, Ill. The church at Memphis to which Mr. White goes is the largest Christian Church in that city and one of the largest in the United States, having 750 members.

First Church, St. Louis, Has Home-Coming in Newly Purchased Building.

For many years First Church, the mother church of St. Louis Disciple Churches, held the fort in the difficult downtown district, near Jefferson avenue, but during the past few years this district has been transformed into a business section, and a large colored population has moved in, so that last autumn the congregation sold this property and purchased the building of the Delmar Avenue Baptist Church, about a mile west of the old location. This building cost the Baptists about $50,000, but it was purchased by the First Church leaders at a bargain figure. The present plant is the fourth to house the work of First Church, the organization having been made in the thirties of last century. J. L. Brandt has served the church for over twelve years, and is its present pastor.

Deserved Tribute to a Disciple Layman.

John T. Burton, who died three years ago in his home town, Emporia, Kan., was for many years an elder of the Disciples Church there and a community figure in a town of unusual people. He was a graduate of Butler College, never preached regularly, but was a business man who put the Kingdom of God first, and actually, without advertising himself, strove to make the Kingdom come. Such is the estimate of Mr. Burton by Professor W. A. Parker, of Pomona College, Claremont, Cal. Professor Parker delivered the address in memory of Mr. Burton at the memorial service held last month in the Emporia church; at this time a memorial tablet to the deceased was unveiled by his daughter, Miss Lois Burton. D. Y. Donaldson, pastor at Emporia, also had part in the service. Professor Parker further writes: "With the exception of Professor Iden and Professor T. S. Kelly (husband of Louise Kelly), I have never known a layman who approached Mr. Burton in unselfishness, effectiveness, genuine devotion. He was a liberal spirit. My estimate of him is a sober one, and leaves the best things about him almost untouched." Among the many friends participating in the gift of the tablet were: Professor Iden and Mrs. Mary E. Calkins of Ann Arbor; Dr. A. L. Shelton, missionary to China; Mrs. Josephine McD. Stearns of Indianapolis, and Professor and Mrs. Parker. The inscription on the tablet reads: "In memory of John Thomas Burton, whose noble life, so generously given through this church to every cause of human betterment, continues its influence and ministry through hundreds of grateful men and women."

Home-Coming Day at Central Church, Des Moines.

October 16 will be Home-Coming Day at Central Church, Des Moines. This is the date of the anniversary of the organization of the church, which has a history of fifty-six years. Five of Central's former pastors are still living, and all have been invited to be present on this occasion. These pastors are: John C. Ray, who served the church from 1873 to 1875; B. J. Radford, who served from 1881 to 1883; A. P. Cobb, pastor from 1883 to 1884; H. O. Breeden, whose administration extended from 1885 to 1906, and Finis Idleman, who left this field last year, after a service of eight years. Special addresses by Drs. Breeden and Idleman will be features of the anniversary program. The presence of the convention crowds will aid in making this an unusual occasion. The new pastor at Central, W. A. Shullenberger, is already making a record as a pastor and organizer.

Men and Millions Accomplishments.

During the past year the Men and Millions leaders have held campaigns in St. Joseph, Hannibal and St. Louis, Mo.; in Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, Ia.; in Indianapolis, Ind.; in Cleveland and Akron, Ohio; in Richmond, Baltimore, Lynchburg and Washington, D. C., in the East, and other important centers.

Secretary A. E. Cory reports that the total of the amount pledged, either directly to the movement or through cooperating institutions, is about $3,750,000. Nearly five thousand young people have responded to the life call for service, having signed the Life Cards. Mr. Cory writes that he finds that the Every Member Canvass is being used everywhere, and states that one of the greatest things being done is the enlistment of the whole church, not only in this campaign, but in an effort to instill in the minds of the people an adequate conception of the missionary enterprise.

Railway Rates to the Convention.

The railways have decided on the rates to be charged passengers to the Des Moines convention. The Central Passenger Association, Chicago, St. Louis, etc., will give a two cents per mile rate—the regular rate is 2.4 cents. The Western Passenger Association refuses any reduction. The Northwestern Association has granted a slight reduction; also the Southeastern. The round trip rates from the following cities are as here given: St. Louis, $16.42; Cincinnati, $29.24; Indianapolis, $24.64; Buffalo, $35.84; New York, $50.54.

Ministerial Meeting Postponed.

Because of the Des Moines convention, there will be no meeting of the Chicago Ministerial Association on Monday, October 8, but the association will convene on the following Monday, at 10:30, at the Great Northern Hotel, when reports of the convention will be given.

Big Gain for Foreign Missions Reported.

Secretary F. M. Rains sends a telegram stating that the offerings for foreign missions have passed the $500,000 mark. Churches, Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies and bequests all show good gains. Reports also from the foreign field are reported most encouraging. Thirteen new missionaries are being sent out and Secretary Rains pronounces this year already "the best year in the history of the work."

State and District Work in Illinois to Be Closely Articulated.

H. H. Peters, newly chosen state secretary of Illinois, reports that the crowning event of the month of September in the Illinois state work was a meeting of the committee appointed by the state board to consider the question of a closer articulation of the state and district work. This committee consists of S. H. Zendt, Bloomington; C. E. French, Virginia; A. K. Adcock, DuQuoin; Walter S. Rounds, Taylorville; C. C. Carpenter, Princeton, and the state secretary. This committee met in Bloomington on September 28 and prepared a plan which will be presented to the state board at the next meeting, on November 8. Mr. Peters writes that the plans to be suggested are of far-reaching significance. The secretary also reports a conference with President Pritchard and Field Secretary Lehman of Eureka College, on state work. Mr. Peters spent Sundays most profitably with the church at Vermont, on the occasion of its home-coming; with the church at Ludlow, which rededicated under the leadership of G. L. Snively; with the church at Edinburg, assisting in a church and Sunday school rally; with all the churches of Rantoul, in a great union meeting, and with the Havana church, where Mr. Peters delivered four addresses.

Pennsylvania Disciples in Convention.

The eighty-third annual convention of the Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society, the annual convention of the state C. W. B. M. and the twelfth annual session of the Christian Ministerial Association of Eastern Pennsylvania were held in the church at Plymouth, Pa., about the middle of September. There were 111 registered visiting delegates from forty-seven churches of Eastern Pennsylvania present. Among those on the program were: M. C. Frick, J. Albert Hall, E. C. Lunger, Mrs. T. W. Phillips, Mrs. Anna R. Atwater, W. L. Dudley, H. W. Laye, F. J. M. Appleman, Miss Hazel Lewis, C. H. Frick, S. J. Corey, Grant K. Lewis and H. W. Caldwell. H. C. Boblett led the music of the conventions. Mrs. T. W. Phillips is president of the state C. W. B. M., M. C. Frick of the Eastern Pennsylvania Ministerial Association, and J. Albert Hall of the Eastern Pennsylvania Missionary Society.

Progress at First Church, Philadelphia.

Irving H. Chenoweth, of First Church, Philadelphia, reports that funds are being raised for the new building planned for this important work. Pledges have been received to the amount of $16,000 from thirty-five members of the congregation, and Mr. and Mrs. Teachout of Cleveland, Ohio, have also given $1,000. Before beginning on the building it will be necessary to raise about $15,000 more than has been pledged, besides what it is hoped will be realized from the sale of the old building. The pastor's house, "The Manse," is being built and will be ready for occupancy in November. The pastor's reception will be held on October 10, under the auspices of the ladies' guild. Mr. Chenoweth has arranged for two series of addresses for the winter, the first being on the general theme of peace, and the second on the wage problem. Several well-known leaders will speak on the subject of peace, and the second series will take the form of a sort of open forum. All of these special services will be held on Sunday evenings.

Death of James N. Lester.

T. A. Boyer sends word of the death of James N. Lester, for many years a Disciple pastor and man of business, at his late home in North Berkeley Hills, near San Francisco. The date of his death was September 14. Mr. Lester was born in Sangamon County, Ill., where he grew to manhood, and where he, as a young man, consecrated himself to the Christian ministry. He received his education at Eureka College and at Lake Forest University, and served as pastor at Milford, Hoopeston and Waukegan, Ill. Because of a breakdown in his health, Mr. Lester was compelled to turn from the ministry and to devote himself to pursuits of the outdoor life. The last years of his life were given to the management of large interests he had come to possess in California. For five years he had lived in the North Berkeley Hills with his family. Mr. Lester is survived by his wife, who was Miss Cora V. Hester, a former student of Eureka, and three daughters. The funeral service was conducted by Mr. Boyer, who knew the deceased from early college days. Other ministers of the San Francisco Bay region assisted.

★ ★

—Thirty-eight persons, representing the Disciples Sunday schools of Cleveland, Ohio, met at a supper at the Y. M. C. A., on September 26, and arranged for a group of Disciples to attend the City Teacher Training Institute each Monday night this winter. Euclid avenue reports fourteen persons enrolled for the Institute already. So far this is the largest advanced enrollment of any brotherhood in the city.

—L. D. Anderson, pastor of First Church, Ft. Worth, Tex., has been seriously ill, but is reported to be recovering.

—Charles S. Medbury, of University place, Des Moines, has a new assistant pastor, in the form of a Studebaker car.

—E. M. Waits, recently called to the presidency of Texas Christian University at Ft. Worth, has received 1,300 members into Magnolia Avenue Church, Ft. Worth, since he became its pastor ten years ago. He has raised over $75,000 for the work of the church. Trustees, friends of the university, faculty and student body are reported as delighted with the election of Mr. Waits to the presidency of the institution. He is to succeed F. D. Kershner, who resigned the leadership of the school last November to assume the editorship of the Christian Evangelist.

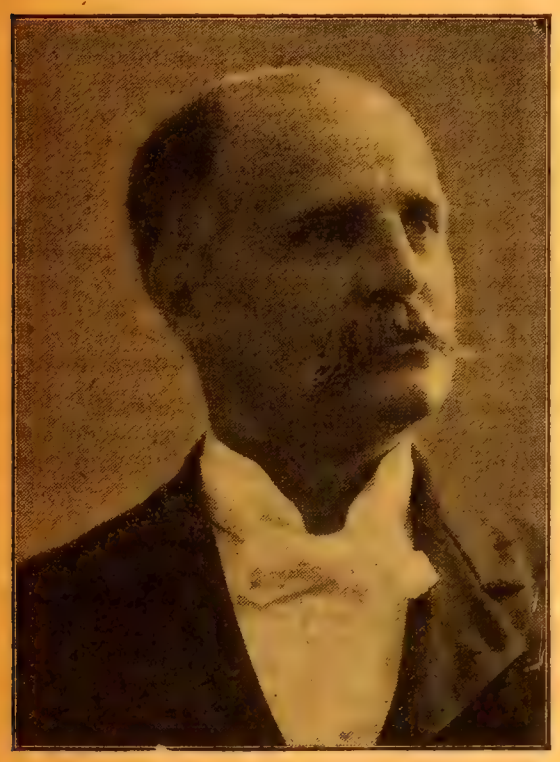
—Last Sunday was Rally and Promotion Day at the Norwood, Ohio, Sunday school. The crowd present was expected to be so large that arrangements were made to have the entire school march in a body to the City Hall auditorium. Over 600 children were promoted, and over 200 men were expected to be present in the class of the pastor, C. R. Stauffer. The school boasts a Cradle Roll of over 250.

—The First and Second churches of East Liverpool, Ohio, and the churches of Wellsville and Chester, are in the midst of a union revival at Newell, Ohio,

An Ideal Course for Adult and Young People's Classes

Dr. Loa E. Scott's "Life of Jesus"

A study of the life of the Master in 52 lessons. Bristling with questions, and requiring a study of the Bible itself. The finest course yet offered for adult and young people's classes. Price in lots of 10 or more, 40c. Single copy, 50c.



Disciples Publication Society :: :: 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

to continue four weeks. The meetings are held in a tabernacle. The pastors of the churches are, respectively, John Mullen, James Ridgley, John Neilson and John Clark.

—Wilbur H. White has resigned the pastorate at Ennis, Tex., and will engage in business in Thornton.

—F. W. O'Malley, of First Church, Bonham, Tex., recently preached a special sermon to the faculty and students of the Bonham public schools. His subject was "Lifting the World."

—Further facts concerning the death of Chancellor William Bayard Craig are slow coming in. It is learned from one report that Mr. Craig had never fully recovered, following an automobile accident in which he was injured about three years ago. For the last year he had been an invalid. Mr. Craig is survived by his wife, Mary Carpenter Craig, one daughter, May Craig-Lawrence, and four grandchildren.

The Late Rev. Wm. Bayard Craig

—A. L. Cole, recently resigned from the Cecil Street Church, Toronto, Can., was called to the work at Central, Decatur, Ill., to succeed W. H. Cannon, but it is reported that he declined the call.

—A feature of the Bible school sessions at the Des Moines convention will be the awarding of a beautiful loving cup to the state or district having the highest percentage of Bible school efficiency in the field of the American Christian Missionary Society. The cup is presented by the state of Kansas. It is to be retained but one year on this award, but any state or district receiving it three years in succession will hold it permanently.

—Kansas, Ill., Christian Church, with two other churches of the town, maintains a reading room for boys during the autumn and winter months. J. E. Pritchett leads at Kansas.

—Burris A. Jenkins preached a "Sermon to Golfers" two weeks ago. Mr. Jenkins spoke in praise of the game as an aid to physical upbuilding.

—The Davis Street Christian Church, Ottumwa, Ia., was host recently to a meeting of the Workingmen's Triangle Brotherhood, at which were present members of all the city's churches. As a result of the meeting, a citywide organization of the male church workers will be made. Congressman C. W. Ramseyer delivered an address on "Public Problems from a Practical Standpoint."

—Because his 21-year-old son has enlisted in the Canadian Overseas army, Morgan Genge of First Church, Ottumwa, Ia., has resigned his pulpit and has gone to Canada to manage his son's 480-acre farm.

—M. W. Yocum, of the Hartford City, Ind., church, recently delivered an address before the students of the local high school.

—In a Sunday morning sermon, A. R. Liverett, of the Jefferson City, Mo., First Church, made the statement that the Missouri capital city is more immoral at the present time than ever before, due to the fact that the officials are too busy running for other offices.

—Miss Zona Smith, who has served as a missionary in Argentine for the last five years, is now in Des Moines, and will remain through the convention.

—John W. Gratton, pastor of Highland Park Church, Des Moines, was married recently to Miss Ruby Stone of Acton, England. The ceremony took place in Boston, Mark Wayne Williams, of the Boston Church, being the officiating minister. Mr. Williams is an old friend of Mr. Gratton, having been instrumental in sending him to Drake University.

—The Churches of Christ of Des Moines have presented the Iowa Historical Society with a fine painting of Alexander Campbell, the work of one of the best artists of the country.

—Among the special parties coming to the convention at Des Moines from various parts of the country are one from Lexington, Ky., under the care of Walter E. Frazee; one from Atlanta, Ga., with L. O. Bricker in charge; others from Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, all of these being on the Wabash. Other parties are reported via the Northwestern and the Rock Island.

—Mrs. D. R. Lucas, wife of a former pastor at Central Church, Des Moines, is already at Des Moines, to remain until after the convention. Mrs. Lucas makes her home with a daughter in Indianapolis.

—The Intermediate C. E. Union of Des Moines will make the announcements of Christian Endeavor convention events from the sky with kites and balloons by day and with flood-lights from the tops of the tallest buildings by night. Christian Endeavor notables to be present at the convention are: Dr. Ira Landrith, of the United Society; Claude E. Hill, national secretary of Chrstian Endeavor for the Disciples of Christ, and Frank Lowe, Jr., new Disciples field secretary. A banquet in honor of the national leaders will be held at Capitol Hill Church at 6 o'clock, on October 10. A Christian Endeavor parade will be featured on Saturday, October 14. Mildred J. Haggard of Minneapolis, national junior superintendent of the United Society, will give an address at one of the sessions.

—Dwight Lewis, teacher of the famous Philo Christos class at Central Church, Des Moines, spent two weeks the late summer at the Y. M. C. A for high school boys at Lake O' —L. O. Bricker, of First lanta, Ga., writes that after faithful and fruitful service

There is a Real Difference

Cream of tartar, derived from grapes, is used in Royal Baking Powder because it is the best and most healthful ingredient known for the purpose.

Phosphate and alum, which are derived from mineral sources, are used in some baking powders, instead of cream of tartar, because they are cheaper.

If you have been induced to use baking powders made from alum or phosphate, use Royal Baking Powder instead. You will be pleased with the results and the difference in the quality of the food.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

End Church, Atlanta, W. C. Foster has tendered his resignation, to take effect January 1. Mr. Foster has brought this work to a high state of efficiency, having added over 300 persons to the membership, quadrupled the Sunday school attendance, and put the church in a very favorable light in the community. Both Mr. and Mrs. Foster are graduates of Transylvania. Mr. Bricker states that some good church should have their services at once.

—Highland Park Church, Des Moines, will rent part of its space for business purposes.

—The Moline, Ill., Sunday school planned to observe "100 Per Cent Day" early this month. The Loyal Gleaners, a young ladies' class of this school, is reported to be raising $500 toward a fund for a new church building.

—At the county convention of Jasper county, Mo., held at Carterville, a fine pennant was awarded to Center Point, a rural church, for the best percentage of attendance. Under the leadership of Mr. Johnson, the county president, a "flying squadron" had been going about among the county's churches for six months before the convention. They displayed the pennant and advertised the convention. The reporter writes that a large factor in the success of the meeting was the work of J. H. Jones, of the District leadership, who is said to be "the best secretary in the Brotherhood." Mr. Jones was present at the sessions. Some of the leaders on the program were C. H. Swift, W. P. Shamhart, C. C. Garrigues, Miss Nannie Hopper, an exiled Mexican missionary, and Mrs. Brown, president of the First District, C. W. B. M., organization.

—A mission Sunday school, situated in the center of a rapidly growing section of Peoria, Ill., has just been taken over from the local Evangelical Association by the Disciples, and will be made a nucleus of a new church. There is only one other Protestant Sunday school in this section of 15,000 population. Mrs. E. B. Hale is superintendent of the new mission.

—James A. Burns of Fort Madison, Ia., reports that two young men of this church have entered Drake, to prepare for the ministry. Another young man and three young ladies will take up ministerial or mission work next autumn.

—W. W. Wharton of Jacksonville, Ill., will evangelize during October and November in Illinois and Iowa.

—John S. Zeran, editor of the Arkansas Christian, has been chosen to succeed C. A. Chasteen as superintendent of missions in Arkansas.

—Report has it that there is an organized movement to secure the International Christian Endeavor convention for 1918 for Des Moines.

—Granville Snell of Mound City, Mo., for several years Seventh District evangelist, has been chosen by the state board as superintendent of missions, to succeed C. A. Lowe of Camden Point.

—The third annual meeting of the Christian churches of Fountain county, Ind., was held Sunday, September 24, at Hillsboro, Ind. The speakers for the occasion were Gary L. Cook, state Sunday school secretary and evangelist; Prof. John G. McGavran, of the chair of Cooperative Religion and Indian Languages of the College of Missons, and W. B. Alexander, missionary, recently returned from the heart of India. There are fourteen churches of the Disciples in this county, and all were represented except two, some with large delegations. The churches of Fountain county have a growing ambition to some day become a living-link by supporting their own missionary on the field.

—There will be a conference of ministers' wives held in Des Moines during convention week, on Thursday morning, from 8 to 9:15, in Central Church. This will be the third meeting of its kind to be held in connection with our national conventions. A good program has been arranged. Mrs. Shullenberger of Des Moines will preside.

—T. F. Weaver of Sweetwater, Tex., has accepted the work at Central Church, Stamford, Tex.

—The King's Workers' Sunday school class of First Church, Taylor, Tex., has purchased new furniture for the church.

—The Disciple churches of Indianapolis, Ind., are co-operating with other city churches in planning for Church Day, October 10, which will be a feature of the Indiana centennial, to be celebrated in October.

—The new building of the Newcastle, Ind., church was dedicated on September 24, with George L. Snively in charge.

—E. K. VanWinkle has been called from First Church, Mishawaka, Ind., to the Island Church, Wheeling, W. Va.

—During his vacation of two months J. H. Craig of Troy, N. Y., filled the pulpit of the Bellevue Church twice and preached at a union meeting of all the churches of the vicinity. Also, on one Monday morning he addressed the Ministerial Association.

—The aim for Rally Day at Jefferson street Bible school, Buffalo, N. Y., on October 1, was "Our Class Enrollment Present."

—R. Graham Frank and his congregation at Liberty, Mo., have planned a protracted meeting to begin October 23 and close November 12. E. E. Violett will be the evangelist in charge.

—H. W. Hunter, pastor at Wellington, Kan., is making his prayer meetings worth while, with a series of "Character Studies of Old Testament Heroes and Heroines." Two-minute talks are a feature.

—It is reported that Lloyd Darsie has resigned at Hollywood, Cal.

—J. R. Perkins of the Sioux City, Ia., church preached a sermon at the first session of his "Young People's Forum," his text being: "And they took him and brought him unto Areopagus, saying, 'May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?'" In explanation of the forum idea, Mr. Perkins made the statement that "the particular aim of the open forum is to give expression to life. Suppression is the deadliest foe that religion has."

—Rand Shaw reports his second meeting with J. L. Finnell, pastor at Mill Creek, Ky., with 46 additions as one result. Mr. Shaw is now at Jamestown, Ohio, with A. C. Shaw. Wallace Tuttle leads in the singing.

—A. B. Houze, pastor at Central Church, Lima, Ohio, reports that his people observed Promotion and Rally Day on Sunday, September 24, with a strong program and an attendance of 420. At the close of the morning sermon there were eleven confessions, and in the evening the Junior Department of the Sunday school put on a popular Bible drama, prepared by Miss Lula Abbott, the Junior superintendent.

—Verle W. Blair of the Eureka, Ill., church is leading his people in a one week's meeting, with sermons by members of the college faculty on "Life Problems." Instruction in congregational singing by Professor Bredin is a special feature. Edgar D. Jones of First Church, Bloomington, Ill., delivered an address at the church on September 25, on which occasion the men of the church gave a reception to the students of the college and high school and to citizens of Eureka not identified with other churches.

—Byron Hester, who leads the work at Pryor, Okla., reports five accessions to the membership of the church on September 24.

—Cotner University, Bethany, Neb., is starting off with an unusually fine prospect, according to reports. "A surprising number of new students have already enrolled, in addition to many former students who are back for work." A. D. Harmon, the new dean, and head of the department of philosophy, has already inspired great confidence on the part of faculty and students.

—The East Creighton Avenue Church, Fort Wayne, Ind., led by E. H. Clifford, reports a net addition to the membership of 33 since the first of the year. The C. W. B. M. is on the roll of honor. The three Christian Endeavor societies have done unusually good work. Through the activities of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church the auditorium has been frescoed and repainted.

—Chester A. Gillum began work at Beardstown, Ill., October 1, after three weeks as superintendent of Callaway county, Mo.

—Alva W. Taylor delivered the convocation address at William Woods College, Fulton, Mo., on September 15. This school began its work with a large enrollment.

Frank Waller Allen is preaching at the sessions of his Fellowship Class, at

THE BETHANY SYSTEM OF SUNDAY SCHOOL
LITERATURE

Published for

More Efficient
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

First Church, Springfield, Ill., a series of "Little Sermons on Religion and Youth." "The Everydays" is the general subject of the series. The following are the topics discussed from week to week: "Everyday Salvation," "Everyday Health," "Everyday Courage," "Everyday Faith," "Everyday Self-Control," "Everyday Self-Reliance," "Everyday Self-Expression," "Everyday Service," "Everyday Love," "Everyday Beauty." A year ago the Fellowship Class inaugurated a special work among boys, which is still very successful. This year a similar work is being undertaken in behalf of the girls.

—The Men's Club of the Oakland, Cal., church gave a dinner in honor of the new pastor there, H. A. VanWinkle.

—S. D. Martin, pastor of the church in South Portland, Ore., who responded to the President's call for soldiers on June 20, and went to the Mexican border with the Third Regiment of Oregon, has returned to his pastorate.

—Garrett W. McQuiddy, formerly pastor of the Maywood Church, Oklahoma City, has been called to the pulpit of Central Church, Springfield, Mo., according to newspaper reports.

—President Serena, of William Woods College, writes that one of the great improvements of the summer at this school has been the enlargement of the campus lake. This will be called "The Lake of the Woods."

—A school of methods will be conducted at First Church, Mansfield, Ohio, November 13-17. The national team of workers from the Bible school department of the A. C. M. S. will be present to help.

—The Franklin County (O.) Disciples' Union has arranged for a school of methods at West Fourth Avenue Church, Columbus, November 20-24. The faculty will consist of National Secretaries W. J. Clarke, Miss Cynthia P. Maus and Miss Hazel A. Lewis, and State Secretary McLain.

—L. L. Leake, son of E. F. Leake, pastor at Independence, Mo., is one of the new ministerial students at Drake this year.

★ ★

THE C. W. B. M. AT THE DES MOINES CONVENTION.

In our reports and in our plans for the home field work, we shall, of course, consider the evangelistic work which we are now doing in thirty states; our four mountain schools, with their special demands for buildings at this time, and our Bible chairs in four state universities.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions carries the responsibility for our people among the negroes. Our opportunities there are very great. We have, in recent years, started two new negro schools, one in Texas and one in Kentucky. Neither of these schools is at all adequately equipped. The location of our school in Tennessee has been changed from Jonesboro to Shelbyville. We have purchased the land, but are entirely without equipment. We shall brings the needs of this negro work to the Des Moines convention. Our evangelistic work among the negroes ought to be doubled next year.

We are doing work among foreigners in five cities of the United States. In three of these cities we have very good equipment. In the other two very much remains to be done to render the work efficient. Other cities plead for the same kind of work at our hands.

Several of our India missionaries will be present in the convention to speak of the great new openings for work in Central India, and the promise of large ingatherings.

We are hoping to set forth our plans for Africa. One of our missionaries from that field will be with us, and another will be there who is under appointment.

The great Panama conference has brought to our people a new vision of possibilities for Latin America. Our evening session in the convention will be occupied with plans for Latin America. The speakers for that evening will be President Charles T. Paul, of the College of Missions, who attended the Panama Conference and the Regional conferences in South America, and S. G. Inman, Executive Secretary of the Panama conference and the Latin American committee.

While we are still unable to enter Mexico, we stand ready to do so when the time comes. We must place upon our people the needs of that country, so torn by war and so needing the Gospel light. We are planning to take up the work at our old stations and to start in at least three new points.

We are planning to make advancement in South America. We feel that the Disciples of Christ ought to occupy, starting with our present mission in Buenos Aires as a beginning, the provinces of Entre Rios, Corrientes, and Misiones in the Argentine Republic and the Republic of Paraguay.

There will be missionaries in the Des Moines convention from several of these Latin American fields. Mexico, Porto Rico and South America will be represented.

We mean to sound, at Des Moines, the call of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions for one hundred new men and women, prepared and sent out to our foreign fields, within the next five years. We are pleading for thirty new missionaries for India, twenty for Mexico, twenty for South America, and thirty more for Porto Rico, Jamaica, Africa and China.

* * *

★ ★

NOTES FROM THE FOREIGN SOCIETY.

The following missionaries reached New York City from Africa, September 18: Miss Edith Apperson, C. P. Hedges and wife, and Dr. J. L. Jaggard and wife. Friends will be delighted to see these, fresh from the forefront of the battle. In all probability they will be at the Des Moines convention.

Last week the Foreign Society received three annuity gifts, one of $1,000 from a friend in Nebraska, one of $1,000 from a friend in Kansas, and also one of $100 from a friend in Kansas. This latter friend has made twenty-seven different gifts.

The Foreign Society has a total of 803 native workers on the mission field. This is an increase over last year. These workers are one of the great hopes for the redemption of the heathen world.

The missions conducted by the Foreign Society throughout the world have enrolled 20,560 in the Sunday schools. This is a great showing and helps to indicate what the future will be in these lands.

Many are preparing for the international conventions at Des Moines, October 9 to 15. The attendance will, no doubt, be large and enthusiastic.

During the past year the medical missionaries of the Foreign Society have given 230,767 treatments, or 632 every day in the year. Do you not think this is a splendid showing?

More churches have given during this missionary year than ever before, and the total gifts will show larger than in any former year.

Last week a friend in Michigan sent $1,600 as a direct gift to help on with the work of the Foreign Society; also, a friend in Ohio sent $600 to support a living-link on the field; the church at Bonham, Tex., sent $600, completing their living-link; the church at Ionia, Mich., sent $600, completing their living-link; McKinney, Tex., $350, finishing up their living-link; $125 from Independence, Mo., finishing their living-link; a number of friends also sent personal gifts of $50 and $100 each.

We are not without hope of being able to report next week that the $500,000 mark has been passed. Everything depends upon the returns from the last week. We are hoping for the best. It will be a great disappointment to many hearts if this very reasonable sum is not attained.

STEPHEN J. COREY,
Cincinnati, Ohio. Secretary.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders:
Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

Churches of Disciples in Des Moines

Concluding the Series of Stories of Churches in the General Convention City.

PARK AVENUE CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND TABERNACLE.

(Southwest Corner Ninth Street and Park Avenue.)

This church was instituted by H. O. Breeden, then pastor of Central Christian Church, about the year 1897. For some time previous a number of New Testament believers had been meeting regularly in the Park avenue schoolhouse and another little band in the Maple Grove schoolhouse. These two bodies finally came together and agreed to build a church for joint use on the city limits and Ninth street, which would be fairly accessible to all the membership at that time. This was accomplished, as aforesaid, in 1897, and Dr. Breeden acted for some time as supply pastor. It was never a mission church and has always maintained its own pastor.

About four years ago it was realized that the church at the city limits was now out of place. The population had centered around Park avenue district and a great part of the membership was coming from that direction all the time and complaining of the distance. It was finally decided to move the church nearer the center, and this also was accomplished. At this time Norman Brighton was called to the pastorate, and under his leadership the church went forward by leaps and bounds. In the spring of 1915 it was realized that the church would not hold the crowds; a considerable sum of money was still owing for the moving and rebuilding of the church, only accomplished a short time before. However, with nothing on hand but a fine lot of faith and enthusiasm, we began the building of a tabernacle, to seat about 700, had it constructed in short order, and all paid for the day we moved in.

However, we have now arrived at the point when we realize that we must build a permanent church and Sunday school to accommodate our growing congregation. It is especially a Sunday school that we need and a tabernacle is not good for that purpose. Our community is rapidly growing, but is composed largely of the better class of working men, carpenters, electricians, machinists, printers, clerks, etc. We have neither the rich nor the poor with us, but a very happy, sympathetic and courageous community that will enlarge the vision of all who come among us. We have already four or five thousand dollars in tentative subscriptions for a new church and will undoubtedly begin to construct a beautiful building this fall, to accommodate seven or eight hundred in the auditorium, besides the Sunday school.

Daniel O'Hearne was the first regular minister after Dr. Breeden, and the following have held pastorates at Park avenue at different times. They are not named in exact rotation of service, but as they come to mind: T. O. Handsaker, J. Mad. Williams, E. F. Boggess, Oliver Hower, Sherman Kirke, Fred Macey and B. E. Youtz.

JAMES CAVENDER,
Vice-President of Official Board.

★ ★

GRAND VIEW CHURCH OF CHRIST

On June 25, 1916, the Grand View Church celebrated its fifth anniversary, having an enrollment of 165 members, 140 of whom are weekly givers, 200 enrolled in Bible school, with a record of all indebtedness, save to Church Extension Society, cleared away.

The church now is planning to wipe out this debt, and by another year the heroic little band, strong in faith, is planning a new building project, which will meet for years to come the necessities of a rapidly growing community.

Situated on a strategic corner, surrounded by a people most of whom own their homes, where is to be found some of the most desirable building sites in Des Moines, there lies before this band of optimistic Christians a field, white unto the harvest.

To them have come trained workers from sister churches and a great company of converts to be developed.

An efficient board of officers, an exceptionally devoted band of deaconesses, splendidly graded, up-to-date Sunday school, a growing missionary enthusiasm, and the spirit of sacrifice, point to the day when, foundation work being done, this church shall be better and more efficient representatives of that One who came to minister unto others.

MRS. CARRIE W. HOFFMANN, Minister.

★ ★

MONDAMIN AVENUE CHURCH.

The Mondamin Avenue Church of Christ had its beginning seven years ago, October 3, 1909, when a few of the faithful members of University Place Church and a few from Central Church joined forces to develop the Christ life in the hitherto neglected territory north and east of University place.

Ministered to by student preachers, aided in meetings by our brethren of larger experience in the ministry, with successes and reverses which tried but to prove the faith of the church, this steadily increasing band of worshipers, after five years in the tabernacle, erected a beautiful, commodious house of worship, which is already inadequate for the housing of the Bible school increase and other church activities.

Ministered to by J. M. Hoffmann, of large vision and larger faith, the church, with splendid Bible school of 250 enrollment, Endeavor, Ladies' Aid, C. W. B. M., and every other department well manned—watched over by an official board of deep consecration and unselfish service—this congregation must of necessity prove an active agent in the spread of simple New Testament teaching and living.

Indoor Closet

More Comfortable, Healthful, Convenient

Eliminates the out-door privy, open vault and cesspool, which are breeding places for germs. Have a warm, sanitary, odorless toilet right in your house. No going out in cold weather. A boon to invalids. Endorsed by State Boards of Health.

ABSOLUTELY ODORLESS

Put It Anywhere In The House

The germs are killed by a chemical process in water in the container, which you empty once a month. Absolutely no odor. No more trouble to empty than ashes. Closet absolutely guaranteed. Write for full description and price.

ROWE SANITARY MFG CO. 1037A ROWE BLDG., DETROIT, MICH.

Ask about the Ro-San Washstand---Hot and Cold Running Water Without Plumbing

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company

MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

"Kraoplate" Blackboards and Material

REVERSIBLE STYLE "D" BLACKBOARDS

"Kraoplate" Blackboards are made of 4-ply wood pulp, cemented under a heavy pressure and are uniform in thickness, solid throughout. The surface can be easily cleaned and will not warp or crack if washed. It is the most complete and perfectly portable Blackboard made, and has an oak frame, finished both sides. Can be taken apart in a moment and conveniently transported or set aside.

PRICES:

No. 1	2½x3½ ft.	each	$ 7.50
No. 1½	3 x4 ft.	"	8.00
No. 2	3 x4½ ft.	"	8.25
No. 3	3½x5 ft.	"	9.00
No. 4	4 x6 ft.	"	10.00

Disciples Publication Society : : 700 East 40th Street, Chicago

Write

For Our Special Introductory Offer on

"THE CONQUEST"

Our attractive weekly for adult and young people's classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

OHIO SECRETARY'S LETTER.

As the district conventions progress, certain things stand out in bold relief. One of these is that the speakers come with well prepared addresses. This is deeply significant. Thorough workmen believe in preparedness for platform work; all the more when an address is limited to five or ten minutes.

Another outstanding fact is that our busiest pastors have time for the entire convention. Public spirit, courtesy, aggressive enterprise are indicated in this. The kingdom and the power and the glory of our Lord will be the outcome.

Old Ohio is in a condition of transition. Here is the combination of circumstances affecting the rural church of tomorrow:

1. Rural population is declining. Nearly all the townships have less people than twenty years ago.
2. Good roads are being built in every corner of the state. Millions of dollars are being spent to perfect them.
3. Automobiles are cheap and many.

A smaller population does not need so many churches. Good roads and the automobile enable the rural church to serve a larger community. Some country churches will be eliminated. The process has already begun. Five more years will see it well under way. In twenty-five years the die will be cast.

It is a day for alertness, for eager, courageous effort. This practical age will ignore any church that sleeps in the face of the stressful conditions of today. Extermination is before the complacent church in such an age.

Our district convention programs are designed to stimulate activity on right lines in all the churches. The testimony of many is that they do great good.

Ohio Day is at hand. Preparation for its observance, November 5, should be begun at once.

The need is great. Many appeals are before us that ought to be granted. Make ready for Ohio Day.

I. J. CAHILL,
Corresponding Secretary.
Cleveland, Ohio.

Chairs, Tables, etc. for Sunday School Departments

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

Grow With Us!

The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY is distinctive in that it stands for IDEALS in religious education. Our purpose is not to make money—no private individuals can make money out of the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY. The Society is not a commercial enterprise. It belongs to the churches and Sunday-schools that patronize it. It is a

Brotherhood Publication Society

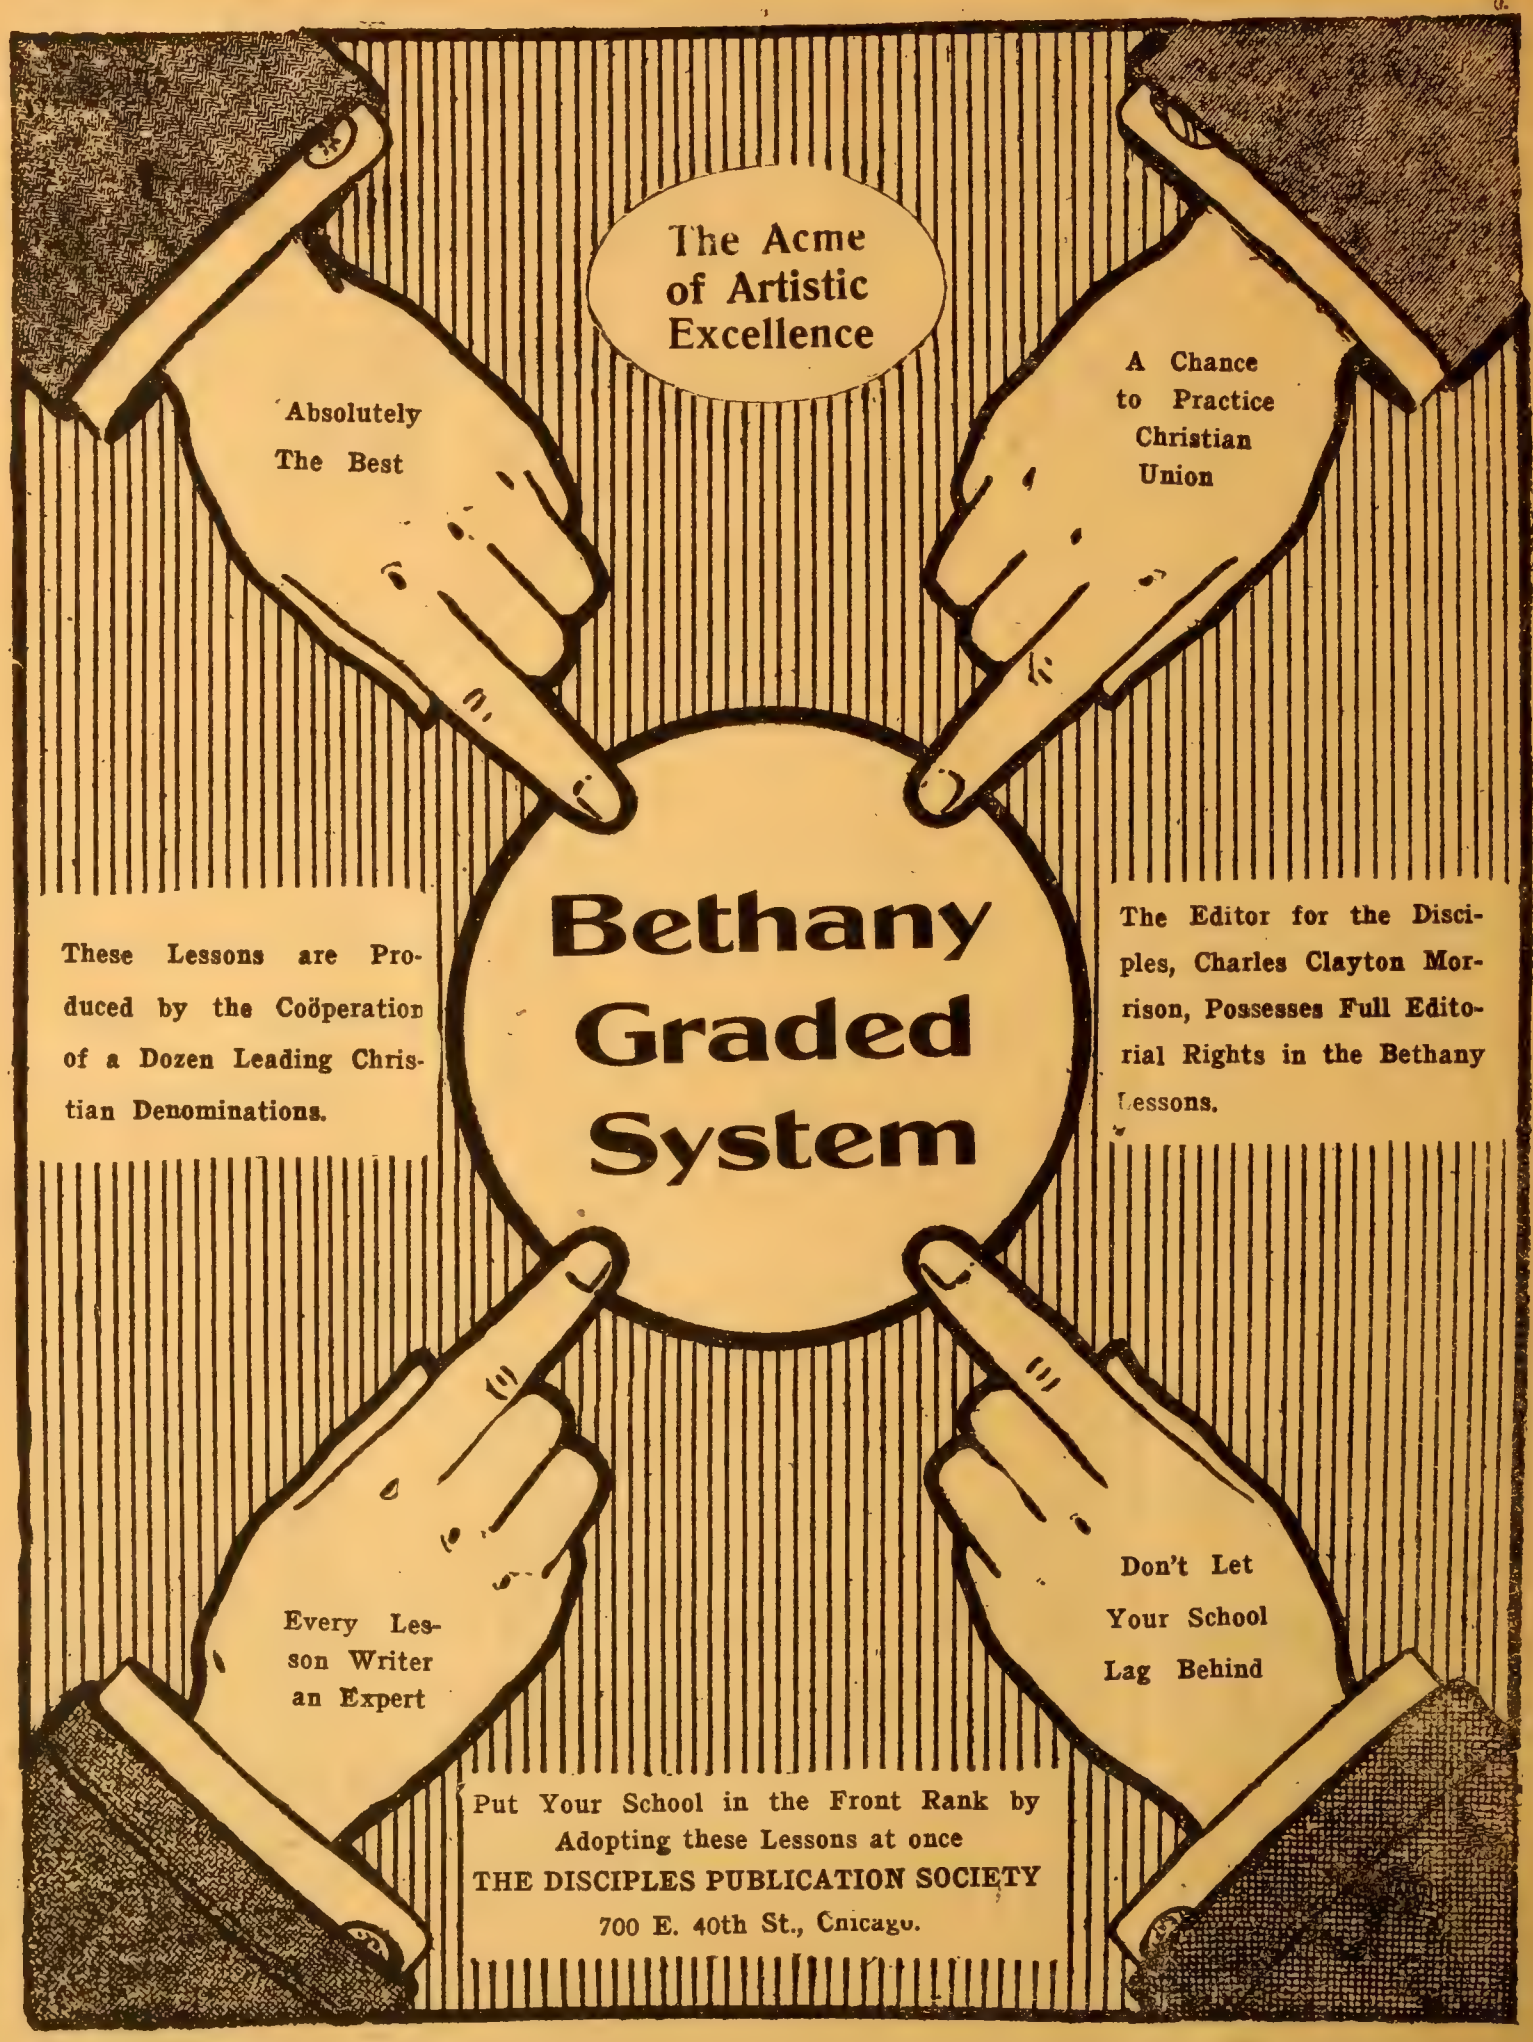
It exists for no other purpose than to provide the finest quality of religious literature—newspapers, books and Sunday-school literature—that can be produced. Its motto is "NOT FOR PROFITS, BUT FOR CHARACTER BUILDING." The principle upon which its business is built is not the ordinary business principle of CATERING to its patronage, but the principle of EDUCATING its patronage toward the adoption of higher and higher ideals and standards.

Grow With Us

Every Sunday-school, therefore, that gives its patronage to this brotherhood house puts itself in the line of its own growth. The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY offers every Sunday-school an opportunity for fellowship in GROWTH!

We are a growing enterprise—steadily, healthily and substantially growing. The past year has shown a fine increase in the volume of our patronage. The tokens indicate that the new graded Sunday-school year upon which we are now entering will bring us another encouraging increase in patronage.

Grow With Us



The officers and workers in the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY take much greater satisfaction in building up a BROTHERHOOD publishing enterprise than in building up an institution for private gain out of the patronage of the churches and Sunday-schools. The Society is steadily becoming a potent and helpful agency in the religious world, not alone in supplying literature to Disciples' schools and churches, but in proclaiming the message of the Disciples to American Protestantism. There is no greater privilege before the Sunday-schools of the Disciples of Christ than to in the increasingly larger service that so surely is awaiting both them and us.

Grow With Us

Disciples Publication Society

700 East Fortieth Street :: :: CHICAGO

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII October 12, 1916 Number 41

Mobilization
By John H. Finley

Tagore as an Educator
By J. T. Sunderland

In Peaceful Berlin
By Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

An Undelivered Speech
By George B. Foster

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Volume XXXIII OCTOBER 12, 1916 Number 41

The Love of Life

ARE YOU GLAD YOU WERE BORN?

There is a sadness in many hearts these days that leads some people to a negative answer to this question. Life seems to them to have more of evil than of good in it. These are either very unfortunate people, or they are sick souls who need to have a larger look at life.

Nature has been a long time building up the love of life and the fear of death. The reason we love the hero so much is that he does what for many men seems impossible: he dares to risk his life for others. Nature has been producing men who, through speed or strength or cunning or skill have known how to save their own lives and the lives of their helpless dependents.

Civilization, too, has contributed to the love of life. We have joys that primitive man never dreamed of. His food was coarse, and lacked variety. He knew none of the refinements of courtship and nothing of romantic love. The arts were undreamed of. He suffered hardships that would kill us more weakly moderns. The chasm between the present life in London and the life of the British Islanders of even a thousand years ago seems immeasurable. With the enlargement of life has come a new love of life.

A Chinaman living under the conditions of life in his poorly developed country fears less to die than does a Parisian.

Is it religious to love life? The ascetic affected to despise this world and all its possessions. He sought an early death by austere practices. The test of a saint in days gone by was his willingness and desire to depart from this world. The clergy even ventured to preach against the love of life as an evil and irreligious thing.

★ ★

Some may have thought to find in the words of Paul a justification of this attitude. Paul was in a strait betwixt two, not knowing whether he ought to depart and be with Christ, or remain with his brethren. It was thus that the great apostle set forth his feeling of the reality of the immortal life. There was no ascetic spirit in Paul, however. He lived and labored as other men. He was too much interested in everything in this world to hold any contempt for life.

Contempt for the life of this world is more Buddhistic than it is Christian. The characteristic Christian attitude is to regard life as the greatest of boons. Jesus told His disciples that He had come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly.

Any study of contemporaneous Christianity will reveal that it is not the fault of present-day religion, if there are any weary souls that long for death. It is usually not the Christian people who lay violent hands upon themselves.

There is, however, an undeniable increase of suicide. A prominent life insurance company asserts that in fifty cities of the United States there was an increase from twelve suicides annually in every 100,000 in population in 1890 to seventeen in 1902. Great Britain reports an increase. In France the rate has more than doubled in fifty years, and in Belgium it has quintupled. Civilization is increasing suicide. The rate is higher in cities than in the country.

The difficulties of the modern economic system, the lack of adaptation to a swiftly changing regimen of life is partly back of the modern contempt for life when it is found.

It is the business of Christianity to show the beauty and value of life. Our religion should give people courage to live, because it gives meaning to life. The Salvation Army maintains an office in Chicago to which it invites people contemplating suicide. Every church, without talking explicitly of self-destruction, should be an office in which a man or woman might be cured of cowardice about going on with life.

★ ★

It is our Christian privilege to rejoice in life by enriching it. There is still needless sorrow and suffering in the world. The friction in American homes speaks volumes. The four thousand people in Chicago whose lives were affected by divorce trials last month suffered much before coming to the point of publicly announcing their troubles. In every social relationship there is need to learn the fine Christian art of living together in peace and joy and love. Even though we succeed in no larger circle than our own homes in making this spirit live we have done something for the whole future of humanity. More people have found courage and joy in life from their friendships than from aught else, save one thing. And that one thing, fundamental to our faith in the goodness of life, is a firm, rich faith in God. It is God who seeks to give the higher meaning to life. It is he who has led us out of the Egypt of our animalism, and through the wilderness wanderings of carnality into the promised land of the Spirit. It is only as we follow in the way of the Spirit that we find the greatest joy in life. The humblest of Christian souls have been able to justify life by saying, each to his own soul, "God wants me here." They were right. God is even now busy creating his spiritual universe. It is the glorious privilege of each of us to allow him to create the new life of the spirit in our own hearts.

The hope of immortality finds its base in the belief that life is too good for God to allow it to perish. We Christians believe so thoroughly and heartily in life that we, above all men, desire everlasting life. We dignify and enrich the life that now is by looking forward to immortality.

Life—here or hereafter—is God's supreme gift to man.

EDITORIAL

"THE TRAIL TO THE HEARTS OF MEN."

WHEN a book is really born out of the experiences of a man's own life, it is bound to possess interest. No book ground out to satisfy a contract with publishers can compare with the spontaneous testimony of a man who has lived.

The leader of the Men and Millions Movement, Dr. Abram E. Cory, who signs himself in his book by the title which is given him by thousands of familiar friends, "Abe Cory," has given us "The Trail to the Hearts of Men." The book finds its great significance in giving an insight into the motives that actuate all true missionaries, and especially in revealing the inner side of Dr. Cory's own missionary experience in China.

The missionary has been despised in the past for his seeming lack of the human quality. When "The Lady of the Decoration" was written, the general public was given a suggestion for the first time of the plain human feelings of a missionary. Yet the book seemed to lack courage in declaring the deeper religious convictions that lead a missionary on.

In "The Trail to the Hearts of Men," the missionary is at once a capital good fellow and yet a man of passionate Christian idealism who will not sacrifice his high calling either to wealth or love or ambition. One by one the great life forces are introduced to tempt the hero away from his vision, but he remains steadfast. His father disowns him, his best friends misunderstand him, and even the woman of his heart is unwilling to follow him, but the man is true to the divine call.

Those who know Disciple missionary history in China will recognize many of the characters in the book as well-known missionaries. A fiction writer's liberty has been taken with them, but they stand out all the more human and attractive because of this.

The love story of the book forms a framework on which is set the various incidents of missionary achievement. As a story, the book has a sustained interest, and one cannot tell what the outcome will be until the very end. There are many passages that are full of inspiration and literary beauty.

MAKING AMERICANS OF CHINESE.

IS IT the goal of Christian missions to make Americans of the Chinese or Japanese or Hindus? Once we were inclined to impose upon other races of men not only our religious but our social customs, our prejudices and even our mode of dress.

A foremost student of Christian missions says that Christianity must go to the Orient "stripped." He does not mean that it should lose its fundamentals, but that it should lose all the incidentals of its western habitat.

In China there is a custom of venerating Confucius and the ancestors of one's family. With the superstitious this veneration has taken the form of worship. Need veneration be utterly abolished, or is it consistent with Christian ideas that some kind of formal ritual of respect may still be paid to ancestors even though a man belong to the Church of Christ? This is an urgent and vital question among missionary workers. Modern missionaries are saying that we should allow Chinese to be Chinese Christians.

When this principle is carried too far we have syncretism, such, for instance, as Bahaism or the Bramo-Somaj. The syncretistic religions seem always to fail to command deep loyalties.

Christianity in the Orient must be broadly tolerant. It must be infinitely patient. It must respect the oriental viewpoint. It must secure as soon as possible a complete oriental interpretation. When this is all said, it must still be in a true and genuine sense the Christian religion, consistent with the long historical development through which this religion has gone during the centuries.

Such a Christianity, adapted to the needs of each race and nationality, but in every country the same in its big organizing ideas and attitudes, would be a true bond for the brotherhood of man.

A GREAT CONVENTION IN SESSION

WHEN these lines shall be read, the national convention of the Disciples of Christ will be in session. It is safe to predict that it will be a large gathering. Des Moines is near the center of the Disciples' strength. It is full of strong churches and the home of a great Disciple educational institution, Drake University.

It is fortunate that we go to a convention this year with no immediate sense of a crisis. The spirit of division is less in evidence this year.

This does not mean, however, that the Disciples will not face great problems in this meeting. The status of the General Convention is to be more clearly defined. Missionary policies of great moment will be considered. What we may hope to hear from the Des Moines convention is that the Disciples have developed a bigger and better conception of their place in the world.

MISSION STUDY IN THE LOCAL CHURCH

THE cause of missions waits upon more general intelligence. The mission work of the past has depended too much upon emotional appeal. Too little have people known of the actual facts of a missionary's life and of the land where he works.

As the ordinary Disciples church is organized today there are but few agencies at work teaching the facts of missions. A noteworthy service has been performed by the C. W. B. M. auxiliaries, though these have often confined their attention and interest to the routine work of their own society. There are thousands of Sunday Schools today which have no systematic mission study. The men of the church especially are lacking in missionary information. It is the business man who most frequently announces himself as "opposed to foreign missions."

The Foreign Christian Missionary Society of late years has wisely given attention to the circulation of missionary books and to the formation of mission study circles. The time of year has again arrived when such classes will be formed in some of our churches. This year the plan calls for systematic study in classes and for a reading course to be pursued by those who feel that they cannot enter a class.

The study of missions is a great cultural discipline. It has general educational value. The student of missions will learn much of history, geography, comparative religion, sociology and many other disciplines. If one cannot travel, then he should travel with his mind, and there is no better way of doing this than by engaging in missionary study.

When the church once gains a large and intelligent clientele of missionary enthusiasts who know the facts of the situation, we may hope to see the Christian conquest of the world go on apace. A world-wide movement presupposes a world-wide knowledge.

BREAD FOR LITTLE CHILDREN

THE prospects for the coming winter are not reassuring, except to those who hold war stocks. There has been a sharp advance in the prices of all kinds of foodstuffs. On dairy products this advance is twenty-five per cent in a year. Vegetables are selling in the city at from two to five times the price of a year ago.

Meanwhile there has been no corresponding increase in wages. The railroad men, who needed it least, have had increases. The men on the roads who needed increases the most have received none at all. The clothing industry is offering a small voluntary increase to the women workers chiefly because the demand for the labor of women in the city is so great that these industries find themselves unable to turn out their product.

The stress of these economic conditions will produce widespread misery during the coming winter. Though conditions of employment are good, there are so many occupations that are seasonal in character that every winter there are said to be a hundred thousand idle men in Chicago.

Thus there is beginning to be distributed over the world the misery and suffering of the world-war. Even a nation which has profited more than any other by war orders may find itself at last actually poorer, on account of the decrease in purchasing power of a dollar.

If there ever was a moral duty laid upon men, there is a present obligation upon those who have had large war dividends to divide their unearned gains with the people who bear the extra burdens. It is only thus that the curse of Dives shall be averted from the heads of many of our American capitalists.

THE BEATEN OIL OF THE SANCTUARY

MANY temptations come to a minister not to prepare his sermons. Who has not had the experience of going into his pulpit, by necessity with scant preparation, and having an extempore effort meet with great approval from the congregation? Perhaps on these occasions the preacher talked his own convictions more and the convictions of reference works less.

This judgment of his congregation tempts him to be satisfied with scant preparation. Besides, there is the awful stress of work under which the modern minister lives. There are not hours enough in the day. Under these conditions more than one man abandons the scholarly field, which, after all, is simply the ideal of good workmanship.

The preacher should remember, however, that there are hundreds in the community who do not go to any church for the reason that the preaching is not good enough. "Have you chosen a church yet?" one newcomer in a suburb was asked. "No," he replied, "I have been all around and no preacher has yet convinced me that he studies for his sermons. I won't go to church where I can't learn anything." This man is but one of a large tribe.

It is hard to put everything into a sermon. A sermon should have carefully digested facts. It should have conviction. It should have an object that relates to the welfare of the congregation. It should have abundant illustration and human appeal. Above all, it should have religion. If people would compliment their minister only for the really helpful things in his sermon, and not in general terms, he might soon be guided by his hearers into more helpful preaching.

Preparing the sermon was likened by the old homiletic writers to the beating of the oil for sanctuary use. Nothing but the best is fit for God's house and for the needs of human souls who struggle day by day after righteousness.

A TIME TO PREACH THE GOSPEL

IT IS always time to preach the gospel, but right now there is a deeper interest in fundamental religious problems than usually. There are questions which have arisen as a result of the great war. There is at once a breaking up of the crust in people's thinking and a new concern about things of the soul.

In an hour like this, it will be a great disappointment for people to go to church and hear sermons which are cultural and not religious. They will turn wearily aside and look farther for a man who has the courage to stick to his commission and the ability to lay broad and deep the foundations for faith.

That a number of ministers have seen this is evidenced by their sermon topics. They are presenting a new apologetic for the faith. They are announcing sermons that grip the souls of their hearers. There is no greater work for the preacher than to make it easy for men and women to believe in God and His Christ.

THE SPIRIT OF THE FAMILY.

FAMILY spirit is strong in some ancestral lines. Some families of the east like to trace their lineage to the Mayflower. The source of family pride, however, is to be found more in character than in antiquity. As America grows older, there is an increasing interest in searching into family history. The growth of such organizations as the Daughters of the American Revolution reveals this.

Christianity has definitely bound up its fate with that of the monogamous family. It seems impossible to believe it could ever change in this respect. Religion may be made to grow in the heart of the family as well as in the church.

The church can well seek to encourage the development of pride of race so long as it is not exclusive but ethical. A young man is often saved by the reflection that his forbears never stooped to the thing that tempts him.

EXCHANGING MEMBERS.

IF EVERY church would give up its non-resident members to other churches near which these members reside, the whole Christian world would be enormously strengthened. A census of a high-class residence suburb near Chicago revealed that nearly every family in the suburb was a member of some church. An astonishing number of these people were only nominal church members. They belonged "back home." They were uncertain whether the home church still carried their names.

These people are the difficult ones of the community to reach, as many pastors can testify. A little encouragement from the home church might help them to decide to locate and work in the congregation that is near to them.

If we Disciples had a bishop, it would be well to petition him to appoint a day when all pastors would be directed to write letters to other pastors, telling of the people that have gone away, but who keep their membership in the town of their former home. There would be an exchange of membership immediately afterwards which would clear up many problems in every community.

EUGENIC MARRIAGE LAW

FOR several years the eugenic marriage movement has been taking form in our American life. It has long been clear that if there is to be real progress in the race, people must be better born. It has been an unfortunate fact that vicious and subnormal people have often propagated their kind to a larger extent than have the more desirable elements in the population, such, for instance, as the college and university graduates.

One of the early remedies proposed was that ministers should require a medical certificate from those seeking marriage. This suggestion never received much attention because it obviously accomplished nothing except testimony, for unfit people could always be married by justices, and medical certificates were no better than the reputation of the physician signing them.

The proposal in Illinois, however, to have a eugenic law passed by the legislature and to have the state undertake the burden of deciding who should marry, is deserving of cordial interest on the part of Illinois citizens. Senator Glackin will introduce such a bill at the next session of the legislature.

There is a wide-spread heresy in America that marriage is a matter concerning two persons only. There has been a propaganda carried on by the writers of pornographic fiction treating marriage in this individualistic kind of way. The individualistic attitude toward marriage has all too often led to free-love in practice as well as theory.

Marriage involves social responsibility of the most fundamental sort. The whole community is concerned in every marriage. When the marriage fails, the dependent people must be cared for by the community. This is one of the least important of the many reasons why the community has both the right and the duty to regulate in the most thoroughgoing fashion the marriage of its citizens.

THE UNIQUE IMPORTANCE OF CHICAGO

THERE is no longer any doubt of the place Chicago occupies in the United States. It has been the miracle city of the continent. It is less than a hundred years since the commander of Fort Dearborn wanted to give it up because it would never come to anything. Even twenty years ago, St. Louis could dispute with Chicago the place of holding the Columbian Exposition. Now Chicago is admittedly the second city in size and importance on the continent, and its growth and development are unchecked.

Owing to the geographical location of Chicago, it occupies a central place in the life of the Disciples of Christ. This is the metropolis of the territory in which they live. New York is far away. Chicago is within a night's ride of over three-fourths of their membership. The Chicago daily papers mould the thought of Disciple homes. Disciple students come here to study for all the professions. More Disciples enter business in this great city than in any other. There is an ebb and flow of life between Chicago and the middle western states where Disciples live which is unique.

Chicago also looms large in general religious activities. More ministers, more student volunteers are trained here than in any city. The great Sunday School movement has established headquarters here. Most of the denominations are like the Disciples in having many more members here than in New York. Chicago is already the leading Congregational city of the world.

Already many Disciple activities of national importance are conducted here. When all the secretaries wanted a convenient place to meet this summer, Chicago was the city chosen. More and more our societies look toward this city as the appropriate place in which to establish their offices and headquarters.

How great a pity it is, therefore, that our societies doing home mission work look on Chicago as a place to exploit the churches instead of helping them. No city in the country has a better per capita of giving for missions. Yet the past year the Illinois Christian Missionary Society and the Christian Woman's Board of Missions gave nothing for this city's work. The latter organization took some thousands of dollars away from Chicago. The American Christian Missionary Society let Chicago keep her home missionary money for local uses, but gave only a few hundred dollars more.

Do these societies defend this course as missionary statesmanship? The neglect of Chicago, in the light of all the facts, will stand as a colossal home mission failure unless something big is done soon.

★ ★

THOU KNOWEST BEST

"Father, hold thou my hands;
The way is steep;
I cannot see the path my feet must keep;
I cannot tell, so dark the tangled way,
Where next to step. Oh, stay;
Come close; take both my hands in thine;
Make thy way mine.
Lead me. I may not stay.
I must move on, but oh, the way;
I must be brave and go;
Step forward in the dark, nor know
If I shall reach the goal at all—
If I should fall.
Take thou my hand;
Take it, thou knowest best
How I should go, and all the rest;
I cannot, cannot see;
Lead me, I hold my hands to thee;
I own no will but thine;
Make thy way mine."

—George Klingle.

Mobilization

A Call to American Men and Women for a War of Selfless Service

By JOHN HUSTON FINLEY, LL.D.

President of the University of the State of New York

AT this season of the year, twelve months ago, there was published in the "London Times" a summary of the enlistments of the men of the several Cambridge colleges who had entered the war. Their names filled a book of seventy pages and showed a known total of 8,850 men, 236 of whom had been killed and 423 wounded—an appalling mortality, due, it is claimed, to the exposed position which many of these men as platoon commanders assumed. Ninety were mentioned in dispatches for bravery, 18 won the military cross, and 18 more won still higher distinction. Since then the enlistments have grown and the mortality has maintained its heroic percentage.

RECORD OF SMALLER COLLEGES

And there are as brave figures to put beside these from Oxford—Oxford, who, as one has said, "hardly dares to count her dead": in November, 8,500 in the army, 600 killed, 75 missing. Add to this the record of the smaller colleges: University of London, which has furnished over 2,000 officers; Manchester, 680 officers and a very large number of men in the ranks; Sheffield, 550; Leeds, almost 1,000 officers and men, including 415 officers; Bristol, 330 officers, with 500 more in training; Edinburgh, 3,769 officers and men; Glasgow, 2,300, between 300 and 400 working in munition plants and over 100 women in, or preparing for, medical service; University College of Wales, 365; Dublin University, 1,500 officers and men from Trinity alone, and the 85 public "schools," such as Eton, Winchester, Harrow, nearly half a hundred thousand officers and men.

PURPOSEFUL SELF-OBLATION

But even more significant of the spirit of learning in its ancient seats is a paragraph accompanying the record in the "Times" of valorous service of learning's volunteers in the field, a paragraph which tells that a complete list of the members of Cambridge University has recently been compiled, stating the service which each resident member feels he can most usefully offer, and that the numerous laboratories at Cambridge have been placed at the disposal of the government, with a clear and succinct statement of the work each laboratory can do best to promote that end for which the armies are fighting in the trenches. "Cambridge has mobilized herself," says the announcement, and in this has she set the example, not of supreme, unquestioning self-abnegation, but of supreme, purposeful self-oblation.

And so has an old and technical military word leaped to a universal and an exalted use in the world's vocabulary. Between the Oxford and the Cambridge visits, in the first days of August, mobilization, in one language or another, in this substantive form, or its verb relative, came suddenly to be the first word in Europe's speech. It was on every lip, in the awed whispers of women and children or the hurrying preparations of men. "In France," one has reported, "the days of the week and of the month do not exist. A new calendar is created." It takes its dates from the first day of "mobilization." And "mobilization" has even come into the vocabulary of our people, most of whom had never heard the word except in its Wall Street use, connoting the putting of wealth into circulation.

A NEW USE FOR AN OLD WORD

In the evening of the day that war was declared in England I traveled from London to Folkstone in a compartment with men who were units in that great European mobilization—six or seven Frenchmen and a Russian who had lived in England going back to their own colors. With them and hundreds more I crossed the Channel to Boulogne in the night. Next morning I saw a thousand men in uniform along the quay, quietly, seriously standing there, with their glinting guns at parade rest, awaiting orders. It could not have been more than a half-hour later that I came again to the quay, but found it empty save for the fish wives. The soldiers had disappeared as if by magic. At Abbeville I saw a thousand more, and the railroad station was already strewn with straw for the wounded that might be borne back. As I walked to Dieppe in the night, I stopped to ask the way at a peasant's cottage, and the father and mother were, so I suspected, sitting up to make ready for their son's going. In the early morning I saw a young officer leaving a roadside cafe, and when I entered both mother and wife were still in tears. In Dieppe the peasants were there before me with their commandeered horses and carts; and, already, seemingly heartless inspectors were assigning them to this or that service. In Paris it was the same, except that the horses were motors, and one, whose limousine was taken, said: "I've given three sons to France. It's little enough to add that."

A MOBILIZATION OF SPIRIT

And when I got back to England and Scotland it was the same. I saw the Cameronians following their pipes one day, their sporrans showing; the next day they were off, no one knew where. The pipes were silent and khaki covered their sporrans to protect them when they had to crawl in the fields.

This mobilization was a sudden transformation from a peace footing to a war footing, as we say it technically, but it was something far more significant. It was a mobilization of spirit, the sudden forgetting of one's self-concerns and private belongings for a selfless service. In many instances, I am told, men did not even go to their homes from their offices, shops, or factories when the call came. They went straight to the places of rendezvous and let their returned peace garments bear witness of their going. It was because of this sudden going that I saw on the morning of the fifth of August only old men and women and children in the harvest fields of France.

The mobilization was swift, complete, self-denying, heroic. It was as if a spirit had swept across fields, through factory and street, from the Urals to the ocean, and cried: "If any man forsake not father or mother, wife and child, and follow me, he is none of mine."

A SELFLESS PURPOSE

But the essence of mobilization is not mere mobility; it is mobility with a clear, common, selfless purpose and destination.

A few years ago in an address I followed man through his development from a lower to a higher state of mobility, from feet to wings (even as Maeterlinck traces the struggle in the plant to escape from immobility to mobility, from roots to feet), traced him from the pere-Nikian into a tele-Victorian age, in which the far has been conquered, and I found in that higher mobility the opportunity for the higher development of man's spirit.

But mere mobility is only the opportunity. It may mean, after all, only vagrancy. Mobilization is purposeful, organized, destinated mobility. It means the liberation and effective use of every latent force—natural, economic, social, spiritual—that the nation has. It means the elimination of every waste: the "conspicuous waste" of the rich, the wastes of national vices, the wastes of inefficient government, the wastes of class struggle, and the supreme waste of unutilized talent and genius. The two words "mobilization" and "mob" are the same in origin. The mob was the mobile vulgus. Mobilization is the process by which the mob becomes transfigured into something which is beyond the sum of its individuals, into a fleshless thing, as when all the members of a human body become spirit in the utterance of some divine word or the doing of some heroic deed.

MOBILIZATION FOR SERVICE

The whole problem of society, generically, is to determine to what degree the mobility of the individual shall be restrained, predestinated, by the collectivity.

When a boy, out on the prairies, I used to hear the farmers, at the church door after Sunday service, discuss free moral agency and predestination by an omniscient God. We hear no more of that. Our discussions now have narrower horizons and relate for the most part to free financial agency and occupational predestination or vocational guidance under a finite terrestrial government, which cannot predict accurately always even tomorrow's weather.

And the great question on the other side seems objectively to be whether a highly organized, imperiously directed system of individual predestination shall prevail in the earth; or whether there shall be a social system under which individuals shall enjoy mobility, personal liberty in a great state, where personal activities have social value to the commonwealth, but where at times all are called to practice certain civic avocations in which the idea of service to the state is supreme over selfish considerations—where the mobile individual may, at any moment of need, become "mobilized."

PERSONAL FREEDOM AND PATRIOTISM

One of my companions on the night of August 4 was a French maker of meerschaum pipes who lived in London—and proud he was of his occupation, for he did not make ordinary pipes. He had closed his shop in London and was going to find his uniform and outfit at Rouen. He was most courteous and helpful to me, serious and quiet in conversation, making no complaint of sacrifice, making no boast of patriotism; he even admitted a bit of fear in expressing the hope that whatever happened it would not with him come to bayonets. This gives concrete illustration of what I mean by the "practical alternative" of personal freedom coexistent with civic responsibility.

I translate this experience into the terms of our everyday life, and I make it graphic to myself by thinking that every man has an imaginary uniform (as every German soldier and French soldier had his gray or his blue and red uniform) of his own measurements always in readiness in home or shop or office or in some public locker, that he may don at call of his community, state, or nation, or perhaps at some world-call: when under compulsion he goes to vote, to pay his taxes, to fight against dishonesty, inefficiency, or waste, to inform himself upon public questions, or his public duties as one studies tactics, or goes to schools as an alien to learn the language and institutions of a new land, or joins his neighbors in promoting the health of his community, in conserving resources, in promoting means of healthful recreation for children and youth, in improving the highways—when he performs any one of a hundred offices that are required of him as an efficient unit in an organized society.

PERSONAL MOBILITY

I am today a maker of meerschaum pipes, a peasant gathering my harvest, a college professor (as young Boutroux), a surgeon (as Carrel); tomorrow I slip on this invisible garment and I am a selfless, nameless, numbered patriot. And the next day I am working at my delicate pipes again, back in my field, or at my desk, or in my private laboratory—that is, if I am not killed or wounded in battle or suffocated in the trenches.

I think it vital that we should keep personal mobility—I mean, of course, mobility of mind, of enterprise, of struggle. That is in itself a precious thing. But there must be with it a frequent mobilization by the common ideals, the needs, the purposes of a community, a state, a nation, in which the individual community forgets itself.

There must be the magic garment in every man's wardrobe which will take him outside of himself and his selfish interests, however worthy they may be.

For I am thinking that what Maeterlinck said of the plants must be true of human beings: the genius of the species, that indefinable, ineffable longing, will somehow save us from the stupidity, the failure, the error of the individual.

"BEATING THE MARCHES"

The Scotch used to have a custom which they called "beating the marches." Yearly the inhabitants of a borough (or whatever the territorial division was) used to assemble and follow its boundaries, that they might keep them in mind and accurately know what they had to defend. If we could but do that for every community, and with as serious and solemn a purpose!

And war's prize lesson is to teach us, even in the seclusion of our universities, to be mindful of our national marches, and not to be thinking alone of our little patches of literature, our private shooting preserves, of science or art, or even of the cottages which are our homes.

There is something, however, even more precious than the genius of the species; it is the genius of the variety, the soul of a race, the spirit of that complex of ideals, habits, beliefs, and institutions that marks off nation from nation, people from people.

FIGHTING PEOPLES TRANSFORMED

All those who have watched with seeing eyes the sublime, if terrible, drama enacted in Europe have reported, not that nations are being destroyed, but that new and greater nations are being born. Nation after nation rises to unexampled heights of self-sacrifice, arduous toil, simple living, and uncomplaining dying. The spiritual as well as the material life of the nations at war is being changed into something different and better. Industry is reorganized on the basis of service to the state instead of on a basis of profit and loss. Scholarship leaves its monastic calm to offer its power to the state. Medicine and science are mobilized. The able-bodied of the nation are in or near the blood-sodden trenches, and with them fight the women, the old men, and the children, not on battlefields, it is true, but in factory, grain field, and workshop in some imperative national service—agriculture, manufacture, transportation, medical work, hospital work.

This is no dream of an idealist; it is the calm report of the journalist and the business man and the trained observer. This is modern war where nations and not armies alone contend. I believe that in some unconscious way the fact of the divine compensations of the war have been felt in America even though we have no Emerson now alive to point them out. And I incline to the belief that America is anxiously taking thought of its condition—its inefficiencies of government, its multiform and conspicuous wastes, its crass materialisms, its brag and bluster, its bad manners, its bad habits, and its inveterate provincialisms—and is searching for the way of salvation.

A SUPER-DEMOCRACY

Now the way of salvation here as in Europe is mobilization—the building of a new America, a super-democracy. It is fair to suppose that the superstates of Europe will persist after the war. England will never revert to that state of mind and heart that was England in 1913. France will never again be popularly described as decadent. And we of the United States have reason to dread the new competition of nations that will follow the war unless the depth and breadth of our spiritual mobilization measure up to those of the nations at war. We need a mobilization of the national life—its industries, its transportation machine, its churches, its schools, and its citizens—mobilization for the new peace and the higher rivalry of nations.

In peace the connection between learning and the need of the state becomes obscure and indirect and impersonal, but today one sees illustrated in those venerable institutions the dependence of the state on that learning which has been the target of the practical men, but which has now come to shame the "slacker" and lead where the need is most perilous. No one doubts that if the same calls come out of the bomb-stained sky, or the mine-spread sea, or the trench-plowed field to the colleges of America and their graduates there will be the same mobilization of spirit. I do not have anxiety as to this.

RECRUITING AN INVISIBLE ARMY

But what I am concerned for is that even without these signals we shall see this connection and shall mobilize or prepare for mobilization our learning, our thinking, our courage, our industry, our skill, our art, our science, in the service of the same state which is as needful of defense in peace as ever it is in war. I wrote to the philosopher William James a little time before his death, when that dearly lost philosopher had made me see more clearly this connection and this duty, that I not only wished to enlist myself but that I would try to raise a regiment for my country. And I have been a recruiting sergeant ever since, trying to fill my phantom regiment for James' invisible and invincible army of those who are willing to pay a blood-tax in peace as well as in war for the privilege of belonging to a "collectivity" superior to their individual selves.

I am wishing that everybody might be conscripted to give some service to the state under a plan of constructive preparedness, every selfish luxury and waste and indulgence commandeered, every useful skill and science and art and industry called to the colors periodically, and a general mobilization for the common defense of our ideals compelled by our vision of an America that has a mission beyond commercial supremacy.

Tagore As An Educator

J. T. Sunderland in The Christian Register

SIR RABINDRANATH TAGORE is again in this country. He comes primarily to deliver a series of lectures in eight of our leading universities. The subjects upon which he is to speak, so far as I am aware, have not been announced. Presumably he will deal to a greater or less extent with literary themes. And yet it is hardly to be expected that he will confine himself to literature; for, eminent as he is as a poet and novelist, he is also distinguished as an educator and as a philosopher and religious thinker.

It may not be generally known in this country that he is the founder, proprietor, and inspiring spirit of a notable and wholly unique Boys' School, located at Bolepur, in Bengal. There is nothing else like it in India, and it differs in important respects from any school of which I have any knowledge in America or Europe. It was established by Mr. Tagore after many years of reflection, and of extended study of the educational theories and methods of the leading nations of both the Orient and the Occident. In it he breaks almost wholly away from precedent.

TAGORE'S AIM: TRAINING BOYS TO BECOME NOBLE MEN

The aim of the school, which is open to every caste and every religious faith, is to train boys not merely to be scholars or possessors of knowledge of this kind and that, but, above everything else, to become the noblest kind of men. To this end they are given not alone careful intellectual education, including language studies, literature, mathematics, and much science taught both in laboratories and outdoors in the direct study of nature, but also constant and thorough physical training, and, as more important than all else, careful and constant moral and religious training.

Sir Rabindranath Tagore, Poet, Philosopher and Educator

I know of no school in which play is made so much of, and in such rational ways. I mean in which sports and games and play of all kinds are so finely planned to give every boy delight and splendid physical development, and at the same time constant training in manliness, honor, self-reliance, and moral character.

I know of no school in which music, both instrumental and vocal, is taught so effectively, and made so real and joyful and inspiring a part of the life of every scholar and teacher. It is a sight not to be forgotten to see the whole school march to meals singing. Mr. Tagore believes that music is one of the most valuable of all cultural studies. With music he closely associates poetry and the dramatic art, and gives great attention to dramatic training. He delights in writing plays for the school, and the boys enter into the acting of them with never-tiring enthusiasm.

CULTIVATING LOVE OF NATURE

The boys do most of their study out of doors, and their class instruction is given as much as possible in the open air, under the trees. The boys take long walks with their teachers, for the pure joy of activity and to study nature. They do much gardening. Everything possible is done to cultivate knowledge and love of nature.

Constant effort is made to impress upon the boys the beauty and unselfishness, the rightness and nobleness of living for others, especially for those less privileged than themselves. Hence they are encouraged to go out into the neighboring villages and teach classes among the poor, and to render help in any way they can to those in need.

Deep, earnest, almost passionate love of country is taught in the school, but not of that narrow kind which means despising other countries. Every boy is taught that he should seek to become strong, wise, trained in body and mind, pure, brave, manly, and honorable in everything, for India's sake; that India is his mother, that he must love her with such pure and undying devotion as will make him desire nothing so much as to live for her, sacrifice for her, serve her by doing all in his power to drive ignorance, superstition, evil, wrong, suffering, disease, and want out of the land, and lift her up to a place among the happy, useful, and noble nations of the world.

THE BOY AND RELIGION

No one can be in the school an hour without feeling that the religious spirit is everywhere. This is regarded by Mr. Tagore as its highest merit. I know of no school in which religion is made such a vital, uplifting, all-pervading, natural, simple, earnest, happy part of education and all life. It is not dogmatic or formal religion, but religion in its most living and happy realization,—the spirit of religion carried into everything, and the practice of quiet religious meditation and simple devotion constantly encouraged. There are some religious forms, for without forms there cannot be life. Each day there is a quiet devotional period of half an hour which each boy is expected to spend alone. Also each day there is a simple service of common worship in the chapel. For this the boys prepare by a bath and by dressing in white, as outward symbols of purity.

Mr. Tagore has intense sympathy with boy life. Therefore he is able to get close to his boys. In return they love and reverence him almost to worship, and are powerfully impressed for good by the strength, nobleness, and deep religiousness of his character. He is very careful in the choice of his teachers, regarding their moral and religious qualifications as even more important than their intellectual. He will have no teacher in his school who is not in full sympathy with his own high ideals for the boys, and who is not by his life an inspirer of his pupils to manliness, unselfishness, sincerity, honor, independence of thought and will, love of country, love of nature, reverence for duty, earnest and happy piety.

This is as much as space permits me to say about this radical and daring educator, and the unique school which he has built up.

TAGORE A LIBERAL

As is generally known to Unitarians, Mr. Tagore is an eminent member and leader of the Brahmo Somaj, the important religious movement in India which closely corresponds to Liberal Christianity in this country. That movement has had three great leaders, known and reverenced all over India. The first was Raja Ram Mohun Roy, and the other two, Keshub Chunder Sen and Debendranath Tagore, the father of the poet.

Although Sir Rabindranath has not devoted himself wholly to religion and therefore has not attained the eminence of his father as a religious leader, yet he is a highly honored representative of the Brahmo Somaj, and as such ought to receive a peculiarly warm welcome among religious workers here. It will be a great loss to us if he is not as widely heard as he will consent to be, in conferences, religious clubs, and leading churches. His religious addresses will be sure to set forth with rare literary charm the deepest religious philosophy and the highest spiritual ideals of the Brahmo Somaj movement.

We in this country are apt to think that America has much to teach India. In this we are quite right. But India has also some things that are important to teach America. She has some things to teach us about literature, about education, and certainly about religion. No land in the world has ever produced profounder thinkers on all the great problems of religion and of life than the India of the past. The India of today has no wiser, kinder, more broad-minded, or greater teacher than Mr. Tagore, none more eager to receive from us whatever of value we have to give, or better able to impart to us the best wisdom of his own historic land.

In the story found in one of our New Testament Gospels of the Wise Men who came from the East to see the babe Jesus in Bethlehem, we read that "when they had opened their treasures, they presented to him gifts; gold, frankincense, and myrrh." This wise man who is coming to us from the East will be very modest about opening his treasures; but we may be sure that if we are wise enough to desire them, he will present unto us some precious gifts of spiritual gold, frankincense, and myrrh.

In Peaceful Berlin

Concluding the Series of Travel Stories of the War Countries

By HERBERT L. WILLETT, JR.

THAT trip up the Danube was a joy. The boat was pleasant, the food was good (enough butter for half a slice of bread cost 24 cents), and we could stretch out as we slept. So the day went fast, and its calm was only ruffled when a German captain aboard misunderstood a chance remark and took exception to it. One of my companions said that in Germany it would be easy to get around because one was told exactly what to do. The officer only caught the words "Germany" and "easy," and for fifteen minutes told us in oratorical French just how much the Germans hated the Americans, that they would never forget that our ammunition had killed thousands of their men, that after this war we would pay in blood for every life they had lost, and that as to us personally, our troubles were far from being at an end. On the last point he was right.

A GOOD TIME FOR THE OFFICERS

No sooner had we landed at Orsova, recently made famous by being taken from the Austrians, than we realized the fact that we might yet have unpleasantnesses. Everyone else who landed was searched and passed while we waited, and then the officers turned to us with anticipation of a good time. They had it for three hours, and during that time every stitch in our suit cases and on our persons was gone over, we were questioned, all papers that were not necessary for travel were taken, and even the paper was taken off of cakes of chocolate for fear that we had concealed writing there.

Frankly, the officers were suspicious, and I think that they were a little chagrined to find nothing. Finally, at nine at night, we were allowed to go to the hotel, but were told to see the Colonel the next morning at ten. That ended our plans to catch the six o'clock train for Budapest, and when we saw the hostelry at which we must put up we nearly wept. It was the worst hotel in the world, I am sure, and we had the worst rooms. We were too tired to eat, and so we had some hot tea and went to bed.

IMPRESSING THE CAPTAIN

The next day was no happier. We sat at the Colonel's outer office from ten to twelve and from four to six to see him for two minutes, and then were sent to another officer, the most objectionable of our searchers of the night before, to be told that we could not leave Orsova for ten days. If we never spoke German before we spoke it then. All the reasons for leaving that we had at the tips of our tongues rolled out in answer to the statement that it was a military rule that all tourists must stay that length of time. We practically told the captain that he was lying and that we knew of people who had gone through without delay. He listened, sent us to the garden while he pondered the matter, and after two hours told us that we might leave the next morning, and gave us our passports. We celebrated with a very good dinner, were up at four a. m. and got the train without further trouble.

One thing I rejoice to remember about Orsova. We sold our cooking utensils and extra food to the hotel keeper. She can use the food, but she will never be able to manage the stove, and so our dislike will be mutual.

HEEDING A WARNING

One hope I have in connection with the town: that in the recent bombardment the colonel and the captain got what was coming to them for the way they treated us. Two impressions of Austrian officers were gained there: all those not at the front have been incapacitated for service and are, therefore, used in other capacities; and all of them are inefficient. Less purposeful work and more time wasted than we saw in the office of the colonel, it would be hard to imagine. The experience taught us one lesson, however. In the few minutes that we spent with the colonel he showed so intimate a knowledge of all that we had done the previous day that we were certain that someone had been watching us. Therefore, we determined to be doubly on our guard against saying anything that might in any way be misinterpreted.

The train that we had to take from Orsova to Budapest was a comfortable one, though rather slow. For a few minutes we had a compartment to ourselves, and were congratulating each other upon the fact that we could talk without fear of spies, when the train stopped and in walked a man—a nervous little man whom we had noticed looking into different parts of the car before he saw us.

Mr. Herbert L. Willett, Jr.

SPY!

As soon as he entered our compartment, however, he nodded to a policeman outside the window as if to say: "I have found them," and we four simultaneously murmured, "Spy," and followed the plan we had already laid out for such an occasion. We began to talk at great length about the college at Beirut, about the people we had known, about the courses we had taught, about our own reading; in short, about anything and everything that would indicate that we knew Beirut thoroughly, and that we had no ideas aside from those connected with the school and our studies. We were not overly interested in the conversation ourselves and the spy must have been bored beyond expression; but we kept up the play for eleven hours, and he heard not a word about war, future plans, nor politics from our lips.

Like the Austrians we had seen in Orsova, this man was injured, the first two fingers of his right hand being gone. Probably it was because he could no longer shoot that he had been set to watch us, but certainly he was a novice at the art of sleuthing. It rather pleased us to make his task hard, and so we went in to a very poor lunch in pairs, so that he would have to leave two of us, to watch the other two. Then at every station one of us would get out of the train, and that would necessitate the spy's calling the attention of a soldier or officer in the station to that one while he watched the others. I fear that the day, on the whole, was not a pleasant one for our companion. Certainly his time was wasted, if he had expected to hear us utter treasonable words.

BREAD FAMINE IN AUSTRIA

In connection with the lunch I noted one point of interest. We asked for bread and the waiter said that there was none, but in a moment the head waiter brought us each a piece. Evidently foreigners were to be given the impression that there was bread for all, when, in fact, the supply was very limited. With that memory fresh in my mind, I find myself unable to believe that the present bread famine in Austria is due to lack of transportation, as is reported.

We feared that we would meet with difficulties in Budapest as we had at Sofia, but nobody took the slightest notice of us except an interpreter, who said that his business had been very poor during the war; and we were not even required to go through Vienna on our way to Berlin. In fact, the only bad memory of Budapest is that connected with the price of our supper. We ate little and paid enough to supply a regiment, but there was plenty of sugar in the lemonade, and for that we were grateful after our Bulgarian experiences.

GERMANS AS QUESTIONERS

The rest of the trip to Berlin was uneventful. A slow train out of Budapest got us into Olderburg about nine Wednesday morning, and there we had breakfast and changed our clothes in the station washroom. We had traveled thus far in khaki suits and soft shirts, but decided that the dignity of Germany demanded a more formal dress, and so put on dark suits and laundered collars. Here, also, we had the last Austrian inspection, largely a matter of routine, and the first German interrogatory. What a number of questions those Germans can ask! They wanted to know all about my family, why I was not fighting as so many of my countrymen were doing, and many other equally unimportant things. But they were polite about the whole affair, and we gave answers as voluminous as possible and got through without delay. An express train got us into Berlin at seven, and we were soon in the hotel to which the Olderburg officers had told us to go, being instructed in the regulations for visitors in war times. We were each given a slip of paper entitling us to 250 grammes of bread for the next day. A roll weighs 50 grammes, and so if I ate five rolls for breakfast I could not have any more bread the rest of the day. A similar slip made it possible for me to get 50 grammes of meat, but whereas bread is a daily possibility, meat could at that time be had only five days a week, and now the limit has been reduced to four. These were the only restrictions upon food. For the police we had only to register as soon as we arrived and twelve hours before we left. That seemed very easy after the way Germany's allies had sent us from one man to another, and as the policemen we saw were very jovial, and rather interested in our trip, we were soon in possession of the freedom of the city.

GOOD CHEER IN BERLIN

Berlin looks just as it has always looked, except at night, when fewer stores are lighted. But even then there is no air of sorrow or depression, and business seems to be flourishing. If there is anything that cannot be bought in the shops we failed to find it. I even got an English raincoat—at a reduced price. The streets are full of people, and most of them are in civilian clothes. I presume that the men not in uniform belong to reserve corps not yet called, or are in government offices, but certain it is that there are a great many men still able to go to the trenches when their turn comes. Of course, we knew that the men have been taken from the country in order that the cities shall suffer as little as possible, and all through the empire we had remarked upon the small number of men to be seen in the fields. But even so we were surprised to see the crowds of men streaming out of the suburban trains in the morning and filling the streets throughout the day.

Women are at work, as has been reported, and it seems distinctly a misfortune that they must take up the tasks assigned them. Perhaps we were unfortunate in the women that we saw, but others who have been to Berlin have made the same observation that we made: that the women who have taken men's tasks have thrown off the reserve that they might have been expected to maintain, and are not far from what we would call rowdy. The atmosphere of moral stability that one used to note in the German cities is distinctly lacking in the new order of things.

NO WOUNDED IN THE CITIES

Another surprise to me was the fact that I did not see a single wounded or disabled man in the cities. We noticed this throughout the countries we traversed, and decided that it is the policy of the central powers to hide as much of the suffering occasioned by the war as possible from the people who stay at home. The French allow the wounded to go about, mutely appealing by the very fact of their condition to the spirit of revenge in their compatriots who see them. Not so the Germans, who must keep tremendous hospital camps for all their men who are out of commission.

One of the sights of Berlin at the present time is the new Von Hindenberg statue, built of wood, and intended to be pounded full of nails by the admiring throngs who see it. The nails can be bought on the spot; iron, steel, copper, silver or gold ones, at the price of the metal. The statue is some forty feet in height and is surrounded by a scaffolding, so that the nail drivers can choose any part of the figure they desire to decorate. Perhaps the idea is a good one, but it seems to me rather dangerous so to exalt a man to such an extent when he still has a great chance of failing in the task before him, and so of falling terribly from public esteem. And certainly the statue is an honor only in its sentiment. Artistically, it is a crime against the good taste of all who see it.

BERLIN TO COPENHAGEN

There are almost no signs of the war in Berlin. Few soldiers are around; no cannon rumble through the streets; no airships are in the sky; the military bustle and stress that we marked in Aleppo and Constantinople are altogether lacking, and the city seems as peaceful as if war did not exist. The only interest in the progress of events that we could see was in front of the great maps of the various fronts which the newspapers hang in their windows, marking from day to day the movements of the troops. And the excitement of the people there was much less than that of the Parisians over the maps of the Balkan war of 1912. Perhaps Berlin is phlegmatic; perhaps it is too confident of the outcome to be excited by minor reverses; certainly it is as little agitated as any city at war could possibly be.

* * *

We stayed in Berlin only over two nights, and then left for Copenhagen, where we were to get the ship for New York. The train was very crowded, and we were told that large numbers of people were leaving every day. But it was an express and an excellently appointed one. Indeed, we noted throughout Germany that the trains run as frequently as ever, and are as punctual. The trip was uneventful until we reached Warnemünde, the boundary of the Empire, and then we were suddenly plunged into the war spirit again.

GERMAN THOROUGHNESS AGAIN

The train stopped at the station and our baggage was taken out. Then, with a soldier armed with a most business-like gun at the bottom of the steps, we left the cars and were hurried into a long waiting room, the door of which was at once shut and locked. Then our passports were taken, and in a few minutes we were called into a rear room, where we found the baggage. This underwent as thorough an inspection as the Austrians at Orsova had given it, handkerchiefs being held up to the light so that no writing could be hidden in them, cigarettes being torn open for fear that they concealed dispatches, pictures being confiscated on the chance that they were cipher codes. They even took a thermos bottle, rather than take the time then to examine between its various layers.

Next it was the turn of the passengers to be searched and once more complete thoroughness was the order of the day. We were led into small rooms where we had to strip and allow the officer in charge of us to examine every stitch of our clothing. I guess that I looked innocent, because the man who looked me over did not pay any attention to my body, but we heard stories of backs scrubbed with lemon juice to discover acid writing, and heard that ladies had to unbraid their hair, while one officer looked between the toes of his victim for concealed papers.

GOOD EATING IN SCANDINAVIA

There are no half measures when a German search officer really gets to work, we found. Of course, some of them are worse than others, and the women are the worst of all. One poor old German lady had a picture of her only son, killed but two days before at Verdun, and she wanted to keep it. But the woman who searched her was obdurate, and not even an appeal to the head officer returned the picture to the mother. Such stringency seems idiotic, but a part of the German system is to teach a man to obey but never to think, and they are literalists. Once in awhile they find something that should not go through, but one of the inspectors, a man who had lived in New York, told me that they did not get enough to make the trouble and the expense worth while.

On the Danish ship that took us from Warnemünde to the Danish shore I had my first Scandinavian meal, and I liked it. According to their system a table full of cold meat, fish, cheese, bread, and salad is set out half an hour before the main meal is ready. Then everyone takes what pleases him and there is no extra charge—it is all a part of the dinner.

We found the prelude so good that I fear we did not do full justice to the excellent food that followed.

OUT OF THE DANGER ZONE

Copenhagen may have been inexpensive once, but it has forgotten those days, and we were met by a formidable list of prices. We looked for a cheaper hotel, but none was to be had, and so we allowed ourselves to enjoy the luxury we had to pay for. The food is wonderful! Of the days that we spent in the city I have no space to speak. We sailed from there on the S. S. Oscar II, made famous by Henry Ford, on July 27, called at Christiania the next day, were inspected by the British censors at the Orkney Islands, and finally sailed into the broad stretch of ocean. We were near the spot where Lord Kitchener had shortly before lost his life, and for two days lifeboats and lifebelts were ready at an instant's notice. But by the fifth day of the trip we were out of the danger zone, and slept without fear. The passage was rough, but not all of us were sick, and on the ninth of August we landed in New York, after having been on the way for almost seven weeks.

An Undelivered Speech

By PROFESSOR GEORGE BURMAN FOSTER

Of the University of Chicago

HERE is the speech Mr. Hughes did not make:

"Fellow Citizens: I have consented to compete with Mr. Wilson for the presidency. In doing so, I wish to begin by expressing appreciation of the character, ability, culture, and high purpose of my opponent. I am not a candidate because I feel superior to Mr. Wilson in these particulars. Undoubtedly, he is as earnest and honest and patriotic as I am. And, while he may be a bit romantic and Platonic, there is a touch of genius about the man which is foreign to my personality. I own that he has a splendid vision of internationalism and even supernationalism which it were well to add to our old selfish nationalisms. In this field history will honor him as a pioneer. He faces forward with high resolve. Out of the stones which his generation throws at him our children will build a monument to him.

"Moreover, when I turn from the man to what he has done, I find that his official acts, namely, a, b, c, are wise and right and good. It is difficult to see how they could be improved upon, and I am sure I could not do so.

HIS OFFICIAL DEEDS

"As to his official deeds, namely, d, e, f, there is room for difference of opinion. There are alternatives to them which I might have chosen. But I should have done so fully aware that subsequently the consequences of my choice might lead me to conclude that the alternative adopted by Mr. Wilson would have been preferable. Take Mexico. Our President was virtually dealing with a huge mob, hating each other, hating us, to put which down by force would gain our country nothing and lose it much. The loss would have been greater had a policy been adopted which led to war. It is difficult to deal with political chaos, ignorance and lawlessness. If I say Mr. Wilson has blundered, the statement would imply that I knew at the time a course of action that would not have been a blunder. I knew none such, and as an honest man I refuse to offer something that would have only a fictitious constructive appearance.

"There remain official actions, namely, g, h, i, which, I regret to say, are in my judgment false in philosophy and injurious in practice. I give you my reasons for thinking so, that you may appraise them for yourselves. If I am elected I shall do what I can to correct these errors and evils. I do not mean to insinuate that Mr. Wilson is the kind of man that would intentionally commit wrongs against his country or wreak vengeance upon any man or set of men.

BECOMING HUMILITY

"In this connection I take occasion to say with all earnestness that I do not offer myself as candidate with the expectation that I shall make no mistakes as President. Indeed, as I have had no experience in this high office, and Mr. Wilson has, I might naturally make more mistakes in the next four years than Mr. Wilson would.

"I am not conceited enough to boast as I put the armor on, as he may perhaps be able to do as he puts it off. I could not respect myself nor ask respectable people to respect me if I engaged in indiscriminate criticism for partisan and personal ends as demagogues and charlatans have always done. Our captain has had to pilot our ship of state through the midnight hurricane. He was never captain before and the ship has seldom had so treacherous a sea. It is not seemly in us who never were a captain to stand idly and snugly at the wharf and jeer at his pale face and at its torn sails and broken timbers as it comes reeling in from its long voyage across the high seas. To be sure, the captain oftentimes changed direction, the ship's prow was turned now this way, now that, so that the direction of the ship at one time was 'inconsistent' with its direction at another, but consistent with the goal or with the winds and waves which had to be reckoned with.

AS TO CHANGE OF POLICY

"As a Christian I know that the prophet Isaiah in a changing situation so changed his policy that at a later time it was in flat contradiction with his earlier action; but he did not on that account change his principle, but upheld it rather. No, through it all, our captain was not stampeded, but showed a quiet courage which I am frank to say commands my admiration.

"Why, then, my countrymen, do I accept your nomination? Because two political parties are better than one. My traditions and sympathies are Republican—a monist instead of a pluralist in civic philosophy—and the Republican party has been a good servant for the most part for many years, and the specific planks—not so many—of your platform meet with my approval. and, of course, because the great honor of the position appeals to my ambition and aspiration."

The Minister's Financial Problem

The Boston Advertiser hits the nail exactly on the head when it says: "From small salaries it is expected that the ministry shall maintain social positions and contribute to charities upon a scale comparable with their more wealthy parishioners. It is only by the most rigid economy in personal expenditures that the average minister can accomplish any saving at all. Adequate provision for old age or disability is almost impossible. In the past the churches have been too neglectful of the men who have devoted their lives to their service. It is encouraging that they should see the justice of caring for their ministers whose days of usefulness are past."

Peter's Shadow and Ours

By EDGAR DE WITT JONES

ST. PETER'S at Rome is the largest and costliest cathedral in the world. It was hundreds of years in building, and the expenditures lavished upon it represent a colossal fortune. In the realm of church architecture it is supreme, and that magnificent structure, famed the world over for its beauty, is a monument to a simple Galilean fisherman, whose dust is supposed to slumber beneath the massive pile of marble, gold and silver.

From Simon Peter the humble fisherman of Galilee to St. Peter's at Rome seems a far cry. Yet I venture the assertion that the simple fact recorded in the fifth verse of Acts, fifteenth chapter, is a greater tribute to the fisherman Apostle than the world-famed structure at Rome.

THE FISHERMAN APOSTLE

Doubtless many a reader of the New Testament has passed by this significant incident and attached no special importance to its record here. It happened in that wonderful period when the mother church flourished at Jerusalem, when the Apostles and some several thousand members lived in the very atmosphere of the spirit of God. It happened shortly after a poor lame man, who had asked alms of Peter at the beautiful gate of the temple, had received, not alms, but the restoration of health. Peter said, "Silver and gold have I none, but what I have, that I give thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, walk." And he who was lame stood, and not only did he stand, but he began to walk, and not only did he walk, but he leaped, all the while praising God.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS

"That his shadow might overshadow some of them." Everything in life casts a shadow. The great oak of the woodland pasture casts its equally great shadow and the attenuated telegraph pole casts its equally attenuated shadow. This matter of shadows, that animate and inanimate beings cast—how much there is of fantastical in the shadows that we cast! Sooner or later every child is fascinated and filled with wonderment with his shadow. Robert Louis Stevenson, in his "Child's Garden of Verses," has a poem beginning, "I have a little shadow," in which he tells how a little boy is mystified by the shadow that follows him all through the sunshiny day and how at last the little fellow gets up one morning before sunrise and gets ahead of the shadow for once.

There is mystery and romance in lights and shadows, the fantastical shadows of the woods under a clear moon, the shadows that are thrown from an old-fashioned wood fireplace, the shadows that dance on the wall like human beings, the shadows that reach out over the clear waters of some sheltered brook or stream, beautiful beyond the power of artist to put on canvas.

But the shadow referred to in this text is practical and fraught with teachings that enter into the commonest tasks as well as the holiest of relationships. Every one of us casts a shadow; the influences that go out from our lives, like shadows, are falling athwart the paths of men and women. Every one of us carries an atmosphere with him, an atmosphere either of warmth, genial and persuasive, or cold, iceburgish and forbidding.

OUR SHADOWS FOLLOW US

We cannot get away from our shadows. We are linked to them so closely and securely. Well do I remember a little fellow on a moonlight night racing along the grass with his shadow, trying to run away from it, but never succeeding. At last he gave up in despair and asking the difficult question: "Why is it that I can't get away from my shadow? Why is it that it follows me every place I go?"

Every once in a while somebody says: "My influence doesn't count. It doesn't matter what I do or say, nobody knows and nobody cares." But this isn't true. No man liveth to himself or dieth to himself. The influence of every man and woman is being registered for good or evil upon the community; whether or not we wish it to be so, our lives are casting shadows.

"A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN"

Just now there is a popular ballad much in vogue. You hear it every day. It is entitled "A Little Bit of Heaven." It is a tribute in clever verse to Ireland, and the happy thought is that the Almighty created the Emerald Isle by dropping down a bit of heaven in mid-ocean. It is popular and it has a fetching tune, but little bits of heaven are not made that way. God does not drop them out of the skies. They are built up from below. One man can so live here and now as to carry with him the breath of a better land. Simon Peter did that and carried about with him the atmosphere that was holy and good. Great souls who love God and men are little bits of heaven here on earth. And it is possible for the New Jerusalem to come down here on earth.

A Loftier Race

These things shall be; A loftier race
Than e'er the world hath known shall rise,
With flame of freedom in their souls
And light of knowledge in their eyes.

They shall be gentle, brave and strong,
Not to spill human blood, but dare
All that may plant man's lordship firm
On earth and fire and sea and air.

Nation with nation, land with land,
Unarmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of fraternity.

—John Addington Symonds.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE

BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Program for the Week of Prayer.

The World's Evangelical Alliance, with offices in London, has sent out the program for the Week of Prayer, beginning January first. The series of subjects is worthy of note. They are: Monday, "Thanksgiving and Humiliation"; Tuesday, "The Church Universal—the One Body of Which Christ Is the Head"; Wednesday, "Nations and Their Rulers"; Thursday, "Missions Among Moslems and the Heathen"; Friday, "Families, Schools, Colleges and the Young"; Saturday, "Missions at the Home Base, and Among the Jews."

Ministers on Prohibition Ticket.

The Prohibitionists are utilizing a good many preacher politicians this year on their state and national tickets. Dr. Ira Landrith, formerly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Fellowship, is the candidate for vice-president. Rev. John R. Golden, a Disciple, is the candidate for Governor of Illinois. Rev. Oliver W. Stewart, another Disciple, is manager of the national campaign. All of these were in Chicago on October 7 for a Prohibition rally.

Says Missionary Sacrifice Is too Small.

J. Campbell White, at the recent National Missionary Congress in Washington, D. C., made this startling statement: "We have been saying that we could not afford to give eighteen million dollars a year to foreign missions or to send four thousand men abroad. Yet today Great Britain, with less than half our population, is spending twenty-five million dollars a day; and Canada, with less than one-tenth our population, is sending three hundred thousand men to fight and die in Europe. We are asking too little for the cause of Christ and the salvation of the world."

A Call to America's Generosity

The President of the United States has issued an appeal that October 21 be observed as a day for Armenian and Syrian relief. The people in these sections of the world have suffered most from the ravages of war. S. S. McClure, the noted American publisher, states that the Turkish outrages in these countries are so astonishing as to constitute "something new in history." The Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief promises that every cent given will reach the unfortunates. There has been $1,200,000 given already and it is imperative that $5,000,000 more be raised. A letter received by the committee from Aintab tells some of the horrible conditions that prevail. The writer says: "But I am not thinking of myself, but of the crowds of children outside that are crying for bread, of the many pure young girls who, driven by hunger and loneliness at home, seek refuge at the hearths of Arabian men, to whom they are sold for bread; the women, the mothers, who are wandering about in despair to find bread for the little ones; the young people who, weakened by hunger, appear like old people prematurely aged. The responsibility of having seen this compels me to write. A little boy said to his mother: 'Here is the cooking stove and the pot, why don't you cook us something to eat?' The little one had not eaten anything for two days. Another child: 'Mother, will ever the time come again that I can eat as much as I like?' The people kill and eat the street dogs. A short time ago they killed and ate a dying man. An eye-witness told me this. I saw a woman, who from the street ate the clotted blood of an animal. Up till now all fed themselves with grass, but that, too, is now dried up. Last week we came in a house of which the occupants had not eaten anything since three days. The wife had a child in her arms and tried to give it a crumb of bread to eat. The child could eat no more; it died in her arms. A mother threw herself into the Euphrates after she had seen her child die of hunger; a father did the same."

A Great Preacher Coming to a Great Church.

The Church of the Pilgrims in Brooklyn, of the Congregational order, is a historic church. It was here that Dr. Richard Salter Storrs was minister in days gone by, and occupied a unique place in American life. The church neighborhood has changed, but there is now a work to do calling for a new kind of ability. The church has called to its pastorate Rev. Richard Roberts of London. Mr. Roberts was a Presbyterian in London, with the Crouch Hill church. He has taken an extreme pacifist position, which has made living difficult in London in these exciting times.

Well Known Waldensian Pastor Dies

Rev. Albert Clot was a Waldensian pastor in New York, doing work among the Italians. He came to this country some years ago in the interest of the Waldensians and made a deep impression. He then settled in New York as head of the Italian Bureau of Immigration, and later became pastor of a church. Though he knew the abuses of the Roman Catholic church in Italy, he always spoke temperately and in Christian spirit of these facts. He died recently, and it will be difficult to fill his place in the Presbyterian mission work.

The Bishop of Springfield Will Resign

The Bishop of Springfield, of the Protestant Episcopal church, the Rt. Rev. Edward William Osborne, D. D., who was consecrated in 1904, announced on Friday, September 29, his intention to resign his see at the approaching session of the House of Bishops at St. Louis. His resignation is to take effect January 1st, and the reasons assigned for his action are his advanced age and physical infirmities.

Two English Bishops in This Country.

Two English bishops have arrived to attend the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church. They are the Rt. Rev. Huyshe Wolcott Yeatman-Biggs, Bishop of Worcester, and Bishop Montgomery of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. These noted ecclesiastics preached in New York on the Sunday after their arrival. They will be interested participants in the gathering of Episcopalian leaders in St. Louis October 11 and the days following.

The Sunday School

THE VOYAGE.

Lesson for October 29

Golden Text: Commit thy way unto Jehovah; Trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass. Psalm 37-5.

Lesson Acts 27, 1-38: verses 13-26 printed.

Memorize verses 22-24.

(13) And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, they weighed anchor and sailed along Crete, close in shore. (14) But after no long time there beat down from it a tempestuous wind, which is called Euraquilo: (15) and when the ship was caught, and could not face the wind, we gave way to it, and were driven. (16) And running under the lee of a small island called Cauda, we were able, with difficulty, to secure the boat: (17) and when they had hoisted it up, they used helps, under-girding the ship; and, fearing lest they should be cast upon the Syrtis, they lowered the gear, and so were driven. (18) And as we labored exceedingly with the storm, the next day they began to throw the freight overboard; (19) and the third day they cast out with their own hands the tackling of the ship. (20) And when neither sun nor stars shone upon us for many days, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was now taken away. (21) And when they had been long without food, then Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have set sail from Crete, and have gotten this injury and loss. (22) And now I exhort you to be of good cheer; for there shall be no loss of life among you, but only of the ship. (23) For there stood by me this night an angel of the God whose I am, whom also I serve, (24) saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must stand before Cæsar. and lo, God hath granted thee all them that sail with thee. (25) Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for I believe God, that it shall be even so as it hath been spoken unto me. (26) But we must be cast upon a certain island.

* * *

Verse by Verse

16. Running under the lee of a small island. There was no port here, but the island furnished some protection. We were able with difficulty to secure the boat. To get on deck the small boat which in calm weather was attached by a rope to the vessel's stern.

19. The tackling. Here the meaning is uncertain, but is generally supposed that it means the furniture of the ship.

20. Neither sun nor stars shone. These were the guides to the mariner, and when they could not be seen he was lost. Many days. The journey between Crete and Malta took about fourteen days.

22. I exhort you to be of good cheer. The above words prepare for this word of comfort. There shall be no loss of life among you. He feels sure that the people will be saved, but is not confident of the ship. Better to lose property than life.

23. Whose I am, whom also I serve. "To belong to God expresses the essence of inward religion, while to serve him is the sum of religion in practice."—(Maclaren.)

24. Thou must stand before Caesar. This was the purpose of God to which Paul's life had been spared. God hath granted thee. It may be that their lives were granted to Paul in answer to his prayer.

25. Be of good cheer. This they could well be in face of Paul's encouraging words. I believe God. Paul's faith would spread among those on board; so will our faith inspire others if it is worth while.

26. We must be cast upon a certain island. They would be saved by being cast upon a certain island.

TEST QUESTIONS

1. Who were Paul's traveling companions?
2. What was Paul's counsel at Fair Havens?
3. Why was his advice disregarded?
4. Why did Paul have such influence over the crew?
5. What is the meaning of the word "Euraquilo?"
6. To what country does Crete now belong?
7. What was Paul's real and official position on the boat?
8. Why did they give up hope when they could not see the sun and stars?

"Shipwrecked"

The Lesson in Today's Life

BY JOHN R. EWERS

"I HAVE always wondered," said a friend of mine, "what I would do if I woke up and found a burglar in the house. Now I know. Last night I had a fight with one and I bested him." How will you act in a crisis? The great point in this lesson is found in the behavior of the Great Apostle. A storm at sea tests men's souls. Some curse. Some pray. One stands by the rail and philosophically observes to the young girl nearby, "Why should we fear death—it is the beautiful adventure." Wesley found God in the storm. Alexander Campbell pledged his entire service to God in an Atlantic tempest. Paul was never more a king than when he rode above the storm. What a mighty spirit that man had! When seasoned sailors were in a panic, when the frail ship creaked and rolled and plunged, when his fellow passengers were dumb in terror, Paul was calm. "We shall all be saved."

An old gentleman left my study this morning and as he walked out he said, "My life is hid with Christ in God. I may go to heaven from the car or from my home; it matters little so long as I am sure where I am going!"

Do you believe that God strengthens us? Have you a vital faith? Do you trust in the Lord? When you come face up to the great moments of your life—the moment when you face death, promotion, defeat, great success, or years of dull grind ahead—do you absolutely believe that God cares and that his power is sufficient? Power is possessed by that life which believes that God is the guide.

"Why, this church cannot fail!" said a fellow pastor, in a dark hour, "because this is God's work"; and he toiled on until victory crowned his labors. God is back of His work. God is back of every good man and He will see you through.

I visited a fellow in the jail this week. He went up against a problem too big to handle alone and he was broken by it, poor chap. It's a sad thing to go naked to the battle. It's a pity to face the trying world, Godless. Once he had been a church member. He pulled an old, faded, church directory out of his pocket and showed me his name. He showed me a letter of commendation written twenty years ago. But now he is down and out. He had to take the count. He met his crisis and was licked. He smashed into his temptation single handed. Having no pilot he ran his boat upon the rocks. He said, "When I get out of here I am going to head straight for your church." I said, "I will predict your finish by whether you head for a church or a saloon when you go out that door."

* * *

A man will do in a crisis precisely what he has made up his mind to do in the quiet hours of his life. "If I get a good chance—watch me!" And some hour your chance comes, like a flash, and you steal, lie, swear, shirk or whatever you had consented in your miserable soul to do. A strong character is built up by the cumulative results of good, kind, positive thoughts and plans. The gods see everywhere. The wind blew down our street the other night and a stately tree crashed down—it was rotten inside—it was a bluff—but God called that bluff,—and He will call yours! You can't fool God at all, no matter what Lincoln said about bluffing the crowd. And it's God that counts. Magnificent Paul riding the storm with a brave heart. My soul, be on thy guard! The crisis is the proof of the stuff.

October 15 is the date set for the publication of

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

Edited by Charles Clayton Morrison and Herbert L. Willett. The book is now on the press after some delay due to the incalculable conditions obtaining in the manufacture of the paper. Many requests for returnable copies have been received. These will be sent promptly. A wide-spread interest has been manifested in the appearance of this notable work into which five years of preparation have gone. The publishers regard The Disciples Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. Pastors or responsible officers of churches may write for returnable copy of the hymnal. Please state the approximate number of books your congregation will need. Address

Disciples Publication Society,
700 East 40th Street, Chicago

Disciples Table Talk

Western Man succeeds in Eastern Field

It seems a big experiment for a pastor to leave a field in Missouri for a conservative work in an eastern city, but T. E. Winter, in taking up the pastorate at Third church, Philadelphia, after serving at Fulton, Mo., evidently made a wise move. For there are "things doing" at the Eastern church which indicate real progress made. Mr. Winter has been in Philadelphia but two years, but already a lot has been purchased in a fine residential neighborhood, now being rapidly developed. The lot cost $10,500, and is situated in the west part of the city. It is over three miles from the present location of the church, but is easily accessible to all the congregation by car lines. In fact, Mr. Winter writes, all West Philadelphia will find the church easily reached, which is an important fact when it is considered that the Disciples have but one church in this part of the city. The Third church congregation is now planning a whirlwind campaign to clear the indebtedness on the lot before January 1, 1917; the expectation then is to follow this up with an active building campaign. Work on the new building will be begun next spring or summer. In the meantime a Sunday school will be opened in a motion picture theater in the new neighborhood, also an evening preaching service. These meetings will begin November 1. Since Mr. Winter has been with Third church there have been nearly 300 persons added to the membership of the congregation.

J. N. Jessup Goes to Magnolia Avenue, Los Angeles

For a long time it appeared that E. M. Waits, of Magnolia Avenue, Fort Worth, Tex., would succeed R. W. Abberley at Magnolia Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal. But when Mr. Waits was called to the presidency of Texas Christian University, it became necessary for the board of the California church to cast about for another man. The call has now come to J. N. Jessup, who has been very successful in the churches at Vincennes, Ind., Little Rock, Ark., and in his present field at Hopkinsville, Ky., First church. Mr. Jessup will assume his new task November 1.

"The Peripatetic Parson" Visits Bowling Green, Mo.

Nelson Trimble, who styles himself "The Peripatetic Parson," has recently been "peripateting" at Bowling Green, Mo., where Arthur Stout ministers to the entire community, and where Speaker Champ Clark lives and testifies to his religious beliefs as an elder in the Christian church. Mr. Trimble writes that all of Pike county feels the influence of Arthur Stout. Last week he was elected county president, and he will soon make a school house tour of the county in the interest of the dry amendment. The new brick church is reported nearly completed, and this modern structure will be dedicated on November 12 by C. H. Winders, of Indianapolis. Of Speaker Clark Mr. Trimble writes: "Speaker Clark is an elder of this church and is beloved by every one who knows him, not only for his fine personal qualities, but also for his splendid Christian ideals which he lives out in the strife of politics. I saw Mr. Clark on the street here the other day and he made the statement that on all of his campaign trips he carried along a copy of the scriptures to which he turned for comfort and strength in the midst of the stress and turmoil of campaigning. His new lecture, 'Richer Than Golconda,' is an eloquent plea for bible study." Mr. Trimble also reports progress in New London, where a new building helps the pastor, Mr. Munyon, in getting results. He speaks highly of the work of Mr. Book at Frankford, Mo., and of Mr. Dudley, who ministers at Troy.

Rev. T. E. Winter, Who Is Making an Unusual Record at Third Church, Philadelphia

CHURCH EXTENSION AT HIGH TIDE

I am very happy to report the gains made in our Church Extension work this year.

From the churches we received $26,142.50, which was a gain over last year of $4,762.49. We had 1,388 contributing churches, a gain of 198 over last year. Our total new receipts, including interest, are $196,973.83, which is a gain over last year of $109,975.13. Of this $64,227.03 was from the Thomas Bondurant estate, De Land, Ill. Subtracting this from our total gain of $109,975.13, we have a normal gain of $45,748.10. Our returns on loans are $150,976.77. The total number of churches we have built since the beginning is 1,838.

Our total returned loans and interest from the beginning are	$2,080,419.92
There is in our permanent fund	1,309,040.20
This makes a total of	$3,389,460.12

which has been in operation in our Church Extension Fund during the last twenty-eight years.

G. W. Muckley, Secretary.

W. F. Richardson Quits Kansas City Field After Long Service

Sunday, two weeks ago, was the twenty-second anniversary of the coming of W. F. Richardson to the work at First church, Kansas City, Mo. On this day he completely surprised his congregation by announcing that he would resign this work, his resignation to take effect January 1. Mr. Richardson stated that he did not know what he would do, but said that he had no intention of quitting the ministry. He declared that his resignation must be taken as irrevocable. No pastor in Missouri has done a more useful work than Mr. Richardson, not only for his own church, which is in a difficult field, but in outside lines of activity. His stand against vice and the saloon has made him an outstanding figure in the public life of Kansas City. Mr. Richardson is the third oldest Protestant minister in point of service in Kansas City, the length of his service being exceeded only by that of George H. Combs and George P. Baity, who have been in the ministry there, respectively, twenty-four and twenty-three years. He has been one of the most active members of the Ministerial Alliance and vice-president of the Church Federation since its inception in 1908. He was elected president of the general convention of the Churches of Christ to meet in Des Moines this week. Mr. Richardson preached his first sermon in Secoy, Ill., forty-four years ago, and was ordained four years later. He came to Kansas City from Central church, Denver. Asked for the reason for his present resignation, he said he had none further than that he had been with his charge twenty-two years and had decided it would be best for him to change. In common with other downtown churches, First church has suffered a yearly exodus of its members to churches in the residence districts. Only a few members who were there when Mr. Richardson began are there at present. In the twenty-two years of his pastorate he received twenty-six hundred members into the church. More than twenty-three hundred have been lost through letter or otherwise. The church now has a membership of 833, 775 of whom Mr. Richardson received into the church.

Sixty Years a Sunday School Teacher.

Mrs. Barbara Hamilton, who died recently at Eureka, Ill., had the unique distinction of having taught in the Bible school for a period of sixty years. This is a remarkable record indeed, especially since during that long period Mrs. Hamilton kept in touch with all the developments in Sunday school, always ready to adopt the newer and better methods. Mrs. Hamilton was born in Arbroath, Scotland, in 1835. During her service in this school the Eureka church grew from a pioneer rural congregation to one of the most modern and progressive churches of the brotherhood. The Sunday school is graded, with promotion of classes, teacher training and all the other modern methods that make it a real school.

W. B. Clemmer Concludes Six Years at Rockford, Ill., Central.

That W. B. Clemmer is a leader in Rockford, Ill., community life is evidenced by the fact that he was chairman of the union evangelistic campaign recently held, and that he is president of the City Pastors' union. A fine new church home was completed and dedicated this year, and while all obligations on this are not yet paid, there is no financial embarrassment. An increase of salary has just been voted their pastor by the congregation. During the year 87 persons were added to the church membership, 33 of these coming from the Sunday school. The cause of missions received $241 from the church and allied organizations. Mr. Clemmer made 1,424 calls during the year just closed.

—The Loyal Daughters' Class of the Bible school at Lebanon Junction, Ky., is composed of ten young ladies taught by Mrs. R. H. Hampton. Four members of this class having received inspiration at a district convention led the class to undertake the support of an orphan in the Louisville Home.

Wanted: Two Trained Nurses for Mission Work.

Secretary S. J. Corey writes: "We are greatly in need of two well-equipped trained nurses for our hospitals in China. The money has already been provided and all expenses covered for their going. The two hospitals are in the midst of great populations, and these nurses are much needed for the work. The Foreign Society needs two nurses of resourceful spirituality and tact. They should have the equivalent of a high school course before the nurse's course. We had two under appointment and hoped to send them out this fall, but emergencies have arisen which make it impossible for them to go. I know of no place in the world where one could serve with greater hopes of returns for Christ, or where the need is more pressing than in these two places. Each hospital is the center for a million or more people."

Unusual Growth at Lawrenceburg, Ky.

Frederic F. Grim has been with the church at Lawrenceburg, Ky., but a year, and to date there have been 60 persons added to the membership of the congregation, about half of these by confession of their faith. The Sunday School has surpassed any year of its history both in attendance and missionary offerings; the school is being graded, the state Sunday School organization giving assistance in this task. A Christian Endeavor society has been organized, and has already become a strong influence among the young people of the church. A "Triangle" has also been organized among the younger girls. The C. W. B. M. has more than doubled its membership, and is exerting a fine spiritual influence in the community. The Ladies' Aid has promoted a Chautauqua course with success. The missionary offerings of the church represent a larger number of givers than ever before, and are the largest in the history of the church. At present the congregation is enjoying a spiritual feast in the meetings being held under the leadership of Roger T. Nooe of Frankfort, Ky. The purpose of the series is the building up of the church in spiritual and business efficiency. No better messages have ever been given the congregation, Mr. Grim writes.

* *

—Jackson Boulevard Sunday school, Chicago, had an attendance on October 1 of 892. The Loyal Women's Class, taught by the pastor's wife, Mrs. Austin Hunter, had 187 present on that day. Mr. Hunter has a large men's class.

—Chas. H. Swift, pastor at Carthage, Mo., reports a series of meetings just closed at this church, with eight confessions and six additions by letter and statement as one result. Mr. Swift preached during the meetings and Frank McDonald led in the singing and solo work. During Mr. Swift's first six months in this new field there have been forty-four accessions to the membership of the church.

—C. M. Burkhart, of the pastorate at Springfield, O., writes that C. F. Hutslar, of Broadway church, Los Angeles, Cal., preached a strong sermon at the Springfield church, on October 1. This is Mr. Hutslar's home church, as also that of Wallace Tuttle, song evangelist, who often "drops in" and sings for the Springfield congregation. Mr. Burkhart reports a second every-member canvass taken, with great success. Along with the other churches of the city, Mr. Burkhart's congregation is making preparation for a union revival to be led by Dr. George Wood Anderson.

—E. B. Lyman, a leader in the Oakland, Cal., church, is quite hopeful of results to be attained by this congregation under the ministry of the new pastor, H. A. Van Winkle, who had the good record in his previous field at Tillamook, Ore., of doubling the membership of the congregation and increasing the efficiency of the Sunday school 100 per cent during the three years of his pastorate. Mr. Lyman pronounces Mr. Van

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

Notes From the Foreign Society

Last week the Foreign Society received $2,000 on the annuity plan from a friend in Ohio. This is his second gift.

The estate of the late T. E. Bondurant, De Land, Ill., has been distributed, and by the terms of the will the Foreign Society received $64,102. There will be further receipts from this estate. This becomes a permanent fund and only the income rising from it can be used for the work.

The total value of the property of the Foreign Society on the mission fields is reported by the missionaries to be worth $648,713, a gain of $36,322 over one year ago.

The total amount raised on the mission fields of the Foreign Society during the past year is $94,610, a gain over the previous year of $35,337. Ten years ago only $17,462 was raised, an advance in a decade of $77,522. This is certainly a very encouraging showing and one that must be gratifying to the friends of the work.

Miss Kate V. Johnson, missionary under the Foreign Society, in Tokyo, Japan, has just reached America on furlough. Miss Johnson has been in the service of the Foreign Society longer than any other missionary. She is supported by the church at San Diego, Cal.

Dr. J. W. Young is making good progress in the Mary Chiles Hospital at Manila, P. I. He took up the work just a short time ago when Dr. Lemmon left Manila for his furlough in America. The friends of Dr. Lemmon will have the pleasure of meeting him at Des Moines.

It is very gratifying to report that the number of churches that gave $600 or more during last year was 134, a gain of 41 over the previous year reaching that amount. These 134 churches gave more than all the other churches of the brotherhood. This helps to illustrate the great value of the living link method.

The receipts of the Foreign Society amounted to $92,949 in August, a gain of $71,702.

The churches as churches gained $5,941. This brings their total gain for eleven months up to $23,190. The total reecipts from the churches for the year are $118,821. This is the best in our history for the corresponding time.

The Sunday schools did splendidly in August. They gained 120 contributing schools, and they contributed $7,319, an increase over August of 1915 of $3,096. They have given $89,630 in eleven months and we rejoice to believe that they will go up to $100,000 by September 30. This has been their work for the year.

* * *

The Endeavor societies gained in number and contributions, though both were small. But they have gained 519 contributing societies during the year and $2,829 in gifts.

The individual gifts in August show a loss of 120 in number, but a gain in $2,593 in amount given. We are expecting large returns from individual givers during the month of September.

The annuities gained $7,667 in August but they show a loss of $916 on the year. It is our hope that September will show a different footing. We are expecting a substantial gain.

The total receipts for the year to September 1 are $355,173. This is a gain in regular receipts of $79,404, a gain in bequests of $636, but a loss in annuities of $916.

* * *

Let the friends get very busy the next few days and pass the $500,000 mark without fail. This we will do if the receipts for this month equal those of September, 1915. Let us not be defeated now when a mighty victory is in sight.

Send offerings promptly to F. M. Rains, secretary, Cincinnati, Ohio, and he will return a proper receipt.

Winkle a convincing speaker and an able evangelist.

—W. H. Hampton, evangelist, is now in a meeting at Wyaconda, Mo., the Thomases of Des Moines having charge of the singing.

—On rally day at the Petersburg, Ill., Sunday school, the Iscah Class of women had an attendance of 101. There were 374 present at the general service.

—Charles Watt Erickson will be the new chancellor of Cotner University, Bethany, Neb. He will begin his work November 1.

—J. L. Kohler has resigned the assistant pastorship of First church, Lincoln, Neb., to take up a Y. M. C. A. secretaryship.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—W. B. Zimmerman has been preaching a series of illustrated sermons at Mitchellville, Ia., on Sunday evenings, beginning September 17, with "Ancient Bible Manuscripts"; September 24, "The Bible Writers"; October 1, "Man-Made Religion"; October 8, "The True Revelation of God." These were stereopticon lectures and drew large crowds.

—Drake University has a fine representation in the University of Chicago again this year. Here are some of those entering: Sam Kincheloe and wife, Herbert Swanson and Estella Saunders, Harry Leach and his new bride, John I. Roberts and sister Mary Roberts, Opal Daniels, Stella Buchanan and John Hirschler. All but Messrs. Swanson, Saunders and Buchanan are graduates of last year's class, and all but Mr. Leach and wife are members of the "Volunteer Band" of Drake.

—The Grant Park church, Des Moines, where F. W. Mutchler continues his unique ministry, were to have a "Fall Financial Festival" on October 1. A. M. Haggard was to be with them in the evening service. These people have about $950 indebtedness on the basement of their building, which is now being used. They want to get this out of the way that they may have a clean slate for the completion of their building as soon as possible.

—R. Graham Frank of Liberty, Mo., will hold an evangelistic meeting at Lexington, Mo., where Richard W. Wallace ministers. The series will begin November 12.

—Frank Waller Allen of First Church, Springfield, Ill., reports that the Fellowship Movement in this church starts off with fine prospects this autumn. The girls' department, just inaugurated, enlisted seventy-five girls at the first session.

—The anniversary dinner and business meeting of Hyde Park Church, Chicago, was held on Wednesday of this week. This is in celebration of the 22nd anniversary of the organization of the church, and the 16th anniversary of the coming of Dr. Ames to the pastorate. A budget of over $6,000 is reported for the year, of which $2,000 was for missions and benevolences. Fifteen persons took membership with this congregation last Sunday. There have been additions at the Sunday services for many weeks past.

—J. E. Lynn has resigned from the pulpit at Loveland, Cal., because of ill health. One of the church leaders writes that the work has prospered greatly under his leadership, and has taken a commanding place in the community. Mr. Lynn will at least for a time give up the ministry. The congregation is seeking for the right man to succeed him at Loveland.

—Thos. Penn Ullom, at one time associated with C. R. Scoville in evangelistic work, has located at Winona Lake, Ind., and will serve as pulpit supply and evangelist.

—The new Bible School House of Ninth Street Church, Washington, D. C., will be dedicated next Sunday. Geo. L. Snively will be in charge and E. B. Bagby, T. A. Hosteller, S. T. Nichols and the pastor, Geo. A. Miller, will speak. Special evangelistic services will be held each evening of next week.

—For the year closing September 30, 1916, the Endeavor Societies of the churches contributed $10,246.44 for foreign missions, a gain of $3,536.62 over the preceding year. There was a gain of 350 contributing societies. These splendid and encouraging gains should inspire the Endeavorers to even a larger work this year. Hence the watchword of the new year, "$15,000 from the Endeavor Societies by September 30, 1917."

—The following Endeavor Societies have recently entered the Life-line class in the Foreign Society, or have expressed their purpose to do so this year: St. Louis (Compton Heights), Mo.; Paris (First), Ill.; Fort Wayne (W. Creighton Avenue), Ind.; Bedford, Ohio; Spokane (Dean Avenue), Wash.; Norfolk (First), Va.; Alpha Society, Washington (Vermont Avenue), D. C. Interest in the Life-line plan continues to grow and it is hoped there will soon be one hundred societies in this class.

Transylvania and College of the Bible

The opening of the new session of Transylvania and the College of the Bible has been full of promise. The freshman class is larger than in many years, and the other classes are full. It is always heartening to see the improvement in the preparation of students from year to year. This is noticeably true of the present student body. There is an increasing number of first honor graduates from the high schools, and men with degrees from other institutions are coming to Transylvania. England, Canada, Sweden, Australia, Japan, Russia and Germany are represented in the student body. The others come from some thirty states. The group of students is of the highest order.

Transylvania and the College of the Bible played an important part in the State Convention of the Christian Church at Winchester. President R. H. Crossfield, Secretary J. W. Hardy, Chancellor Homer W. Carpenter, Dean H. L. Calhoun, Dr. A. W. Fortune and Professor W. C. Bower appeared on the convention program. The Transylvania banquet was the largest of its kind yet held. Three hundred friends and alumni were seated at the tables and greatly enjoyed the occasion. Ira Boswell, E. B. Barnes, R. N. Simpson, Edwin Mark, J. D. Armistead and W. C. Bower were the speakers. President Crossfield acted as toastmaster, and an enthusiastic group of college students led the college yells and songs.

An effort is now being made to bring the alumni of the institution into a closer organization. Few institutions in America have a more distinguished or more honorable company of alumni than Transylvania, and the effort to bring them into closer touch and sympathy with the institution is a most worthy one. President Clinton M. Harbeson and his executive committee are planning a campaign toward that end.

The education session of the Des Moines convention will be presided over by President Crossfield and the principal address will be made by Dr. Herbert Martin, an alumnus of Transylvania. The Transylvania banquet on Saturday night of the convention is expected to be one of the largest and most successful ever held in a similar convention.

Miss Bertha Lohr of Nordhausen, Germany, for some time one of our missionaries in China, has entered Transylvania for a course while she is waiting for an opportunity to return to the mission field. She has been interned on account of the war. Miss Allye Campbell of Union City, Tenn., is preparing herself in the Department of Religious Education, for a pastoral helper. Miss Anne Garnett of Robinson, Ky., for two years a student in Wellesley College, has entered Transylvania for her degree.

A splendid company of men make up the football squad this season, and the team has opened the season with a first-game victory over Hanover College with a score of 46 to 7. It looks like a championship team again. H. W. Carpenter.

Hiram College Notes

The many friends of Prof. Geo. H. Peckham will be glad to know that his health has greatly improved and he is able to do part-time teaching in the Old Testament department.

The first semester of 1916-17 has opened with the largest college enrollment in the history of the institution. Three hundred and ten are in attendance, with a freshman class of 110. New teachers added to the faculty this fall are Prof. John Kenyon from Butler College, Prof. T. B. Ford from Lincoln Memorial College, Prof. Leigh Cannon from Eureka College, Prof. Gershon Bennett, graduate of Columbia University, Miss Mary Treudley of Athens, O., Miss Laura Towne of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Celia Tanner Cleaver of Detroit. Professor B. S. Dean has leave of absence for a year and he and Mrs. Dean are in California.

All Hiramites are rejoicing in the football victory over Western Reserve University, score 7 to 0. It was a clean-cut contest, fairly won. The outlook for our team is very bright. Professor B. J. Haggard is coach, assisted by Schuele, star of the Western Reserve team of last year. The schedule includes games with Oberlin, Case, Mt. Union, Baldwin, Wallace, Bethany and some others.

The annual report of the Hiram Church at the end of the fiscal year September 30 showed a membership of 362. Gifts to current expense aggregated $2,250, and to missions and benevolences $1,325. The budget plan complete is used here, and splendid results are shown. Brother John Pounds is a remarkably successful pastor for this college and country community. We all hope his tenure may be for life. C. O. Reynard.

National Benevolent Association

While our little hospital at Valparaiso, Ind., has been the least conspicuous perhaps of any member of the association's family, it is no less worthy of sympathy and support. It has become necessary to repair and remodel the building at a cost, approximately $5,000. A good part of this money has been borrowed. The work is now in progress. We should have at least $3,000 in order to make these repairs and reopen the hospital free of debt.

Thanks to the fine leadership of Mrs. J. C. Gentry, as chairman of the furnishing committee, the boys' dormitory of the Southern Christian Home, Atlanta, Ga., has been refurnished throughout with modern, specially constructed, sanitary beds. This fine gift has changed a curiosity shop into a bright, clean, attractive sleeping room.

The Cleveland Home has just finished a complete course in repairs. Ventilation has been improved, the fire risk reduced, better sanitation secured. This home is deserving of a more liberal support.

The Juliette Fowler Home is undergoing a transformation. The beautiful grounds, consisting of 15 acres, have just been inclosed with a neat, substantial fence. A modern new barn and chicken house has been erected. The place has been stocked with cows, pigs and chickens. A playground has been laid out and supplied with equipment. Under the leadership of Mr. M. B. Keith, as treasurer of the home, the Texas brethren are undertaking to finance it without the expense of a field man. They are setting an example worthy of our brethren everywhere.

For eight years we have prayed and worked for a small, separate building in which we might receive and detain children exposed to contagion into which we might remove, for their own safety and the safety of the family, children that might become sick with contagion in the Christian Orphans' Home. Through the generosity of Mr. Robert Stockton, who responded to the orphan's cry, eight years ago, by providing the present building for the Christian Orphans' Home, this new detention home and hospital is now being erected. Mr. Stockton has just made a gift of $12,000. Eight thousand dollars more is needed to enable us to open this building and dedicate it to the care of the sick and afflicted orphan free of debt.

A new home for the aged or the enlargement of one of our homes has become imperative. Such an influx of applications has come during the last few weeks as to crowd all of the homes. Twenty-six applications have been received within the last thirty days, all of them within a radius of 350 miles of Jacksonville. We dare not let these worthy brethren cry to us for support in vain.

The association is just closing the best year in its history. It has worked hard. Its friends have been generous. The Lord has blessed it with abundant fruitage. We invite our friends at Des Moines to rejoice with us.

J. H. MOHORTER,
Secretary.

H. H. PETERS AT CENTRALIA, ILL.

Sunday, October 2, was a good day with the Christian church, Centralia, Ill. It was the occasion of the raising of money to carry the building and loan and other indebtedness on the church property.

The Centralia church has a membership of 400. There are no wealthy people in the congregation. On the other hand, the congregation is representative of the community, which is made up largely of middle-class people. The property, including the parsonage, is worth at least $50,000. There is an indebtedness of $11,000 hanging over the church. The first Sunday in October is the anniversary of the dedication. The church celebrated this year the sixth anniversary. On this occasion money was raised to carry the building and loan obligation and to pay the interest on a note at the bank. The leaders in the work decided that they would need a cash offering from the Sunday school of $300 and pledges amounting to $125 per month for the year. But the fondest expectations of

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

FOR SALE
Beautiful Wooded Lot Fronting Lake Michigan in Campbell Park, at Pentwater, Michigan
One of the most desirable lots in this exclusive subdivision which contains, among others, the summer homes of Professor Herbert L. Willett, Professor E. S. Ames, and Rev. George A. Campbell.
Great bargain for some one who wishes a summer home where the surroundings are right. Easy terms if desired.
CHARLES E. HUMISTON, 449 N. Central Ave' CHICAGO, ILL.

"THE MEANING OF BAPTISM"
By CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, Editor of "The Christian Century"
"This is probably the most important book in English on the place of baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856"
That is what the New York Christian Advocate says of this remarkable volume

Herald of Gospel Liberty (Christian Denomination): "Mr. Morrison is leading a movement for larger liberty in matters of opinion among the people of God."

The Advance (Congregationalist): "We believe the position herein advocated is one that the Disciples will be driven ultimately to adopt."

The United Presbyterian: "An unusual book. Written by a Disciple and the editor of the leading Disciple newspaper, he wholly abandons the Disciple and Baptist argument on which they found their dogma of baptism by immersion."

The Christian Union Quarterly (Disciple): "The author has a brilliant style and thinks along ingenious and fascinating lines."

The Religious Telescope (United Brethren): "The significance of this work is new and remarkable. It may help the immersionists and affusionists to get together, which would be a great achievement."

Central Christian Advocate (Methodist): "A profound scholar, a deeply spiritual follower of the Master, a man among men, something of a mystic, we could well believe that if any person could show the way to Christian unity, Charles Clayton Morrison belongs to the select few."

The Presbyterian Advance: "The editor of this paper welcomes the appearance of this volume, for it enables him for the first time in his life to answer a question which has often been asked of him by correspondents and readers—'What is the best book on baptism?'"

The Christian Intelligencer (Reformed): "The argument seems logical and the spirit of the writer is certainly as gentle in statement as it is urgent in appeal."

Zion's Herald (Methodist): "The work is of universal significance as it is a complete abandonment of the immersion dogma by the editor of the leading publication in the Disciples' denomination."

The Continent (Presbyterian): "It required courage to publish this book. It is by a minister of the Disciples church, which has been peculiarly strenuous in behalf of the scriptural necessity of immersion, and he writes that 'the effect of our study is absolutely to break down the notion that any divine authority whatsoever stands behind the practice of immersion.'"

The Congregationalist: A daring and splendidly Christian piece of work."

The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed possible."

The Churchman (Episcopal): "An interesting summary of the topic, especially as it is related to the history of modern sectarianism."

Baptist Standard (Dallas, Tex.): "This is a very interesting work; as much so as any volume of fiction we have read this year!"

The Christian Endeavor World: "A thorough treatise from the immersion point of view, but building a bridge toward the affusionist view."

Every member of the Disciples fellowship should own this book which is stirring the denominations. Price, $1.35 per copy, postpaid the church were surpassed. The attendance at the Sunday school was 402, with a cash offering of $619. In the morning service the state secretary, after a brief sermon, secured pledges aggregating $143 per month for the year. This made the offering of the day something over $2,300. This will relieve the burden for the year and put the Centralia church in the best shape in its history. The people seemed to realize the new impulse, for in the evening there was a large crowd present to hear the gospel message.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY - - 700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO, ILL.

R. H. Robertson, the pastor, and his faithful wife have rendered a great service in Centralia. They are just entering upon their fourth year. Mr. Robertson has spent twenty years in the ministry in Illinois, with the exception of three years. He has held notable pastorates in Hoopeston, Du Quoin and Shelbyville. J. Barbee Robertson, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, graduated from Transylvania last year and is taking post-graduate work in that institution this year. He preaches for two leading churches near Lexington. Mrs. Robertson is a capable leader among the women of the church, and much of the success of the day was due to her untiring efforts. The congregation has to rely largely upon the loyal support of the women.

In the morning service Robert McGarvey Robertson, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, and who is a senior in the high school, read the scriptures. He expects to attend college somewhere next year. Naturally, he looks toward Transylvania, as his father and brother are graduates of that famous institution. T. G. Braden has been Sunday school superintendent for eleven years. He is a banker by profession and a Christian by pursuit. He is one of the best Sunday school superintendents in Illinois.

H. H. Peters,
State Secretary.

★ ★

A VICTORY FOR THE BIBLE SCHOOLS

The friends of our Bible school work will be glad to know that the books of the American Christian Missionary Society closed on September 30, showing Bible school offerings in hand to the amount of $40,148.09 for the year as compared with $33,263.12 for last year, a gain of $6,884.97. Even more encouraging is the gain in the number of contributing schools, which is 2,452 to 2,956, a gain of 20 per cent.

We can make it $50,000 this year, and we will. Order your supplies at once for Bible School Day the Sunday before Tranksgiving. "Farthest North" is our most attractive exercise and will inspire your school to go to the farthest limit in its offering.

Robt. M. Hopins,
Bible School Sec'y, A. C. M. S.

★ ★

DEDICATION OF THE MONINGER MEMORIAL

One of the significant Bible school events of the year was the dedication of the Herbert Moninger Bible School Chair in Bethany College. Indeed it was one of the most significant events for many years.

Herbert Moninger died in June of 1911. In the fall of that year a concerted effort was made to erect some fitting memorial in his honor. The endowment of a Bible School Chair in Bethany College was proposed and the proposal met with universal approval. The Bible School Department of the American Christian Missionary Society was asked to take the leadership in the campaign to raise the $25,000 essential to secure this endowment.

In June of this year the last pledge was paid and the entire fund became available for the use of the memorial. The principal is invested and only the interest will be used for the maintenance of the teacher in charge, so that the memorial is an established and permanent enterprise.

The dedicatory exercises were planned for the opening of this college year. They were simple but impressive and their influence was great among all the students and the many friends who gathered to attend them.

Two services were held, the first in the beautiful new church building and the second in the College Chapel. The addresses at the church were given by E. A. Cole, minister of the Knoxville Church, Pittsburgh, and E. W. Thornton, Bible school editor of the Standard Publishing Company. Mr. Cole spoke on "The Challenge of Youth to the Church," which challenge Brother Moninger accepted so gloriously. Mr. Thornton spoke on "Training for Service," the title of the well known teacher training volume through which Mr. Moninger will doubtless be long remembered.

At the college the first address was made by Robt. M. Hopkins, Bible school secretary of the American Society, who outlined briefly "The Place and Purpose of the Memorial." He prefaced his remarks by bringing a few messages to the assembly from the many that had been received from all parts of the country showing the widespread interest in the occasion. P. H. Welshimer of Canton, Ohio, gave the memorial address on "The Life of Herbert Moninger." It was a masterpiece, a most fitting tribute to the life and work of this beloved Bible school apostle. Prof. H. Newton Miller, the first occupant of this Bible school chair, outlined the courses available for the first year and E. W. Thornton offered the dedicatory prayer. Pres. T. E. Cramblett spoke briefly, accepting the trust in behalf of the college and W. E. Pierce of Cameron, W. Va., and a few others spoke informally.

Honored guests among those present were the father of Herbert, Brother Onias Moninger and the only living sister, Mrs. Nettie Moninger Lee. They were introduced to the assembly and were greeted in prayerful respect with a chautauqua salute.

The whole program was a fitting one, the participants being lifelong friends of the man who had called forth all these demonstrations of honor and affection. The dedication of the Moninger memorial will long be remembered by all who were privileged to be present and the enterprise will in a measure carry on some of the good work which Mr. Moninger had time only to begin. The thousands who by their offerings have made it possible rejoice and will ever rejoice.

Robt. M. Hopkins,
Bible School Secretary, A. C. M. S.

Collection Plates

WOODEN COLLECTION PLATES IMITATION BLACK WALNUT.

Imitation walnut, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, Price, $1.25 each. 12 inches in diameter, $1.50 each. Expressage extra.

OAK, HOLLOW RIM, COLLECTION PLATES.

Oak, hollow rim, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, a handsome plate. Price, $2.00 each. 12 inches in diameter, $2.50 each. Expressage extra.

QUARTERED OAK AND BLACK WALNUT HOLLOW RIM COLLECTION PLATES.

A finer grade plate, made of light, quartered oak, or solid black walnut, plush lined. The rim is hollow, giving a rich appearance. Two sizes, 10 inches in diameter, $2.50 each; expressage extra. 12 inches in diameter, $3.00 each; expressage extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

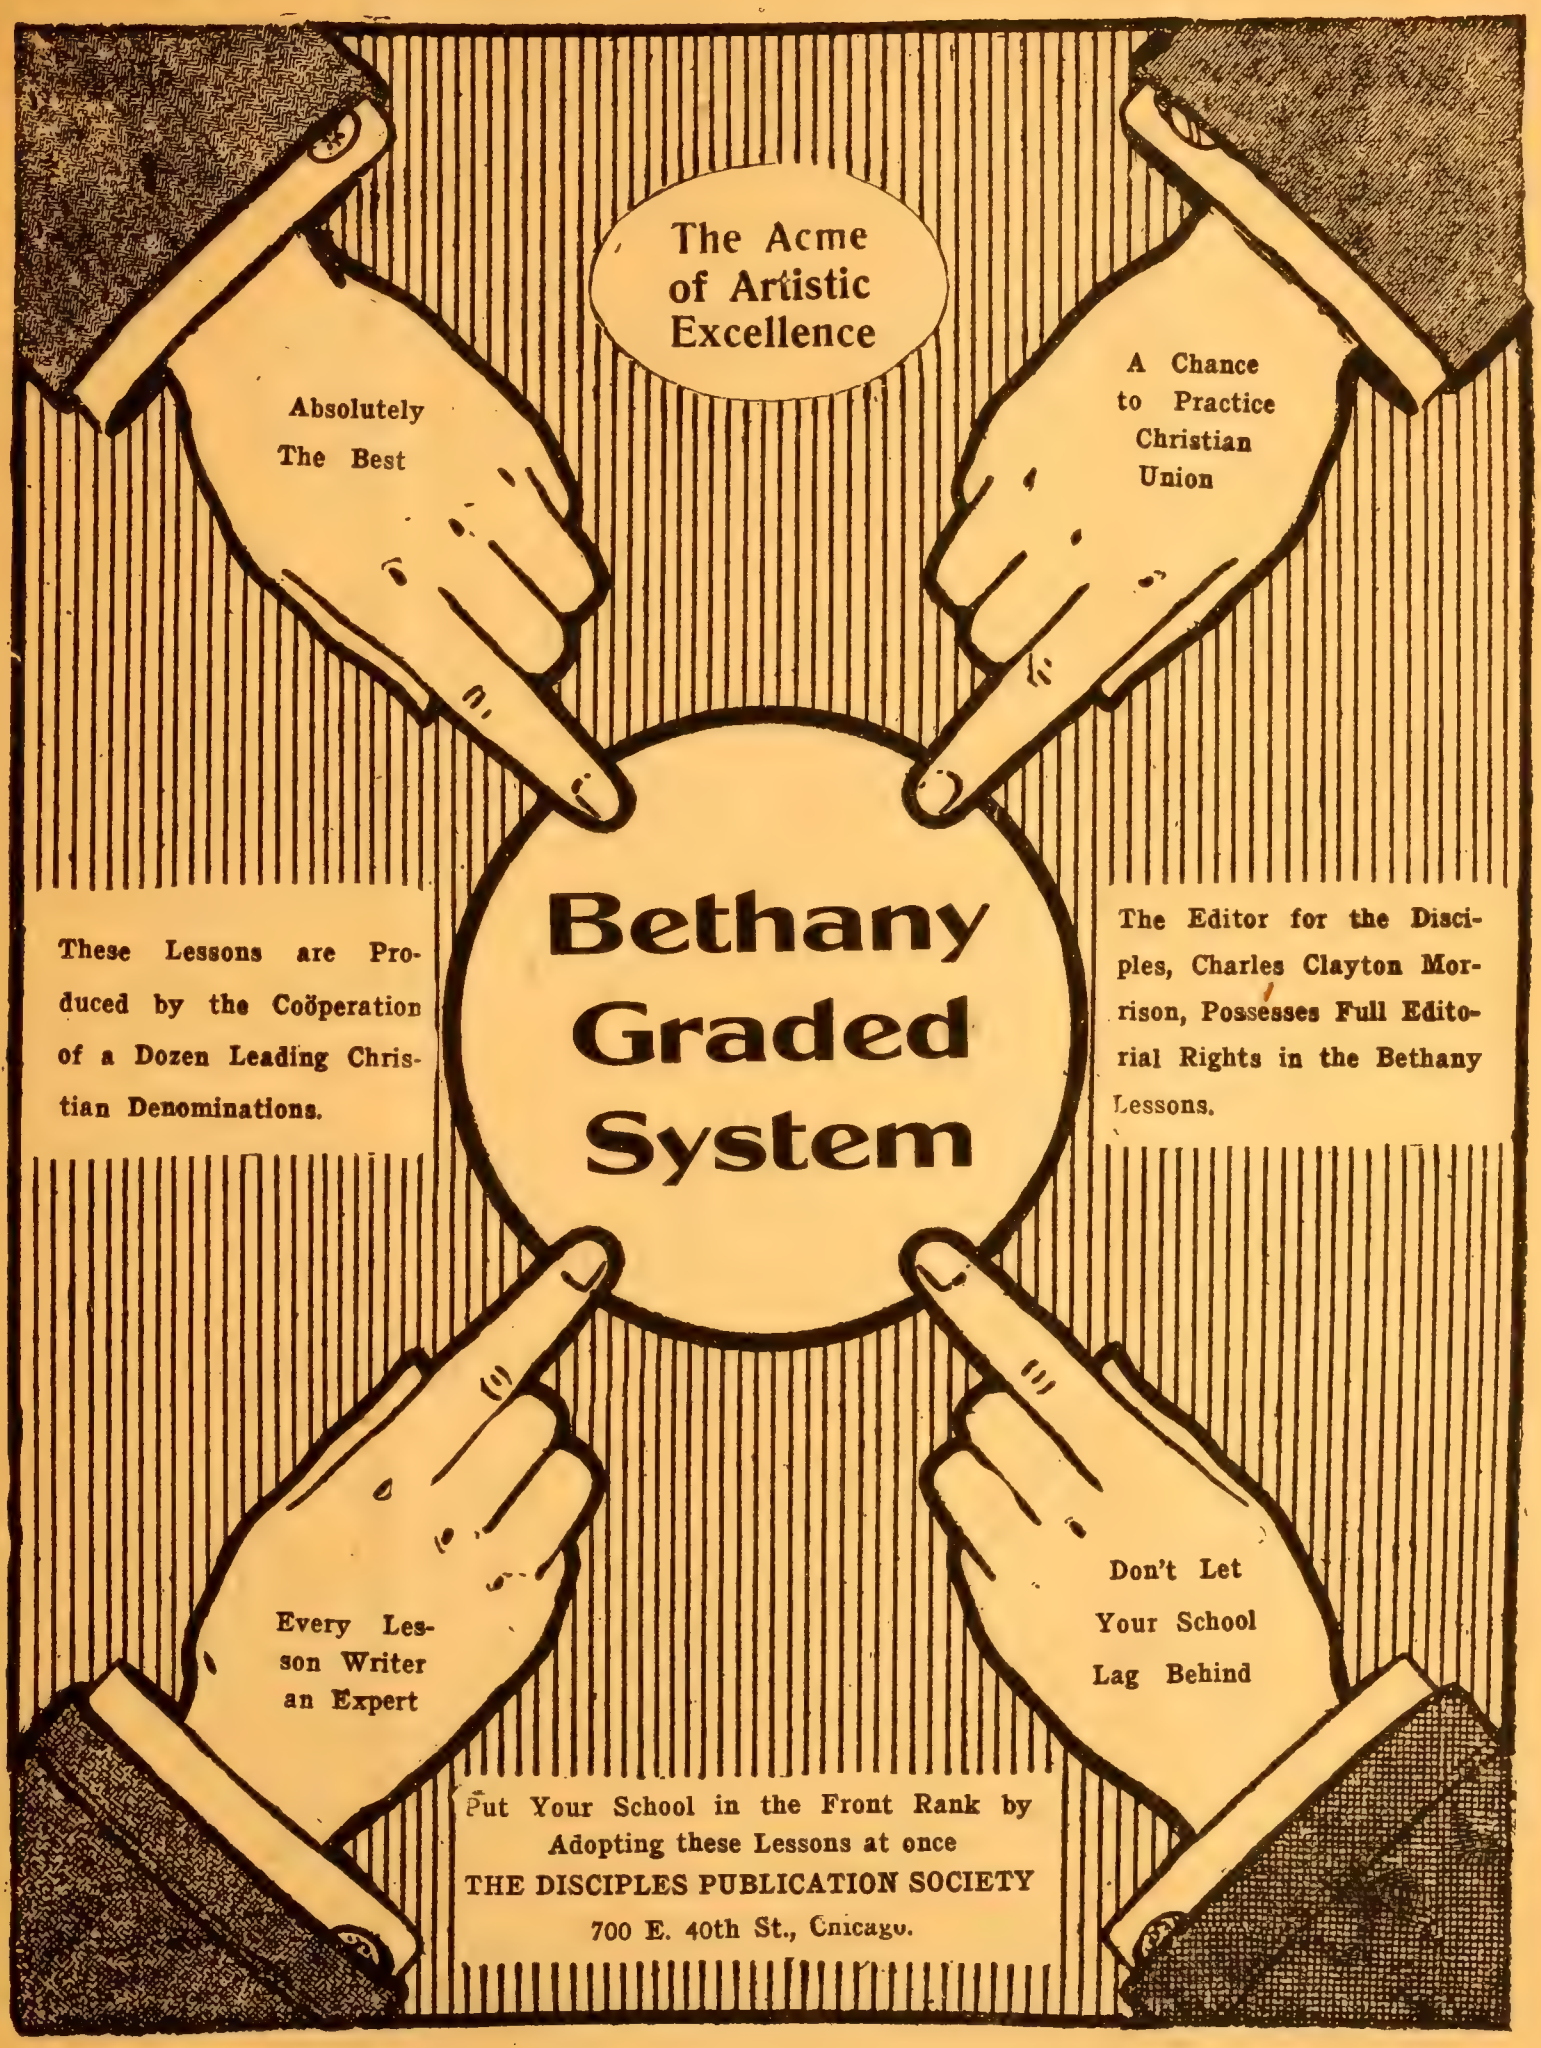
700 East 40th St. : Chicago

Write

For Our Special Introductory Offer on

"THE CONQUEST"

Our attractive weekly for adult and young people's classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc.



DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

The coal mines of Holland have been developed till they now put out over two million bushels of coal a year.

THE BETHANY SYSTEM OF SUNDAY SCHOOL LITERATURE

Published for

More Efficient RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Here is the only book that tells the story of the Disciples movement from first-hand observation. Dr. W. T. Moore is the only man now living who could perform this task, and Dr. Moore has told his story in his

"Comprehensive History of The Disciples of Christ"

You cannot afford to let this opportunity slip to secure this book for your library at practically half price!

This is a sumptuous volume of 700 pages, beautifully printed and bound. The pictures themselves are more than worth the price of the book. Here is a real portrait gallery of the men who have made the Disciples movement, from the earliest days to the present living minute.

Here is the Extraordinary Proposition We are Making on the Few Copies of the Book Now Remaining

Send us only $2.50 and we will mail you, postpaid, a copy of the $4.00 Cloth Edition. If you wish the half morocco (originally sold at $5.00) send us $3.50. The full morocco (originally selling at $6.00) will be sent you for $4.00.

Special Offer

How You May Have the Book Free: Send us three paid new subscriptions to "The Christian Century" (at the regular $2.00 rate) and we will send you the book in cloth without a cent of cost to yourself.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII October 19, 1916 Number 42

A "Better" Germany

By Charles F. Aked

The "Movie" and Morals

By Thomas Clayton

A Few Drawbacks to the "Preparedness" Propaganda

By E. B. Barnes

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

"THE MEANING OF BAPTISM"

By CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, Editor of "The Christian Century"

"This is probably the most important book in English on the place of baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856"

That is what the New York Christian Advocate says of this remarkable volume

Herald of Gospel Liberty (Christian Denomination): "Mr. Morrison is leading a movement for larger liberty in matters of opinion among the people of God."

The Advance (Congregationalist): "We believe the position herein advocated is one that the Disciples will be driven ultimately to adopt."

The Christian Union Quarterly (Disciple): "The author has a brilliant style and thinks along ingenious and fascinating lines."

The Religious Telescope (United Brethren): "The significance of this work is new and remarkable. It may help the immersionists and affusionists to get together, which would be a great achievement."

Central Christian Advocate (Methodist): "A profound scholar, a deeply spiritual follower of the Master, a man among men, something of a mystic, we could well believe that if any person could show the way to Christian unity, Charles Clayton Morrison belongs to the select few."

The Presbyterian Advance: "The editor of this paper welcomes the appearance of this volume, for it enables him for the first time in his life to answer a question which has often been asked of him by correspondents and readers—'What is the best book on baptism?'"

The Christian Intelligencer (Reformed): "The argument seems logical and the spirit of the writer is certainly as gentle in statement as it is urgent in appeal."

The Continent (Presbyterian): "It required courage to publish this book. It is by a minister of the Disciples church, which has been peculiarly strenuous in behalf of the scriptural necessity of immersion, and he writes that 'the effect of our study is absolutely to break down the notion that any divine authority whatsoever stands behind the practice of immersion.'"

The Congregationalist: A daring and splendidly Christian piece of work."

The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed possible."

The Churchman (Episcopal): "An interesting summary of the topic, especially as it is related to the history of modern sectarianism."

Baptist Standard (Dallas, Tex.): "This is a very interesting work; as much so as any volume of fiction we have read this year!"

The Christian Endeavor World: "A thorough treatise from the immersion point of view, but building a bridge toward the affusionist view."

Every member of the Disciples' fellowship should own this book which is stirring the denominations. Price, $1.35 per copy, postpaid

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY - - 700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII OCTOBER 19, 1916 Number 42

What Shall I Read?

READING IS RELATED TO RELIGION.

Christianity has sometimes been described as a religion of a book. From the days of the first writing prophets, the written page has been a most valued aid to the spoken word.

Paul's exhortation to Timothy, "Give thyself to reading," was not only good advice for a young candidate for the ministry, but also for any Christian person. Paul himself bore all the marks of a well-read man, and he gave his message to the larger community of the church through letters which were widely read, and today form a most significant part of our New Testament.

The pastor is being asked in these days by earnest church members, "What shall I read?" The abundance of printed matter has made a very Babel of literary voices. It is hard to find our way in the maze of books that the busy presses of the twentieth century have poured out. We should answer the question, "What shall I read?" from the standpoint of the religious life. We may be sure that people are having deeper impressions made upon them by their reading matter than by two half-hour sermons a week, even though they go regularly to hear the sermons. Many people will find no religious message save from the printed page.

Once the church testified against the novel. There was much reason in its position, for both the novel and the plays of the period tended to vulgarity and low ideals of life. The yellow-back novel was hunted out of the sacred precincts of Boyville with great zeal on the part of the saints, and this was well. Yet the novel has done a world of good. Many reforms are to be credited to its influence.

★ ★

"Les Miserables," by Victor Hugo, went a long way to usher in the new view of punishment as being reformation and not revenge. Dickens in his novels helped to end the abomination of imprisonment for debt. Thackeray lampooned successfully the hypocrisies of high society. Harriet Beecher Stowe did more than any other one person to end human slavery. In the midst of our modern books are novels of serious purpose which the earnest-minded preacher should commend to his people.

There is now in most nations a revival of poetry. It will be a better world if we learn again to enjoy the message of the song singers of the world. New poets are coming on who are finding the true and beautiful in contemporaneous life. Vachel Lindsay, well known to Disciples, is pronounced by many critics the leading poet of America. Masefield, the English poet, has arisen in a few short years from the slums of a great city to a position of eminence in the English-speaking world. He is unconventional, but some of his poems, like "The Everlasting Mercy," are full of evangelical quality. His "Widow of Bye Street" is a terrible picture of the social structure of a factory city in England. Its tragedy is not mitigated, and the awfulness of its representation will arm afresh every social worker in the world.

The dramatic literature of the world is not all written to be acted, and much of it may well be read rather than seen. In these days of the decadence of the theater on account of the moving picture, many will be driven back to the books containing the great plays. Jerome in his "Passing of the Third Floor Back," has represented a Stranger, with the point of view of the Christ, who encourages the idealism in the hearts of men. A sordid boarding house is transformed by his influence. It would be hard to find a sermon preached within ten years which better exalts the moral power of the Christ.

Kennedy in "The Servant in the House," has a terrific arraignment of the modern church, but reaches an optimistic conclusion as regards the religious situation. The Bishop appears as worldly and calculating. The Rector's wife is a millstone about his neck. In spite of all, the Rector acknowledges his long-lost brother, who is a sewer-digger. It is a strong setting forth of the dangers and the opportunities of the modern church.

★ ★

The children of the home must have books. We need to be warned that in the midst of the great flood of literature, there is a revival of the yellow-back novel for boys, but in cloth binding of a different color. The books that go into the hands of our children need even closer examination than any other, for the children are more subject to literary influences than any one else. The better public libraries and the more intelligent school teachers are good advisers in this regard.

The greatest literature, in its effect upon the religious life, is, of course, the Bible. Many people have been badly advised about the use of this book. Some have planned to read the entire Bible through in a single year, reading three chapters a day. This has led them to wrestle with material that they were not prepared to understand. The wise pastor will know how to lay out Bible reading for various people in his congregation according to the stage of their religious development. He will give the gospel of Mark to the boys. He will give the reforming prophets to some of his men. He will give the Psalms to his saints. The old-time Disciple knew how to give the book of Acts to the people outside of Christ and the epistles to young Christians.

In every way, the church should have a clear testimony on the reading of its people. They will be made or marred by this tremendous force of modern life. Every book in our homes should be pleasing to Christ.

EDITORIAL

FROM THE GENERAL CONVENTION

DES MOINES, IA., Sunday, October 15.—We are having a magnificent convention. Impressive communion service this afternoon, attended by 7,500 people. No convention of recent years has been more united in spirit. Evidences on all sides that the churches are determined to complete the unification program begun several years ago by the organization of the General Convention. All opposition to the delegate principle in our conventions would seem to have vanished when Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind., declared himself strongly in favor of the delegate plan. A motion in the session of the American Society to disassociate that Society from the General Convention was laid on the table by a vote of 540 to 27. Later, in the General Convention session, with perhaps 2,500 persons present, the Executive Committee was instructed to confer with the various boards on changing their constitutions so as to integrate their several conventions into one united General Convention. This action was taken by absolutely unanimous vote.

The annual reports of the various Societies have thrilled the great gatherings. Every Society registers big gains in receipts and is projecting plans for enlargement of its work. Des Moines is a beautiful city for the convention. Drake University and the mighty churches of this city, with President Bell and Pastors Shullenberger, Medbury and their colleagues, have provided a welcome which even the humblest feel. Our readers may expect a fuller interpretation next week.

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN ONE PASTORATE

THE twenty-fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore was celebrated by a grateful church on October 8. The details of this long pastorate are proper matter for our news department. We must not miss, in these busy days, the deeper significance of this long and fruitful service.

Mr. Ainslie has not only had a local ministry. He has had the larger ministry of writing books, teaching in a school, editing journals and of speaking on other platforms than those of the Disciples. It takes time to ripen a minister and to give him the ear of the larger public. Mr. Ainslie has been patient to wait for these good days when he can wield so powerful an influence for the cause of Christ.

The influence of Mr. Ainslie has done much to make Disciples known in the east. Well educated people of the Atlantic seaboard have often shown astonishing ignorance of a great movement which is now making significant contributions to all the great Christian enterprises. Particularly has Mr. Ainslie been of service in connecting the Disciples with the various movements looking to the unity of all God's people.

In the cities where we are strong there have been long and conspicuous ministries. W. F. Richardson in Kansas City, H. O. Breeden in Des Moines, E. L. Powell in Louisville and A. B. Philputt in Indianapolis have been outstanding examples.

To remain in one pastorate for a long time means something more than the ability to resist alluring calls. It involves also the growth of the minister to meet the changing conditions of his parish.

The minister who stays with a church for years must never reach a dead stop in his intellectual life. His ideas must continue to have both light and power. The man must become every day a better Christian to endure the closer acquaintance of his members. Above all, he must satisfy God with regard to his stewardship.

TRUSTING THE TRUTH

THE truth has not been equally honored by all men. Pilate sneered, "What is truth?" Church councils sometimes undertook to establish truth by intrigue and by decrees. Calvin believed in defending the truth with the fagot.

Disciples of early days were not afraid to take their propositions out into the arena of discussion. Unlike the Christian Science propagandists of today, they asked men to investigate both sides for themselves and challenged them to search the Scriptures for themselves. So confident were our fathers in the ability of truth to be its own best defender that they sought no artificial support for their ideas.

As our plea became legalized and formalized, as under the hand of literalists it was made to lose some of its reasonableness and self-evidencing power, there arose the artificial supports for the perversion of our message. Men who did not accept the dogma regarding baptism, or a certain theory of the Bible, were branded and denounced. There was more display of unfaith in the truth by persecutors than was ever exhibited by supposed heretics.

The truth is continually being revealed. Every day's experience brings new light. This is true also in religion. Even if we should say that no religious truth was revealed outside the Bible—which we do not say—the understanding even of the truth of the Bible is a growing thing. We must live the Bible to discover its deeper secrets.

We need not be anxious when old prejudices are cast aside. These were the hindrances to the truth and we should be glad when they are gone. If religion had no abiding reality, we might be anxious; but our faith asserts that it has.

The investigator in religion may seem to a few the enemy of the truth. History will have a juster estimate of his place. The investigator had the greatest faith of all. He believed in the undiscovered truth.

PROGRESS IN RELIGIOUS THINKING

NO part of our world can long remain static, however it may seek to do so. The Roman Catholic church has claimed to be immutable, but every student of history recognizes how false is that claim. The declarations of councils are not consistent and the whole structure of the church has been subject to historical development in quite the same way as other institutions.

In Protestant circles, too, there has been an effort at a kind of immutability. Various denominations of Protestantism claim to reproduce the New Testament church. They seek to reproduce the doctrines, ordinances, and even the organization of that church. An historical student would be unwilling to admit that any of them are replicas of the New Testament church.

History is not static and it is impossible for it to be reactionary. It moves only in one direction. It is one thing to claim to be historically consistent with the early church. It is another thing to be identical with it.

Once remove the dogma of immutability from the Christian religion, and firmly establish the conception of progress and most of our intellectual troubles will be over. We will be then able to account for the modern church, with its various doctrines and practices in a way that does not stultify the intellect.

There is provision in the very nature of Christianity for progress. "The letter killeth but the spirit maketh alive." It was not early Christianity to make of itself a body of statutory law but an unfolding life. Its ideal was the Christ of faith, who is not buried in an oriental tomb, but ever goes before to show the way into all truth.

THE MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY

THE priest was a mediator between God and man. The minister is a mediator between a man and his larger religious world. In the end every big enterprise in religion comes back to the minister. We hear laymen insisting concerning a church enterprise, "It will go if our minister gets back of it." The Men and Millions team often explains its victories and defeats in terms of some preacher's cooperation or lack of cooperation.

If this is true, the average congregation will have no larger feeling of religious duty than its expert leader furnishes it. The man who lives with few books and reactionary newspapers and who never goes to conventions, will not lead his people into any conception of a world program. The man's mind is not even as big as his parish. His influence is narrowing and deadening.

The Old Testament writers complain much of the false prophets. These said the thing they were paid to say. Often it was difficult to tell them from the true prophets, for they were sometimes in favor in the king's court. The false prophet in the modern pulpit is the man who takes counsel of his fears and of popular prejudice rather than of the will of God.

Meanwhile, open-minded laymen are quick to detect in their minister any disloyalty to truth. A layman said to his pastor, "You are much more progressive in my home than you are in your pulpit." This condition must be corrected or the pulpit will decline in power.

The minister must answer to God for the intellectual and moral and spiritual life of his people. His responsibility is a heavy one. Unless he make sure that his own life is right, it will be a case of the blind leading the blind.

JOURNALISTIC ETHICS

OUR church papers presumably exist to elevate the intellectual, moral and spiritual life of the Disciples. In spite of variant testimony on some matters, there is no journal among us that would dissent from this. In the light of these common purposes, we can find at present no explanation of the astonishing course of the Christian Standard in publishing private correspondence that passed between Rev. Robert M. Hopkins, our National Bible School superintendent, and various parties of the Christian Board of Publication—chiefly Mr. R. A. Long and Rev. A. C. Smither.

Though the editor of the Christian Standard lives in the same city with Mr. Hopkins, the latter says he had no information that his private letters were being published until he saw them in print. The journalistic ethics that would allow this kind of thing is not the sort that can ever command the respect of people like the Disciples.

Where did the Christian Standard get these letters? Mr. Hopkins denies that he supplied them. Did the Cincinnati Journal secure them of the officers of the Christian Board? The question would seem to be absurd. There is a mystery here which seems difficult to untangle without admitting a standard of journalistic ethics on the part of our contemporary that would be disappointing and disheartening. We shall hope, in spite of appearances, for an explanation more generous than has yet been offered.

In the end, the discontinuance of the Christian Board's appropriation must have been announced. When that announcement came, there were obvious morals to be drawn from the story. These make a different chapter, however, from the publishing of private correspondence without the writer's knowledge or consent.

LOSING OUR COLLEGE STUDENTS

THE Disciples are becoming an intellectual people and their young people are found in greater or less numbers in every academy, normal school, college and university in the land. In most states of the middle west there are from two to five times as many Disciples in the state university as there are in the Disciple college of the state.

In many college and university towns, the church is either uninterested in the students or else the ministry of the church is not equipped to minister to this class of men and women. The man who speaks to students must be a friend of true learning, with a soul in tune with students. The church that ministers to students must know how to create the right atmosphere and how to maintain the kind of social activities that the students need.

In one city, where there is a school of mining, the students are as a rule out of sympathy with the local churches. These young men ought to go out to their fields of labor as apostles of a virile Christianity. Instead, they will go forth disillusionized and alienated.

The leaders of most communities are the educated men. These dominate the professional and business life. Christianity needs these men above all others.

In many cases we are organizing to care for the Disciples in the great state universities. This work is useful and important. But what of the other schools? Should it not be someone's business to discover where the Disciple students are, and what religious influences surround their lives?

The local church has at once a great opportunity and a great responsibility to discharge with the students in the parish. The preaching, the worship, the social life and the spiritual atmosphere of the church should all help in holding our students to a devout religious life.

PROFESSIONAL APPEARANCE OF MINISTERS

A MINISTER said recently, "I am glad to say I am never taken for a preacher." He was proud of his ability to ride on railway trains and associate with the general public without any intimation being given of his gospel calling.

A doctor would not be complimented if he were told that he did not look like a doctor. A business man would be offended if he were told he was very unbusinesslike in appearance. Why should we have a number of ministers who take pride in looking like anything under the sun but a preacher of the gospel?

Originally the Disciples reacted against the distinction between clergy and laity. That distinction is still maintained so far as claim for special religious prerogative is concerned. Disciples do not believe that a minister has any better standing with Deity than any other equally good man.

There is also a passion for democracy in our ranks which sometimes expresses itself in a desire for unconventionality. Yet democracy does not have for its ideal that all men should look alike or that in their social functions they should be reduced to a common level.

The man who does not look like a minister, but is one, may be a man who has never taken his high calling very seriously. He may wish to do things that are not quite appropriate to one with his peculiar relationship to the cause of Christ.

We would not wish that a minister should forever advertise his calling with special garb or ornaments, but we could wish that a fine pride in the majesty of his calling should make him ever ready for his fellowmen to know that he had given his life in special service to Jesus Christ.

OUR SOCIETIES' FAILURE TO COOPERATE

THE various philanthropic and missionary societies of the Disciples of Christ have grown up almost by chance. A need was apparent to some groups who had deep interest in a certain type of Christian work. The result was an organization that has slowly come to recognition and support. There is no reason in our social structure why we should not have six foreign missionary societies or benevolent associations. That we have duplication of effort in many ways is one of the surface facts of our present situation.

There have been a number of proposals looking in the direction of better coordination of our organized interests. The budget committee is one conspicuous example of success.

How often, however, have our societies shied at the cooperative idea. There was a proposition to have a single magazine representing all the missionary and benevolent interests. Each society now spends from one to several thousand dollars on printing journals, which bring but meager subscription income. These journals use up some of the time of the secretaries. They are, in most instances, not widely read. A single journal with a great editor would be an improvement.

We have heard persistent rumors of a Disciple building in some centrally located city in which should be housed all our cooperative interests. It now costs a good sum to have our secretaries travel around to advise with one another on official business. It would seem that the building might strengthen the cooperative work of the brotherhood in many ways.

The reason the cooperative thing is not done is that our institutions arose on an individualistic basis. Petty jealousies, local loyalties, limited sympathies stand in the way. While all the world clamors for greater cooperation, and while the church seeks union, the societies of the Disciples often love the paths that isolate rather than the broad highways.

* *

The minister passes through various stages of public appreciation. A leading Presbyterian says: "At thirty, the minister is idolized; at forty, he is criticised; at sixty, he is Oslerized; at seventy, he is canonized." He knows the ups and downs of life. He turns his back upon many things that are dear to him, for these things are not always within the reach of the minister.

The Creed of Mammon

"Business is business!" what a term
  For men to conjure by!
A solace to seared conscience,
  And a muzzle to the cry
Of widow and of orphan,
  Of poor folk in the grip
Of money-mad usurpers who
  Would "catch them on the hip"—
    Because—"Business is business!"

Shrewd men there are who smile for gain,
  Or play the hypocrite
With pious mien on Sabbath days,
  Or with a cunning wit
Drive bargains hard with simple folk—
  Their oily answer still:
"If I don't take advantage here
  Some other fellow will.
    'Business is business'!"

Oh, weary souls, by Mammon crushed!
  Oh, hungry hearts, that yearn
For cherished hopes forever lost
  By fickle fortune's turn!
Oh, tear-dimmed eyes! Oh, tired hands,
  That blindly grope their way
Along the thorny path of life
  From weary day to day—
    Because—"Business is business!"

God speed the day when Brotherhood
  Shall reign instead of might;
When men will do the thing they ought
  Because they know it's right;
When Love will conquer Selfishness,
  And in the marts of trade
The Golden Rule will measure all
  Transactions that are made:
    Because—"Business is business!"

—Harold Barnes in Sunday School Times.

What I Have Learned About a "Better Germany"

A Chapter of Ford Peace Expedition Experiences

By CHARLES F. AKED

From the Congregationalist

I HAVE learned that there is a "better Germany."

There are men and women in Germany who refuse to hate England. There are men and women in Germany who refuse to surrender the hope of renewed deep and lasting friendship with England, who believe that even the war would not be too great a price to pay for an Anglo-American-German alliance safeguarding the peace and progress of the white races, for centuries to come.

A MINISTRY OF RECONCILIATION

It is easy to catalogue crimes. The art of vilification calls for no special training. But if there is anything good in the thought of Great Britain about Germany, should not a Christian minister delight to tell it to Germany? If there is anything good in the thought of Germany about England should not a minister of Christ hasten to tell it to the English-speaking world? If to publish in German newspapers throughout Germany an article about a sane and moderate England which refuses to hate Germany, is to be "pro-ally," then I must be reckoned a fanatical pro-ally; for this I have already done. If to write something of what I have learned about "a better Germany" is to label myself "pro-German," why, I must needs wear the tag. Unto us also is committed a ministry of reconciliation!

I was in Berlin ten days. I moved freely amongst all classes of persons, civil and military, of all shades of opinion. I talked with jingoes and with pacifists; with members of the general staff and with social settlement workers; with soldiers of international reputation, theologians to whom every educated preacher in the world is under obligation, and successful business men and men of affairs. I was with Count von Moltke in the Palace of the General Staff a few days before he died; I spent one of the happiest hours of my life in the Royal Library with von Harnack, and another in the home of Adolf Deissmann; I was in the home of Hans Delbrück, Treitschke's successor in the chair of history in the University of Berlin; I dined with Littmann, Welhausen's great successor; I talked with the editor of the "Berliner Tagblat" in his office, and with Rohrbach, Germany's greatest political writer, at his club.

I talked with women who are leaders of wealth and fashion, and with women who are leaders in social and moral movements.

SOME POINTED QUESTIONS PUT

I talked with members of the government at the foreign office and in the vice-chancellor's palace. I talked with the Catholic Erzberger, leader of the central party in the Reichstag, and with Bernstein, leader of the Socialists. I talked with officers of artillery, officers of infantry, and soldiers of the rank and file. I talked with Christian pastors—glad enough to hold out the hand of friendship to a brother-minister who had come to a war-stricken land with peace in his heart.

May I add a personal word? It is important for the sake of clearness. When I say that I "talked" with these persons it must not be supposed that I exchanged polite greetings with them, mentioned the war, picked up some stray expression of opinion, and came away. It is to be understood that I discussed with them seriously and at length the problems of the war and of an eventful peace. In many cases I submitted to them written questions. The same questions were put, and in the same words, to all the persons I met.

And this, amongst other things, I have learned:

A REASONABLE BODY OF OPINION

There is to be found in Germany at this hour a body of opinion which is moderate, reasonable, pacific. It is at once ardent and informed. It is patriotic, of course. It demands a united and prosperous Germany, secure from attack, free to develop its own civilization, to feel its limbs and grow. But its vision is not narrowed to Germany. It believes in free nations and free men. It has the international mind. It is possessed by the international spirit.

And I have learned that it is terribly difficult for these men and women to be true to their convictions because everywhere, not least in America, their good is evil spoken of, and their peaceable words perverted to the injury of the Fatherland. In Boston last week I read of the "climb down" of Germany from the demands made by her a year ago, of the repudiation now of the annexationist propaganda of the days of her military successes. The most devoted adherent of the cause of the allies, the most furious opponent of the central powers, could not for one moment write in such terms if he had been in Berlin and learned the facts.

What are the facts with regard to annexation?

ANNEXING BELGIUM

There was a year ago and there is now an "annexationist" party, a militaristic and jingo party such as may be found in America or England, France or Japan. These men say that they have won Belgium and a part of France with their blood and mean to retain it. Yes; but there was a year ago, even as there is now, a determined anti-annexationist party beyond all comparison greater and more powerful than the jingoes whom they oppose. Who are the annexationists? What does the world know of them, individually and personally? What, in a year or ten years, will the world remember of them?

But the anti-annexationists, the men who will sway the councils of empire and rebuild the future, bear names which, to Americans and Englishmen, are familiar as household words. It is more than a year since they published their noble protest against annexation; and a writer does the world, and not only Germany, a dis-service when he ignores this thirteen-month-old document and represents the "moderate" demands of Germany today as evoked by the fear of ultimate defeat.

PROTEST AGAINST ANNEXATION

The pen that actually wrote the protest was that of Theodore Wolff—I have talked with him and I know. But von Harnack signed it, and Baumgarten and Wellhausen, and Schüking, and von Liszt, and Welbrück, and Dernburg, and Rohrbach—and eighty or ninety others, all daring to say to Germany:

> We subscribe to the principle that the policy of absorption or annexation in the case of the peoples accustomed to independence is to be rejected.

And the suggested annexation they described then, in July, 1915, as:

> A political blunder fraught with grave consequences and calculated not to strengthen but fatally to weaken the German Empire.

Many of the signers of this declaration I saw. They stand where they stood a year ago. They remain opponents of annexation.

"BELGIUM WILL BE SAFE"

"The machinery of negotiation must be lubricated with peace, not with war," one of them, and he the greatest of them all, said to me. And when I pressed him as to how widely the anti-annexationist view prevailed amongst the German people, he said:

> The geographical position of Germany is not favorable to her economic development. Her greatest river finds its way to the sea through territory which is not her own. It would be overwhelmingly to her advantage to possess the mouth of the Rhine. But there is not a sane man or woman in Germany today who dreams of laying a predatory hand on the "river-route" to the sea which would be of such inestimable value to the German people. Before the war began it would have been equally impossible to find in Germany a sane person who proposed to annex the territory contiguous to the mouth of the Scheldt. Belgium was safe from us. And Belgium will be safe from us when the war is over.

THE FATE OF FRANCE

And France! "What are you going to do with France?" I asked another of the signers of the protest, a man who in two continents has served the German empire, "What are you going to do with the parts of France occupied by your troops?"

"Nothing," was the prompt reply, "leave them until the day that peace is concluded."

"What about Serbia and Montenegro?" I asked one of the best known editors in Germany; and after demurring that I ought to seek my answer in Vienna or Budapest, he said, "Serbia must be restored and Montenegro, too."

Ought not these things to be known? Do we help the cause of England by believing a lie of her foes? Do we serve the God of Truth by falsehood? Is it pro-German to say that, along with a militaristic Germany, there is today "a better Germany" and that this abides?

"BERLIN TO BAGDAD"

We have been asked to see something sinister in the phrase "Berlin to Bagdad." To the angry partisan it seems to convey the menace of German exploitation and German aggression. I do not feel called upon to dogmatize about it. I can say, with only a desire for conciliation in my heart, that it does not present itself in this light to some of the best Christians in Berlin with whom I talked. To them, the phrase does more than visualize a railway. It points to the regeneration of Asia Minor, to a Mesopotamia which shall flourish and blossom as the rose.

I talked with a scholar who knows the world that lies between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean as few men in America know it. Familiarity with his books may fairly be demanded of any person who claims to know anything at all about the countries whence Christianity started upon its conquering way. And this vision of the Asia Minor of the future seemed positively to inspire him. "The cradle lands of civilization," he said, "will recover from the deadly blight of centuries. Regions potentially the richest beneath the sun will become once more the homes of happy men. German schools, German colleges, German railways, German enterprise and science—and over the desert the song of Harvest home!"

GERMANY AND ENGLAND

And still, the "better Germany" refuses to shut out a "better England" from its view. For I have talked with scholars and with statesmen who see "with the mind's eye, Horatio," Great Britain joining in such development. They refuse to believe that the evil results of this war are permanent. To them the losses are temporary. The gains will endure. They see Germany and Great Britain brought together again by "a community of interests, rivals, but friendly rivals, in the commercial and industrial renaissance of Asia Minor, neither seeking to exclude the other, both serving the high interests of the race."

I know that there is another Germany—a worse Germany. All the world knows that. But I set out to tell something of "a better Germany." And these are only some of the things that I have learned.

The "Movies" and Morals

Some Words in Behalf of the Modern Film "Plague"

By REV. THOMAS CLAYTON

THE moving picture presents the greatest advance in recreation and education that society has yet witnessed. This revolution is only in its infancy, and its mighty proportions are but imperfectly seen and appreciated. Within the brief space of twenty years, the moving picture business has leaped into fourth place among the industries of the United States. It represents hundreds of millions of dollars of investment; it has over 60,000 places of exhibition, with a daily patronage of over ten millions of people. Its promise of almost infinite development seems destined to have an unlimited influence upon society; for it pours a constant stream of impressions upon both mind and heart. One writer declares, "It is as great an invention as picture writing in the stone age."

Of all great mechanical powers this is likely to prove the most subtle and vital, as well as lasting in its influence, and is capable of infinite variation. The infinite variety of films upon every conceivable subject is already monopolizing the services of the greatest theatrical stars, story writers, and artists, and so incessant is the demand for variety that the call for more and better stories is loud and frantic.

MOST POTENT OF TEACHERS

What is the influence of the moving picture upon the life of the people? In educational value it promises to become by far the most potent of teachers. It is dwarfing the work of colleges, and gaining admission into our public schools. It can be easily adapted to portray history, geography, art, industry, sanitation, scientific attainment, better homes, social reforms, and civic betterment in every aspect, besides giving us in pictorial form and realistic action the doings of the contemporary world; and by travelogues carry us to the remote parts of the earth. To the millions who cannot afford to travel, it brings all the notable places of the world near, and makes them familiar with the grandest scenery and most striking natural phenomena.

A RIVAL OF THE SALOON

The photoplay is the great rival of the saloon, not merely because of the lessons it inculcates, striking as they are, but because it furnishes a counter attraction, costing far less than the saloon, and giving more pleasure and satisfaction. It brings the family together, uniting them in sympathy and interest; and restoring unity and harmony in thousands of families which the saloon had sadly divided. One writer well says that the anti-saloon officers and the movie managers should dine each other.

This introduces the subject of the relation of the moving picture to religion and morality, for an invention having such a power of interest and adaptability to human needs must have a vital influence in the highest interests in life.

WEEDING OUT POOR FILMS

The character of films varies greatly. There are good and bad films, of course, but they are nearly all built on the basis of "money-making." The good deserve to endure forever, while the bad are but trash. There is much discussion in the motion picture trade magazines as to the effect of the poor and vicious kinds of films in the market, and the better men engaged in the business realize that their craft is in danger through the poor quality of some pictures. This makes hope that a great reform is about to begin. A prominent manufacturer asserts that the fault of such poor films is to be ascribed to the story writers, many of whose plots are so worthless and insipid that it taxes all the skill of artists and actors to carry them through. These and other signs point to the growing feeling that the business must be put into the hands of the wisest and best people in the nation.

Every propaganda under the heavens can find a mighty weapon or agent in the moving picture film. University extension, social and political reform, female suffrage, temperance, progressive legislation, and religion itself, receive impulse from the co-operation of the screen. In all this propaganda, which is only in its initial stage, we behold an influence that has a vital bearing on the character of modern society. Such a power may well be studied, dreaded and courted.

REFORM SHOULD COME FROM THE INSIDE

What then is the right attitude of religion and moral forces towards this rapidly growing young giant? How shall our churches and moral agencies act in regard to the control of the moving picture show? In dealing with public amusements in the past, the churches especially have made many and fatal blunders. They have stood aloof and denounced the pastimes which they should have merely sought to direct and improve in tone whenever needed. It is an old saying, but a true one, that reforms are most effective when they come from the inside. The church has usually stood outside and condemned the theater, the card table, and the dance, as well as many outdoor sports and pastimes. It has not prevented its members from participating in any of them, but it has helped greatly to debase them by branding them as improper, scandalous, or even immoral. The evil results have been manifest; the church members have pursued these things at will, and in spite of the church's prohibition, but with a sense of guilt oppressing them, and society has suffered from such a condition.

Unfortunately, the church sees in the moving picture shows a rival of its Sunday services; hence the feeling has become one of antagonism in many cases. In a few cases churches have recognized the power of the movies for good, and have installed them. That is good so far; but the "commercial movies," from the nature of the case, can give so much superior service that they will always have greater drawing power; especially if churches confine their exhibitions to presentation of moral and religious subjects. It is better to help the motion picture theater to improve its character wherever needed, and then to support it.

The one decided step taken by the religious forces thus far has been to demand and enforce strict "censorship." At their bidding, a few states and cities have adopted stringent censorship, and political censor bosses are drawing salaries at the expense of the film companies, and destroying millions of dollars' worth of films each year. So far as can be seen by careful observation, they are doing but little good.

CENSORSHIP NOT POPULAR

This censorship is doomed to fail because it is decidedly un-American and un-Democratic. The American people will not long submit to be handled like children, by a few people in their midst, whose judgment and moral fitness is often not a whit better than their own, but whose arrogance through a little authority soon becomes unbearable. In the end, public opinion will demand the right to do its own censoring.

In one city a single woman is paid to censor every film before it can be shown, and I am informed by good authority that last year she wantonly destroyed $90,000 worth of films, all of which were freely shown in other cities. The objection to local censorship is hereby shown. What is considered good matter in one community is barred out of another, and it causes immense loss to the film makers, as they never know what is acceptable locally. The churches and reform societies will do far better by seeking to influence public opinion from the "inside" as patrons, and not as enemies of the movies. Let all the good church people become friendly with the movie managers, and give them the benefit of their opinion and advice, as to the character of films desired by the "good" people, and speedily they will find managers only too willing to please their patrons.

The church of the Middle Ages enlisted the services of great artists on behalf of religion, and we are deeply grateful to it for the works of the masters it inspired which are enshrined in stately churches and cathedrals. If the church had antagonized art as it afterwards did science, it would have become as degraded as the worst motion picture ever made.

The churches claim some thirty-five millions of members in this country; they represent wealth and influence. Let the church people secure control of this mighty modern industry and power for good or ill. By wise patronage and friendly criticism they can gain complete mastery, can encourage the best, and weed out the worst of the films. Managers are always listening for the verdict of the crowd; let the "better element" demand good pictures, and when they are ignored, stay away from the poor and bad, and within one year the whole business can be revolutionized.

THE CHURCH MUST CO-OPERATE WITH THE MOVIE

Motion pictures need the aid of the churches, not as "police," but as patrons and friendly advisors. The movies cannot be fought out of existence; they are here to stay, and to greatly increase in power and influence for good or evil. If moral and religious leaders array themselves against the pictures, the masses will at once go to their defense, for the movie people can appeal to them through the screen.

Already wherever they are questioned, or given the privilege to vote, they denounce censorship and demand its removal, and what the people want, sooner or later they will have. By antagonism we only make matters worse; but by friendly co-operation we can help to make the moving picture the best teacher and preacher the world has ever seen.

Houston, Texas.

That the wasteful multiplication of church organizations may be forestalled by an attempt on the part of the denomination first in the field to serve the religious needs of the community in an adequate and tactful way is being demonstrated with gratifying frequency in the newer towns of the west. Thus, at Sierra Madre, Cal., with a population of 1800, the Congregationalists have earnestly striven to practice Christian Union so that the church is in effect a union church although affiliated with the Congregational denomination. Its fellowship at present includes membership of Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Disciple, Lutheran, German Evangelical, Free Baptist, Dutch Reformed, Episcopal and United Brethren Churches. Those coming from other denominations would not now favor the organization of another church.

Drawbacks to the "Preparedness" Propaganda

With Reference to Two Recent Books*

By ELLIS B. BARNES

AMONG the men who have resisted the claims of the bellumists in the agitation for more guns and ships and all the by-products of both, none has thrown himself into the work with more intensity or mastery of the situation than Dr. Charles E. Jefferson. The study of military conditions is not new with him. For more than twenty years he has seen and protested and warned us in America. He saw the war-cloud in Europe getting ready to burst. He dissented from the beginning against the conclusion that the only way to keep one from bursting over our heads was to prepare several more. He is among those who do not agree that it is always best to fight the devil with fire, or that the way to keep nations from being swept off the earth by plagues is to create other plagues. Through the press and in his books he has furnished fuel for patriotic fires—the patriotism of peace and reason—and inspiration for many at times when it seemed that America had gone mad on the subject of militarism. He is a healthy-minded man who always writes with discrimination, with enthusiasm for his cause, with a pen that is never allowed to grow dull, and with a conviction that is contagious. Those who have read his books for preachers know him as a great teacher and a preacher whose praise is in churches of all denominations. He knows preachers' problems, how to state them, how to remedy them, how to put us all at ease with ourselves and our parishes.

* * *

HUMANITY—DR. JEFFERSON'S THEME

A year ago Dr. Jefferson published a series of addresses on "Christianity and International Peace," which is worthy of careful study. Recently the Merrick Lectures given at Ohio Wesleyan University have come from the press. In the five lectures there is the voice of the prophet, the man who can read the face of the sky and the signs of the times. His theme is humanity, not guns or ships or lyddite or armor-plate or fears or suspicions or bloated dreams of world-power—just man. No matter how dreadful "Lusitania" disasters may be, or asphyxiation, or horrors of many kinds, the fact of war is worse than all, because it includes them all. When men, women and children are doomed to slaughter it matters little what instruments are used. It is idle to complain of unfair rules in the game when carnage is the end sought. Hell is hell, even if we descend thereto to the accompaniment of martial music or dynamite explosions. Dr. Jefferson shows what war is in our day as Channing showed what it was in his day—destruction by machinery, only never as scientific and wholesale as now. He shows how the great war was made possible, and how it will be possible again unless a deaf ear is turned to the special interests, to the apostles of "frightfulness," to the misguided people who honestly believe that one or many foreign powers are sitting up night after night to plan our destruction. Europe prepared for war and got what she prepared for; she thought she would sow to the wind and reap the zephyr—she reaped what she sowed, the whirlwind. The shot from her first gun laid in ruins a refuge of lies. Be sure to read Dr. Jefferson's book. It will convince you that new wars will not end old wars—unless the new are battles of reason and righteousness. To kill off nations is the worst of all ways to settle differences. Why should war continue?

* * *

AN EXPERT ON THE SIDE OF PEACE

A man who has done the cause of peace a notable service in recent times is Dr. William I. Hull, professor of History and International Relations in Swarthmore College. His volume on "Preparedness," recently published, is a magazine of information which sets forth the Military versus the American program with wonderful skill and completeness. The work is an encyclopædia of the preparedness agitation. Every argument used by the bellumist party is stated and considered with microscopic particularity. When you have read this volume you have read everything important that can be said on either side of the subject up to this time. It is one of those rare books which leaves nothing more to be said on the subject. Throughout a delightful thread of humor runs of which I must give two samples to begin with. Speaking of military training in schools and colleges, he says:

> As preparation for this "life work," some high schools have accordingly undertaken the task of properly instructing their pupils how to kill. The California Board of Education has recently announced that military instruction is to be provided as part of the public school course in that state. Wyoming is said to be proud of the way in which military training in its schools has eclipsed in popularity athletic sports and games, and has given its youthful citizens a new efficiency, especially in "wall-scaling."
>
> Now we may picture in our mind's eye a regiment of Wyoming youths carrying a defensive war against Germany into the enemy's territory. They cross the Atlantic with its mines and submarines and part of a continent bristling with entrenchments. "Somewhere in Germany" they would find at least two walled towns to be captured by them—not of great political or military value, but still provided with walls; and they would find also a few forts, likewise provided with walls—and with other equipment as well. They would doubtless advance with all possible bravery and with all possible perfection of goose-step and maneuver across the landscape toward the coveted wall. But before they could arrive within ten miles of it, some such machine as a 42-centimeter "Chubby Bertha," mounted on top of the wall or behind it, would hurl a lyddite shell, or a Zeppelin, hovering a mile or two in the air, would drop two tons of explosives upon the gallant regiment and blow it into fragments. Were it not trifling with a grave subject it might even be said that such a regiment of trained Wyoming youths would be as dust in the balance against the Chubby Bertha of Essen. But this is running the theme into the ground. (pp. 105-6.)

WHAT HE SAYS ABOUT THE RESERVES

> It is true that there has been some feeble legislation designed to bind former professionals to the colors and make them available in time of war. But so feeble has this legislation been, that it has resulted in building up a reserve army of just sixteen men! A congressman especially prominent in the campaign for preparedness joyfully seized upon this pregnant fact and attempted to rub it into the American consciousness by giving a much advertised dinner at his home in Washington for "the entire reserve army of the United States of America." Eight of the sixteen soldiers accepted his invitation and partook of his hospitality. Even the rumor that at this dinner grape-juice was to be eschewed and Gambrinus was to sit next to Mars was not sufficient to mobilize two members of the reserve army from California and Porto Rico and six others from Indiana, Pennsylvania, and New York.
>
> Let us try to imagine our reserve army of sixteen men called out to defend this great Republic from invasion by the 4,430,000 reserves of Germany, the 3,300,000 reserves of Russia, the 1,610,000 reserves of Austria-Hungary, the 950,000 reserves of Japan, or even the 476,500 of Great Britain! Is there any wonder that we are trembling with fear in our boots? (p. 84.)
>
> If we depend upon reserves, we find that we have 16 as against Germany's 4,430,000 reserves. The new plan would give us 400,000 at the end of seven years, and at the cost of some $200,000,000. (p. 178.)

It is interesting to know that the cost of an "adequate" standing army—adequate has never been defined—of from 250,000 to 5,000,000 men

---

*"What the War Is Teaching," by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson. (218 pp. $1.00 net. Revell.)

"Preparedness," by Professor William I. Hull. (276 pp. $1.25 net. Revell.)

would be from $250,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 per annum!

* * *

MAKING THIS A MILITARY NATION

But I must forbear. When you read the facts, figures and comparisons between different nations of their military adequateness, of the demands made by our military leaders for equipment of many kinds at enormous and even staggering figures of expenditure, you will understand that there are difficulties in the way of making this a military nation, in addition to those imposed by the "mollycoddle" pacifists. You will become caught in the meshes of controversies between the advocates of dreadnoughts versus superdreadnoughts, of oversea and undersea craft, of the schoolmen who affirm invulnerability of armor as against destructibility of explosives, you will become acquainted with the "chemical ishmaelites," a numerous tribe who make war upon other tribes of hittites who have chemicals to exploit and explode. You will learn something of the claims of steel nets, harbor mining, and bomb-throwing of which you had never dreamed. Whatever invention, type, modern or obsolete, craft that flies or floats or sinks, gun, bomb or gas, designed to kill, that has been given to the world, you may read of in this book, and perhaps be driven distracted at the contending claims; for not surely is one gun perfected to put a fellow-mortal out of business than another gun is developed toward superperfection to put that gun out of business.

It is not long since England had a naval review in which her ships were spread out over twenty eight miles, steaming one behind another as close as safety would permit. Some of the "prepareders" want a navy that will make England's fleet look like "a rowboat with a hoop-skirt for a turret." They are willing to prepare but not to prepay, as Professor Hull suggests. Still, we must have an "adequate" navy, since all the great powers are sitting up at night to devise ways and means to cut our throats, while we lie "supinely on our backs," as the famous orator said. There is no proof that the aforesaid nations are going to do us to death any more than we propose to do them, but we must get ready, for no man can tell what may happen. A Zeppelin may drop a bomb on us from Mars. Who knows? To the trenches and to your tents, O Israel! Having access to neither in these piping times of peace, let us to the woods or to the cellar.

Enough. Read the book for a full discussion of the subject; whether you are on the side of the chemical "ates" or the "ites," it matters not. Beware of the pacifist, the philistines, and other poltroons!

Some Recent Books

OPEN THAT DOOR! By R. Sturgis Ingersoll. A book of inspirational character, pointing the way out of a "walled up" life into the full life of the spirit. The chapters dealing with the uses of literature are especially excellent. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. $1.00 net.)

DEFOE: HOW TO KNOW HIM. By William P. Trent. Another of the new and excellent series of studies of great authors from the viewpoint of their work itself. The series is ably edited by Professor W. D. Howe, of Indiana University. (Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. $1.25.)

THE CONQUEST. By Sidney L. Newburg. A story of the law courts, but one that reveals a sure knowledge of human nature and an appreciation of the romantic side of life. This author won approval by his earlier "stories of men and women" included in his "The Verdict." (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. $1.25 net.)

OLD GLORY. By Mary R. Shipman Andrews. Those who have read this author's "The Perfect Tribute" know what to expect in her stories. This is a collection of three stories intended to instill in American readers the spirit of patriotism. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. 50 cents net.)

A HARVEST OF GERMAN VERSE. By Margarete Munsterberg. If a nation is to be known by its songs, Germany need have no fear of an unfavorable verdict. How different these fruits of the German lyrical spirit from the fruits of modern Prussianism! (D. Appleton & Co., New York. $1.25.)

DUTY AND OTHER IRISH COMEDIES. By Seumas O'Brien. Five one-act comedies are included in this book. "Duty," the title play, was performed with success by the Irish players during their American tour in 1914. Irish humor and philosophy were never better presented than in this collection. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.25 net.)

HEART SONGS AND HOME SONGS. By Denis A. McCarthy. Mr. McCarthy has been called the most musical of American poets. He does not strive to meet the demands of the so-called modern school of poetry, but sings in fundamental manner straight to the heart of the people. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.00 net.)

PLANTATION SONGS. By Ruth McEnery Stuart. This author knows the heart of the Southern Negro, and has the power to put his humor and sentiment into most attractive verse. (D. Appleton & Co., New York. $1.25.)

THE HOME NURSE. By Dr. E. B. Lowry. An invaluable little book for the home. Filled with common sense advice based upon the best medical knowledge. (Forbes & Co., Chicago. $1.00.)

THE BACK YARD FARMER. By J. Willard Bolte. This volume deserves a place in the library of every man or woman who cultivates the back-to-the-land idea in a small way. Its advice is expert. (Forbes & Co., Chicago. $1.00.)

THE BEST BOOKS ON SEX. Undoubtedly the best series of volumes dealing with questions of sex are those written by Dr. E. B. Lowry and published by Forbes & Co., Chicago. The series includes: "Himself," talks with men; "Herself," talks with women; "Confidences," talks with the young girl; "Truths," talks with the boy; and "False Modesty." All these books sell at 50 cents except the first two, which are listed at $1.00. Another excellent book published by this same firm is "The Man and the Woman," by Arthur L. Salmon. This is listed at 75 cents. (Forbes & Co., Chicago.)

ENGLISH GRAMMAR SIMPLIFIED. By James C. Fernald. This book treats the vexed problems of the correct use of language in a most simple and satisfying way. It is especially useful to professional men. Truly a "handy" book. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York. 75 cents net.)

★ ★

"Let us heed the Saviour's warning, 'Judge not that ye be not judged.' We should cease damning our fellow men and sending them to hell for differences of doctrine, of polity and mode of worship. Certainly if it rested with men, few of us should ever see heaven. If the various churches were to be the judges, they would empty heaven save of a very few ancient saints, and fill hell with historic Christianity. If the judgment of the ecclesiastical authorities of the churches were ratified in heaven today, as they claim that they will be, every Christian now in the world would be excluded from heaven when he dies by the official decision of some one or more of the various ecclesiastial organizations that now govern the Christian world. What a reductio ad absurdum is the present opinion of Christendom on this subject!"—Dr. Charles A. Briggs.

When the Sound of the Idealist is Low

From The Biblical World

THOSE of us who know anything about the vocabulary of cookery have heard of bread that falls and of cake that becomes soggy. The reason for this misfortune seems always mysterious. The trouble is not in the cookbook; it is not in the flour. But the calamity is always imminent in the best-regulated kitchen.

This is a peril of our idealistic world just now. We do not doubt our spiritual recipes; as far as we know we are sincere in our professions of faith in the power of spiritual truth. But every now and then our idealism falls. That which we expected to be the bread of life seems an unpalatable mixture of wisdom and folly, dangerous to social health.

SOME DIFFICULT QUESTIONS

In moments when we are really sane we can well ask ourselves why these moments of moral depression come. Why is it that we even feel that the struggle for timeless values is a mark of unsophistication or worse? Why do we lose our moral enthusiasm at the very moment that the strain of life makes them imperative? Why do we attempt to be "practical" when our hearts tell us that we ought to be divinely impractical?

It is hard to answer these questions, but it is not difficult to diagnose the symptoms of our disorder. For the moment we are idealistically stale. The cares of this world and the deceitfulness of militarism have choked the word within us, and we have not the energy to uproot the weeds. Depressed by the discovery that we have been deceived into thinking that things are as they ought to be, we have said in our wrath that all men are homicidal beasts and that we are idealistic fools. Deafened by the noise of those who mistake gun-firing for wisdom, we have for the moment failed to hear that still, small voice which is none the less the voice of God.

JESUS' AMAZING OPTIMISM

Idealists, like cooks, ought not to be discouraged over an occasional failure. Yeast has not lost its power to leaven because cooks have blundered. Neither has the leaven of idealism ceased to work because we find that idealists are not so practical-minded as high-minded. Out of the mouths of idealists the Lord has ordained that wisdom should come. The most amazing optimism of Jesus is his belief that good people can be trusted to have good sense. Therefore he gave us no programs, but insisted on an attitude of mind which will give morality programs.

Let us have the same cheerful optimism. It is better to be an idealist without a program than a practical-minded man without an ideal. The fact that idealists are not always masters of a situation is no ground for thinking that belief in the things of the spirit, the supremity of love, and finality of justice are doomed.

An idealist is radioactive. The things that are seen in him may not count, but the unseen rays of his confidence in the sanity of love and his sacrificial loyalty to the good that is some day to be, will make over social life.

A LESSON FROM AN ANCIENT PROPHET

Years ago a prophet and his servant were in desperate straits. About them were the soldiers of a fearfully prepared enemy. The servant—who by his employment was doubtless a master of small efficiencies—was in despair. The prophet, despite his days of misanthropic reading of his world, was serene. The servant lamented the triumph of the enemies of his master and his God. "O Lord," the prophet cried, "open his eyes." And the servant for a minute shared in the prophet's vision of mountains filled with the armies of the mighty God.

If men who are prophets are loyal to their vision, the world is not headed toward civilized brutality. God has not given up being a Father.

Let those of us who find our idealism sorely tested be good soldiers of the cross. We have a Jesus who overcame the world. If you believe in God, believe also in him.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

UNION AT INNESFREE, ALBERTA

THE union church at Innesfree, Alberta, is one of a number of instances of co-operation between Baptists and Disciples in Canada. This church was organized August 25, 1907, and is hence beyond the experimental stage.

In this instance there was not enough financial strength in either the Baptist or Disciple groups to build a church and support a pastor. So the two groups united, raised money to pay for a lot and building material, and built a church by the contributed labor of the members.

The name of this church appears officially as "The Church of Christ (Baptists and Disciples)." It maintains relations with both Baptist and Disciple conventions, sends delegates to both bodies and supports the missionary and benevolent enterprises of both denominations. The property is held jointly, by a single board of trustees representing the congregation.

The government is strictly congregational. A business meeting of the congregation is held each month and no action of the board is binding upon the church unless carried at such a regular or special business meeting. The constitution of the church may be changed by a majority vote of three-fourths of all members present. The Lord's Supper is observed once a month, but this may be changed to weekly observance at the desire of the congregation.

The church has had the liberal support of the Baptist Home Mission board. In the beginning it was expected that both Mission Boards would co-operate, but lack of funds on the part of the Disciples has thrown the whole support of the work on the Baptist board.

Mr. J. J. Gulley, who furnishes us with the above information, writes that the nine years during which this church has served the community have been years of harmonious co-operation, and that the church faces an auspicious future.

Recently there was unveiled in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, a bas-relief of Florence Nightingale, the mother of modern war nursing. The Queen and the Archbishop of Canterbury were there, as well as the Lord Mayor of London.

A Great Book for the New Day

In this day of tremendous issues in national and international life, of the remaking of the entire civilized world, there is need for a reconsideration of the great messages of the prophets of Israel, those spokesmen of God to nations and men. Dr. Willett makes these wise seers live and speak anew for the modern world in his

"Moral Leaders of Israel"

Here are some of the qualities of Dr. Willett's book as seen by well-known publications: "Ripe scholarship", "Popular interpretation" (The Advance, Chicago). "Comprehensive", "Popular" (The Continent, Chicago). "Vital"," Lucid" (Christian Endeavor World, Boston). "Definite" (Christian Work, New York). "Brilliant", "Clear and sane", "Winsome and sincere" (Heidelberg Teacher, Philadelphia). "Vivid", "Simple and clear", (The Living Church, Milwaukee). "Clear and interesting" (Christian Advocate).

The book is in two volumes. Volume I is out at $1.00, postpaid. Order your copy today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. FORTIETH STREET, . . CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE

BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

President Brown Is Dead

The Rev. Dr. Francis Brown, president of Union Theological Seminary since 1908, died of heart disease at his home in New York, October 15, in his sixty-seventh year. He had been in poor health about a year, but had assumed his duties at the commencement of the fall term. Dr. Brown, one of the most widely known theologians in the United States, was born at Hanover, N. H. He was graduated from Union Theological Seminary in 1877 and then studied at the University of Berlin for two years. He later received degrees from Hamilton, Dartmouth, Yale, Harvard, Oxford and other institutions. Dr. Brown became an instructor at Union Seminary upon his return from Berlin in 1879 and remained there until his death. He was the author of a number of works and text-books.

Begin Tercentenary Campaign

October 8 was a red letter day in the Congregational fellowship. It was the beginning of a three-year campaign which is to celebrate three hundred years of history since the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. At the end of the period a monument, either material or spiritual, will be erected to this great event. The aim of the tercentenary celebration will be to increase the membership of the churches, the benevolent offerings, and to educate the public in the real significance of the religious life of the early Pilgrims who came to these shores three hundred years ago.

Family Altar League

Seven years ago an organization was formed to promote the idea of the family altar. In that time 60,000 homes have been enlisted for the movement. There is now a monthly magazine which gives the daily readings. Dr. Biederwolf, the well-known evangelist, was the founder, and he is now busy seeking endowment for the organization. He has secured $40,000 of the $100,000 needed.

Dr. Clark Is Ill Again

Dr. Frances E. Clark, father of the Christian Endeavor movement, is reported ill again. He had typhoid fever last summer and survived the attack. Last winter he was in the Orient. It would seem, however, that he has not grown robust again, and is now in a hospital.

Memorial for Archbishop

The Most Rev. Dr. Enos Nuttall was until recently the archbishop of the West Indies and Bishop of Jamaica. He had many friends in the United States, and these friends propose to erect a monument to his memory. This monument will be in the form of an endowment to the Episcopal fund of his diocese.

Revival of the Primitive in Religion

The war is bringing to the front the superstitions and primitive attitudes of bygone days in religion. The British reported in the early days of the war how angels came and fought for them. There is a very curious recrudescence in Germany. The Kaiser has frequently spoken in his speeches of "Germany's Good Old God." Dr. Reinke, in a German newspaper, comments upon the Kaiser's words, "The God of Christians is the god of love, faithfulness, of justice, of mercifulness. We are to serve Him in spirit and in truth. His service does not, however, preclude us Germans from turning also to the gods of Teutonic forefathers." This reference seems to be to Thor, the divinity armed with the mighty hammer.

Rev. David Beaton Returns to Chicago

Rev. David Beaton, formerly pastor of Lincoln Park Congregational church, and recently president of Redfield College, Redfield, S. D., is opening a Community church in a theater on the north shore of Chicago. The organization will not have denominational affiliations.

Will Build Big Institutional Church

The Immanuel Baptist Church of Chicago, of which Rev. Johnston Myers has been pastor for many years, has published the plans for an institutional church building to cost $650,000. The institution will have a board of trustees the majority of whom are Baptists, but the work of the organization will be conducted along lines which will require the service of various denominations. There will be auditoriums for religious work, but more equipment will be provided for the feeding of unfortunate people and for dormitories for working girls. The church has a membership of 2,500, of which many are non-resident people.

Bishop Protests Liquor Importations

Bishop McConnell in a recent number of the Constructive Quarterly protests against the importation into Africa of large amounts of liquor. The amount of liquor passing Madeira, a port of registry for the coast of Africa, in one week is reported as follows: Whiskey, 28,000 cases; brandy, 30,000 cases; Old Tom gin, 30,000 cases; rum, 36,000 barrels; 800,000 demijohns of rum, with 24,000 butts of rum; 15,000 barrels of absinthe, and 960,000 cases of gin. In Sierra Leone during one quarter of a year there was unloaded at a "dry" town, for use in the interior, 250 tons of liquors.

Christian Endeavor Leader Ill.

Dr. William Shaw, general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, was injured last month by the overturning of a railway bus in New Hampshire. He has been in a hospital since, making a slow recovery. He lost his right thumb, but the hand will be saved. His left arm was broken in two places and it will have to be opened and silver plates be put on the bones. These misfortunes will elicit the sympathy of Christian people everywhere, and especially of the Christian Endeavor hosts, of whom he is the chief executive.

Noted Missionary Dies

Dr. Daniel Bliss, who died recently, served as a missionary in Syria for more than sixty years. He raised the initial endowment of the Syrian Protestant College. He began this work in a rented house, with sixteen pupils. When he retired from the presidency fourteen years ago the college had nearly 900 students, 75 teachers, and fifteen good buildings. Dr. Bliss' son is president of the college his father founded.

The Sunday School

SHIPWRECKED ON MELITA (MALTA)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 5.

Golden Text: Jehovah redeemeth the soul of his servants; And none of them that take refuge in Him shall be condemned. Psalm, 34:22.

Lesson, Acts, 27:38-28:10, verses 38-44 printed.

Memorize verses 42-44.

(38) And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, throwing out the wheat into the sea. (39) And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they perceived a certain bay with a beach, and they took counsel whether they could drive the ship upon it. (40) And casting off the anchors, they left them in the sea, at the same time loosing the bands of the rudders; and hoisting up the foresail to the wind, they made for the beach. (41) But lighting upon a place where two seas met, they ran the vessel aground; and the foreship struck and remained unmovable, but the stern began to break up by the violence of the waves. (42) And the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape. (43) But the centurion, desiring to save Paul, stayed them from their purpose; and commanded that they who could swim should cast themselves overboard, and get first to the land; (44) And the rest, some on planks, and some on other things from the ship. And so it came to pass, that they all escaped safe to the land.

* * *

Verse by Verse

38. They had eaten enough. So as to have strength for the task. They lightened the ship, For the third time they lightened the ship so that they could come nearer the shore. The wheat. The main cargo was retained as long as possible.

39. They knew not the land. The sailors were very familiar with the harbor at Melita, but not this part of the shore. A certain bay with a beach. A sandy beach upon which they could run the ship and remain in safety while they landed. They took counsel. They counseled together as to the wisdom of driving the ship on the sand.

40. Casting off the anchors. The word means to remove, and means here the cutting of the anchor cables. Loosing the bands of the rudders. These rudders were paddle-shaped, and lashed to the side of the ship. They were let down into the water for the purpose of steering the ship.

41. Lighting upon a place. Some are of the opinion that this may refer to the small channel which separates Malta from the small island of Salmonetta. They ran the vessel aground. The rocks along the shore have disintegrated into extremely small particles of sand and clay which form a deposit of tenacious clay and mud. A ship impelled by the storm would stick fast in this deposit. Stern began to break up. The crew rushed to the front of the boat while the waves dashed the stern to pieces.

42. The soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners. The soldiers were answerable with their own lives for the safekeeping of the prisoners. It may be that the other prisoners were not as favorably situated as Paul, who had appealed for trial to the supreme court of Rome. (See chapters 12:19 and 16:27.)

43. The centurion, desiring to save Paul. The influence of Paul over the centurion's mind was the means of saving both his life and those of his fellow-prisoners. Commanded that they who could swim. The Romans were trained from their youth to swim. It was often of service to them as sailors.

44. Some on planks, and some on other things from the ship. This was the wreckage, and the wind would help them to shore. Those who swam to safety were helping in the rescue. They all escaped safe to the land. The promise made to Paul was fulfilled. (See verse 24.)

Test Questions

1. Why were the soldiers anxious to keep the prisoners?
2. What is meant by "the bands of the rudders"?
3. What is the meaning here of the word "barbarians"?
4. What is the modern name of the island of Melita?
5. To what country does it belong?
6. What were Paul's strong characteristics as revealed on this voyage?
7. Does the hour make the leader, or does the crisis reveal him?
8. What moral and religious lessons should we get from this account?
9. How far do we trust God's care?
10. Where do you trust His care?

"Be Prepared"

The Lesson in Today's Life

By ASA McDANIEL

"Be Prepared" is the motto of the Boy Scouts, and means that the scout is always in a state of readiness in mind and body to do his duty. He prepares his mind by thinking out beforehand any possible accident or situation that may occur so that he is ready to do as occasion demands. He prepares his body by strict discipline and constant practice to be strong and active so that he is able to do the right thing at the right moment.

It is the business of the Bible school to help train our boys and girls for service of the highest order. The idea of "luck" and "chance" as factors in the struggle of life has been displaced by preparedness. By this is not meant the superficial use of the term so frequently on the lips of the military enthusiast; but the cultivation of honor, resourcefulness and brave co-operation without thinking as to the ways in which these qualities should be given expression. It is not our business to prepare our boys and girls for any particular kind of service; but rather to give them this fundamental training which will equip them for service in any capacity.

Moses gave the world law, because he spent forty years reflecting upon the idea of justice. He was prepared for the task. Abraham Lincoln guided the ship of state through the stormy waters of the Civil war because he was prepared in body and mind for leadership. It is equally true of other great men. The hour reveals, but does not make the man. Opportunities equally great have come to other men, whose early training has not made them ready for high achievements, and they have passed them by. The test of greatness does not depend so much on the hour of achievement as upon the apparently unimportant moments which have preceded it. David saved the armies of Israel because he had learned to use the sling in his shepherd life.

The greatness of Paul as a man and as a leader is shown on his voyage to Rome. His brave endurance, his presence of mind, his tireless activity, his unselfishness, his practical wisdom, his sympathy, his good cheer, and his trust in God were brought out by the thrilling events of an angry sea. All of these strong qualities had been won by him in the quieter scenes of his very eventful life. He was the foremost man on the ship, for he had lived the best life. His constant communion with God gave him spiritual strength and courage at the moment of great peril. A spiritual life must be kept in daily training in order that the unexpected trials may be met with unshaken purpose and success. The successful man is the man who can command the richest past. "Sir Henry Haveloch was twenty-eight when he entered the army of India, and he was sixty-two before the opportunity came to distinguish himself. During these thirty-four years of waiting he had made himself skillful in planning and ready for leadership, and then came the opportunity for that march to Lucknow which made him famous." Milton tells us that he spent thirty-four years in collecting the material for his great poem. These years of toil and hard study are rewarded in the world's admiration for the poem. The rivers of the past will flow into our lives and make them resourceful and rich in just the proportion that we are willing to receive them by active preparation.

* * *

A Hindu head-master in a native school of India can find no text-book for moral teaching to equal the Bible, and uses it throughout his school.

This is the week set for the publication of

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

Edited by Charles Clayton Morrison and Herbert L. Willett. The book is just coming from the press. Many requests for returnable copies have been received. These will be sent promptly. A widespread interest has been manifested in the appearance of this notable work into which five years of preparation have gone. The publishers regard The Disciples Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. Pastors or responsible officers of churches may write for returnable copy of the hymnal. Please state the approximate number of books your congregation will need. Address

Disciples Publication Society,
700 East 40th Street, Chicago

Disciples Table Talk

Doing Big Things in a Small Town

Donovan is a small Illinois village in Iroquois county. The people are largely Swedish, many being original settlers. French Catholics are a very important element. A struggling Methodist church in the village and a very strong Swedish country church have complicated the situation. Good men have labored here, but each has closed his pastorate at the end or near the end of the second year. Guy L. Zerby and his wife have been here for two years, coming from Eureka College and Chicago University. These young people have worked hard, and often under discouraging conditions, but they hold a firm place in the affections of the community and real progress has been made. The parsonage and church have both been wired and are now lighted by electricity. Four hundred dollars was expended last year in equipping the church plant for more efficient Bible school and community service. A men's banquet was recently held, at which the leading men of the community discussed community betterment. One of the best village Bible schools in the state is being evolved under the superintendence of the minister and a number of teachers. Much has been accomplished and more will be done in the way of community service. A very live society of the young people of Donovan foster the civic spirit. This was organized by the church, which also made possible a $400 Redpath Fall Festival. The regular lecture course and a Domestic Club have been organized because of the co-operation of the church. A new record has been made in the way of missionary work and interest in the general enterprises of the church. No regular call has gone unheeded, and only in a single instance has either the church or Bible school failed to reach the suggested apportionment. A small but loyal C. W. B. M. has aided much in this good work. The latter has been organized in the last two years. The membership is about one hundred. About twenty-five of this number have been added since Mr. Zerby has been pastor. No big revivals have been held, but a short meeting held by home forces. A quiet union meeting and a revival just closed, led by J. A. Barnett, have quickened the life of the community.

Small Bible School Grows Into Big City Church

That it pays to plant Bible schools is again proved by the history of First Christian Church, Wilkinsburg, Pa. Sixteen years ago H. F. Lutz, a missionary evangelist under the A. C. M. S., organized a school which met in a hall, and then in a basement of an old church building. In less than a year a church was organized with 65 members. Mr. Lutz served as pastor for a time, then was succeeded by L. N. D. Wells, for five years, and Geo. W. Knepper for five years; then the present pastor, Walter Scott Cook, came to the work from Nelsonville, O. Last year the building which had been in use for fifteen years was burned, and a new building has now been dedicated. This cost about $41,500. The present enrollment of the congregation is about 400 and the Bible school has a membership of 485. The dedication services were held from October 8 to 11, and Miner Lee Bates, of Hiram College, was in charge. Over $11,000 was raised, which, Mr. Cook writes, will bring the indebtedness down to a point not hard to carry. Other speakers during the dedication season were L. N. D. Wells, of First church, Akron, O., and H. F. Lutz, of Bethany College. The new church building is the best among the Disciples in Greater Pittsburgh. It is built in the early Colonial type, and will accommodate over 700 persons. Mr. Cook writes that plans have been made for a series of evangelistic meetings to be held by W. H. Boden in November.

First Church, Akron, O., Sends Out a Member as Missionary

Miss Vera Adamson is a member of First church, Akron, O., and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Adamson.

Rev. W. F. Richardson, President of the late General Convention, and who has resigned from First Church pulpit, Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Adamson is the president of the Adamson Machine Company. Announcement is just made that Miss Adamson will go out in three months as a missionary to the Philippines, her parents supporting her. L. N. D. Wells, pastor at First church, writes that so far as he knows this is the first instance in the brotherhood of a parent supporting his own child on the foreign field. Miss Adamson is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is in every way fitted for her new task. All records were broken at First church school on Rally day, September 24, when the total count of attendance was 2,148. The Brotherhood class of men crowded its hall to its capacity, with 724 men present. Mr. Wells has had remarkable success promoting men's work in all churches which he has served.

Decima Campbell Barclay Enjoys Willett Travel Articles

Among the expressions of appreciation of the travel articles of Herbert L. Willett, Jr., which have been published in THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY, is one from Mrs. Decima Campbell Barclay, whom all Disciples know as the daughter of Alexander Campbell. The letter comes to Dr. Willett. Here is a portion of the letter: "I am greatly enjoying your son's 'Travel Stories of the War Country,' as everything Oriental has great charm for me, having lived for several years on the lovely 'Isle of Cyprus,' where my husband was United States Consul; his sister was consul at Beirut for fifteen years, where I visited them frequently, and spent a summer with them on Mount Lebanon."

Unusual Bible School Institute at Sharon, Pa.

It is not often that as many "leading lights" are gathered together at a local Bible school institute as were present at Central church, Sharon, Pa., from October 9 to 13. On the program, among others, were the following: L. G. Batman, of First church, Youngstown, O., spoke on "The Supremacy of the Bible School"; W. D. Ryan, of Central church, Youngstown, discussed "The Value of Enthusiasm"; W. S. Goode, of Hillman St. church, Youngstown, considered "The Bible School at Work"; R. J. Bennett, pastor at Sharon, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Bible School in Other Lands"; J. V. Schrock, superintendent of the largest school in Youngstown, spoke on "The Bible School Aroused"; George W. Penniman, Bible school secretary to H. J. Heinz, "the pickle man," talked on "Around the World With the Bible School." Then M. L. Spear, of one of the Sharon churches, gave illustrated lectures on "The Life of Christ."

J. P. Pinkerton Praises Work of Walter Stairs

J. P. Pinkerton, of the church at Terrell, Tex., writes that friends of Walter Stairs may be interested in a news note concerning him. Mr. Stairs recently spent several weeks in Terrell, in some special educational work. He served First church as pastor some time ago. During this last visit in the city, he occupied the pulpit at First several times and preached at a union service. Mr. Pinkerton writes that friends of Mr. Stairs are asking him why he does not devote his entire time to the ministry, because of his ability in the pulpit. Mr. Stairs, however, feels that he is exerting a greater influence in the educational field he has chosen.

Byron Hester Leaves Pryor, Okla., for Chickasha

For three years Byron Hester has done remarkable constructive work at Pryor, Okla., and now he has been called to First church, Chickasha, and has accepted the work. G. Lyle Smith was the former pastor of this church. Pryor is Mr. Hester's first regular pastorate since he left Transylvania and the College of the Bible.

A "Life Service Certificate" for Your School

In connection with the Bible school program, "Farthest North," which has been issued by the Bible school department of the A. C. M. S., there is provision made for a proper recognition of those members of the congregation who are giving full life service to some form of Christian service. Mr. Hopkins writes of this plan: "Every church should honor those of its congregation who have gone out to preach, to teach, to serve in any field, at home or abroad. A certificate on the walls of the church, particularly in the Bible school rooms, would be a constant reminder of these heroes and heroines and would serve as an inspiration to many young lives today. With this thought in mind, we have prepared a beautiful certificate, printed in colors, for such use. Churches should be encouraged to make their own Honor Rolls, but this is intended for those that prefer to buy ready made. It is modeled after a similar Honor Roll used in many Canadian churches to list the names of brave soldiers who are serving king and country over seas at the battle front. This certificate may be had from state or district Bible school superintendents or from the office of the American Christian Missionary Society."

In Appreciation of E. M. Waits

The following is an editorial published in the Fort Worth (Tex.) Record, entitled "An Appreciation": "Rev. Edward McShain Waits has accepted the presidency of Texas Christian University. As pastor of the Magnolia Avenue Christian church for the last ten years, he has rendered a great service to the city of Fort Worth. Rev. Mr. Waits is a builder. Before coming to this city he built churches in El Paso and Ladonia. When he accepted the pastorate of the Magnolia church the congregation was small and was housed in a tabernacle. He has taken in 1,300 members while pastor of the church, erected one of the finest church buildings in the city and raised $75,000 for the work of the church. Since he has become a citizen of this city he has taken a leading part in social service and welfare movements. He was one of the founders of the Bible Browning class, a leader in the Laymen's Missionary movement and is a writer for the leading church papers. Rev. Mr. Waits is recognized as one of the ablest speakers, the most successful organizers and the most learned scholars of the Disciples of Christ Church in the southwest. Already he is planning big things for the university. Under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Waits, Texas Christian University should continue to grow and prosper."

★ ★

—G. W. Watson, of First church, La Fayette, Ind., has received a call to the work at Paris, Ill., but at last report had made no decision. His congregation is urging him to remain at La Fayette. H. H. Peters recently left the Paris work to become superintendent of the Illinois state organization.

—Jackson Boulevard church, Chicago, enjoyed sermons on October 8 by W. H. Allen, of New Orleans, in the morning, and Chas. F. Hutslar in the evening. Both of the visitors were on their way to the Des Moines convention.

—Guy L. Zerby reports a brief meeting led by J. A. Barnett, of Bloomington, Ill. Fifteen persons responded to the invitations extended. Mr. Zerby states that Mr. Barnett "has a magnificent vision, but keeps his feet on the ground and lives close to the people."

—W. R. Warren writes: "Your leading editorial in the October 5th issue of The Christian Century deserves all commendation."

—The Christian Endeavor Society of First church, Oakland, Cal., recently held a service at the county hospital.

—The Norwood, O., church is working at the raising of a building fund of $2,500, the goal to be reached by Thanksgiving day. Nearly $1,000 is now on hand.

—Miss Cynthia Pearl Maus, of the Bible school department of the A. C. M. S., gave an address at the morning service on Rally day at Central church, Terre Haute. The date of the rally was October 7.

—B. W. Trimble, teacher of Trimble's Loyal Women's Class, Mt. Sterling, Ky., has recently lost a member of his class by death who was ninety-four years old. She was known as "Granny" Jordan and was present at about half the class sessions until the closing year of her life.

—The Kentucky State Bible School Association, led by Walter E. Frazee, has as one of its goals for Bible School Day for Foreign Missions, November 19, "to help reach Kentucky's aim of '500 schools giving $10,000.'" —"Old Berea," a splendid rural congregation of Mercer county, Ky., recently observed Orphans' Home day, and gathered together about $100 worth of provisions for Orphans' home work.

—George L. Snively preached at a union meeting of the Louisville Disciple churches on October 1, and about $4,000 was raised for city missions. The meeting was held at First church.

—Many Mission Study classes and Mission Reading circles are being organized in Endeavor societies. The classes will use largely the new book, "Ten Lessons on Missionary Principles and Practice," by workers of the Foreign society. The reading circles will use either the new book by A. F. Hensey, "A Master Builder on the Congo," or "In the Land of the Cherry Blossom," by Mrs. M. W. Madden. It is urged that every society adopt one of these plans. Write the Foreign Society, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio, for particulars.

—Cotner University, Bethany, Neb., observed Founders' Day on October 3. Short speeches were made by W. P. Aylsworth and Dean A. D. Harmon. The chief address of the day was delivered by J. K. Shellenberger. Athletics, a free dinner and photographs of students, faculty and visitors were other features.

—During the recent Kentucky state convention it was voted to purchase a Ford for the state secretary, J. S. Hilton. Almost at once sufficient funds were pledged to secure the machine.

—The All-Western Kentucky School of Methods will be held at Mayfield Oct. 30-Nov. 3. The state and national secretaries will have charge of the school.

—The ministers of the Louisville churches on a recent Sunday exchanged pulpits, and each preached a sermon on "Our Common Cause in the City of Louisville."

—November 5 will be World's Temperance Sunday. L. E. Sellers, Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis, will furnish Temperance Day supplies without cost.

—The new officers of the Kentucky state organization are: President, Clyde Darsie, Mt. Sterling; vice-president, S. S. Jones, Madisonville; second vice-president, A. F. Stahl, Maysville; recording secretary, E. B. Bourland, Carlisle. The members of the State Board were re-elected. The next convention will be held at Campbellsville, the third week in September, 1917.

—During October, C. F. Stevens, pastor at Beatrice, Neb., is preaching a series of sermons to young people. The following are the topics discussed: "The Temptation," "Jealousy," "Health the Reward of Right Living," "Playing the Game" and "Christ's Challenge to Young Men and Women."

—University of Chicago preachers during the month of November will be as follows: Nov. 5 and 12, Bishop C. D.

Board of Ministerial Relief

COMPARATIVE FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Receipts

Sources—	1911	1915	1916	Gain, 1 year	Gain, 5 years
Churches	$7,493.23	$15,831.60	$20,288.30	$4,456.70	$12,795.07
Bible schools	.....	1,243.16	2,083.77	840.61	2,083.77
Individuals	2,394.40	2,440.95	3,015.60	574.65	621.20
Estates	3,219.33	1,250.00	5,618.10	4,368.10	2,398.77
Annuities	1,600.00	8,257.75	7,200.00	1,057.75*	5,600.00
Miscellaneous	810.20	1,060.00	1,979.50	949.50	1,169.30
Total	$15,517.16	$30,083.46	$40,189.70	$10,101.81	$24,668.11
20 per cent property	.....	6,000.00	6,000.00	.....	6,000.00
Interest	1,799.56	3,649.50	3,942.22	292.72	2,142.66
Grand total	$17,316.72	$39,732.96	$50,127.49	$10,394.53	$32,810.77

*Loss.

Pensions

Amount paid	$8,816.46	$20,493.59	$22,167.26	$1,673.67	$13,350.80
Roll, Sept. 30	71	124	147	23	76
Maximum	145.00	360.00	360.00	.....	215.00

Permanent Fund

Amount, Sept. 30	$31,514.44	$78,632.07	$93,732.07	$15,100.00	$62,217.63

As we consider the growth, our hearts are filled with joy and thanksgiving; as we look at the task of providing for our fathers in the faith, there is pain and humiliation. We have only made a beginning. The Roll should be doubled and the offerings quadrupled at once.

Particularly encouraging is the increase in the offerings of churches and Bible schools and in the number contributing. Subject to correction, the number of churches giving is 1,256, a gain of 220 for the year and of 764 for the five years. The contributing Bible schools were counted with the churches five years ago to make the meager total of 492. This year 200 have given separately, a gain of 58 over last year.

BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF,
W. R. Warren, Secretary.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Williams, of Detroit; Nov. 19, President J. G. K. McClure, of McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, and Nov. 26, Dean Charles R. Brown, of the Yale School of Religion. Prof. Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard, is scheduled to preach the last two Sundays of October.

—J. A. Barnett has just begun a meeting with North Side church, Omaha, Neb., where Geo. L. Peters ministers.

—Walter Mansell has been called from Washington, Pa., to Central church, Warren, O. He has already begun his new work.

—J. A. Lytle has assumed the pastorate at North Side, Newark, O.

—"Visiting Day," "Young People's Day" and "Decision Day" are special occasions during October at Pasadena, Cal., First church, to which F. G. Tyrrell ministers.

—W. A. Baldwin, former state secretary of the Nebraska state organization, is recovering from an operation recently undergone after an attack of appendicitis.

—Central church, Anderson, Ind., took the every member canvass on Oct. 15.

—J. O. Rose is the new Dean of the Bible department of Angola College, Angola, Ind.

—W. E. Moore, of Charlestown, Ind., has been called to the pulpit at Edinburg, and Wm. Grant Smith, recently of Edinburg, has taken the work at Madisonville, Cincinnati.

—Vevay, Ind., Disciples dedicate their new church home this week.

—W. H. Book has begun his twelfth year as pastor at Tabernacle church, Columbus, Ind.

—J. A. Agnew has been selected to succeed W. W. Weedon as pastor at Mt. Carmel, Ill.

—John W. Kerns, of Central church, Austin, Tex., has been called to the pulpit at Magnolia Avenue church, Fort Worth, recently vacated by E. M. Waits. Mr. Kerns will accept.

—E. C. Mobley, pastor at Amarillo, Tex., is giving a series of Wednesday evening prayer meeting talks on the life of Christ.

—E. C. Boynton has resigned from First church, Belton, Tex., to accept the work at Hyde Park church, Austin, Tex.

—Charles E. Holt, recently pastor at Montgomery, Tenn., has begun his new service at Broadway church, Knoxville, Tenn.

—M. M. Davis celebrated his twenty-sixth anniversary as pastor at Ross Avenue church, Dallas, Tex., on Oct. 15.

—An enthusiastic reception was given by the congregation at Waukegan, Ill., to W. C. McDougall, their newly elected pastor.

—Carl H. Barnett, pastor at Brazil, Ind., read a biographical sketch of James Whitcomb Riley at a celebration by the literary clubs of the city of the work of the Hoosier poet.

—At Colfax, Ill., church the first week in October special addresses on community betterment were given each evening by a number of pastors. The following were topics discussed and the speakers: "Some Efficiency Tests," by C. J. Robertson, Gibson City; "The Church and the Community," by N. H. Robertson, Shelbyville; "Unquestionable Amusements," A. L. Ragsdale, Kankakee; "The Church's Obligations and Opportunities," Geo. R. Southgate, Heyworth; "A Man's Value to His Community," C. C. Wisher, Saybrook; "The Call of Christ to the Young," W. H. Fonger, Cooksville. The following Sunday was observed as Rally day.

—The Kansas state convention of Disciples, 1917, will meet at Dodge City. O. L. Cook, of Topeka, is the new president of the organization.

—J. T. Tisdall, of Norwood church, Toledo, O., states that a number of persons have already been added to the membership of this congregation, as a direct result of the influence of the one word, "Others," which flashes out in large letters in front of the church. The installation of this unusual sign was mentioned in a recent issue.

—W. B. Crewdson has resigned the work at Elliott, Ia., to become a district evangelist.

—W. R. Burton, of Butler, Ind., has been selected as pastor at First church, Warsaw, Ind. Mr. Burton is a Eugene University man.

—C. G. Brelos, who has recently served as district superintendent for the Montana Children's Home Finding Society, has resigned this position.

—John L. Brandt, of First church, St. Louis, Mo., has received an anonymous letter threatening that if he continues his energetic campaign for the eradication of vice in the district surrounding his church he must "beware of consequences."

—The Portland Avenue congregation, Minneapolis, Minn., has indicated its appreciation of the services of S. G. Fisher, pastor at the Avenue church, by granting a raise of $200 in his salary.

—Carey E. Morgan, pastor of Vine Street church, Nashville, Tenn., has returned to his charge after a four months' leave of absence, granted him because of ill health. Mr. Morgan spent this time in the Adirondacks and in Canada. He is now much stronger physically.

—Louis R. Patmont, well known among Disciples, has indicated his purpose to return to his native country, Poland, after the war is over. Mr. Patmont will do missionary work.

—H. N. Van Voorhis, pastor at East Palestine, O., for the past year, has resigned from this pulpit to enter the evangelistic field.

—C. H. Winders, of Downey Avenue, Indianapolis, recently addressed the Butler College students on "The Danger of the Lower Way."

—At the first of the month-end meetings at First church, Louisville, E. L. Powell spoke on the theme, "The Place of the Sword in Knighthood." A choir of 300 voices led in the singing, and the local chapters of the Knights Templar attended in a body.

—Prof. Ellsworth E. Faris gave the address of welcome at the reception given Fred S. Nichols, pastor at Iowa City, Ia., who has recently returned from service on the Mexican border as chaplain.

—H. J. Brazelton has been called from Russellville, Ky., to the pulpit at Mayfield. He has already begun his new task.

—The Tri-City Evangelistic Association, composed of the men of the Dis-

Worth Careful Thought

Do you read the label to know whether your baking powder is made from cream of tartar or, on the other hand, from alum or phosphate?

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes, and adds to the food only wholesome qualities.

Other baking powders contain alum or phosphate, both of mineral origin, and used as substitutes for cream of tartar because of their cheapness.

Never sacrifice quality and healthfulness for low price.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

ciple churches of Davenport, Ia., and Rock Island and Moline, Ill., has planned to hold special evangelistic campaigns in Davenport and Moline during November. Meetings will be held in Rock Island later in the winter.

—G. W. McQuiddy, new pastor at Springfield, Mo., began his work there October 1.

—The women of the Disciples of Norfolk, Ark., have determined to raise money for a church home. Several hundred dollars has already been gathered together.

—The Broadway Christian church, Pueblo, Colo., has begun work upon a new $15,000 building to replace the one recently burned.

—W. T. Weaver, pastor at Freeport, Ill., has announced his resignation from this pulpit.

—B. F. Cato, of First church, Little Rock, Ark., recently addressed the men of a local planing mill at a noon meeting.

—Thomas P. Byrnes has begun work as pastor at First church, Birmingham, Ala., succeeding Henry Pearce Atkins, who was called to the pulpit at First church, Mexico, Mo.

—The total receipts of the Foreign Society, as reported at Des Moines, were $522,716, a gain of $97,579 over last year.

—Edgar D. Jones recently preached to a large gathering of traveling men, taking as his text "In Journeyings Oft."

—H. E. Hoon, of Orleans, Ind., has been called to succeed W. T. Barbre at Rockville, Ind.

—R. W. Stancill, who came to Washington, D. C., from Ohio, has been selected as supply minister at the H Street church until a regular pastor is secured.

—Richmond Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y., John P. Sala, pastor, is beginning the publication of a magazine called "The Frontier Christian." The purpose of the magazine will be to increase the scope of the work of the Disciples churches of the city.

—E. H. Wray, who has done a remarkable work at First church, Steubenville, O., has been called to the work at Broad Street, Columbus, O. No decision has been reported from Mr. Wray. The call was unsolicited.

—W. J. Bryan, of national fame, spoke at University Place church, Des Moines, at the morning service two weeks ago on "False Gods." It is estimated that 5,000 persons were turned away from the crowded auditorium.

—Mrs. Elmer Ward Cole, of Huntington, Ind., recently filled the pulpit at Markle, Ind., in the absence of the regular minister.

—Miss Bertha Clauson, president of the Margaret K. Long College for Girls, Tokio, Japan, gave an address at University Place church, Des Moines, two weeks ago. Miss Clauson went out nineteen years ago and is the living link of the church at Angola, Ind., but is representing the University Place church in carrying forward, as far as possible, the work laid down by Loduska Wyrick, who died two years ago and who was sent out and sustained by the "Belle Bennett" division of the C. W. B. M. society of the University Place church.

—"Homecoming Day," "Family Day," "Cradle Roll Day," and "Old Folks Day," were celebrated during the present month at Kendallville, Ind., church.

—L. E. Murray, of First church, Richmond, Ind., is conducting a series of Thursday evening Bible studies this autumn.

—Homecoming and Centennial Day was observed at North Park church, Indianapolis, October 1, with special services and an all-day program, including a basket dinner in the church basement. E. L. Day leads at North Park.

—A $10,000 mortgage was burned at First church, Beaumont, Tex., where H. R. Ford ministers.

—T. L. Lowe is preaching a series of "Why I Believe" sermons during October at West Fourth Avenue church, Columbus, O.

—Edgar D. Jones, of First church, Bloomington, Ill., has begun a series of ten-minute sermons to children in the early part of the morning services.

Features of N. B. A. Annual Report

Best Year Financially.

The year 1915-1916 stands out in the records of the National Benevolent Association as, by far, the best year financially in all of its thirty-one. The brethren have been unusually prosperous and, to their credit, have shown a willingness to share their prosperity with their less fortunate brothers and sisters. The total amount received from all sources and for every purpose during the year is $202,385.94. This is a gain over the largest offering received in any previous year of $66,573.75. The most encouraging thing about this splendid increase is the fact that it is general, affecting every source and every fund, as, for instance, the amount received from churches shows a gain of $4,828.08; from Bible schools, $5,611.01; from fees and trust funds, $6,310.72; from annuities, $8,300; and from individuals, $32,938.

A Gain With a Slight Relief.

Gratifying as the gain in this year's reecipts has been, it has not greatly relieved the pressure of the association's financial need, for the reason that quite a large amount of the sum received was in funds not available for immediate use; for instance, $20,650 was received on account of annuity (these funds must be held during the lifetime of the annuitant); $10,300 was received in real estate for a new institution; $6,700 was deposited with the association by persons entering its homes as a trust fund; $12,000 was given for the erection of a new building; $6,466.66 was received in interest-bearing securities, maturing in the future; and $170.77 was received on account of endowment; making a total of $56,287.43. While this substantial sum will ultimately contribute to the enlargement of the association's work, it brings no immediate relief. The fund available for the support of the institutions represents about $125 per capita for the members of the association's family.

Our Best Easter Offering.

The most important dependable single source of the association's income is the Easter offering from the Bible schools. The young people were the first to answer the orphan's cry and they have been the most constant in the support of this beautiful ministry. The amount contributed to this fund this year is $30,252.12, a gain over last year of $3,945.92. No gain is more gratifying or means more to the work of the association.

The Best in Donations.

There is nothing new to be said about the donations except that they were never so numerous, they were never more varied, they never had greater value, they were never more expressive of a truly Christian spirit.

Reduction in the Cost of Administration.

The problem of keeping the cost of administration down to the minimum consistent with efficiency has always been one of keen concern to the executive board of the association. It is a well recognized fact in business that the percentage of operating cost is always higher in a small concer nthan it is in a large one. The association has been no exception to this rule. We rejoice in the fact that, with the cost of another institution added and a gain in the association's receipts of $66,573.75 for the year, the increase in the cost of operation was only $334.98. This percentage of reduction in the cost of operation is no doubt due to the fact that the churches are giving this work of mercy and relief a place along with the other great activities of the brotherhood. A gratifying number have given the widow and the orphan a place in the Budget.

Homes Free of Debt.

The year which has just closed will stand out in the history of the association as the one in which nearly all of its institutions were finally freed from debt. The Christian Orphans' Home, Saint Louise, the Home at Cleveland, Ohio, the Juliette Fowler Home of Dallas, Tex., and the Northwestern Home at Walla Walla, Wash., have all been handicapped for years with an indebtedness on their respective properties. These have all been paid off, except a mortgage of $8,000 at Walla Walla.

A New Home for the Aged.

The Massie Home for the Aged is the latest addition to the National Benevolent Association's already large family of institutions. March the 15th, 1916, was the time and Long Beach, Cal., the place of its birth. This home has come into existence in response to an insistent de-

THE ANNUAL HOME MISSION OFFERING IN THE BIBLE SCHOOLS IS THE SUNDAY BEFORE THANKSGIVING IN NOVEMBER
"Farthest North-Alaska" is the exercise. All supplies will be sent free upon request
ROBT. M. HOPKINS, Bible School Secretary, American Christian Missionary Society, Carew Building, Cincinnati, Ohio
A Missionary "Farthest North" challenges our Bible Schools in their giving to go to the Farthest Limit!

mand from our churches. Its opening was made possible by the gift of L. J. Massie of a piece of property valued at $10,000.

The Christian Church Hospital Realized.

The association takes very great delight in announcing, as the greatest single achievement, in the field of benevolence, among the Disciples of Christ, the opening on April 11, 1916, of the great building of the Christian Church Hospital of Kansas City. While not a part of the association's work, as are its other institutions, this hospital was started, fostered and made possible by officers of the association. It was started more than five years ago under the leadership of Mr. J. W. Perry, president of the association. Stimulated with a gift of two hundred thousand dollars by Mr. R. A. Long, vice-president of the association, an endowment fund of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars was secured by popular subscriptions, largely from Kansas City people. After these years of patient toil, the building has been erected, furnished and opened to the public. It represents an investment of approximately $40,000 for grounds, $60,000 for equipment, $150,000 for endowment, $200,000 for building, or a total of $450,000. It is a model of its kind and for its purpose. To quote the late Dr. Murphy of Chicago: "For location and appointment it is not surpassed."

J. H. MOHORTER, Secretary.

—A Hopkinsville, Ky., daily says of J. N. Jessup, resigning pastor at First church, Hopkinsville: "Mr. Jessup's presence in Hopkinsville has been at all times an influence toward the things that are pure and just and noble."

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—R. H. Crossfield, of Transylvania University, made the address at the annual graduation exercises of Central church, Lexington, Ky. About fifty students received diplomas and 150 certificates were awarded.

—R. A. Bennett, pastor at First church, Washington, Ind., has resigned this work to accept a position as secretary of the extension and educational department of the Indianapolis Social Service Association.

—During the two years of W. D. Endres' pastorate at Quincy, Ill., there have been 150 persons added to the membership.

—Jas. T. Nichols, of Iowa, has planned another trip to Europe, and expects to sail from New York, October 21.

—J. H. Crutcher has resigned from the pulpit at Burrton, Kan.

Over 600,000 Copies Have Been Sold

The Best Story

the author of "The Eyes of the World" has yet written Clean, wholesome, uplifting—a story of manhood

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN

By Harold Bell Wright

Cloth 12mo $1.35 Leather $1.85
Illustrations and Decorations by the Author

A story of the real heart of the life of the unfenced land of ranch and range of Northern Arizona. While the pages are crowded with the thrilling incidents that belong to the adventurous life depicted, one feels, always, beneath the surface of the stirring scenes the great, primitive and enduring life forces that the men and women of this story portray.

Also Just Published—Popular Edition—1,000,000 Copies
Harold Bell Wright's Great Novel That Broke All Records
The Eyes of the World—Selling at 50 Cents

You should see the Clune Film Producing Co.'s Premier Production of 'The Eyes of the World," visualizing the story in a Cinema-Film Entertainment

Mr. Wright's Allegory of Life "A literary gem that will live" The Uncrowned King Cloth 50 Cents Leather $1.00

Other Novels by the Same Author

That Printer of Udell's—The Shepherd of the Hills—The Calling of Dan Matthews—The Winning of Barbara Worth—Their Yesterdays

THE BOOK SUPPLY COMPANY, Publishers
E. W. REYNOLDS, President 231-233 West Monroe Street, CHICAGO

The How OF THE International Graded Lessons

Three Books

that will help you

The General Manual

Tells how to introduce the Graded Lessons in all departments. For Superintendents, Pastors, Teachers, etc. 50 cents, postpaid.

The Primary Manual

Tells "how?" for the Primary Department. For Primary Superintendents and Teachers. 50 cents postpaid.

The Junior Manual

Tells the way to success in graded teaching in the Junior Department. 50 cents postpaid.

Disciples Publication Society
700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

Hiram College Notes

Under the efficient coaching of Prof. B. J. Haggard, our football team is making new records for Hiram. Following the defeat of Western Reserve, 7 to 0, the team made a clean sweep of the Oberlin lineup, 61 to 0, the worst defeat suffered by the big school in recent years.

Between fifty and sixty of the new students have placed their membership with the Hiram church this fall. Pastor Pounds reports this the banner year for student co-operation in all the activities of the church.

An analysis of the enrollment shows: Post-graduates, 2; seniors, 41; juniors, 46; sophomores, 82; freshmen, 112; subfreshmen, 25; music only, 3; total, 311. Men students, 172; women, 139. From Ohio come 225; Pennsylvania, 20; New York, 17; Indiana, 9; Michigan, 7; California and Maryland, 4 each; Canada and New Jersey, 3 each; Illinois and Missouri 2 each; the others distributed among various states from Minnesota to Texas and Japan. Thirty-two men state their decision for the ministry, twelve students for the mission field and seven others for Christian service of some kind; 49 in all in training for the service of the church.

Mr. J. O. Newcomb, who has served for eleven years as secretary and treasurer of the college, has leave of absence for a year, beginning November 1. He will reside in Cleveland and engage in business which may take him permanently from the service of the college. He has been a most valuable man, and we shall not easily find a man to fill his place.

The growth of student attendance in the college has been close to 100 in two years. Every classroom is occupied to its capacity nearly every recitation period. Bowler Hall and Miller Hall, ladies' dormitories, are filled, and the hotel building, now known as Hinsdale Hall, is also filled with women students. A new Science building is an imperative and immediate need, as is also a modern men's building.

An Ohio woman has recently made a gift to the college on the annuity plan, which makes her total gift $9,000. She states that she believes her discovery of the annuity plan and her investment in it has added ten years to her life by relieving her of the care of property and at the same time giving her secure and large income during her lifetime.

C. O. REYNARD.

* * *

—Lloyd Darsie has resigned from the pastorate of Hollywood church, Los Angeles, Cal., his resignation to take effect in three months. Mr. Darsie has served for four years as president of the Hollywood Preachers' Association.

—F. Lewis Starbuck, pastor of Howett Street church, Peoria, and grand chaplain of the Odd Fellows, gave an address at the annual meeting of the Central Illinois Odd Fellows Association, held at Cuba.

Write

For Our Special Introductory Offer on

"THE CONQUEST"

Our attractive weekly for adult and young people's classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

Hymn Boards
Register Boards
Collection Plates

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company
MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

POCKET S. S. COMMENTARY
For 1917, SELF-PRONOUNCING Edition on Lessons and Text for the whole year. Right-to-the point practical HELPS and Spiritual Explanations. Small in Size, Large in Suggestion and Fact. Daily Bible Readings for 1917, also Topics of Young People's Society, Motto, etc. Red Clo. 25c, Mor. 35c, Interl. for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, MONON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

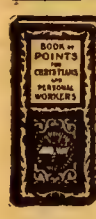
750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c. Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.



BOOK OF PRAYERS
Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Bible Readers and Christian Workers Self-Help Hand Book
Short and plain articles by nearly 100 experienced Christian writers. Just the Help over hard places you have been looking for. How to lead, teach, testify, pray and grow. Young Christians helper, experienced workers' guide. Pkt. size, 128 pgs., Red Cloth, 25c, Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wntd.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BOOK OF POINTS
AND TESTIMONIES for use of Christians and Workers in all meetings. Answering Objections, Excuses or Doubts. Helps for leading and taking part in Prayer Meetings and in giving personal Testimonies. Better understanding of hard places in Scripture, etc. Full of practical suggestions. Don'ts for Workers when dealing with Inquirers. Cloth 25c; Morocco, 35; Agents wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders:
Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

THERE ARE 1000 MEN

BETTER THAN GOLD

is the good fellowship to be found in our_____Bible Class. We meet every Sunday at_____o'clock at THE_____CHURCH

_____

_____

COME AND SEE US NEXT SUNDAY

In your town who do not attend the Sunday School because they do not consider Sunday School work a MAN'S JOB.

Get Your Men

By Using Our ATTENDANCE BUILDERS

President Wilson ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HERE'S WHAT HE SAYS ABOUT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

"No study is more important than the study of the Bible and the truths which it teaches, and there is no more effective agency for such study than the Sunday School. It is certainly one of the greatest factors in our lives in the building of character and the development of moral fiber. The Sunday School lesson of to-day is the code of morals of to-morrow."

WHY NOT LINE UP WITH WOODROW WILSON AND OTHER GREAT AMERICANS IN THIS SPLENDID WORK?

Come join one of our classes, which meet at the_____church, at _____o'clock Sunday.

PHOTO COPYRIGHTED BY HARRIS & EWING

Now Is The Time!

SEND 75 CENTS FOR 100 ASSORTED CARDS AND TRY THEM.

(Or send 10 cents for set of samples of the cards.)

IF YOU WOULD BE A SUCCESS AS A BUSINESS MAN--

--there is nothing better you can do than to get to work at The King's Business.

Many of this country's greatest business men are followers of the Man of Nazareth. Come join the _____ Bible Class.

We meet at_____o'clock every Sunday.

_____

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 East Fortieth Street Chicago, Ill.

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

A Paper That Readers Take Home.

The CONQUEST

Send for Sample Copy Today.

A Journal of Character Building

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK, Editor

For Adult and Young People's Classes and Christian Endeavor Societies

It Grips and Holds! Why?

The Conquest is an attractive paper. Gripping articles and stories have a place in each issue. The Good Cheer Club and "Chuckles" are delightful features.

The Conquest is an up-to-date paper. The articles used are not moss-grown. Its pages teem with facts of modern science and current history.

The Conquest is a useful paper in the work of the church. Its Sunday School page is unsurpassed. Its Christian Endeavor column is vital and suggestive.

The Conquest is a newsy paper. Its news is not merely small talk of Sunday-school attendance, contests, etc., but real news that builds up and helps. From four to six pages of each issue are devoted to news of churches, schools and Endeavor societies.

"Character Talks" form a unique feature of "The Conquest"

Send for Free Sample Copy.

Disciples Publication Society : : 700 E. 40th Street, Chicago

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII October 26, 1916 Number 43

Contemporary Ideals in Religion

By George Albert Coe

Some Pulpit Types

By E. B. Barnes

The Des Moines Convention

Editorial

CHICAGO

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII OCTOBER 26, 1916 Number 43

The New Hymnal

THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST ARE TO HAVE A NEW HYMNAL—THAT IS AN ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE HIGHEST IMPORTANCE.

A true hymnal is not a commodity, a piece of merchandise; it is the embodiment of the spirit of a people, their ideals and faiths and endeavors. The appearance of a hymnal may mark a new epoch in the church. If it interprets the way to richer fields of experience; if it gives voice to as yet unuttered visions and hopes; if it relates the Church definitely to the enthusiasms of the age in which the Church lives; if it frees Church worship from the dull routine of singing unmeaning songs which may have had meaning yesterday but do not appeal to contemporary intelligence; if it recalls the Church from the cheapening standards of a music-hall type of Christian song and sets up standards of poetic strength and insight and musical charm and glory—if it does these things a new hymnal may in fact begin a new era in a Church's history.

It is the belief of those of us who have had the privilege of examining in advance the pages of the new Disciples Hymnal—Hymns of the United Church—that this book will profoundly move the whole brotherhood of our people and that its character will win for it a wide use in the churches of other names as well.

★ ★

Considers the makers of this book.

Mr. Morrison, spiritually-minded, an artist by temperament, with a passion for music and song; now universally recognized as an apostle of reconciliation among all the scattered forces of Christ's Church. Dr. Willett, a scholar of the highest type, thoroughly human and sympathetic; alert to the practical needs of the Church today; with a heart that craves the companionship of every follower of the Master of all fellowships whatsoever. For a score of years it has been the earnest prayer of these men that there might come into all the churches a unifying spirit of good-will and brotherliness.

Are we not justified in expecting much of this hymnal which embodies the faith, hope and love of these gifted men?

★ ★

What an appropriate and suggestive title the book carries:

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH
THE DISCIPLES HYMNAL

A dual title, each portion interprets the other. The Disciples Hymnal is not a collection of hymns peculiar to the Disciples, as if our churches desired to sing by themselves in a little denominational corner. It is a collection of the hymns all Christians love, or will learn to love. In singing these hymns the Disciples join their voices in common praise with the multitude of those of many names who though sadly divided into sects nevertheless are spiritually one church, owning allegiance to but one Master. It is an interesting fact that as one reads the preface of the book he will be impressed with the feeling that the editors were not so much concerned about getting together a collection of hymns, as in endeavoring to breathe into the church a new spirit of unity and love. Note this paragraph from the book's preface:

> Next to the delight of soul found in working over and over these rich materials of poetry and harmony, the editors regard as of greatest significance their discovery through these hymns of a spiritually united church. Many creeds seem to melt together in the great hymns of Christian experience. A true Christian hymn cannot be sectarian. It belongs to all Christ's disciples. From many sources, far separated ecclesiastically, there comes one voice of common praise and devotion. It is from this perception of a united church existing underneath the denominational order, a church united in praise, in aspiration and in experience, and expressing its unity in these glorious hymns, that the title which this book bears was first suggested. Hymns of many creeds are here, interpreting, however, but one faith. It is our hope that wherever these hymns are sung the spirit of unity may be deepened and Christians be drawn more closely together as they draw near to their common Father in united worship.

★ ★

It is a gratifying fact that in the preparation of the hymnal the editors have not left out of this golden treasury of Christian song the better of the "gospel hymns" which editors of a purely academic point of view would have spurned. The book is high class but not "high brow!"

Modern minded congregations will take great delight in singing the hymns gathered together in the sections devoted to "Social Aspiration and Progress" and "Human Service and Brotherhood." There has never been published a hymnal which sounded forth so eloquently as this one the social note.

★ ★

Nothing is more fundamental in the making of a church's character than the quality of its worship; and a congregation's ideals of worship are disclosed by the hymns it sings. There is something pathetic in the confusion of mind that has for many years obtained among churches of Disciples as to standards of church music.

There is no doubt in the minds of those of us who have had advance glimpses of the pages of the new book, Hymns of the United Church, that the musical standards of our churches will be raised through the instrumentality of this hymnal and that a new vitality and richness will be felt in the worship of every congregation that adopts it.

THOMAS CURTIS CLARK.

EDITORIAL

HOW SHOULD A CHRISTIAN VOTE?

THE privilege of citizenship in a Republic brings great responsibility to a Christian man or woman. Some have grown hopeless over political conditions and have stayed away from the polls in gloomy disgust at the corruption and graft to be seen on every hand. These, however, have become the deserters of God's army. The place of a Christian is in the thick of the fight against evil.

The campaign this year has some fortunate features. The economic problems bulk less in political discussion than formerly. The human questions are to the fore. Perhaps the members of the late progressive party may claim a little credit for this.

It becomes clear that when the human question is to the fore, the Christian will vote for the uplift of the masses rather than for the aggrandizement of the few. The essential democracy of our Christian faith demands this.

The times demand something more than an interest in mere national politics. The international situation involves the United States, and our politics must henceforth take on world vision. The Christian ought to know what sort of a world he wants and how to get that kind of a world. He will vote on the convictions he has about the goal to be reached.

The political situation this year lacks clear-cut issues. Both leading candidates claim exclusive advocacy of certain important measures. If Bryan and Roosevelt were the opposing candidates, it would be easier to decide how to vote.

There are local situations that will doubtless lead many of the more intelligent and morally earnest citizens to scratch their tickets. In one city in the middle west, many non-socialists will vote for a socialist state's attorney, for there seems to be need of a house-cleaning, and only a socialist official could break up the bipartisan combine. There are also communities in which the prohibitionists offer candidates of attractive qualities.

The important thing in this election is that every Christian man should vote his best judgment for his country.

DISCIPLES AND THE WORLD CRISIS

DISCIPLES came into being in a crisis for religion. Sectarianism had done its worst in disorganizing the forces of Jesus Christ in the world and in bringing hatred where there should have been love. It was in those days of bitter sectarianism, when a Baptist would not buy groceries of a Presbyterian, that the Campbells undertook the proclamation of their message of the unity of all Christ's followers. Whatever success the Disciples have had has come from fidelity to this testimony. Their failures resulted from apostatizing from it.

We are now in a new world crisis. Artificial fences have been high between men. The human family has been divided by a false kind of patriotism and by foolish racial prejudice. It has followed blindly in the service of kings who fight not for their subjects but for their own glory.

But the crust of custom has been broken up by the world war. Following the war will come a period of reconstruction, in which there will be the chance for the idealist. Men will not wish to build on the old foundations. They will seek new and better ones.

It will be in this period that the Disciples of Christ will face a second great opportunity to preach their message of unity and fraternal love. The Christian religion is to be interpreted as a great binding tie for universal humanity. Instead of separating men into hostile camps, religion should usher in a truce of God.

The Disciples will need to be fully persuaded themselves about their testimony. It will not do to preach unity in Christ unless we possess it ourselves in fullest measure. Our loyalty to the Master must be above every kind of party loyalty.

For this great world mission, in which we shall join with the choice souls of every communion, we shall need the preparation of a new sense of God in our own souls.

FAITH IN OUR FELLOW-MEN

THERE was once an unhappy soul who was always suspecting his fellow churchmen of various delinquencies. Finding himself in error, he was forever making apologies and reparations. He seemed to find it harder to believe in his fellow-men than some poor souls do to believe in God.

Of course, it is not meant to affirm that the creed, "I believe in my fellow-men," involves a belief in the perfection of anyone. We see flaws even in our best friends. Human life is in process. None of us has outgrown entirely the dark instincts of jungle life.

The Christian believes in the salvability of humanity. The race is not hopelessly bad. Most of its evil is survival rather than degeneration. Jesus Christ had the insight to find good in the most abandoned people. He spoke to that good, and it always responded to Him. He did not utterly fail even with Judas Iscariot for the remorse of that unfaithful disciple has in it a pathetic testimony of love for the Master.

Faith in progress is only another form of faith in God. The significant progress of the world is that which relates to the enlargement of human life. The history of civilization is eloquent in its story of how God has led men out of evil into light and truth. Faith in progress is really faith in humanity.

Every doctrine of Christianity gives dignity to human life. A man is not a worm of the dust, but a son of God. He has been created but a little lower than God, the psalm-singer says. There is the God-like hidden away in every human heart. Because of this divine heritage of man we must always believe in our fellow-men.

We may fight the evil in men while believing that no man is a lost soul, but that every man has in him the hope of redemption.

WHY THEN DOES HE PREACH?

HE remarked in private conversation that he would not advise his son to enter the ministry. His own pastorate is in a city of considerable size and importance. His membership is large and loyal almost to a man to its pastor. Large congregations not exceeded by any in his community attend upon his ministry.

He has a free hand. There are practically no restraints to repress or control his message or handicap his administrative policies.

His message is modern and new to many hearers, but perfectly acceptable, or at least generously tolerated, by all his parishioners.

He preaches in a fine house of worship, a noble structure architecturally, and singularly well adapted by its appointments for practical Christian work. He is paid a good salary, quite as large as any other field would afford his particular qualities and equipment.

There are not a half-dozen citizens in the community—perhaps not a single one—who exercise leadership surpassing his. His declarations on religion, education and even politics, have great weight in guiding the thought life and the practical affairs of the people.

The loyal, generous, devout souls of his congregation continually bear him up to God in their prayers—as they do no other person in their community—and his livelihood is based not on commercial profits but on voluntary gifts of love, so systematized that he receives his salary without anxiety for the morrow.

Yet he would not advise his son to enter the Christian ministry.

Why then does he preach himself?

The Des Moines Convention

THE Des Moines convention should be reported and estimated from more than one point of view. From the point of view of attendance and the inspiration derived from the gathering together of a large number of churchmen to consider the work of Christ, this convention was a success and a delight. It is not known how many were present from outside Des Moines. The total registration of delegates and visitors was something over 3,000, but it is quite probable that as many as 5,000 or 6,000 persons were present all told.

The vast majority of this multitude was from Iowa. Our conventions are much more local in their attendance than is generally supposed. The number of delegates from states like Illinois and Ohio was in the neighborhood of 100 respectively.

The sessions were held in the Coliseum, a building more than twice the size needed. In spite of the vast distances of the building the addresses were fairly well heard by the audiences. The addresses were of a creditable order. There is a growing conscience on the subject of adequate preparation for taking part on these convention programs. Probably the highest point of enthusiasm was reached on the evening when Mr. S. G. Inman of New York and President Charles T. Paul of Indianapolis spoke on Latin America. They interpreted the vast opportunity for Protestant Christian work in the lands of South and Central America, Mexico and the Islands of the West Indies, and captivated the imagination of the convention by presenting a definite portion of the great work as the logical share of the Disciples of Christ in the whole Latin-American field. These speakers seemed to be talking in terms of vision and statesmanship. Their cause was strengthened by the fact that the Christian Woman's Board of Missions had reached the decision not many weeks ago to greatly enlarge its work in those regions and had issued a call for forty new missionaries to carry out their plans.

The program for the entire week was carried out as previously announced in THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY. It was not an extraordinary program and there were no surprises in it. It dealt mainly with the practical interests emphasized by the several organizations. For the first time in any of our conventions the tithing system was emphasized. This is significant. It would seem that the tithing principle should be restudied by our best minds to learn whether or not our missionary leaders are wise in the prominence they are giving to it.

There was a spirit of unity in the convention. For the first time in many years the delegates went up to Jerusalem without apprehension. There was no pre-convention tension. Nobody was being attacked, and there was no threat of any sort hanging over the gathering. This may account for the failure of the attendance to reach the expected mark, but if so, it speaks scandalously ill for many convention-goers in the past. At Des Moines there was a feeling that the whole company was practically of one mind on the issues that would arise.

As the register of the fruits of a year's missionary work the Convention was far ahead of all previous gatherings. The societies reported a total gain in receipts of $400,000 over the previous year. Two million dollars was the total amount collected for missions and benevolences last year. The Men and Millions Movement reported that $4,000,000 of the $6,300,000 had already been pledged. The Convention rejoiced in the enlargement of missionary and benevolent work made possible by these increases in the offerings.

There are other points of view from which the convention must be regarded as a disappointment. It was not a great convention in the real inwardness of its character. It marked no new epoch, as did Topeka, when Dr. Peter Ainslie, with prophetic statesmanship, set going a new movement for Christian unity, or as did Louisville when the constitution of the General Convention was adopted, or as did Toronto when the first session of the General Convention was successfully held, or even as did Atlanta, which had the honor of seeing the first vision of the Men and Millions Movement.

Except for the addresses on Latin America, by Mr. Inman and President Paul there was no great new task presented to the Des Moines convention, and with but few exceptions the addresses flashed forth no new and richer interpretation of Christian experience or the Church's duty.

No problems of missions were faced by the convention—save only the problem of getting more money. The educative value of having the whole convention deliberate on the problems faced continually by the mission boards was denied this convention, as it has been denied all our conventions from the beginning.

The General Convention was organized for just this democratic purpose of putting squarely up to the churches themselves the larger problems of missionary administration and policy and letting the churches, through their delegates assembled in a deliberative convention, find the solution and determine the course of future development. After four years of existence it was reasonably to be expected that some slight beginning of such an organization of our national gathering would be effected. But there has probably never before been a convention in which the secretarial office-holders kept the power so completely in their own hands, as at Des Moines. Practically no business was transacted. The program was kept filled with speeches—good speeches. The only form in which business came before the convention was that of reports, presented with inspiring and reassuring eloquence. The whole stage was set so that the only thing to do with these reports was to approve them and re-elect the men who made them. It is amazing that so democratic a people as the Disciples of Christ will tolerate for so long so undemocratic a manner of transacting the affairs of the Kingdom.

Even the sessions devoted to the business of the General Convention itself—as distinguished from the sessions of the various missionary societies—were lacking in significance. In the first place, the General Convention was crowded into a corner. It had two sessions—one the evening of welcoming felicitations when President Richardson made a good, sensible, but not aggressive, statement of the purposes of the General Convention; and a single hour on Saturday morning for the transaction of business which was extended to an hour and a half by beginning a half-hour earlier than on other days.

No serious business could in the nature of the case be transacted under the pressure of such time limitations. To discuss any motion made a man feel like a robber. What action was taken was done so mechanically as to be spoiled of half its significance, if indeed it was not left open to ambiguous interpretation.

* *

Take the resolution authorizing the Executive Committee of the General Convention to confer with the boards of the various societies as to the modification of their constitutions so as to integrate them into one General Convention instead of a series of independent conventions. Here was a nice, clean-cut proposal, the vote on which would reveal the sentiment of the convention on an issue which everybody except three or four office-holders of the societies supposed to be settled long ago, and reveal it so unequivocally that even these three or four officials would be able to understand it. It was carried with absolute unanimity, and without discussion. Afterward a motion made by Rev. Z. T. Sweeney to make the editors of our national church papers members of the council which is to make the adjustments between the Convention and the societies was put, and the house unanimously passed it, not being able to see how it might afterward be used to blunt the point of the previous motion.

It is plain to one whose standard of judging a convention is outside of the convention itself that this was not a prophetic gathering. It was essentially pragmatic. It had to do with immediate tasks more than with formative ideals. More emphasis was put on getting more money than on creating a vision for spending it. No such address as, for instance, that of Dr. Chilton at the Louisville convention four years ago, was heard at Des Moines. Men sensitive to the subtler tendencies of the convention could not help discerning the influence of some repressive force upon the minds of the leaders. The thousands present looked to Dr. Cory of the Men and Millions Movement, to President McLean of the Foreign Society and other such men for positive forward-looking utterances. These men brought nothing.

One cannot help regretting that the brotherhood of Disciples is not getting the testimony of the real soul of these men and others like them. They are engaged in making the wheels of their enterprises go round. If in order to raise six million dollars Dr. Cory has to lose the free, independent, creative leadership in the realm of spiritual things which characterized him on his return from China six years ago, it will be too high a price for his brethren to pay.

Abram E. Cory, free, is worth more to the Disciples of Christ than six million dollars!

The Disciples are steadily growing more liberal, more tolerant, more unafraid of progress, more willing to follow truth wherever it leads, more devoted to Christ. The consensus of sentiment in the Des Moines convention was of that sort. But the army is in advance of its leaders. The repressive influence that operates to check the true leadership of the leaders is not the reactionary journal that has agitated our councils for twenty years. The impotence of that agitation is now generally well known.

Perhaps the influences that seem to blight the fine flower of prophetic utterance arise out of the big practical enterprises we have on hand just now, like the Men and Millions Movement. To "put across" a great undertaking like this, it is assumed, requires that every man connected with it shall, for the time at least, put a clamp on his soul and speak only those things others have spoken before him. Practical responsibility always produces caution. This is a possible diagnosis.

But we are convinced that there is a subtler influence at work in the hearts and councils of our employed leaders, an influence arising from a source both generous and arbitrary, if not self-seeking, at once amiable and sinister.

If the Disciples of Christ are to bear their testimony to the high spiritual ideals for which God prepared them, they must be kept a free people, unbribed, ever holding truth and ideals far above mere success.

CONVENTION PUBLICITY.

AGAIN is heard the annual complaint on account of the failure of the General Convention of the Disciples of Christ to receive any kind of satisfactory treatment in the daily press. Dr. W. T. Moore called the subject up at one of the sessions, but the tiny half hour or so set apart for the transaction of the business of a great brotherhood of a million and a quarter people was already nearly filled.

Dr. Moore's suggestion for the appointment of a publicity representative was acknowledged, but impatiently passed over.

Since leaving Des Moines we have heard many echoes of Dr. Moore's complaint. The local press in the Iowa city gave a very fragmentary and not at all dignified account of a convention that brought more people to Des Moines than any other kind of attraction draws to that city from year end to year end, excepting, perhaps, only the state fair.

The metropolitan press of the country published hardly more than one little telegram, saying simply that there was a convention going on and that it was largely attended. But no report of the great work of the past year, with the unprecedented amount of two million dollars raised for missions and benevolences, was given, nor was any interpretation of the problems and issues facing the convention set forth.

We have at hand a communication from Mr. Paul Moore, of Washington, D. C., which states the fact of the case very well:

Editor THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY: What sort of publicity the Des Moines convention had in western daily papers I know not, but in the east it has been nil. I have seen two little telegrams taking about three inches of space.

On the other hand, the Episcopal convention has had big space in eastern papers. Even a small town daily, such as in Cumberland, Md., has had good reports.

I have called attention before to this failure of ours to get adequate publicity. Other churches put money and brains into this. The Methodists had a "rumpus" with the Associated Press a few years ago and then appointed and paid their own men to take care of publicity. Even their Board of Temperance and Public Morals has a "research secretary," located in Washington and publishing monthly a sheet for the use of the general press. The Episcopalians, who are already well organized, are talking of a regular publicity bureau. With us everybody's business is nobody's. And we are missing great opportunities.

PAUL MOORE.

We believe such a press representative should be appointed. One illusion ought to be removed, however. Our lack of space in the public press is not due wholly to the lack of such a functionary. It is chiefly due to the fact that our conventions, beyond a statement of the bare fact that there is a convention, and that so many thousand persons are present, are not transacting business that is of public interest.

We let our secretaries and mission boards run our business for us while we sit in convention and passively listen to speeches.

When the secretarial autocracy gives way to a democratic method of doing the business of these 10,000 churches of ours, our conventions will have vitality and reality enough to be regarded by the press as having some news value.

A LOST OPPORTUNITY.

IT SEEMED odd to see the name of Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago on the program of the Des Moines convention for an address on Christian union. In all the land there is probably no man whose way of thinking on this subject is farther removed from the Disciples' way of thinking. Dr. Mathews is a denominationalist, not alone by custom and tradition, but in his philosophy. He can probably make a smarter defense of the sectarian order than any other living man. His attitude toward Christian union is the characteristic Baptist attitude, plus a well seasoned apologetic for it.

Those who assume, as probably did the committee which invited Dr. Mathews to speak at Des Moines, that because he is president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ he is therefore a leader in the cause of Christian unity, would have been disillusionized had they ever read his position as stated by him in certain periodicals or heard his address before the Baptist Young People's convention held not long ago in Chicago.

One could have wished for a great address on Christian unity at the closing session of the convention in Des Moines. The thousands of people present were disappointed at not having a fresh and convincing interpretation of the movement which more than anything else represents the essential Disciple ideal.

Next to such an interpretation by an advocate of out-and-out unity, the convention would have welcomed an address clearly and unequivocally on the other side of the question.

Dr. Mathews would have pleased his audience better by frankly opposing its traditional conviction on the subject of Christian unity than by the gingerly and more or less ambiguous talk he made.

He could have given us something to think about until the next convention, if he had tried.

GOVERNOR CLARKE AND DR. MEDBURY.

GOVERNOR GEORGE W. CLARKE of Iowa, a life-long Disciple of Christ, made a magnificent address on the opening night of the General Convention, welcoming the Convention to Des Moines. It was not a perfunctory felicitation. It was a studiously-prepared address, delivered with the passion of a prophet conscious that he has something weighty and urgent to deliver.

It marked one of the very few times when the Des Moines convention program rose above the level of routine utterances.

The central thesis of the address was liberal and progressive, radically so. Probably no "liberal" minister or teacher in the ranks of the Disciples would go so far in identifying Christianity with ethical love toward God and man as did Governor Clarke.

But the address was received with great favor and round on round of applause.

Afterward hundreds crowded to the front to thank the Governor and approve his words, among them men of supposedly widely varying shades of religious opinion. None was more enthusiastic in his congratulations than Dr. Medbury, the beloved pastor of University Place Church, Des Moines. Dr. Medbury not only told Governor Clarke of his joy in hearing the address, but communicated it to many others as he passed out of the hall.

But the fact had already begun to circulate itself about the Convention that Dr. Medbury had declined to accept the committee's assignment of a certain distinguished visiting pastor to preach in his pulpit on the following Sunday morning, on the ground that this pastor (no, he does not live in Chicago) had a reputation not strictly orthodox.

It is safe to say, however, that this brother minister would have delivered a much more orthodox message than that which Dr. Medbury commended with unrestrained approval in the case of Governor Clarke.

In mentioning these things at this time, it is quite apart from our purpose either to give a partisan interpretation to Governor Clarke's address or to reflect on Dr. Medbury's sincerity. Yet we cannot help expressing our disappointment in Dr. Medbury. At one of the sessions he deeply moved us all by his prayer that God would "take from our hearts every petty, partisan, and unbrotherly thing." Such a plea would seem to indicate that his own soul had wholly passed out of the stage of theological prejudice which a decade ago narrowed his sympathies and perceptibly hindered his work as a pastor of college students. Many of his brethren who have thought they saw in his later ministry tokens of an enlarged vision and a sympathetic understanding of, if not an agreement with, the point of view of modern men, were pained on hearing of his unbrotherly attitude toward the minister assigned to his pulpit.

But all of this is not now our point. Our reflections have led us to wonder whether our guardians of orthodoxy know, after all, what it is they are guarding, and what it is they are guarding against.

Contemporary Ideals in Religion

A Portion of a Paper Recently Read at the City Club, Chicago

By GEORGE ALBERT COE

Professor, Union Theological Seminary, New York

IF you had asked an Athenian in the age of Pericles, "What are the religious ideals of Athens?" he would have had not the slightest difficulty in replying. For Athens was the state and the state maintained in the Eleusinian Mysteries an annual revival of religious consciousness. Here the youths who had reached an appropriate age gazed for the first time upon certain sacred objects, and upon a solemn drama symbolical of the soul's progress, while from the lips of the hierophant fell instruction concerning the ideal meaning of life.

When we endeavor to say what are the religious ideals of our own people we are in no such happy situation. America is not the state. America has no hall of sacred mysteries, no initiation of its youths into an American conviction as to the destiny of man. There is no American church, and there will be none. The spirit of America speaks in no creed of its own, through no priestly voice. It is rather a certain ethereal essence that thrills our souls when we meet one another simply as citizens. Of it we may say:

> There is no speech nor language;
> Its voice is not heard.
> Yet its line is gone out through all the earth,
> And its words to the end of the world.

The audible voices of religion are not one, but many; we have not a church, but churches, and these are contrary, the one to the other. Possibly some future historian, free from all our biases, will see in our sectarianism a real unity, a spiritual division of labor. Let us hope that we shall yet discover that each of our sects is but laying a separate stone in a single temple of the spirit. But to us of the present, trying to understand ourselves, and to be true to ourselves, the ideals of our religious bodies are contradictory, irreconcilable. Our America is the scene of a warfare of the spirit.

ARE WE NOT ALL SECTS?

I state this conclusion at the outset, in advance of the evidence, partly in order that the evidence may be the more sharply scrutinized, and partly in order that there may be no illusion as to what is involved in our assumption that we are competent to scrutinize religious ideals. Are we sure that our present scrutinizing attitude does not already contradict some of the ideals that we are sure to meet? We are assuming—are we not?—that the religious divisions of our populace are so many sects, each of which we regretfully see going on its own way. We desire that all of them shall discover some common or inclusive principle, following which each may contribute to the unification of American purpose.

If, indeed, these sects would acknowledge themselves to be sects; if each one would seek to transcend itself in some inclusive truth or purpose; if ecclesiastical institutions understood themselves to be subject, as individuals are, to the spiritual law that he who seeks to save his life loses it—then the search in which we are at this moment engaged might regard itself as non-partisan and judicial.

THE SPIRIT OF PRIDE

But what if our religious divisions should deny that they are sects? What if each one should say, "I have already settled the question that you are ultimately interested in, the only possible basis for the unification of the spirit of America is that which I prescribe"? Then, in truth, our condition would be that of spiritual warfare, and at once the problem would arise whether any genuine neutrality is possible, whether we have not already taken an unneutral attitude by beginning this inquiry.

As the neophyte who sought admission to the temple at Eleusis was required to declare that he was intelligible of speech and pure of hand, so we who now agree to gaze upon the holy things of one another's faiths may well require of ourselves both high sincerity and absolute frankness with one another. This places upon me an obligation to confess that the spirit in which I survey our contemporary ideals permits me to doubt whether any religious group among us is more than a sect. I assume the liberty of questioning whether any ecclesiastical body has committed itself in word and act to any ideal that can possibly be the rallying center for the spiritual aspirations of all America. If, now, there be neighbors of mine who would declare against me any spiritual penalty for raising this question; if any be found who insist upon prescribing my conclusion in advance and regardless of what I can observe—if there be such persons, I take them, and the ideal that they represent, to be most sectarian of all, least capable of uniting our divided souls.

SUBMISSION DEMANDED

It is because I find ecclesiastical groups requiring of one another submission rather than mutual self-transcendence; it is because there are religious ideals that cannot incorporate into themselves the freedom that I am at this moment assuming—it is for these reasons that I am obliged to regard the spiritual life of America as a warfare of the spirit. And because I must in this discussion assume unqualified freedom of religious inquiry, it has seemed to be the part of neighborly frankness to invite you to judge for yourselves whether this makes me, also, a sectary.

Let me confess also without reservation that as I gaze on the divisiveness of our religious life there moves within me what seems to be a religious spirit that is larger, more inclusive than all fenced-in religion, even the spirit of America—nay, of something larger than America. I worship the God, not of a religious institution, not of a nation, not of a part of history, but of the whole, even the God who, breathing himself everywhere into the human clod, makes it a spirit, a social craving, even the spirit of humanity, yes, the spirit of a possible world society. I bow my spirit before the spirit of the world democracy that is to be.

HOW FIND THE CHURCHES' IDEALS?

How shall we know what are the ideals of our churches? Shall we go to their formulated creeds and confessions of faith? These symbols of faith were constructed for the most part in earlier generations, before the problems of society could be seen in the perspective that is inevitable to us. In particular, you will not find here the concepts that are current in our aspirations toward democracy.

> Lo, where his coming looms,
> Of Earth's anarchic children latest born,
> Democracy, a Titan who hath learned
> To laugh at Jove's old-fashioned thunderbolts,—
> Could he not also forge them, if he would?
> . . . . . .
> King by mere manhood, nor allowing aught
> Of holier unction than the sweat of toil;
> In his own strength sufficient; called to solve
> On the rough edges of society,
> Problems long sacred to the chosen few,
> And improvise what elsewhere men receive
> As gifts of deity; tough foundling reared
> Where every man's his own Melchisedek,
> How make him reverent of a King of kings?
>
> —LOWELL, The Cathedral.

This problem of religion is simply unrecognized in the traditional forms of doctrine. We must look elsewhere if we wish to know what relation exists today between religious ideals and the ideals of democratic society. On the other hand, it should be remembered that creeds do not, for the most part, attempt to describe the good life. Rather, each creed represents a party vote on disputed questions of scripture and of history. Hence it comes to pass that upon the lips of many Christians there are symbols of Christianity that say not a specific word about the love that is the fulfilling of the law. Not in these ancient symbols shall we find the ideals by which men live.

THE MODERN REVIVAL

Is the meaning of religion in modern life revealed, then, in the intermittent geysers called revivals? To some extent it is. A great popular revival is a holiday of the spirit, a temporary release from the dullness of the economic grind. Here springs of tears and of laughter that have been going dry are unsealed. Here for the moment the individual mind, melted into a mass consciousness, basks in the freedom of irresponsibility. By these processes many a man is released from the iron bands of evil habits. Here, helped by social stimulus, men acquire moral courage and momentum. Loyalties of no mean quality displace for a time, frequently for a lifetime, the petty will that had developed in the individual's narrow round. Common morality and traditional conceptions of religious duty are uniformly preached in revivals.

But if we ask revivalism to show us what is to be done with the tremendous social and anti-social forces that swirl around us, its voice grows feeble. If we ask it how America shall attain to the spiritual wholeness toward which she strives to lift her eyes, revivalism becomes dumb.

THREE SOURCES OF INFORMATION

There are three sources of information as to religious ideals, however, upon which, in conjunction, we may rely with some confidence, namely: the expenditures of religious bodies, the content and method of religious education, and declarations of religious bodies when they are confronted with the social problems of the day.

Let us begin with expenditures; for where your heart is there will your treasure be also! Here we come upon some things that are common to all the faiths. Religion means to all our people, among other things, regard for those who are in sickness and distress. However numerous and deep our differences may be, the Good Samaritan has our unanimous franchise. Expenditures for education indicate another tenet of all American religion. Every child of God must have opportunity for education. A third and vast item of expenditure is that for the maintenance of worship. Costly worship is practiced by all religious bodies, but the types differ so much that no single or brief statement of the ideals that are here seeking utterance can be adequate.

DOES PUBLIC WORSHIP AVAIL?

Some notion of the largeness of life and of its weakness; some acknowledgment of the majesty of duty and of human frailty; some hope of a social future greater and better than the present; some feeling of a divine presence in these convictions of largeness and majesty and progress—these things, all looking toward ideals, are always present. But what contribution is being made by public worship to the spiritual unity of America or of the world? To enter some of our sanctuaries is to withdraw for the time being from America, struggling to become a soul, and to spend an hour in agreeable apartness. The portals of some of our temples swing between a vast and seething present, full of unsolved problems, and a reposeful past which in magnificent attire ever celebrates anew its own complete self-sufficiency. Yet here and there prophetic individuals, having caught glimpses of God, precisely in America's bewilderment about her own soul, cause the experience of worship, through prayer and sermon, to become a consecration to the great Spirit of Unity.

Still other vast sums are devoted to missions at home and abroad. What ideals does this expenditure represent? Mixed ideals, undoubtedly. The sentiment of pity, obedience to a command of Jesus, loyalty to a denominational enterprise, desire to extend one's own ecclesiastical organization—all these are here. But something more is here, something exceedingly vital. The modern foreign missionary movement started out as an effort to rescue individuals from sin by preaching; it is transforming itself into co-operation with the socially constructive forces of other peoples to the end that the level of whole civilization may be raised. Educative processes that form the social standards are becoming basal in missionary strategy.

ENLARGEMENT OF SOCIAL HORIZON

Moreover, the original intent to add new members to our own respective ecclesiastical bodies is being converted into the policy of transferring the control of native churches as rapidly as possible to the natives themselves, and of uniting in these churches the various denominational groups even though we still remain separate in our own land. Finally, the home base is undergoing reconstruction; we see the laymen of today meeting in great assemblies to consider the world situation under the assumption that the problem of a world religion is their affair. The enlargement of social horizon that is coming—that has already come—is a notable fact. Laymen are actually beginning to think their religion, even their personal religious life, in terms of a possible world society. After full reckoning has been made of ecclesiastical divisions and ambitions in mission work, and of mixed motives everywhere, the missionary enterprise of today must be recognized as a tremendous expansion and deepening of social ideals.

A source of information more trustworthy even than ecclesiastical expenditures is religious education. For when we teach the young we discriminate between what we are and what our ideal is. Education never says to children, "Be what we are," but "Be better than we are." Here we criticise ourselves, and pay something for preventing in future generations the faults of our own. This is our most practical idealism. Tell me what and how you teach the children, and I will tell you to what ideals you are really awake.

THE CHURCH AND MORAL TEACHING

What, then, are the churches teaching their children? All of the churches, to begin with, are teaching common morality. By this I mean both the "do nots" of the Ten Commandments and also the "do" principle of merciful kindness. Through the constant inculcation of these principles among more than fifteen millions of the population, mostly children and youth, the Sunday schools and other church schools have become a moral bulwark of incalculable significance. The public school, when it instructs and trains its pupils in morals, relies upon the open, continuous standard-setting done by the religious bodies. Imagine the plight of the public-school teachers if they could not rely upon such educational support.

Think what it would mean if the state should suddenly find itself the only institution whereby society introduces children to the moral wisdom of the race, the only one that sets about awakening the heart of the child, out of which are the issues of social life! The American system of education is not identical with the public schools. Our system includes the public schools and the churches as complementary, mutually supporting parts.

UNANIMITY AT ONE POINT

In the social ideals that control religious education unanimity will be found at one point, certainly. All religious bodies stand for the integrity of the monogamous family. But beyond this there is variation, and there is likewise much uncertainty. To say merely that common morality is inculcated leaves the story of ideals less than half told. For one and the same moral command may represent contradictory ideals. "Thou shalt not steal" is actually made to mean in our present life either "Hold as sacred the present law of private property" or "Revise this law fundamentally in the interest of humanity." "Thou shalt not kill" may mean either "Refrain from murder in the common-law sense," or "Take the commercial profit out of everything that depresses human vitality by accidents, disease, or overwork." "Love of neighbor" may mean either relieving distress, or removing the causes of distress, or the democracy of equal opportunity as against special privilege. Therefore, we must discriminate between the different social ideals that control religious education here and there.

It is noticeable that ecclesiasticisms of the exclusive types tend to set off the sacred from the secular, giving religion a sphere peculiar to itself, and thus saving it from excessive contact with the jarring ideals of society at large. I do not see how any exclusive ecclesiasticism can do otherwise. In an era of science one must not be infallible in too many things, and when laws depend upon the votes of the whole people, a particular church must not prescribe too much. But this results in the following paradoxical situation: Logically considered, every act of legislation is subject to an ethical test. In numberless cases ethical motives are actually appealed to on behalf of, or in opposition to, a proposed law.

THE VALUE OF HUMAN LIFE

This is true not only of laws that relate to vice and crime, but also to those that concern the social welfare, to say nothing of the fundamental rights of man. There is not an item in the law of contracts, there is not a business custom, that does not involve the ultimate question of the value of human life and the proper relations between man and man as persons. If I mistake not, some consciousness that this is so has begun to pervade the populace, and the masses are already seeking for a comprehensive principle and motive for social organization. But it must be pointed out that the religious bodies that most insist upon the possession of exclusive or unique authority for themselves or for their dogmas are the ones that have the least quarrel with the bisection of life into secular and sacred.

But Protestantism, in most of its bodies at least, reveals the presence of a contrary tendency. Most of the Sunday schools say to their children, "Here are, indeed, revealed truths that must surely be believed, but listen for God in your own heart, and then live from within outward." Now, this emphasis upon having a right heart brings these Protestants into a peculiar relation to social agitations that proceed from the heart. On the one hand, some of the leaders, holding that social service and social reconstruction are not religion, have insisted that the old slogan, "Get right with God," is sufficient for the church. But other leaders, pointing out that Jesus made love to God and love to men a single principle, have replied that there is no way to get right with God except through active love, and that, consequently, the reconstruction of society into a brotherhood is the process of salvation.

A WORLD BROTHERHOOD

Thus it comes to pass that the missionary motive, with its world-outlook, has begun to fuse with the brotherhood-motive of our most daring humanitarianism. This fusion is already expressing itself in the Laymen's Missionary Movement and in the religious instruction of children. Not, perhaps, with the consistency of a fully matured policy, but yet with the inevitability of a life process, the new courses of lessons for Protestant Sunday schools have begun to focus life's ideals around the conception of a world-brotherhood. Further, the new methods of religious education include with entire definiteness the training of children in missions and social service as a single program.

What is the reaction of ecclesiastical assemblies when they face the problems of our distracted society? Do these assemblies use the dialect of a privileged or inert social class, or the intelligible speech of a genuine world-brotherhood? As in the case of missions, so here ecclesiasticism cannot yet be said to have realized clearly that it must lose its life if it is to gain the world-life toward which it aspires. Missions plus remedial philanthropy may be taken for granted; but social reconstruction both at home and in mission fields cannot as yet.

A "SOCIAL CREED"

Nevertheless the acknowledged motive of brotherhood has already produced some remarkable utterances concerning current social problems. For example, the Federal Council of Churches has united upon a "Social Creed" that faces in the spirit of brotherhood a rather remarkable catalog of our social conflicts. Underlying the whole is this declaration: "The Church does not stand for the present social order, but only for so much of it as accords with the principles laid down by Jesus Christ." This new confession of faith, taken in connection with parallel declarations by various denominational assemblies, makes it impossible to accept the assertion that is sometimes made that the churches are so many fortresses of social conservatism.

What would happen to our economic and political system if the spirit of brotherly love for all mankind should get control of it? The answer to this question will reveal the latent radicalism—and not altogether latent—that is in Protestant Christianity. There is, in fact, a large and increasing number of men and women whose religious convictions require the testing of every social regulation and custom by this question: "Does it build up the life of all the men and women and children concerned?"

A HUMAN BALANCE SHEET

Alongside the fiscal balance sheet there is demanded a human balance sheet that shall show the health and happiness and possibilities of character that go into industry and that come out of it. The clearer thinkers in Protestantism have seen that to be Christians they must insist that business become organized love. To this end they intend, as far as in them lies, to organize men of good will into a brotherhood that shall get control of law and administration and the natural resources of the earth.

These persons, and their number is growing, have the radicalism of those who are conscious of themselves as instruments of the loving will of God. Call this fantastic if you will. Say that men cannot love one another to any such extent. Say that men have individual rights or vested interests that they will never surrender. Nevertheless the fact remains that, with fresh and enlarged application, multitudes of men believe with intensity that "God is love," and that the law for our life, a law that must be put into all laws and institutions, is, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

SOLVING TODAY'S PROBLEMS

Do any of our religious ideals contain healing for the present world fever? The nations are writing, and crying, and striking at one another in delirium. Religion that supposed itself to be a monotheism of universal human significance turns out to be a collection of national religions, each with its own god of war. With their lips men had spoken of divine love and of human brotherhood; but men had not counted the cost of brotherhood, nor made their industrial institutions into instruments of brotherhood, nor trained their own spirits steadily to think of national boundaries or of diplomacy as so many opportunities for brotherly love. Brotherhood was a sentiment, a hope, an ethical fragrance; but the hand upon the throttle of the social engine of steel was not the right hand of fellowship.

Has American religion anything better to offer? We have pious desires for world peace, and for the permanent cessation of war. But how do our prayers differ from those of the belligerents, all of whom desire peace? Wherein is our religion any more of a guarantee of world brotherhood than theirs? Who are our brothers? Religiously considered, what are national boundaries? What constitutes national honor or vital interest, religiously considered? What is the flag to God?

STONES FOR GOD'S SPOKESMEN

All those who stand forth as spokesmen for God, assure us that he desires universal peace. "Surely," they all say, "the land of world peace floweth with milk and honey." But here the voices become confused. Most of them appear to be saying, "We are not able to go up against national selfishness and national self-will, those great giants, the sons of Anak. The land through which we have gone to spy it out is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof, and all the people that we saw in it are men of great stature; we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so were we in their sight." And one saith to another, "Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt." But a few of the forth-speakers for God use a different tone. "Let us go up at once," they say, "for we are well able to overcome. Fear not the people of the land. If only God delight in us, the God of the world-brotherhood, he will bring us into the land of world peace, and give it unto us."

Thus speak the few. But the congregation bids stone them with stones.

Help the Armenians

Some Sidelights on the Persecution of This Helpless People at the Hands of "The Unspeakable Turk" and Something as to the Plans Made for Their Relief

A WELL dressed but unassuming man walked modestly into the offices of the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City, one day early this month and inquired for the secretary. He named a middle west state as his home and said he had been thinking about making a contribution on "Armenian Sunday," to help the Armenian refugees in Turkey but had concluded, from what he had read in the newspapers, that money was badly needed then.

"I can give $5,000," he said, "but I would like to hear something about the facts."

The assistant secretary of the committee, Walter Mallory, summarized the situation in accordance with information which had been received in recent letters and cablegrams. One of the facts stated by Mr. Mallory is that there are about a million Armenian and Syrian Christian refugees in Turkey and Persia, largely women and children, nearly all of whom are destitute. Deported from their homes by Turkish soldiers, many thousands are suffering for lack of the bare necessities of life. Then he began to tell of sacrifices which contributors to the relief fund had made.

The visitor listened to the story of a minister in Ohio, who had written that, from a salary of eighty dollars a month, his wife and himself would contribute forty dollars a month for six months.

"Well," said the stranger, "if they can make a sacrifice like that I think I can give $10,000."

On the way to the office of Charles R. Crane, the treasurer, the donor was told of an old woman who wrote she had no money but would give her old paisley shawl—an heirloom which had been in the family many years and had once been her mother's. He listened also to a letter from the mother of a little girl, four years old, who had earned two cents sweeping the sidewalk. She wanted to give one cent to the Belgian babies and the other to the starving Armenians.

"If other people are willing to give up things," commented the stranger, "I ought to be willing to do the same. I think that every one ought to help save this old Christian race. I believe I can give $15,000."

Before he entered the treasurer's office the stranger seemed to make some mental calculations and when he wrote out his check it read $18,000.

"Under no circumstances is my name to be made public," said the stranger, so the treasurer, to keep faith, personally deposited the check in the bank.

ALWAYS A SUBJECT RACE

The condition of the twelve hundred thousand Armenians whose sufferings at the hands of the Turks recently moved President Wilson to proclaim a special day on which special offerings should be taken in churches, had always been unenviable under Turkish rule. They were treated as a subject race, and lacked the right of bearing arms, a status which, in a lawless country, left them peculiarly at the mercy of their individual Moslem neighbours. But there were advantages to write off against such drawbacks. Among a rather stupid, conservatively inclined Turkish population, their commercial genius gave them a virtual monopoly of trade, and a correspondingly large share in the wealth of the country. Hard-earned gains might often in individual cases be reft away by local tyranny; but the Armenian's gifts were really indepensable to his masters, and their general recognition of this fact was shown by the general toleration he received from them. In fact, the subject, Christian, intellectual Armenian and the dominant, Moslem, agrarian Turk had settled down into an effective, if rough and ready, equilibrium.

CONSTANTINOPLE AN ARMENIAN CITY

At Constantinople, the Armenian population had risen to more than 200,000, and there were nearly as many in Tiflis, the capital of Russian Trans-Caucasia before the recent massacre. Trans-Caucasia, in fact, with its orderly Christian government and its promising economic development, had become a second home of the Armenian race. The Katholikos, or head of the Armenian Church resides in Russian territory, at Etchmiadzin, and there were perhaps 750,000 Armenians on the northern side of the Russo-Turkish frontier.

Eight months ago, however, these represented a minority of the race, for about 1,200,000 still remained under Turkish rule. Rather more than half this majority was to be found in the original Armenia, east of the upper Euphrates and north of the Tigris. The rest were scattered through all the towns between the Euphrates and Constantinople. Their numbers were especially strong in the Adana district of Cilicia, a rich plain bordering on the northeast corner of the Mediterranean, while in the mountain fastnesses above the plain the hill towns of Zeitoun and Hadjin were flourishing centers of Armenian life.

—A. L. Ward is the chairman of a committee from the churches of Lebanon, Ind., which will promote a union tabernacle meeting in November. Some years ago Mr. Ward was the chairman of a "Billy" Sunday meeting at Boulder, Colo. The tabernacle at Lebanon will seat about 2,500.

The Disciples Hymnal Is

Edited by Charles Clayton M

More Than Five Years Given to Its Prepa
It Is the Hymnal the Churches
We Expect Also to

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

THE publishers regard this Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. A widespread and eager interest in the appearance of this notable work has been already manifested.

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH contains all the great hymns which have become fixed in the habits and affections of the Disciples, and adds thereto the great catholic hymns whose use by our churches has not been encouraged by previous compilers.

In addition, the new book is distinguished by three outstanding features:

Hymns of Christian Unity
Hymns of Social Service
Hymns of the Inner Life

These three features give Hymns of the United Church a modernness of character and a vitality not found in any other book. This hymnal is alive!

The editors have been guided by the purpose to produce a hymnal that will sing the very same gospel that is being preached in modern evangelical pulpits.

Great care has been bestowed on the "make-up" of the pages. They are attractive to the eye. The hymns seem almost to sing themselves when the book is opened! The notes are larger than are usually employed in hymnals.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,

Now Ready for Delivery

rrison and Herbert L. Willett

ation
Have Been Looking For
ell Thousands for Use in Christian Homes

The hymns are not crowded together on the page. No hymn is smothered in a corner. The words are set in bold and legible type, and all the stanzas are in the staves. Everything has been done to make a beautiful hymnal.

Aids to Worship

Supplementing the hymns are 100 pages of responsive Scripture Readings and other aids to Worship. The Readings are topically selected, and so arranged as to give naturalness to the responses. The American Standard Version is used. Orders of Worship, special forms for the communion service, and many prayers, responses and sentences topically arranged are in this department.

The Construction of the Book

The Disciples Hymnal is a delight to the eye and to the hand. A half dozen of the best hymnals in existence were taken to one of the best printing houses in the United States with instructions to make a better book than any one of them. No expense was spared. The plates were cast from new type specially purchased for this hymnal. The paper is the best and of good color. The binding is most attractive. Every device known to the binder's art has been used for the strengthening of the back. Old fashioned tapes have been replaced by cloth running the entire length of the back, and by reinforcements of the first and last signatures. The book is made to last a long time!

Price, per single copy, in cloth, $1.15; in half-leather, $1.40.

Especially attractive introductory terms to churches purchasing in quantities will be made in the early days of the first edition. Returnable samples sent to ministers and music committees on request. Write us today.

00 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

The President to the New Citizens

An Address Delivered at Chicago Before 8,000 Men of Many Nationalities Who Have Recently Sworn Allegiance to the United States

BY WOODROW WILSON

FELLOW citizens: I come here to address those who have newly sworn allegiance to the United States, but I realize that I cannot speak to them without also in some sense speaking to my own conscience, and to the conscience of every citizen of the United States.

The peculiarity of the people who have sworn their allegiance to the United States is that they chose to do so. Many of us were born citizens of the United States, we have been trained to that allegiance, but these selected the United States of all the world in order that they might attach their hearts and their fortunes to this republic.

REASON FOR MAKING CHOICE

I take it for granted, therefore, that they had some definite purpose in making that choice and that it will not be inappropriate for me to say what all of us must concede to be the duty of American citizens. There have been some unfortunate distinctions drawn among citizens of the United States and I want to say this thing to you:

A man or a woman who becomes a citizen of the United States is not asked or expected to give up his or her affection for the old people at home—is not expected to give up her or his pride in the great race from which he sprang. Because, as you need not be told, this nation is made up out of every nation in the world, and there is not a single national stock that has not great traditions, a great history to remember, a great history to be proud of.

NEW TIES ABOVE OLD

But what a man who comes to this country is expected to do is to put a new affection, a new allegiance above every other affection and allegiance.

He is expected to remember that his choice of citizenship is a very solemn thing which imposes a great obligation upon him for all the rest of his life, because, my fellow citizens, you have chosen to become members of the greatest self-governing nation—a nation whose people, whose order, whose strength, whose progress, and whose prosperity depend upon the conscience, the self-control, and the loyalty of its citizens.

That you have become citizens of a great self-governing nation does not mean that you can do anything that you please. It means, rather than that, that before anything you please you must put that which you ought to do.

Only by conscience, only by an allegiance felt in every throb of the heart for the great community which you have joined can you be worthy of citizenship to the United States and keep the sacred oath which you have taken.

AN HONOR SYSTEM

Because, my fellow citizens, in a free republic it is necessary for every man of us to be worthy of freedom. It is necessary for every man of us to be a thoughtful and capable representative of a republic, so that if we were trusted all by ourselves, without any president, without any governor, without any mayor, without any policemen, to be genuine Americans we could be trusted to be so.

A free, self-governing people is a people that does not have to be watched, it watches itself. In throwing in your lot with us, therefore, you have begun to take part with us in the most difficult thing that it is possible for men to do, namely, to think first of others and only secondly of themselves in the transactions of their lives.

URGED TO LEARN LANGUAGE

In order to do that you must be genuine, intimate members of the communities with which you have connected your lives, and you cannot do that unless you learn the language, study the history, understand the traditions, and love the principles of the United States.

A man cannot be connected in sympathy with people whose language he does not understand. He cannot take part in the great life of a nation like yours unless he knows what the basis of this great nation has been.

He must know what America has been in order to know what America is. Having known what America has been, he will get this breath of ambition in his lungs to take America forward along the trail that she has blazed for herself. And not only that, my fellow citizens, it is necessary that new citizens who come to this country should not live for themselves.

ALIENS MUST MINGLE

I am always sorry to see groups derived from particular nationalities separate themselves into little communities of their own—that is, importing their own communities into America, and not contributing themselves to the Americans.

You have got to see to it that you are real neighbors with the people who were here before you, and they have to see to it that you are accepted as real neighbors of theirs.

The strength of a nation, my fellow citizens, does not rest so much in its thinking as in its feeling. The heart of a nation is just as pure, just as warm, just as genuine as the hearts of its citizens, and outside of the heart there is no life.

Out of the heart springs the source of life and action, so that you must see to it that you do not hold aloof, that you throw in your lives with all your energy and all your spirit with the lives of the rest of them, and we must see to it that you are abundantly welcome and that we take pains to understand your problems as we have understood ours before you.

* * *

That is the object of noble institutions, such as the Neighborhood house, for example. I love to see men in great communities like Chicago know that their happiness and strength all depend upon their getting together and pulling as a single team.

One of the advantages which Chicago enjoys above some other cities in the United States is that she has the reputation of having community feeling; that men want Chicago to be a model city for the United States. I cannot say that I know of any city that has yet quite attained to the distinction of being a model community, but no city ever will attain to that distinction unless it covets that distinction and makes up its mind to get it.

AMERICA'S OPPORTUNITY

Not only must you be really part of the community with which you have thrown in your feelings, not only must you speak its language and think its thoughts, and be one of its neighbors, but you must remember that the United States has a great part to play in the world.

Can you imagine a nation more ideally situated to play a great part in the world? A nation made up out of the world ought to understand the world. No nation, I venture to say, constituted out of a single racial stock could undertake the task which the United States has undertaken—namely: to stand, not for hostile rivalry, not for the things which stir the antagonistic passions of mankind, but for the rights of mankind of every sort everywhere.

We are prepared, my fellow citizens, to understand other nations, because we are drawn out of other nations.

HEROES OF MANY STOCKS

Gov. Dunne was referring in feeling terms just now to the fact that among those lads who had to give their lives at Vera Cruz there were representatives of four of the national stocks of the world. But although they bore the names drawn from those stocks, they were Americans.

They were proud to wear the uniform of a nation which stands for the rights of mankind, no matter what the origin of men may be, and I like to think that in the days to come America may interpret the thought of the world. I like to think that the sympathies of the world are through her exemplified not only in thought but in action; and I like to think that the only thing that stirs America is not interference with her ambition, but interference with her sympathies, which are the sympathies of all human mankind.

BIG PROBLEM AHEAD

My fellow citizens, the days that are immediately before us, not only in America but so far as the world at large is concerned, are days when some of the fundamental rights of mankind must be redefined and re-established. The nations of the world must take counsel together in order that the rights of man may be safeguarded and advanced.

I like to think that when it comes to the culmination of the great struggle on the other side of the water we have no wish to have a part in determining what the settlement shall be between the nations at war. We shall be able to participate with them in interpreting the needs and arrangements of the future.

We ought to understand what every one of them wants because we come from every one of them. We ought to understand the German spirit because we are surrounded by fellow citizens of German origin. We ought to understand what the Irish want because at every turn we have Irish neighbors.

"AMERICA WILL UNDERSTAND"

We ought to understand the ambition of the English because so many of us come of the English stock. We know the French because so many of us are French. We know the Spaniard, we know the Italian, we know the Pole, we know the Hungarian, we know the Swede, for we are of those races.

Therefore, I think it can be taken for granted that the nations of the world need not fear that America will not understand.

Is it not a worthy ambition, and is it not an ambition directly in line with the traditions and legends of the republic? America was set up in order that men everywhere should know that here was a place where men who desired justice and freedom were welcome to come, and that, having come, they would be received as real brothers and partners in the common enterprise which was for the interest of all men of every kind.

WARNS AGAINST COVETING TERRITORY

Let us never forget that. Let us never allow ourselves to do the things which are contrary to those ideals. Let us never allow ourselves to desire a single inch of foreign territory. Let us never allow ourselves to question a single right of men who belong to other nations. Let us particularly charge ourselves with the responsibility of standing by the little nations that need to be stood by and show to all the nations of the world that we are not interested in the geography of politics, not interested where national boundaries lie, but interested only to see that there are no boundaries and frontiers to the rights of mankind.

I congratulate you, my fellow countrymen, my newly established fellow citizens, that you have come into this great heritage and tradition. I welcome you as I would welcome those whom I would personally accompany in this great enterprise of a free people.

I welcome you because I believe in you as I would have you believe in America. You are brothers with ourselves and one of the ambitions of America from the first has been to illustrate the brotherhood of mankind.

I have not come here, therefore, to read you a lesson or preach you a sermon or attempt to set you an example, but merely to bid you welcome to a great comradeship and partnership and to ask you to go along with me and all the rest of us in a triumphant illustration of the spirit of America in the service of mankind.

Familiar Pulpit Types

The Blind Pessimist, the Blind Optimist and the Statistician

BY ELLIS B. BARNES

THE first type with which we are familiar is the man who regards this age as the worst in all time. He sees the world on the down grade, headed for the abyss. He hangs his hopes on texts that seem to droop like weeping willows, and looks for comfort in predictions of gloom and midnight and disaster. When the expected calamity at last appears a shout goes up in camp that the "prophecy" has been fulfilled, that the end is a little nearer, that the night cometh. For such men there is a connection between the tragic event of today and the horn of the Beast, or a tent-pin in the desert. The inevitable is ever on the wing. The friends of this school hitch their fortunes to the misfortunes of the world. With their view of the Scriptures nothing can save the world from destruction but a cataclysmic interference of supernatural power. It must be destroyed before it can be saved. The worst is the best that can happen. It can be said in favor of a man of this type that he never has any troubles over the perplexities of modern scholarship. From Genesis to Revelation nothing is permitted but the most literal interpretations. The religious use of the imagination belongs to the schools of the Philistines, while poetic interpretations are a sure indication of an evil heart of unbelief.

* * *

Then we have the happy philosopher who rubs his hands gleefully when you deplore existing conditions. He fairly cackles over the good age in which we live. Everything with him is grand and glorious. The world is a huge apple pie, rimmed with perfect health and digestion and rugged appetite; a wine vat in which you can swim unless you are determined to sink; a garden wherein roses grow without a thorn. If you find fault with anything he reminds you that your liver is out of repair, and that you are a "knocker," or a "pessimist," or something else unlovely. He tells you with his fatherly hand on your shoulder that you and not the world need the corrective. He pooh-hoos your fears and dismisses your threnody with a jest. He is somewhere in the sixties, dreading the day when he will be laid on the shelf. Feeling that to face the facts of a cold and cruel world is to invite the easy taunt of pessimism, he cultivates the rosy eye that sees naught in the sky but a succession of rainbows, and in earth the New Jerusalem already set up.

* * *

But though he is useless as a factor in helping us to make the world better he is of value as a humorist, for his Pickwickian faith and hope are not to be despised. His fault is that he will not see the things that should be seen. He should belong to that popular sect which believes that what you hear is not so, and that what you see isn't there. When we think of our genial friend in the pulpit we are reminded of the Hindoo vegetarian, of whom Macaulay tells us, who was proclaiming the sin of destroying animal life. Some one showed him his vegetable diet under a microscope, but he answered all objections by destroying the microscope. Beware of that Hindoo! He will never do to tie to!

* * *

Then we have the matter-of-fact preacher who sees and has a genius for writing down what he sees. He is a keen observer, and tries to back up his observations with facts and figures. He makes all kinds of surveys and analyses. He is mathematics on foot, on the wing, on parade, on file, on tap. Figures dance through his mind in merry mazes. They trip the light fantastic in his dreams until the whole world is a-whirl with tables and statistics. If you knock at his door you need not expect to be admitted until you are loaded to the gunwale with facts, facts, facts. So far as moral conditions can be reduced to paper he reduces them, even though many influences and tendencies sidestep his pencil. We recognize some of these in the lowering or raising of moral standards, the indifference or the resentment toward evil doing, the acquiescence in sins that formerly shocked, or in our deeper repulsions from them, in the blunting or the quickening of our finer sensibilities. These cannot always be put under the microscope. But from our facts, figures, feelings, fears, failures, and our faiths, we may arrive at a tolerably just estimate of the world as it is. Evils must be recognized before they can be corrected. There are a hundred ways of killing a cat but shutting our eyes is not one of them. The highest training results in the ability to see things as they are. A genius is a man who sees the diamond in the carbon. The trouble with the illiterate is that they cannot see; the mind's eye has never been brought into contact with the light that is illumining the world of our day. "Having their eyes darkened" can be said of many, and is as fatal as the gift of seeing in false proportions. The good thing about this mathematical preacher is that he educates us in system, he conveys knowledge on which we may rest our feet when we attack evil conditions—such knowledge wings the words with power. To know whereof we affirm puts many a sermon into the class where "words are half-battles." This type of minister is very useful. He is a teacher of preachers.

* * *

Certain dangers adhere to these special types like shadows. Men of the first type are likely to discourage others with their doleful outlook. The world will be made to appear in a false light with the forces of evil in the lead. People feel that this can never be—if we believe that the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof. If He made it He will be its master. There must be encouragement and vision in the message of men of this type if they would win their hearers to their cause. No man can afford to be a Jeremiah all the time. There is a time to laugh and a time to weep.

The second type commands our mirth if not our respect. The world is too good to be true, according to his system of theology. If this is such a jolly world why should we strive or cry or feel the pangs of distress? His world is an illusion, a castle in the air.

The third type is likely to be mastered by his method which is always a fascinating one to the student. Where he first grasps the figures they may finally grasp him and tie him hand and foot. There are signs in the world for good and evil which slip through our schemes of precision like sunbeams through the trees. We can't set down on paper the result of a pistol shot in Europe. It was not only heard round the world, but under the earth and in the sky. It shook the pillars of the modern world. The imagination is likely to become atrophied as one steeps himself in facts and figures, as was Darwin's love of music. For him was written such lines as these:

> "Pictures in the sky do glow,
> When comes the artist's eye,
> And poems on the bushes grow,
> When Shakespeare passes by."

If God could use the ancient preachers who proclaimed the Gospel from base motives, and if the Apostle could rejoice that even by them the Gospel was preached, surely we can find a place in our esteem for the many types in the pulpit of today, even though some are of so much more value to the world than are others.

About the Armenians

THE LATE MASSACRE

The recent massacre in Turkey was concerted very systematically, for there is evidence of identical procedure from over fifty places in the Empire. They are too numerous to be detailed here and there is no object in multiplying the monotonous tale of horror, for the uniform directions from Constantinople were carried out with remarkable exactitude by local authorities. Only two cases are reported of officials who refused to obey the government's instructions. One was the local governor of Everek, in the district of Kaisarieh, and he was at once replaced by a more pliable successor. Nearly a million Christians were wiped out, and the plight of the million left alive moved President Wilson to proclaim plans for relief of these sorely persecuted people.

ARMENIANS CRAZED

An eyewitness of the deportation of Armenian women and children by the Turks describes the suffering there as follows:

"All the morning the ox-carts creaked out of the town, laden with women and children, and here and there a man who had escaped the previous deportations. The women and girls all wore the Turkish costume, that their faces might not be exposed to the gaze of drivers and gendarmes—a brutal lot of men brought in from other regions.

"The panic in the city was terrible. The people felt that the Government was determined to exterminate the Armenian race, and they were powerless to resist. The people were sure that the men were being killed and the women kidnapped. Many of the convicts in the prisons had been released, and the mountains around were full of bands of outlaws.

"Most of the Armenians in the district were absolutely hopeless. Many said it was worse than a massacre. No one knew what was coming, but all felt that it was the end. Even the pastors and leaders could offer no word of encouragement or hope. Many began to doubt even the existence of God. Under the severe strain many individuals became demented, some of them permanently."

Although last Sunday, October 22, was the day especially set by President Wilson as "Armenian Day" for offerings for the relief of this persecuted people, do not neglect to make Armenian Relief a matter for your church's continuous consideration for the next few months. Offerings should be sent to the officers of the American committee at 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Sunday School

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

Lesson for November 12

Golden Text: It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth. Romans 14.21.

Lesson, Romans 14.13-15.3.

Memorize verses 14.16,17.

14. (13) Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge ye this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock in his brother's way, or an occasion of falling. (14) I know, and am persuaded in the Lord Jesus, that nothing is unclean of itself: save that to him who accounteth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean. (15) For if because of meat thy brother is grieved, thou walkest no longer in love. Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died. (16) Let not then your good be evil spoken of: (17) for the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. (18) For he that herein serveth Christ is well-pleasing to God, and approved of men. (19) So then let us follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another. (20) Overthrow not for meat's sake the work of God. All things indeed are clean; howbeit it is evil for that man who eateth with offense. (21) It is good not to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor to do anything whereby thy brother stumbleth. (22) The faith which thou hast, have thou to thyself before God. Happy is he that judgeth not himself in that which he approveth. (23) But he that doubteth is condemned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

15. (1) Now we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. (2) Let each one of us please his neighbor for that which is good, unto edifying. (3) For Christ also pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me.

* * *

VERSE BY VERSE

By Asa McDaniel

13. Let us not, therefore, judge one another any more. This statement is made in view of what was said in verse twelve—Judge ye this rather. Determine this as your course of conduct. Stumblingblock—Something which is laid in the path.

14. I know, and am persuaded in the Lord Jesus. It is a rare arrangement of words, but used to inspire confidence and discourage against doubt. Nothing is unclean of itself. The Greek word literally means "common," as opposed to holy. Of itself—Of its own nature.

16. Let not your good be evil spoken of. Your Christian liberty should not be made the subject of criticism.

18. He that herein serveth Christ—The above statements generalized, those who serve Christ by being righteous and charitable are pleasing to God and man.

19. So then—Denotes the conclusion from former statements; see verses 17 and 18.

20. Overthrow not for meat's sake the word of God—Do not let your liberty with meats tear down the Christian community, which God has founded through Christ. The work of God—Represented in the Christian's character. Who eateth with offence—One who eats against his better judgment—his conscience.

23. He that doubteth is condemned if he eat—If his faith were strong he would have no doubt or hesitation. Whatsoever is not of faith is sin—Simply to comply with the custom of others, without conviction, is sin.

15:1. We that are strong—We that have no such scruples about eating meat. The weak—Those who have such ideas. We should be patient with them.

15:2. Unto edifying—The aim and end of pleasing them must be to build them up in Christian character. These words explain what Paul means by "pleasing men."

15:3. As it is written—Instead of continuing to cite the example of Christ, Paul introduces a quotation from the 69th Psalm to enforce his point.

* * *

TEST QUESTIONS

1. Of whose welfare must Christians think?
2. How can we relate this lesson to the liquor traffic?
3. How does the Golden Rule apply to this thought?
4. Is the conscience always right?
5. How and why must it be educated?
6. Should a legal right ever be given to do a moral wrong? Is it done?

"Booze"

The Lesson in Today's Life

By JOHN R. EWERS

Write his name high. It is given to few men to do, single-handed, what this man did. In a day of soft toleration, which admits that anything and everything is perfectly right, it is a joy to make the acquaintance of Michael Demitrovitch Tchelisheff. That's the man — Tchelisheff. Catalog him in Class A along with Luther, Lincoln and the few other men of gigantic conviction. Miserable little convictions—that is what ails most folks. But Tchelisheff had one vast idea, big as an empire, wide as Russia; and that was that vodka must go. Cato the censor closed each speech by saying, "Nevertheless, Carthage must fall." It fell. Mountains begin to move when foreheads begin to vibrate. When Napoleon's temples throbbed, the continent of Europe shook. When Lincoln's intense thinking caused his brain to send out vibrations, slavery fell. When Luther's thought waves swept forth, they "hit the pope on the crown and the monks in the belly," as Erasmus put it.

* * *

Conviction, conviction, that's it. Hammer that idea in. One is disgusted beyond words with the loose, flabby, inconsequential mental habits of the average man. He thinks that the government needs the revenue, but he fails to think his problem through and see the cost to the government of the maintenance of jails, insane asylums, and homes for the wrecks of whiskey. He prates of personal liberty. Men have all the liberty they need to behave themselves. Fools with automobiles should not have personal liberty. Youngsters playing with matches and razors should not have personal liberty. Your personal liberty ends where my rights begin. He talks of the employment furnished by breweries, distilleries and the like. I remember visiting the distilleries at Peoria and seeing trainloads of golden corn poured into the hoppers to make alcohol. What a waste! There is good, constructive work enough for every man in America. Labor's worst enemy is whiskey. I asked the warden of a state penitentiary how many of the inmates were the victims of drinking. He answered, "one hundred and one per cent!"

Church people must have clear-cut convictions about the whole business. They must not rent property for improper uses. No dodging behind agents can excuse in this. A decent man will dig with a spade before he will accept one cent of income from saloons directly or indirectly. The church is on one side and the saloons upon the other—and it's a battle to the finish. Just now it looks good for the church. Hold steady a little longer.

* * *

Yet we sidestep the temperance lesson in our Sunday schools or talk about it in such a listless way that our own lack of conviction is apparent. Go off and think your problem through. The ethics of this situation are so marked that you cannot coldly be neutral. You are for it or against it. I had a church once so situated that I had to pass four saloons to get to the building. Our church was open twice a week—the saloons all the time. Today there is not a saloon in that town and a new church building is rarely closed. "If meat makes my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands."

Disciples Table Talk

"The Church of the Open Door," in Toledo, Adds to Program

Central church, Toledo, O., has called Edward D. Goller as assistant pastor. It has become impossible for Grant W. Speer, pastor of the church, to attend to all the duties which devolve upon the leadership in a busy city church like Central, Toledo, which has become known as "The Church of the Open Door." Mr. Goller is a graduate of a four years' course in teacher training and has been a grade and high school teacher. Thus he is especially well fitted for the work of educational director of this church. For several years Mr. Goller served as field worker for the Sunday School Associations of Ohio and Indiana. He was also in pastoral service for four years. A feature of the first year's work of the new leader will be a series of lecture entertainments which have been presented with success elsewhere. Central church has won some reputation by its free employment bureau, which has been conducted with marked success.

Texas Church Profits by Fire

When Dallas, Tex., Central church building was damaged by fire a few months ago, it was at once decided by the leaders to build upon the portions of the structure not ruined by the flames, with a view to larger and more efficient work. The rebuilt portion, just completed, now houses ample Sunday school quarters and church and community gathering places. This part of the building includes thirty-two rooms. Among these are large parlors equipped with game tables and writing desks. An office has been provided for a social secretary, who will have charge of the building at all times when the building is open. An entirely new structure adjoining the rebuilt portion contains a chapel which is large enough to accommodate the Wednesday evening gatherings. The business meetings of the organizations of the church will be held on this evening after a six o'clock dinner. The roof of the new building will be used for open-air meetings in the summer. Harry D. Smith is the leader of this progressive work.

B. A. Jenkins Recommends a Permanent Secretary of State

Burris A. Jenkins, of Linwood Boulevard church, Kansas City, Mo., in a recent sermon stated that this country will either have to build a navy larger than that of the power having supremacy at the end of the war, or back up in the attitude it has taken toward world politics. He characterized this as aggressive. "The present war," he said, "is being fought by the stronger and more highly developed nations of Europe over the smaller and undeveloped nations. If we are going to keep foreign nations out of South America, when this war is ended we will have to have a navy bigger and more powerful than that of any European power. Our biggest ships now in process of construction carry only 14-inch guns, while those already in use in the navies of European countries carry 15-inch guns." Mr. Jenkins recommended a permanent secretary of state or a long tenure of office. This, he said, with a permanent diplomatic corps, was necessary if we are to compete intelligently with foreign diplomatists. We have never had a foreign policy, he said, because we have never had a permanent diplomatic corps, depending on merit and training, not on politics. It is time we had one, Mr. Jenkins believes, if we are to have prosperity, peace and standing among the nations of the future.

New Officers of the General Convention

The new officers of the General Convention, elected at Des Moines, are as follows: President, Judge J. N. Haymaker, Wichita, Kan.; first vice-president, G. A. Campbell, Hannibal, Mo.; second vice-president, E. M. Bowman, Chicago; third vice-president, Mrs. R. S. Latshaw, Kansas City, Mo.; treasurer, Col. Fred W. Fleming, Kansas City, Mo.; recording secretary, W. E. Crabtree, San Diego, Cal.; corresponding secretary, Graham Frank, Liberty, Mo. The new members of the executive committee are C. C. Chapman, Los Angeles, Cal., and J. H. Goldner, of Cleveland. The 1917 convention will be held at Kansas City, Mo., in May. The contesting city for the next convention was St. Louis.

Judge J. N. Haymaker, of Wichita, Chosen President of the 1917 General Convention.

Indiana County Churches Co-operate in Mission Task

L. E. Murray, pastor of First church, Richmond, Ind., reports that twelve churches of Wayne county, of which Richmond is the county seat, have co-operated in sending out a home missionary, as a living link in the Home Society. Of the $300 contributed, $215 comes from First church. This Richmond church has also entered the living link class during the past year, with Justin E. Brown, at Luchowfu, China, as its missionary. The contribution of this liberal congregation to the foreign work last year was $635.75, the largest contribution from any Indiana church with the exception of Muncie. Last year $1,395 was given to missions and benevolences from this people; this includes $272 from the C. W. B. M. and $67 from the Mission Circle.

Loving Cup for Bible School Efficiency Goes to Oregon

An interesting feature of the Bible school sessions at Des Moines was the presentation of the loving cup which the Kansas state organization had offered to give to the state or district with the best record of efficiency for the year. Oregon won the cup, and according to the agreement will retain it for one year. The reports showed that this state had 112 schools striving to reach the standard set by the Pittsburgh convention. University Place church, Des Moines, in competition with the world, won the banner offered by the Colorado Springs Bible school for the best exhibit of hand work done by members of the school. This school also exceeded all other schools of the state in the amount given for American missions—$100.

Washington, D. C., Endeavor Society Does Expert Printing

As fine a lot of publicity material as has ever come into this office has been sent in by members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Vermont Avenue church, Washington, D. C., where Earle Wilfley ministers. This society owns its own printing outfit, which is worth about $500. The enterprise was started five years ago, with a fund of $100 advanced by members. The entire outfit has been paid for out of earnings from printing done in the little shop run by the Endeavorers. One of the finest pieces of work is a 50-page booklet celebrating the "Echoes" of the last big banquet given by the society. All cards, programs and other publicity material needed for the church and other organizations are printed in the home shop.

Celebration for C. J. Sharp, Pastor at Hammond, Ind.

It happened that the fifteenth anniversary of C. J. Sharp's coming to the pastorate at Hammond, Ind., coincided with the celebration of Mr. Sharp's fortieth birthday, and October 15 was made the occasion of an all-day rally at Hammond church. The several churches in the Hammond region which Mr. Sharp has been instrumental in organizing participated with his own congregation in the three services of the day and a basket dinner. J. H. O. Smith spoke at the afternoon service. Mr. Sharp spoke morning and evening.

Gift Brings Cheer to the National Bible School Leaders

When it was reported that the Christian Board of Publication had decided to discontinue its annual gift of $5,000 to the national Bible school work with this year, there was deep gloom in the offices of the national secretaries; for many plans already made for extension and promotion would have to be abandoned if no gift was forthcoming. An appeal was made to R. A. Long, at the Des Moines convention, and he agreed to make a gift of $1,250 for this work if the schools would raise $3,750. R. M. Hopkins, national secretary, accepted the offer in behalf of the schools. The fruitfulness of the field in which the secretaries are laboring may be inferred from the report of W. J. Clarke, adult secretary, that the Disciples now have 9,967 adult Bible classes. It would be a scandal upon the Disciples if the national organization should be allowed to suffer in its work because of lack of funds.

Every school should plan to have part in making up the funds needed for further promotion. Write Secretary Hopkins, at Carew building, Cincinnati, O., that your school is planning to do its part.

A Specialist in Religious Education

W. D. Endres, pastor at Quincy, Ill., writes thus appreciatively of a man who deserves praise; "J. P. Rowlison, superintendent of religious education in the Sixth district of Missouri, was with us the last Sunday in September at the annual Promotion day exercises in the church school. The day was a most inspiring one and Mr. Rowlison gave us two splendid addresses, one in the morning and one in the evening. He has a great message. He is truly a specialist in his line. He gave us a splendid vision of the new type of religious education which many of our churches are striving to establish. The churches of the Sixth district have a rare man. If he can be held in that field for another five years, he will have established in the churches of the district the best type of modern religious education. We hope to have him back some time for a series of lectures in this church."

Dedication of New Bible School Home in Washington, D. C.

The dedication of the new $30,000 Bible School House of Ninth Street church, Washington, D. C., on October 15, was the biggest thing of the month in the capital, so far as the Disciples were concerned. There were three services, led by the pastor, George A. Miller, and George L. Snively. The new school building will accommodate about 1,500 persons. The present enrollment is about 1,000, with an average attendance of nearly 700. The history of this aggressive church is an interesting one. Twenty-five years ago a few persons organized, on the northwest corner of Ninth and D streets northeast, the Ninth Street Christian church. The lot was purchased and a small chapel was erected on the rear. E. B. Bagby, of Virginia, was called to be the pastor, and remained in this relation from April, 1891, until October, 1906. George A. Miller followed as pastor, taking up the work on January 1, 1907, and still occupies that position. Before the chapel was paid for the congregation had outgrown it, and it was torn down and a large, handsome structure costing over $30,000 erected in its place. Before this building was paid for the Bible school had grown so large that it was necessary to buy a residence to the west of the church. This was remodeled and used for the primary department of the school. It was only a few years until more room was needed and a second residence was purchased, and last spring a third was bought. These were torn down and upon this site, as a part of the church building, has been erected the modern Bible school house at a cost of about $30,000, exclusive of the lots. Mr. Snively remained with the church for ten days following the dedication services for a brief evangelistic campaign.

Rev. Geo. A. Miller, Who Has Added to the Equipment of Ninth Street Church, Washington, D. C.

Church Shows Great Growth in Five Years

The church at Maywood, a suburb of Oklahoma City, Okla., is but five years old, but today the church plant is valued at $25,000, and there is a membership in the congregation of about 350. At the service of dedication of the new building the entire obligation was cared for, with a balance in hand of $50. The three services were in charge of L. H. Otto, pastor at Maywood; H. E. Van Horn, of First church, Oklahoma City; E. S. Lain, of University church; A. P. Aten, of South Side church, and George L. Snively.

The Banner Rural Church of the Disciples

The church at Altoona, Ia., is reported to be the banner rural church of the Disciples. The congregation at Altoona owns its church property and parsonage, and in addition has invested in forty acres of ground. The proceeds of the sale of produce from this acreage are applied on church expenses. Arthur Dillinger, pastor of the church, had place on the rural church program at Des Moines, of which A. W. Taylor, of Columbia, Mo., had charge.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
Made from Cream of Tartar
NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

An Honor for a Disciple Pastor

O. S. Reed, formerly pastor of the church at Canon City, Colo., has been elected chaplain of the national organization of the G. A. R. His election took place at the recent national encampment at Kansas City.

Illinois News Letter

Our state office is in receipt of a report of the Edgar County Sunday School Association. This is one of the best counties in the state for Sunday schools. The convention is always well attended. Occasionally the attendance goes beyond the 1,000 mark. The Disciples of Edgar county have always been active in this work. A letter from W. J. Montgomery, of Niantic, says: "We were never so well pleased with a church as with this one." This is an optimistic note that we are glad to hear.

Dr. E. T. Murphy, of Chicago, has accepted the pastorate of the churches at Henry and Putnam. Mr. Murphy has had several years' experience as a preacher. During the past few years he has practiced medicine in Chicago, but was anxious to return to the ministry.

E. M. Norton has just closed a meeting with the church at Potomac, for which he has preached four years. There were eleven additions. E. C. Cameron, of Springfield, Mo., led the singing.

Andrew J. Scott, of Fisher, reports that at the end of the fiscal year the church had $200 in the treasury. As the new year opened, advance pledges were paid in, so that they now have several hundred dollars on hand to meet current expenses.

C. C. Hill, Lovington, just closed a three weeks' campaign with the Bushton church. There were twenty-two additions during the meeting. Mr. Hill has preached for the Bushton church for some time.

J. Alexander Agnew, who has recently taken the work at Mt. Carmel, comes into Illinois with a splendid record for good works. We welcome him to our state.

W. W. Vose, of Eureka, evangelist for the Fifth district, is in a good meeting at Newmanville. They had a basket dinner on the 22nd. All the preachers in the vicinity were invited to take part in an afternoon program.

The state secretary spent Sunday, October 15, with the churches in Champaign and Urbana. At the University Place church, Sunday morning, Dr. R. E. Hieronymus, community advisor of the University of Illinois, preached, in the absence of the pastor. There was one addition. T. L. Cummings, of the Webber Street church, Urbana, had thirteen additions at the morning service. The secretary spoke for this church in the evening. Another made the good confession.

Sunday, November 5, is Illinois day. The reports that come to the office about the preparations for the day are encouraging. We expect a good offering. The new plan of state and district work that the State board is outlining will be hastened by a liberal response on the part of all the churches.

H. H. Peters,
State Secretary.

Unusual Success in the Southland

The South is not considered the most fertile territory for successful religious work, but recent developments at Shreveport, La., are encouraging. Claude L. Jones is pastor at Central church, Shreveport, and E. E. Davidson has been holding evangelistic services there for about a month. On the second Sunday in October there were 659 persons present in the Sunday school session, and seventeen persons enlisted as members of the congregation on that day. It has been decided to continue the services indefinitely.

Union Opportunity in Pennsylvania Town

The Christian church at Ebensburg, Pa., has been invited to enter a union organization of the churches of the town, and a special inducement has been offered. David E. Clark, a Christian layman of Pittsburgh, has proposed to give $25,000 to be used to erect a new union church building. Mr. Park makes his summer home in Ebensburg. The other congregations of the town are Methodist, Congregational and Baptist. It seems doubtful whether the offer of the generous Mr. Parks will be accepted.

Marriage of Russell F. Thrapp, of Los Angeles, Cal.

The report comes of the marriage of Russell F. Thrapp, pastor at First church, Los Angeles, to Miss Clara Maude Dixon, for the past two years the soprano in the quartet which leads in the music at First church. Mrs. Thrapp has had advanced vocal training under the best teachers in New York City. The marriage ceremony was performed by J. E. Collom, an elder of Mr. Thrapp's church, and a close personal friend. Since Mr. Thrapp's coming to Los Angeles, five years ago, over 1,300 persons have been added to the membership of the congregation. He came to this western field from First church, Jacksonville, Ill.

Another School of Methods for Kentucky

Kentucky, under the leadership of State Bible School Superintendent Walter E. Frazee and his aids, seems to take first place in the success of its schools of methods. Not many weeks ago a most successful school was reported at Lexington. During the first week in November comes the All-Western Kentucky School of Methods, which will be held at First church, Mayfield, Ky. Lectures will be given by W. J. Clarke, Miss Cynthia P. Maus and Miss Hazel A. Lewis, of the national Bible school organization; Howard J. Brazelton, of the Mayfield church; Roy K. Roadruck, associate superintendent of the state association, and Marion Stevenson, of St. Louis. The first session will be held on October 30. Information may be had concerning the school from Roy K. Roadruck, 410 Keller building, Louisville.

Apportionments of Bible Schools for Home Missions

The Bible School Department of the A. C. M. S. has set $50,000 as the goal to be reached this year for home missions by the Bible Schools of the brotherhood. The apportionments are made by states and districts. The following are the state apportionments: Alabama, $250; Arizona, $100; Arkansas, $250; California, north, $1,100; California, south, $1,500; Canada, $200; Colorado, $800; Connecticut, $50; District of Columbia, $600; Delaware, $5; Florida, $275; Georgia, $400; Idaho, north, $100; Idaho, south, $200; Illinois, $5,000; Indiana, $6,000; Iowa, $1,500; Kansas, $2,000; Kentucky, $10,000; Louisiana, $100; Maine, $15; Maryland, $300; Massachusetts, $100; Michigan, $500; Minnesota, $200; Mississippi, $150; Missouri, $5,000; Montana, $200; Nebraska, $1,000; New Jersey, $200; New Mexico and West Texas, $200; New York, $900; North Carolina, $200; North Dakota, $25; Ohio, $6,000; Oklahoma, $1,000; Oregon, $800; Pennsylvania, east, $900; Pennsylvania, west, $1,800; Rhode Island, $5; South Carolina, $75; South Dakota, $75; Tennessee, $750; Texas, $1,500; Utah, $10; Vermont, $25; Virginia, $600; Washington, east, $600; Washington, west, $700; West Virginia, $400; Wisconsin, $150; Wyoming, $50; Colored Schools, $200.

First Church, St. Louis, in Earnest About Cleaning Up in St. Louis

The St. Louis Times says of John L. Brandt's campaign to clean out the vice plague which infests the district in which First church is located: "There is an intensely earnest purpose behind this movement. In the words of Dr. Brandt, the organization it is proposed to form will 'have tacks in its teeth.' And to this sharp announcement the militant pastor of the First Christian church added: 'There will be no halfway ground. We are going to purify our own section.' Thus a substantial and effective beginning in civic house cleaning is promised by influences which will not be laggard in action. If the forces which are to be rallied by the churches in the West End which will join with Dr. Brandt's congregation to 'purify their own section' can accomplish their determination, so also can others elsewhere."

Successful Work of Texas Pastor

During the past five weeks forty-three persons have been added to the membership of the McKinney, Tex., church, of which W. P. Jennings is pastor. Thirteen of these came into the church on one Sunday. Over a hundred additions are reported for the past year.

Training School at Los Angeles, Cal.

The second annual session of the Los Angeles Training School for Religious Workers was a success. Edgar Lloyd Smith, director of religious education for the Disciples in California, had charge of the school, which was held under the auspices of the state Christian Missionary Society. The school met with First church. Many new phases of instruction were added this year.

MERELY A SUGGESTION

There is a certain minister who sits down at his typewriter some time during the week, and jots down from three or four to a dozen brief items of news concerning his own church and others with which he happens to be in touch. He cuts out all the non-essentials, and boils his information down in such a way that the news editor has to give it but a glance before tossing it to the linotype. Why not YOU try this? Use a typewriter, if possible. You will be surprised to find how much news you know that hundreds of others would like to know too. Try the plan, and co-operate with THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY in giving its readers the best news service possible.—News Editor.

Disciples of Columbus, Ind., Meet in Annual Celebration

The thirteen Disciples churches of Bartholomew county, Ind., held their annual meeting two weeks ago at the Tabernacle church, Columbus, where W. H. Book leads. M. T. Reeves served as chairman. Bible school was conducted at 9:30, communion service at 10:30 and preaching service, with Mr. Book in the pulpit, at 11 o'clock. Dinner was served in the church dining room. At two o'clock in the afternoon round table talks were given by several of the leaders, and F. Z. Burkette, of Greensburg, delivered an address. At the afternoon service the East Columbus choir had charge of the singing.

The Youngest Delegate at the Convention

The youngest delegate present at the Des Moines convention was Frederick Harrell, 12 years old, of Logansport, Ind. This was his seventh convention. This year young Harrell was elected delegate with full credentials from Ninth Street church, Logansport. His ambition is to be a foreign missionary.

★ ★

—P. H. Welshimer, of Canton, O., spoke at Alliance, O., recently on "The Teacher the Pivotal Person in the Sunday School."

—H. J. Lunger, recently of Charlottesville, Va., began his new work at First church, Rochester, N. Y., October 15.

—Mrs. Anna A. Clark, for many years a leader in Central church, Indianapolis, and at present adult superintendent in this school, has had a serious time recovering from an automobile accident of seven weeks ago. Mrs. Clark was thrown from her car and pinned beneath. Dr. A. J. Clark, Mrs. Clark's husband, was also hurt, but not severely.

—Claris Yeuell, who has been preaching in West Virginia for some time in order to be near his son, who was in Bethany College, is now anxious to resume regular pastoral work. He can enter a new field at once.

—A. W. Vandervort, of Minnehaha church, Minneapolis, Minn., is preaching a series of sermons on tithing.

—O. E. Kelley is closing his work at Advance, Ind. He has done an unusual piece of work there. His interest in the rural problem has led him to try some new methods which have been very successful. Recently he held conference in connection with our churches in Jamestown and Brownsburg. Workers from the state office, Indianapolis, and a professor or two from Purdue University made addresses.

—Central church, Lebanon, Ind., of which A. L. Ward is the minister, held its annual meeting Thursday evening, October 19. All reports showed a remarkable increase in the work. The annual meeting was changed from January to October to put the church in line with the national convention. In the past nine months there have been 105 additions to the church. The offering to missions in the same time was $1,135. At this rate the church will give more than $1,500 within the year.

—The leaders of the church at Rudolph, Ohio, are contemplating an addition to their building in order to better provide for religious education.

Chicago Disciples to Have Lovefeast of Fellowship and Song

The new Disciples Hymnal will be christened at a great meeting of Chicago Disciples to be held in Memorial Church Thursday evening, Nov. 2. All the pastors of the city and surrounding towns are being invited to be present, together with their choirs and large delegations of their memberships. A combined choir will lead the singing. Besides launching the new hymnal, it is hoped to make of the evening an open door to an efficient, harmonious and enthusiastic year's work for Chicago Discipledom. Pastors and others will speak. Most of the time will be spent in song and fellowship. The ladies of Memorial Church will serve supper from 6 to 7 o'clock. The "Sing" will begin at 7:30, though people coming any time before 8 will not be considered late.

—"Safety First Week" was recently observed generally in Youngstown, O., and as a feature of the week's exercises, W. D. Ryan, at Central church, gave an address in appreciation of the work of the late Dr. Josiah Strong, the originator of the slogan, "Safety first."

—Henry Hagemeier, formerly pastor at Whitesboro, Tex., will assume the pastorate at Plainview, November 1.

—An interesting feature of the late convention of Kansas Disciples, held at Independence, was a conference on tithing, led by Secretary Bert Wilson.

—The dedication of the remodeled church building at Olathe, Kan., took place two weeks ago, with C. R. Scoville in charge. More than enough money to pay for all improvements was raised. W. H. Scrivner is pastor at Olathe.

—During the fall "decision week," and on six Sundays immediately preceding, observed at East Dallas, Tex., church, sixty-seven persons united with the congregation. There is now a membership of over 1,000. John G. Slayter leads at East Dallas.

—President E. M. Todd, of Christian University, Canton, Mo., spoke at the Keokuk, Mo., church on October 15.

—B. A. Channer, of Goodland, Kan., has accepted the work at Herrington, Kan. He is already on the field.

—Lawrence Dry, who has been elected assistant pastor to H. H. Harmon at First church, Lincoln, Neb., was formerly pastor at Peru, Neb. J. L. Kohler, who resigned the First church position, has become general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Fremont, Neb. A new $75,000 building has been erected for the Christian Association at Fremont.

—E. E. Mack has closed his work at Cherokee, Ia., to assume the pastorate at Grand Island, Neb., which is the third city in size in Nebraska.

—According to late lists, fifty missionaries have gone out from Drake University.

—The Christian News, of Des Moines, speaks enthusiastically of G. W. Muckley's message delivered at University Place church, Des Moines, on Sunday morning of convention week. Mr. Muckley considered "The World Conference at Panama."

—Capitol Hill church, Des Moines, is prospering. Two weeks ago there were 680 persons present in the Bible school session, a gain of 300. Fourteen persons were added to the church membership during the day, ten of these by confession of faith. Mr. Cole is a Bible school man with a popular message as to the work of the school. He has recently delivered addresses before various county conventions in south Iowa.

—T. F. Rutledge-Beale, a Drake student-pastor, recently come from Canada, has taken the work at Bagley, Ia., to succeed Harry Leach, who is now at the University of Chicago.

—Isaac S. Bussing, who has led in the work at Davis Street church, Ottumwa, Ia., for two years, has received a call to continue indefinitely. Over two hundred persons have been added to the church forces during this period. Through his "Workingmen's Triangle Brotherhood," Mr. Bussing is reaching out to the virile manhood of the entire community. Mr. Bussing came to Iowa from Albion, Mich.

—During C. R. Scoville's campaign at Marysville, Mo., 1,645 persons were enlisted in the work of the church.

—Speaking in behalf of better church architecture, A. B. Philputt, of Central church, Indianapolis, Ind., stated that "some of the church buildings are no better looking than a pickling factory."

—At an "old people's meeting" at the Georgetown, Ky., church, there was a man present who had been a church member for seventy-two years. Over fifty persons present had been members for over forty years. These were asked to come forward, and while the choir sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," the 250 old people in attendance shook hands.

—John W. Kerns, of Central church, Austin, Tex., who was called to the pulpit of Magnolia Avenue, Fort Worth, was asked by his former congregation to reconsider, offering to increase his salary. But Mr. Kerns announces that he will accept the Fort Worth work.

—M. J. Grable, who has served the Salem, O., church for fifteen years, has been re-elected for another two years.

—Tennessee's next state convention of Disciples will be held at Seventeenth Street church, Nashville. The following officers were elected for the following year at the recent meeting in Knoxville: President, L. D. Riddell, Johnson City; vice-president, J. M. Cowden, Tullahoma; secretary, E. H. Koch, Nashville, and state C. E. superintendent, Gus Ramage, Nashville.

—The Newman, Ill., congregation early this month burned a mortgage and all notes and bills against the church, the total amounting to $3,052.14. After all debts were paid a balance of $400 in cash remained over. The pastor at Newman is J. Frank Hollingsworth.

—W. W. Wharton preached to large audiences at Central church, Jacksonville, Ill., on October 15, in the absence of the pastor, M. L. Pontius, at the Des Moines convention. Mr. Wharton began an evangelistic campaign this week in St. Joseph, Mo.

—J. P. McKissick, of Harriman, Tenn., is assisting J. Lem Keevil, pastor at Fifth Avenue, Knoxville, in a series of evangelistic meetings.

—E. B. Bagby, newly elected pastor at Columbia Heights, Washington, D. C., recently preached two sermons in the old postoffice building, at Washington, his subjects being "The Joy of the Second Mile" and "The Departing Angel."

Farthest North Our Bible School Missionary Has Gone to Alaska

This challenges our Schools in their Home Mission giving to the FARTHEST LIMIT

The Annual Offering Day is the Sunday before Thanksgiving in November. The call is for $50,000 this year.
The program is the most attractive we have issued. It is educational and inspirational. It can be rendered at the regular Bible School hour.
Order your supplies now. A postal card request will bring them free. State the size of your school.

THE SPECIAL DAY APPEAL is productive of the largest offering for Missions in the Bible Schools. No other plan at present will work so well. The setting of a definite goal, the dividing of the apportionment among the classes and departments, the preparation for the special program is the best method devised for raising Bible School missionary money.

High St., Akron, Ohio., Bible School leads the brotherhood in gifts for Home Missions. F. M. Root, the superintendent, already assures us "We'll go to the farthest limit with you."

BIBLE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT
AMERICAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY
CAREW BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

—As much from the Bible School for American Missions as for Foreign Missions. The workers at Akron, Ohio, High Street are determined to make good on this aim this year. Through the leadership of their superintendent, F. M. Root, they plan to contribute $480 to American Missions between October 1, 1916, and September 30, 1917. Will your school take a similar aim? Get the literature and make a worth while attempt November 26. Write Robt. M. Hopkins, Carew building, Cincinnati.

—Fred Jacobs will close his work at Zionsville, Ind., to attend Yale Divinity School.

—The 1917 Kentucky State Convention of Disciples will be held in Campbellsville during the week beginning September 18. The 1916 session proved to be the largest in point of numbers in the history of the state work.

—Dwight L. Pendleton, of Winchester, Ky., teacher of the great men's Bible class of the church in that town, one of the largest classes in the country, gave an address recently before the Twentieth Century Men's class of First church, Owensboro, Ky. Mr. Pendleton is a lawyer by profession.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—So large was the attendance at the Rally day Bible school session at First church, Bartlesville, Okla., that the Pathe News made a moving picture of the school. The goal for the day was set at 1,001 present, but 1,087 persons were counted in attendance. Two simultaneous services were held. C. H. Hulme is pastor at Bartlesville.

—Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind., gave the principal address at the mass meeting of the Cincinnati Christian Missionary Society held early this month at Central church. His subject was "The Gospel as a Civilizing Power." A great chorus choir led the singing.

—W. Garnet Alcorn, pastor at Hot Springs, Ark., has received a report that the younger of his two brothers, who are soldiers in the British army, was killed in action during August "somewhere in France." This is the first death in Mr. Alcorn's family of twelve children.

—R. O. Wickham, of the Ligonier, Ind., church, reports that the Ligonier high school has introduced regular credited courses in Bible study. Mr. Wickham will have charge of one of the classes, which meets each Wednesday at eight o'clock in his study at the church.

—A Men's Club has been organized at Central church, Pasadena, Cal. A program has been mapped out for the next nine months. W. H. Bagby, formerly of Salt Lake City, gave an address at the first meeting of the club, his theme being "The Menace of Mormonism."

—Nebraska has twenty-two Bible schools having more than 500 members each, the largest of these being the Christian Bible school at Beatrice, with an enrollment of 1,100.

—The Disciples of Christ in annual business session at the Des Moines convention voted no indorsement of the League to Enforce Peace.

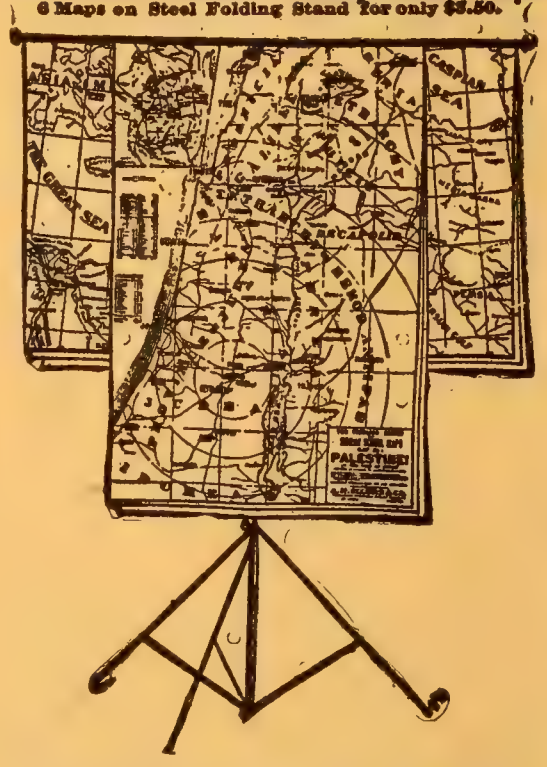
—In the October issue of The Christian Union Quarterly, the editor, Dr. Ainslie, has an opening editorial on "The Real Problem Toward Unity." E. B. Barnes, of Richmond, Ky., has an article on "William, Prince of Orange, an Apostle of Tolerance." Other excellent articles make this issue an especially attractive one.

—D. G. Dungan is in an excellent meeting at Elizaville, Boone county, Ind. To date he has had about 30 additions.

—First church congregation, South Bend, Ind., has had a motion picture machine installed. J. M. Alexander, pastor at First church, purchased the machine in Chicago. He will present pictures of Bible lands and Biblical themes on Sunday evenings.

—H. W. Hunter is conducting evangelistic services at his church in Wellington, Kan., with Ross S. Davis, of Greenfield, Ind., leading in the singing.

—The Iowa laymen and ministers present at the temperance sessions of the Des Moines convention passed a resolution recommending E. T. Meredith for governor of the state and urging the defeat of W. L. Harding.



—At the reception given by Twenty-fifth Street church, Baltimore, Md., to its new pastor, B. H. Melton, many of the city's churches were represented. Among those on the program were H. C. Armstrong, of Harlem Avenue; G. C. Richardson, of Christian Temple; W. P. George, of Wilhelm Park. Arthur B. Cross spoke for Twenty-fifth Street.

—Among the speakers at First church, Birmingham, Ala., during the pastorless period since the going from this pulpit of Mr. Atkins, are: Rev. Mr. Duffy, of Bessemer, Ala.; R. Lin Cave, of Nashville, Tenn., and Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind.

—Herbert L. Willett, Jr., whose articles concerning his recent experiences in the war countries have been much enjoyed by readers of these pages, gave an address last Sunday at Memorial church, Chicago, on "In and Out of Turkey."

—The church at Atchison, Kan., is promoting a special evangelistic campaign, with H. H. Clark, of Denver, preaching and W. R. Loupe in charge of the singing.

The Peerless Series of Sunday School Maps
6 Maps on Steel Folding Stand for only $3.50.

The special feature of this excellent set of maps, are, their clearness. The names of places in large print, feint mountains, various styles of lettering so as to be pleasing to the eye and the tone of the colors, which are both attraactive and harmonious. From the latest explorations and discoveries

This grand set of six Maps consists of the following:

New Testament Palestine — Old Testament Palestine — Roman Empire showing Pauls Travels — Bible Lands of the Old Testament — The Exodus, Egypt to Canaan — Ancient Jerusalem.

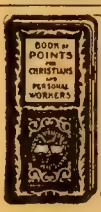
Printed on linen finish cloth in 6 colors size 19x27. Mounted on folding steel stand, can be raised, lowered or turned in any direction on the revolving frame so the largest classes can see them, being on a line with the faces of Scholars when seated. Making them the most practical Helps in Student and Class Work. When not in use can be easily folded up Price $3.50 net and for 30c extra will be sent prepaid to any Express office. Single maps of the above sent prepaid on receipt of 60 cents.

Similar to above on a larger Scale are 5 Eilers Sunday School Maps on a very strong Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand about 6½ feet high, 36x48 to 36x57 on linen finished cloth. These Five thoroughly up to date Maps Consist of the following.

New Testament Palestine,—Old Testament Palestine,—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Isrealites. Price of any single Maps $1.00

On account of its portability, this Stand and Maps are the most helpful aids in teaching Bible History. To avoid errors in ordering specify Eilers Maps on Revolving Steel Stand. Price $6.50 will be sent prepaid to any Express office for 60 cents additional.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - - HILLSBORO, OHIO



Then get "The HERALD" A large, live monthly, 25c a year. Sample free. THE HERALD, 723 W. 62d St., Chicago.

BOOK OF PRAYERS
Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

POCKET S. S. COMMENTARY
For 1917, SELF-PRONOUNCING Edition on Lessons and Text for the whole year. Right-to-the point practical HELPS and Spiritual Explanations. Small in Size, Large in Suggestion and Fact. Daily Bible Readings for 1917, also Topics of Young People's Society, Motto, etc. Red Clo. 25c, Mor. 35c, Interl. for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, MONON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

BOOK OF POINTS
AND TESTIMONIES for use of Christians and Workers in all meetings. Answering Objections, Excuses or Doubts. Helps for leading and taking part in Prayer Meetings and in giving personal Testimonies. Better understanding of hard places in Scripture, etc. Full of practical suggestions. Don'ts for Workers when dealing with Inquirers. Cloth 25c; Morocco, 35; Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Bible Readers and Christian Workers Self-Help Hand Book
Short and plain articles by nearly 100 experienced Christian writers. Just the Help over hard places you have been looking for. How to lead, teach, testify, pray and grow. Young Christians helper, experienced workers' guide Pkt. size, 128 pgs., Red Cloth, 25c, Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wntd. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Indoor Closet
More Comfortable, Healthful, Convenient
Eliminates the out-door privy, open vault and cesspool, which are breeding places for germs. Have a warm, sanitary, odorless toilet right in your house. No going out in cold weather. A boon to invalids. Endorsed by State Boards of Health.

ABSOLUTELY ODORLESS
Put It Anywhere In The House
The germs are killed by a chemical process in water in the container, which you empty once a month. Absolutely no odor. No more trouble to empty than ashes. Closet absolutely guaranteed. Write for full description and price.
ROWE SANITARY MFG CO. 1037A ROWE BLDG., DETROIT, MICH.
Ask about the Ro-San Washstand---Hot and Cold Running Water Without Plumbing

An Ideal Course for Adult and Young People's Classes

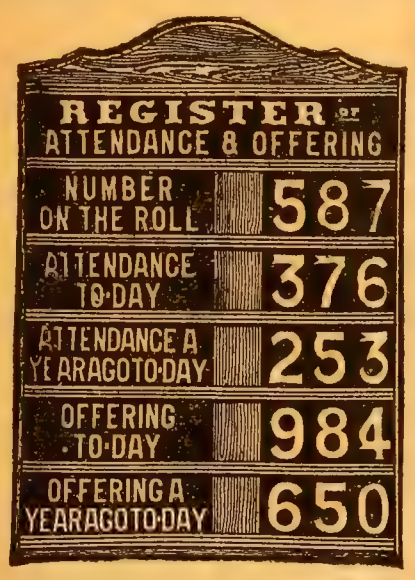
Dr. Loa E. Scott's "Life of Jesus"

A study of the life of the Master in 52 lessons. Bristling with questions, and requiring a study of the Bible itself. The finest course yet offered for adult and young people's classes. Price in lots of 10 or more, 40c. Single copy, 50c.

Disciples Publication Society :: :: 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

—The Veterans' Association met at the church at Eureka, Ill., recently, and among the speakers were Prof. A. C. Gray, Prof. Silas Jones and Prof. Roy L. Moore. Special orchestra music added to the attractiveness of the occasion.

—Melvin Menges has accepted the work at Gas City, Ind., to succeed J. R. Luckey, recently resigned.



—C. H. Swift, who came to the Carthage, Mo., pastorate but a short time ago, has been elected president of the Carthage Ministerial Alliance.

—M. J. Grable, of the church at Salem, O., will make a tour of three months in the Orient. A farewell reception was given for Mr. Grable by his congregation. On this occasion he was presented with a sum of money.

—H. K. Pendleton, of Central church, Houston, Tex., delivered a sermon at the First Presbyterian church, in Houston Heights, in a series of meetings being addressed by Houston's pastors.

—B. H. Cleaver, at Canton, Ill., conducted his own revival this year, and seventeen persons were added to the church membership as one result of the effort.

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

—Paul Ward, son of A. L. Ward, of Lebanon, Ind., is in Union Seminary and Columbia University again this year. This will be his third year in these institutions, having taken his M. A. from Columbia last year.

—Bible School Day for American Missions comes November 26. The money contributed at this time makes possible the constructive work, which the American Christian Missionary Society is continually doing for the schools of the brotherhood. If your school is not among the many schools already planning to have part in this service begin at once. Get the exercise "Farthest North," from Robt. M. Hopkins, Cincinnati. It's full of good material.

* *

OHIO SECRETARY'S LETTER

Ohio day is the one thing on the horizon just now. The secretary wrote to every church in the state two weeks ago, saying that a dozen urgent calls were unanswered. To answer even the more pressing would add $2,000 to the expenditures of the year. The offerings of the churches are the source of this extra $2,000, or they will be the indication of our failure to measure up to our duty. Two thousand dollars increase in church offerings in one year means determined effort on the part of church leaders.

Since that letter to churches went out two weeks ago, five more appeals have come. In one of our cities is a rapidly growing district unchurched. A group of Disciples there are anxious to serve the community by organizing a church. In ten years we will have a church there of 300 members, in a property worth $15,000, which will double in both respects in another ten years.

What say you? Is this worth a day's income per year? Will you give the gift and spend a half day soliciting others to join you?

The promise of this new field is not overstated. The churches planted or helped by the state society since 1900 have now a membership of 16,775. The last yearbook shows that they gave to missions last year $7,049.16 and seventeen of them are yet mission churches. They hold church property worth $688,500 and twenty-three of them are yet occupying tabernacles or partially completed buildings.

Christian work in Ohio brings results. The church property spoken of above amounts to four times the whole expenditures of the society in these sixteen years. Those gifts to missions by our mission churches are a 60 per cent dividend on the average annual income of the society. A work so fruitful makes heavy claims on the Lord's stewards. A work so strategic demands strong support from the captains of the Lord's hosts.

Ohio day is November 5, and every Sunday thereafter till every member of every church in Ohio has expressed his zeal for a Christian Ohio by an adequate gift for Ohio missions. Help these brethren in these newest fields to hold forth the word of life. I. J. CAHILL.

Write

For Our Special Introductory Offer on

"THE CONQUEST"

Our attractive weekly for adult and young people's classes, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

Chairs, Tables, etc. for Sunday School Departments

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.
Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.
Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.
Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.
Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6.50 Net.

By Express or Freight at Purchaser's Expense.

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

"THE MEANING OF BAPTISM"

By CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, Editor of "The Christian Century"

"This is probably the most important book in English on the place of baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856"

That is what the New York Christian Advocate says of this remarkable volume

Herald of Gospel Liberty (Christian Denomination): "Mr. Morrison is leading a movement for larger liberty in matters of opinion among the people of God."

The Advance (Congregationalist): "We believe the position herein advocated is one that the Disciples will be driven ultimately to adopt."

The Christian Union Quarterly (Disciple): "The author has a brilliant style and thinks along ingenious and fascinating lines."

The Religious Telescope (United Brethren): "The significance of this work is new and remarkable. It may help the immersionists and affusionists to get together, which would be a great achievement."

Central Christian Advocate (Methodist): "A profound scholar, a deeply spiritual follower of the Master, a man among men, something of a mystic, we could well believe that if any person could show the way to Christian unity, Charles Clayton Morrison belongs to the select few."

The Presbyterian Advance: "The editor of this paper welcomes the appearance of this volume, for it enables him for the first time in his life to answer a question which has often been asked of him by correspondents and readers—'What is the best book on baptism?'"

The Christian Intelligencer (Reformed): "The argument seems logical and the spirit of the writer is certainly as gentle in statement as it is urgent in appeal."

The Continent (Presbyterian): "It required courage to publish this book. It is by a minister of the Disciples church, which has been peculiarly strenuous in behalf of the scriptural necessity of immersion, and he writes that 'the effect of our study is absolutely to break down the notion that any divine authority whatsoever stands behind the practice of immersion.'"

The Congregationalist: A daring and splendidly Christian piece of work."

The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed possible."

The Churchman (Episcopal): "An interesting summary of the topic, especially as it is related to the history of modern sectarianism."

Baptist Standard (Dallas, Tex.): "This is a very interesting work; as much so as any volume of fiction we have read this year!"

The Christian Endeavor World: "A thorough treatise from the immersion point of view, but building a bridge toward the affusionist view."

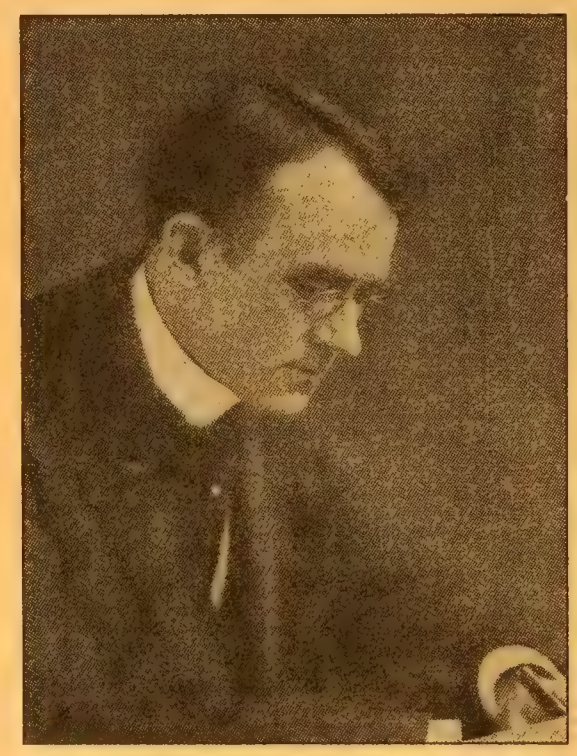
Every member of the Disciples' fellowship should own this book which is stirring the denominations. Price, $1.35 per copy, postpaid

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY - - 700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO, ILL.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII November 2, 1916 Number 44

The Man Who Stays Home
Editorial



The Use of Hymns
By Edward S. Ames

Convention Impressions
By George A. Campbell

Social Interpretations
By Alva W. Taylor

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Charles Clayton Morrison
Editor

A Constructive Religious Newspaper for Christian Homes

Herbert L. Willett
Contributing Editor

Great Year Ahead for Our Readers

An Unequalled Staff of Writers

WE are able at this time to announce such a staff of writers as has never been equalled by a newspaper among the Disciples of Christ. The writers have won places of authority in all their respective fields of interest. Their presence on our staff will make the "Century" vibrate with life. Here is the list of them:

ALVA W. TAYLOR will revive the department of social interpretations, which our readers of several years ago will recall as our "star" department in those days. It will be richer and more attractive in its new setting, just as the mind of Professor Taylor is riper and more authoritative than in the days gone by.

JOHN R. EWERS is back! He wrote a forthright article on the Sunday School lesson each week for two years which added more new subscribers to The Christian Century than any single feature of the paper. He is better than ever. Read him in this issue. He speaks for himself.

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL, a sage without the years of a sage; a mystic; a friendly counsellor; an interpreter of the things of the soul. His articles will be a frequent feature of the coming year.

IDA WITHERS HARRISON, constructive feminist. She dropped out of our contributorial department a year ago on account of her heavy duties in preparation for the Panama Congress. Our sense of loss was overcome when her services to the Congress brought her the most distinguished recognition accorded any woman at Panama. Mrs. Harrison will write on timely themes of special interest to modern womanhood.

EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES, philosopher and preacher, will follow the promptings of his own interest and write on the vital and thought-provoking themes he never fails to select.

ORVIS F. JORDAN has for several years made of the "Larger Christian World" page a means of broadening the vision and sympathy of all our readers. The same high standards will characterize his conduct of this department in the future, and in addition many contributions of other kinds will appear from his pen.

CHARLES T. PAUL is a unique figure among the Disciples. He symbolizes missionary science and statesmanship, but we have his promise to contribute a series of studies in the spiritual life. As a leader of The Christian Century family's devotions our readers may expect uplift and enrichment from President Paul.

ELLIS B. BARNES, a preachers' writer! Our minister readers talk about the things Mr. Barnes says in the "Century" more than about any other contributions we publish. The Christian Century is not made primarily for preachers, but for thoughtful

Finis Idleman

Charles T. Paul

Orvis F. Jordan

Irene T. Myers

E B. Barnes

laymen, that is, plain Christian men and women. This accounts for the intense interest with which ministers read and commend the "Century." Mr. Barnes will write not simply for preachers, but about preachers, and the laymen will enjoy his articles as much as will our minister readers.

Finis S. Idleman, New York's Disciple leader, who has wrought a transformation in Central Church in that metropolis, will interpret his experiences and report the progress of religion from the point of view of the East.

Irene T. Myers has promised to present from time to time a number of articles dealing with certain phases of the new womanhood. Dr. Myers is a writer new to Christian Century readers. A doctor of philosophy from Yale and a world-wide traveler, she is Professor of History in Transylvania College. What she will write will have both authority and piquancy.

Edgar DeWitt Jones, a writer who uses words with unerring delicacy, who thinks in the most human terms, whose writing has that indefinable something called "charm." Dr. Jones will speak often to our readers on the fine issues of the spiritual life which he senses so unerringly.

H. D. C. Maclachlan, pastor of one of the greatest churches of the East, but who keeps his thought-life intensely busy with the deeper things of spiritual culture, will write this year for The Christian Century. He always deals with big and urgent issues.

What shall we more say? When has there been spread so rich a feast as this before the readers of any religious journal? And these are only the features that we are able to arrange for in advance. Besides these there are the carefully selected articles on vital, human conditions and experiences, in the search for which the editorial staff is constantly on the alert. Certainly every person familiar with the current literature of the Disciples will agree with the statement of a very conservative reader who said recently that The Christian Century "is doing more to enrich the mind and widen the horizon of the Disciples of Christ than any other influence among us."

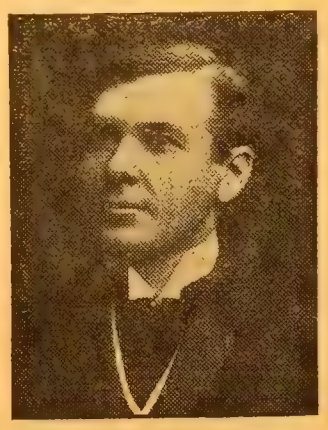
Dr. Willett on the Bible

Dr. Willett will write a series of articles on the Bible, how it grew, who its authors were, how the books came to be gathered into a single book, what we mean by inspiration and authority as applied to the Scriptures, and many such questions of a practical and critical sort in which every thoughtful Christian man and woman of today is interested. His first article will be forthcoming soon. It will open up a line of study that should be singularly attractive and timely. In anticipation of these articles our readers will wish to get The Christian Century into the hands and homes of their thoughtful friends.

"Why I Am a Disciple"

Some years ago Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of The Christian Century, promised to write a series of articles on the subject, "Why I Am a Disciple." The promise, it seemed, was not kept at the time and the plan to write the series was finally crowded out with other things. The obligation, however, has not been forgotten. This series will be one of the features of the interesting year that is before us. There will be perhaps a dozen short articles. They will be quite personal and intimate, setting forth the way in which the teaching and aim of the Disciples appeal to the editor.

Ida W. Harrison



H. D. C. Maclachlan

George A. Campbell

Edward S. Ames

Edgar D. Jones

CENTURY SUBSCRIBERS!

Renew Your Own Subscription 6 Months or a Year Without Cost

Return This Certificate

with $2.00 to pay for a full year's subscription to be sent a friend of yours who is not already taking the Christian Century and we will credit you six months on your own subscription for your kindness in the matter. We will also send you a copy of "The Divinity of Christ," by E. S. Ames—a book which sells regularly for 75c.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—I enclose $2.00 for which send The Christian Century for one year to the following new subscriber:

Name_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

For this cooperation on my part, please credit my own subscription six months as promised, and send me a copy of "The Divinity of Christ."

Sent by_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

P. S.—For $4.00 we will send The Christian Century to two persons who are not now subscribers, credit your own subscription for one full year and send you two copies of Dr. Ames' book.

Subscription—Subscription price, $2. Single copy, 5 cents.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII NOVEMBER 2, 1916 Number 44

The Man Who Stays Home

SOME PEOPLE NEVER GO TO CHURCH.

These people who can live for twenty years in seeming prosperity and contentment without going to church are a puzzle to the pious folk. How can they live without worship? How can they find life satisfying without the quest for God and righteousness?

For awhile earnest Christians explained the man who stays at home by superficial causes. They saw the man on the front porch in negligee reading the Sunday paper, and it seemed a natural inference that the Sunday paper was to blame for his failure to seek God in the sanctuary. It was for this reason that the Sunday paper was once everywhere spoken against, no matter what its contents might be. The better it was, the worse it proved for the man inclined to stay at home.

Later the golf course came prominently into the public eye as a cause for men staying away from church. They not only stayed away, but selfishly kept the boy caddies from Sunday School. This has always seemed reprehensible.

The automobile, too, took many families in the opposite direction from the church. A man of the Holy Roller persuasion once called it an invention of the devil. The evangelical saints have not always been so decisive in their condemnation, but have felt that the new conveyance was on the other side of the road from religion.

★ ★

Of course, these explanations of the man who stays at home are not adequate. If he were interested in religion, the Sunday paper could not keep him at home. Indeed, his religious interest might even make the Sunday paper, which is printed on week-days and in many cities delivered Saturday night, a thing to help him in his interpretation of religion. It certainly would not keep him home. A man with religious interest would surely never prefer Sunday golf to worship. Religious interest would make the automobile serve the church as no other invention ever has. When consecrated to religious work, it would bring to church everybody who could not walk there, in addition to serving religion all week.

Why, then, does the man stay at home? Why is he not interested in the things the church does for people?

Many men stay at home because they are not aware of the great change that has come in religion. They know that they do not want the dogmatism nor the emotionalism found in their home church long ago. They do not know that in nearly every town now there are several churches, or at least one, where a kind of religion is preached that is as modern and practical as the teaching in our universities. We ought to lead a man of this sort to find the church of his dreams, which he may be surprised to discover right around the corner from his house.

There are men, too, who are driven by their work until Sunday finds them utterly exhausted. They spend much of the day in bed. The economic whip has driven them to the limit. They might give attention to religion if they could get rest enough to think clearly about the larger issues of life. We can say of these men in the mass that there is no salvation for them without great changes in our social structure. Their presence is a continual challenge to the church to espouse the cause of social reform.

★ ★

At the opposite end of the social scale is the man overwhelmed with wealth. He is living again the parable of Dives and Lazarus. He fares sumptuously every day when the champagne on his table would save a baby's life. He could spare his sixth automobile, if he would, and give a struggling boy an education. He has declared that he will do what he will with his own. It is not to be expected that this man who has fallen a victim to the deceitfulness of riches should realize he has a soul to save. He is drunk with power. He has no inclination to seek the path of a humble walk with God.

Of all the men who stay home, the saddest case is that of the man who went to church one day and did not find God. He may have heard a beautiful concert given by an able quartette whose members had no particular religious interest in the worship. He may have heard a skillful orator give an address which would have been equally acceptable on a lyceum platform, in a lodge hall or on a political platform. He may have found a congregation which did not know the warmth of fraternal love, such as characterized the church of the early days. Worse than this, he may have found in the church the active hypocrite, a man who for a pretense made long prayers but robbed the helpless in his business deals. If all churches were without religion, the case would be hopeless. Fortunately, every city has a church with religion, for God never leaves himself without a witness.

★ ★

How to reach the man who stays at home is a more difficult problem than diagnosing his spiritual ailment. Some would organize a calling squad and compel him to come in. Some would invite him to an oyster supper. There are various devices, but only one real solution.

The church must bear a more earnest testimony for religion in the whole community. The members who have caught a glimpse of the importance of religion must learn to talk about it. We always talk about the thing we are in earnest about. There should be new ways of preaching to the community. A paid space in the newspaper for a sermon which would not be sensational enough to get printed otherwise, would help. In the lives of all the Christians there should be an eloquent testimony of the power of religion to bless and sanctify life.

When the power of religion to form the noblest lives becomes more frequently exemplified, there will be but few who prefer to stay at home.

EDITORIAL

THE FOES OF THE HOME

THE novelist with loose ideas about the family is always picturing the bonds of matrimony as heavy chains. How much he might learn about life if he would travel through the parish of a minister in a city charge and watch the havoc which loose conceptions of the family have wrought!

A minister went to a home the other day, to find a weeping wife and two beautiful little children wondering at their mother's sorrow. In her hand was an intercepted letter which had the damning evidence of her husband's unfaithfulness. The children make the woman economically dependent. Should she take the food from these children's mouths and refuse to live longer under conditions that are galling and degrading? Or should she swallow her pride and drown her self-respect for the sake of daily bread? It is a story that every minister knows. The fiction writer has shown us the point of view of the man who wants freedom. Cannot there be found a man who will give adequate interpretation of the responsibility which comes with marriage?

The foes of the home are many. Improper fiction literature is brought into the best homes through magazines with art covers, and in the form of beautifully bound books, which seem to come as angels of light, but have the spirit of evil hidden within. The theater, also, has often been made to pander to the baser instincts in man.

The Christian home is the noblest product of Christian civilization. God made the home before he made the Church. Perhaps it is still the most influential friend that religion has. The Christian home is founded on monogamy. Where the religion of Christ has gone, polygamy and polyandry, whether openly professed or only secretly practiced, have been driven out. If a Christian can be dogmatic about anything, it is that the Church of Christ will never tolerate any lowering of the ideals of the family.

SOUND THINKING IN RELIGION

CERTAIN definite tendencies in our time indicate a state of reaction against the intellectual life. A popular pragmatism is challenging every kind of education which does not help a man to produce dollars. Cultural disciples are taboo.

Prominent leaders are saying that Christianity has nothing to do with the head, but only with the heart. The doctrine of love is made to overshadow completely any intellectual formulation.

Many there are who do not see that love does not live very well apart from righteousness and truth. But righteousness and truth call for clear thinking. A young man may marry in blind defiance of fact, only to find that love flies out of the window. The Christian may undertake to love God, only to find an evil concept of God standing in his way.

We meditate upon all of our experiences and try instinctively to rationalize them. The man who would banish the intellectual from his religion would welcome the experience of religion, but would refuse any explanation.

A certain type of minister among the Disciples of Christ has been especially active in denouncing a certain something which, too often, he knew nothing about, namely, systematic theology. What it is really meant to protest against is a bondage of opinion imposed upon the mind from without. Theology, as interpreted by Christianity's leading thinkers, has long since lost this authoritative character. All religious men have some kind of a theology, or explanation of their religious experience. Most of them have the unsystematic and unorganized kind. We may not fear theology so long as each man makes his own and has no desire to impose it on others as a test of fellowship with them.

Jesus was called Rabbi. His followers were pupils or disciples. The structure of that first Christian group was that of a school. It is not a wise thing, in the light of these facts, to deny the intellectual element in Christianity.

A PAGE FROM YESTERDAY

ANYONE disposed to view with over-much alarm the journalistic strife that has obtained in the past decade and a half among the Disciples would find comfort in reading a bit of narrative describing things as they were back in the '60s. That was the time the Christian Standard was being founded by Isaac Errett. The American Christian Review was the stalwart defense of orthodoxy in those days, and with the redoubtable Benjamin Franklin at its head made life interesting for the journalistic newcomer. How interesting can be seen from the following quotation from Franklin's biography:

> The inflexible and uncompromising course pursued by the editor of the Review excited and exasperated a certain class of young men, including secretaries of societies and "settled pastors," who soon began to raise the cry of "tyranny of opinion," "fogy," "unwritten creeds," "iron bedsteads," "prince of wails," etc. They waxed bold and began to advocate the necessity of "reforming the Reformation," and, if possible, rescuing the Reformation from the molding and directing power of the Review. This movement was christened the "New Interest," and those who engaged in it were called "Progressives." The "New Interest" now demanded an "organ" to represent the "advance wing" of the Reformation. After repeated attempts to start a journal that would meet their expectations, the Christian Standard was created, by the establishment of a stock company with a capital of $18,000. Isaac Errett was appointed editor-in-chief. The editor of the Standard made no concealment of the fact that, with the assistance of his coadjutors, he intended to crush the Review, or at least neutralize, if possible, its influence. By means of plenty of money, donated by wealthy brethren, and through the influence of city pastors and city churches, and by means of premiums offered to subscribers, to say nothing of the special and continuous efforts made by the friends of the missionary societies, the Standard soon shot ahead of the Review in the way of obtaining a large list of subscribers. The Standard immediately became the pronounced organ of the "progressive element," and all such in the churches who loved the dance and the theater and thought there is "no harm in innocent amusements," such as card playing and chess, and all the anti-temperance element—such as opposed organized and the temperance movements—became the ardent supporters of the new journal. It must be confessed that it became a great power among the churches. Because the Review radically and strenuously opposed all these evidences of a weak Christian morality, it received from its admirers the soubriquet of "The Old Reliable," which it holds to this day. The strife between the two journals was very bitter. The Standard, in effect, held that the Review was coarse and vulgar in its utterances and aimed to block the wheels of a progressive Christianity; that the Review was too severe in its criticisms of the brethren, too censorious of the churches, and entirely too personal and hostile in its attacks upon good and truthful men; while at the same time the Review insisted that the Standard was wishy-washy, non-committal on great questions and was seeking popularity at the expense of Gospel integrity, and that it was unreliable in its advocacy of the "distinctive plea" of the Disciples; also, that it inclined to compromise with the sects.

In a footnote the biographer, with just a touch of satisfaction, says the Standard sank over $50,000 of other people's money before it got fairly on its feet. Which only shows how hard a battle its competitor put up.

The parallel between the situation of a half century ago and that of today is too obvious to need comment.

NOT UNCOMPLIMENTARY

THE minister is accused of being a poor business man. In a certain sense, the charge is true. He turned his back on financial gain to accept the small and precarious salary of a community worker. He often remains in his field at a lower salary from a sense of duty when his abilities could secure a higher one. He is liberal with his money, for not only must he set his church an example in sacrifice, but the calls he presents to others are first of all calls to him personally. He is a bad business man, but God pity the church if its ministers ever become good business men in the worldly sense!

THE CAMPBELL INSTITUTE

THE Campbell Institute celebrated the twentieth anniversary of its founding on October 19. Groups of its members in all parts of the land gathered in convenient centers for fellowship and reminiscence. Telegrams of greetings were exchanged from center to center.

The Campbell Institute was organized by a group of graduate students in Yale and Harvard Divinity Schools in 1896 for the purpose of encouraging one another in the maintenance of scholarly interests and pursuits after leaving their universities, and to encourage scholarly ideals in others. At that time there were not more than a score of men in the Disciples ministry who had received university training. After twenty years there are nearly four hundred such ministers among us, of whom close to two hundred are members of this organization.

The Institute has made steady progress, and has greatly quickened its growth in the past five years. It is in the nature of its peculiar function to do its work quietly, needing no publicity beyond inter-communication among its own members. But it is in no sense a "secret" organization, as has been charged in some quarters. A luncheon was given to its members attending the Des Moines convention at the Chamberlain Hotel. Close to 100 persons, including some who were not members, sat down together and enjoyed one of the most delightful fellowships afforded by convention week.

An organization like the Campbell Institute is greatly needed. Its potential service to the Disciples' cause is enhanced by the new problems of religion which all will face in the new spiritual epoch that will begin at the close of the war, if indeed it has not already begun. The Institute stands for clear, scientific, brave thinking. Every religious leader needs in this day of confusion all the support he can derive from any quarter to keep his feet from following in the way of obscurantism.

As a stimulus and tonic for the intellectual and spiritual life of its members, the Campbell Institute is profoundly influencing the trend and quality of spiritual life among the whole body of the Disciples of Christ.

WHY THE GENERAL CONVENTION LANGUISHES

THIS year the General Convention was not a much-talked-of part of the great gathering in Des Moines. The idea of democratic government for the Disciples' common affairs has not disappeared, but the Convention, in practice, has done but few of the things that were set forth in its constitution to be done.

At Des Moines, there was no distinction between delegates and others. The General Convention was chiefly a matter of speech-making. The societies in many cases did not have their officers on the platform, and in the lobbies these officers were in conspicuous instances opposed to the whole idea of a delegate convention.

It was not journalistic opposition that made the General Convention languish. It was the secret opposition of powerful secretaries who mistakenly believed that in some occult way the "offering" would be hurt by the democratic organization of the church. They also saw certain kinds of power slipping through their hands and going to the people.

Magna Charta was no joy to the king who granted it. Only dire necessity wrung from his unwilling hand the signature that freed the Anglo-Saxon world.

As the Disciples are now organized, the churches and their members have no rights in missionary administration except the right to pay. The only possible democratic control of policy would be through a refusal to contribute, a method abhorrent to the Disciple's conscience.

The General Convention plan involved the continuance of boards and expert counsel. It offered the beginning of democracy in missions. It pains many to know that missionary officials have, in signal instances, failed to see the value of the new method.

DISCIPLES ADAPTED TO CITIES

IT HAS been abundantly shown that the Disciples have attained their maximum growth in the rural districts. Since, however, rural population is growing less (take the state of Iowa, for instance), the Disciples face loss of leadership in the nation and loss of power, if they definitely choose to continue to be a rural people.

Disciple growth in ten years has been largely in the smaller cities. The metropolitan cities have not been fruitful fields, for reasons that might easily be enumerated. Meanwhile, let no man say that the plea for Christian unity is not adapted to city life. Ideally the Disciples' message is adapted to the urban mind.

Our city man of today protests against human creeds. He claims a freedom of opinion which no ecclesiasticism has been able successfully to oppose. The ideal message of the Disciples is not dogmatic but vital. It offers a rational treatment of religion but not an authoritative interpretation.

The city man continually clamors for democracy in religion, and we Disciples have abolished the false distinctions between clergy and laity. In our churches there is seldom found a pew renting system, but rather free seats. Disciples' churches are marked by their hospitality and their kindness to strangers.

The message for unity as preached by the Disciples has a peculiar appeal to the urban mind. Business men are continually forming combinations of capital, and labor is organizing more and more. It is recognized on every hand that individualism is impotent. It is for this reason that the city man will hear the preaching of Christian union with kindly hospitality.

The Disciples need no change of principles, but only a change of method, to become a great force in the city. They once had the chance to be the leading Protestant force of Chicago. A false program lost them their advantage. It is not yet too late to claim a large part in the building of the ideal side of our great metropolitan communities.

UNJUST JUDGMENTS

IT IS easy to sit in judgment upon our fellowmen until we are reminded by the Master that the same standards of judgments will be applied to ourselves. On every hand we hear hasty criticisms about people who in one way or another have violated the social code.

It requires divine wisdom to judge a soul. None of us is altogether free. We have inherited much in the way of evil impulse from the past. We have absorbed much from the improper environment in which we live. Many have some slight abnormality in their mental structure. Some struggle on unsuccessfully with habits they have not been able to break.

Unjust judgments tend to discourage. The whip of scorn may spur the weary soul on for a little while, but there is a better way. Commendation, appreciation, sympathy are the best forces for leading souls out of evil. It is hard to find a life so abandoned but that there is hidden away in it a bit of idealism. The hermit loves a wolf, even though he does not love a man. The prostitute may show strange and unexampled devotion to a child or to a friend. To find these beauty spots of the soul and appreciate and cultivate them is the task of the true physician of the spiritual life.

GOING TO THE FAR NORTH

IT is a noteworthy undertaking for the Sunday School department of the American Christian Missionary Society to send a man to the far north country of Alaska. There is an exceptional situation there at this time and the need of evangelical workers is apparent to all who study the situation.

In the decade previous to 1910 the population of Alaska doubled and was reported as 63,592 people. Much of the coast country has a mild climate and enough summer to grow hardy vegetables. The fishing industry has been a very important asset of our country. It has been the discovery of gold, however, which brought about the sudden increase of population.

We are all familiar with the stories of California in the days of the gold boom. If conditions are more orderly in Alaska, it is still true that there is deep need for gospel work. Many communities of men live entirely without religious worship. The sale of liquor has been prohibited for a generation, but the law has been more shamelessly violated than anywhere else on the continent. In the territory are Indians and Eskimos, some of them members of the Russian Orthodox church from the days of Russian occupation, but many of them still heathen.

The Sunday School department of the American Christian Missionary society has its own children's day for home missions. The missionary days in the Sunday School are opportunities for religious education, if they are properly handled. The children should be given the interesting program which has been prepared for use the Sunday before Thanksgiving. They should be encouraged to learn something about Alaska and to report. In this they will have the help of their public school teacher in many cases.

The enterprise of the society in initiating so bold and significant a work will surely command the loyal support of all forward-looking Sunday schools.

THE PASTORAL CALL

SOME ministers publish reports of many calls. Some make very few, confining their pastoral ministration to the sick and to the households where some particular calamity has come. The man at one extreme is apt to have a highly intellectual pulpit, though a theoretical one, but with little direct personal influence. The other kind of man has many friends, but they do not go to hear him preach. A business man, after expressing his love for one of these tireless callers, said, "I love that man too much to go and hear him preach." He felt that the sermon would lower the man in his estimation.

There are people who think the minister owes them a certain amount of personal attention. They are peevish when they do not get it.

There is, of course, a great body of religious work which can be done in the homes. Difficulties can be removed from the way of those who have thought to enter the church. The minister, face to face with his man, can diagnose his spiritual need as he never could do in the public meeting.

The minister has come to be a messenger of comfort to many weary souls. It is the concrete case which demands the specific treatment. Spiritual consolation administered in the pulpit is a kind of cure-all. The spiritual consolation given in the home is prescribed after patient diagnosis of the need.

It is possible to make a pastoral call only a gossiping expedition. It is conceivable that a minister will utterly waste his time in making the parish rounds. The earnest man, however, who is ever alert to the opportunities for religion, will find in every home an opportunity to bring Christ to the family in fuller measure.

HEALTH AND CHURCH-GOING

THE number of people who remain away from church because of their health is interesting. Especially are there a number of business men and society women who are sure to have a bad headache on Sunday morning.

A pastor who had heard this excuse decided to study the health conditions of his parish and to see if the people who stayed home were really more vigorous physically than the people who went to church. He found the reverse to be true. The Christian Science people have a theory that to be well one has to go to church. There might be something in it.

The church service lifts the weary mind out of its daily rut. It cultivates feelings of benevolence for humanity which have a sure influence on fagged-out nerves. The soul is helpfully related to the Infinite, who is the source of all our power. It is hard to see why such influences should not contribute to a man's physical well-being.

MARCHING ON TO VICTORY

THE abolition of the saloon will be accompanied by the peaceful measures of democracy. Great statesmen of days gone by have feared a "whisky rebellion" in which the devotees of the drug habit of alcohol would resist with blood every effort to put away from them their cups. But this is unlikely. Some of the most difficult sections of the country have already been cleaned up.

This year many new states will vote on the prohibition question. We have grown accustomed to hear of victory almost every time the issue is raised. It will not require very many more prohibition states until the question of national prohibition may be raised with every hope of success.

It has been the steady influence of the educational process which has brought the results. The Sunday school, the pulpit, the day school, the tractarian propaganda, the lecture platform have all been used with telling effect. When the saloon is banished from the land, it will be in large measure the victory of a church united in sentiment in desiring this victory.

It is to be hoped that an equally united sentiment and an equally effective educational propaganda may be put behind certain other great and fundamental reforms while victory is coming in this particular one. The church is set in the world to support and to propagate the Kingdom of God. We cannot be satisfied with a single victory, but must continue to struggle until the ideals of Jesus Christ completely dominate human society.

DR. MEDBURY RESPONDS

IT is not clear from the manner in which the following communication is addressed whether Dr. Medbury intended it for publication or for the editor personally. The article is so cleverly done, however, that we believe it ought to be given to our readers to enjoy, and its contents seem to be quite impersonal.

A RUDE JOLT

In the playful language of current speech "somebody is always taking the joy out of life."

For nearly two weeks we simple minded people of the West —rustics in a sense—have been having the very greatest pleasure in living over the sessions of the recent convention held in Des Moines. We have been downright happy about it. We have even had meetings where we have rejoiced together and thanked the Lord for wonderful days and holily helpful influences upon our lives and upon the lives of the multitude. Men among us, and women, too, for whose judgment we have actually had respect, talk about the program and the help it was to them. They have rejoiced openly in the spiritual vision of our feast. They have thanked God for the spirit of prayer in the sessions and perhaps most of all for the forward look to larger giving and greater living.

These Des Moines people some way have had the notion for nearly two weeks now that something really worth while had come to pass in their midst and that currents of influence had been set in motion that would hasten the oncoming of the good day of our God. But this morning we are all upset. Here comes a paper to our midst, published in a great big city, and with educational environment, that sets at naught, in a series of editorials, nearly everything that we had been thinking. The shocking surprise of it all is the greater because so many had spoken to us of their pleasure in the days within our gates and of their uplift of life in the recent assemblies of the people of God. One paper even published pages of names of men whose one word about it all was "great." Apparently, however, there was a good deal to be seen and felt that some of us failed to see and feel.

But what was the matter with the worthy editor anyway when he wrote, in cold blood, a series of editorials of the type of those contained in last week's paper? Our Coliseum "more than twice the size needed"! The addresses of the convention of a "creditable order." To be sure reports were great, better than we had ever had, and plans for larger things were proposed, but "it was not a great convention in the real inwardness of its character." In spite of the attention given to the immigration problem, the rural problem, the great reach of activity into the Latin field, the cry of the laymen for a larger task and the plans of the Men and Millions Movement and the Mission Boards to gratify these of large spirit and vision, we are told that "no problems of missions were faced save only the problem of getting more money." And then, worse than all, "the secretarial office holders" kept everything within their hands and had "the whole stage set," so that the editor and others hardly had a chance to say a thing! Even the business sessions "were lacking in significance," the President's address was "good, sensible, but not aggressive," and still beyond all these terrible things, "some repressive force upon the minds of the leaders" kept everybody from doing what the editor wanted them to do. Brother Cory and Brother McLean "brought nothing." And this in the face of the fact that our poor folks out here have been quoting Brother Cory and Brother McLean and thanking God for their helpfulness of life and message for full ten days.

At this point it is a little hard not to write in a different vein than I am employing. It is such a fearful thing to state "that the Brotherhood of Disciples is not getting the testimony of the real soul of these men," and that "they are engaged in making the wheels of their enterprise go round." To be sure "Abram E. Cory, free, is worth more to the Disciples of Christ than six million dollars," but the implication that he is not free, that his soul is hampered in its speech, that some influence is holding back this prophet's soul, is a terrible thing to throw into the face of such a messenger of the King, engaged in such an undertaking.

But still again, the convention did not have publicity enough, either in the local field or abroad. This has been true of every one of our conventions. It is a large problem. I would not touch it here except that this criticism is one link in the chain of our critic's worries. And then the Christian Unity program was all out of joint. Dean Mathews, though a misfit, "could have given us something to think about until the next convention, if he had tried." Well, it is all too bad!

There is still one other thing. A preacher out here whom I happen to know personally is named right out in meeting. He was caught in the very act, it is said, of gross inconsistency and every step in the act is pictured. The brethren had hoped for better things of this man. True, his views ten years ago "narrowed his sympathies and perceptibly hindered his work as a pastor of college students," but the brethren who are "sensitive to the subtler tendencies" had thought of him as having come to "an enlarged vision and a sympathetic understanding of, if not an agreement with, the point of view of modern man." Some way the discernment as to "subtler things" seems to have gone wrong and this preacher is apparently not up to date after all! He is even "unbrotherly," which accusation he disavows from the depths of his soul. He is "guarding" something that he would not know if he met it in the street! The poor fellow! And yet it is rumored here that this man knows more about even "orthodoxy" than our discouraged editor knows about the workings of the Pulpit Supply Committee of the late general convention and the how and why of things that were done and the spirit that shaped final decisions. Under certain conditions a line of conduct is demanded of a man which other situations would not at all suggest. The problems of brotherliness and personal good will are not in the least involved, though of course one is embarrassed when committee confidences are given to the public. But enough. Why, Brother Morrison, if I felt as you do about everybody and everything I just "wouldn't play" any more at all!

CHAS. S. MEDBURY.

The serious considerations to which the Christian Century's editorials of last week referred are not, of course, to be disproved of by picking out phrases from our editorials and weaving them together in a satire.

Dr. Medbury's heart is too honest either to deny or to defend his action in refusing to receive into his pulpit on Convention Sunday a distinguished and beloved brother minister.

We could have wished that instead of attempting to write humorously of the incident, Dr. Medbury had spoken some word of explanation.

The Use of Hymns

How the Hymn Books of the Church Are Being Rewritten from Age to Age

BY EDWARD S. AMES

IN THE Old Testament accounts are often given of the events which led to the making of songs. In the fourteenth chapter of Exodus a description is given of the flight of Moses and the Israelites from Egypt and of the destruction of Pharaoh's horses and chariots and soldiers. The narrative ends with the song of deliverance:

Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto Jehovah, and spake, saying:
I will sing unto Jehovah, for he hath triumphed gloriously;
The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.
Jehovah is my strength and song,
And he is become my salvation;
This is my God and I will praise him;
My father's God, I will exalt him.
Jehovah is a man of war,
Jehovah is his name.
Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea.

In the fifth chapter of Judges is a description of the battle of Deborah and Barak against Sisera, with a dramatic rehearsal of the route of Sisera's army and his own death at the hands of Jael, the woman in whose tent he sought concealment. After the victory Deborah and Barak sang of their triumph, recounting especially the deed of Jael:

Blessed above women shall Jael be,
The wife of Heber the Kenite;
Blessed shall she be above women in the tent.
He asked water and she gave him milk;
She brought him butter in a lordly dish;
She put her hand to the tent-pin
And her right hand to the workmen's hammer,
And with the hammer she smote Sisera, she smote him through his head.
Yea, she pierced and struck through his temples.
At her feet he bowed, he fell, he lay,
At her feet he bowed, he fell;
Where he bowed, there he fell down dead.
So let all thine enemies perish, O Jehovah!

THE GREATEST HYMN BOOK

The Psalms constitute the hymn book of the public worship and of individual devotion among the Hebrews. Nearly every Psalm is the emotional expression of some great experience, national or individual. As the pilgrims journeyed to Jerusalem to celebrate a festival, they sang the Songs of Ascent, such as the 122nd Psalm:

I was glad when they said unto me,
Let us go into the house of Jehovah,
Whither the tribes go up, even the tribes of Jehovah,
To give thanks unto the name of Jehovah.

In the adventures of those stormy days, during the formation and development of the Kingdom, individual leaders, like David, encountering many enemies and perils, might well sing in the words of the 18th Psalm:

Dr. Edward Scribner Ames

Jehovah is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer,
My God, my rock in whom I will take refuge;
My shield, and the horn of my salvation, my high tower.

Or the hardy king, remembering the long path over which he had been led, turned back to the quiet shepherd's life of his youth and uttered the words in which millions of souls have since found comfort, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."

THE BACKGROUND OF HYMNS

These songs and psalms reveal the circumstances under which all great hymns have been written. They have been the utterances of the human soul in great spiritual crises, of conflict, struggle, aspiration and achievement. The ancient psalms and hymns were written just as our modern hymns have been written. Julia Ward Howe wrote the Battle Hymn of the Republic under the inspiration of the battlefield and the "watchfires of a hundred circling camps." Kipling wrote the Recessional, one of the greatest of modern hymns, in the consciousness of the great spiritual destitution which threatened England during the Boer war. Cardinal Newman wrote "Lead, Kindly Light," as he was seeking guidance and authority in his own religious life.

We have many books which tell the story of our popular hymns—the story of the living, throbbing experiences out of which they came.

It is not enough that a hymn shall have had a vital meaning when it was written. If it is to live it must express for successive generations experiences and moods which are real and significant to them. A few of the great hymns, like some of the Psalms, express such typical moods of devotion, and in such beautiful and noble language that they probably will never disappear from the services of the church. But in large part the hymn book will continue to be rewritten from age to age. Each nation, in every century, will continue to write songs of praise, of penitence, of gratitude and of hope. The same influences operate here as in other kinds of literature. Just as each age brings its poets and historians, its peculiar type of sermons and prayers, so each sings its own songs.

EARLY HYMNS OF THE CHURCH

The church of the first century used the psalms of the Old Testament, but they composed hymns of their own, besides. The Middle Ages naturally wrote in moods of contemplation. From that time is preserved to us the well-known song,

Art thou weary, art thou languid,
Art thou sore distressed?
Come to me, saith One, and coming,
Be at rest.

Martin Luther expressed the spirit of the Protestant Reformation in his characteristic hymn:

A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing.

The eighteenth century, with its individualism and its introspection, was remarkable for the number and productiveness of its hymn writers. The works of Isaac Watts and Charles Wesley of the eighteenth century belong here.

Watts sings in a doubtful mood concerning this world and human nature, but with the greatest reverence and adoration toward God. He writes:

Far from my thoughts, vain world, begone!
Let my religious hours alone.

And again:

Great God! how infinite art thou!
What worthless worms are we!

Charles Wesley expresses the joyousness and fervor of the great Methodist awakening to which his own hymns contributed so much. He wrote:

> Come, thou Almighty King,
> Help us thy name to sing.

And also:

> Love divine, all love excelling—
> Joy of heaven, to earth come down.

In the middle of the nineteenth century there was a distinct epoch of hymn writing, expressing particularly two characteristic themes—the imminence of God and missionary zeal, both of which were new and profound motives. It was then that Keble wrote:

> Sun of my soul, thou Savior dear,
> It is not night if thou be near.

THE MISSIONARY HYMNS

Perhaps the missionary hymns are the most striking product of this period, breathing as they do the spirit of brotherhood for all mankind, and the sense of the expansion and establishment of the kingdom of heaven here upon the earth. It was then that Bishop Heber, himself a missionary in India, wrote "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" and "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

It is in these missionary hymns and the more recent hymns of social service that we have the best devotional expression of our modern religious ideals—the ideals of noble humanitarianism and practical efficiency. The missionaries themselves are today among the most progressive, most united and most spiritual representatives of modern Christianity, and their songs express their spirit.

REWRITING THE HYMNS

This process of rewriting and reediting the hymn book is going on rapidly at the present time. There is a tendency to drop from use several well-marked types; for example, the hymns based upon the wanderings of the Israelites and their attainment of the promised land are less used. The symbolism of "Jordan's banks" and "Canaan's happy shore" is not so appealing as it used to be. Neither do we care so much for the Oriental splendors of material magnificence or for certain forms of agricultural wealth. Not only are we less interested in the precise nature of the future life, but we are distinctly unattracted to certain conceptions which are to be found in familiar hymns.

We may be able to do fairly well with the first and last stanzas of

> For thee, O dear, dear country,
> Mine eyes their vigils keep.

But we are apt to be bewildered by the dazzling gems of the second stanza, where we read:

> With jasper glow thy bulwarks,
> Thy streets with emeralds blaze;
> The sardius and the topaz
> Unite in thee their rays;
> Thine ageless walls are banded
> With amethyst unpriced;
> The saints build up its fabric,
> The cornerstone is Christ.

Another large class of the older hymns which have become ineffective are the individualistic and mournful lamentations of the anxious soul bent upon securing assurance of its own pardon. We do not sing any longer—

> With tearful eyes I look around;
> Life seems a dark and stormy sea;
> Yet, mid the gloom, I hear a sound,
> A heavenly whisper, "Come to me."
> Come, for all else must fail and die!
> Earth is no resting place for thee;
> To heaven direct thy weeping eye,
> I am thy portion; "Come to me."

VIRILE HYMNS WANTED

Our age has too much virility, too much athletic vigor and is too "game" in its moods to employ such minor notes. We feel ourselves strong with the new-found forces of nature and with the power of co-operation, and with the unselfish ideals of social service. We cannot interest ourselves in the older idea that man is a "worm of earth." As has been said, "The regenerate man of the hymn is apt to be distasteful, he has lost his interest in things of this life and his one absorbing anxiety (as Charles Kingsley put it) is to save 'his dirty little soul.' He sighs for death and whimpers to be relieved of the burdens of life."

We prefer the noble, fruitful self-surrender of Matheson's words:

> O Love, that wilt not let me go,
> I rest my weary soul in thee;
> I give thee back the life I owe,
> That in thine ocean depths its flow
> May richer, fuller be.

We respond with the support and enthusiasm of our deepest social consciousness to Washington Gladden's words, so truly the expression of his own life:

> O Master, let me walk with thee
> In lowly paths of service free;
> Tell me thy secret; help me bear
> The strain of toil, the fret of care.

It is important to realize that the church itself is constantly selecting out of its hymn book certain numbers which nourish the spiritual life. The remaining parts of the book are as little used as if they were not present at all. From a collection of twelve hundred hymns a local congregation has used in ten years about 150. The other 1,050 hymns are as untouched as the imprecatory psalms or the Song of Solomon. The living hymnology of any church consists of the hymns which are actually used; just as the real Bible of a church or an individual is constituted by the passages which are read and felt.

I have said nothing about the music of the hymns, but practically the same principles apply to the tunes as to the words. Music has had a history quite as progressive as that of poetry and with much the same epochs. In church music the tunes with minor strains and slow movements naturally belonged to the doleful and unhappy words. With a more optimistic and practical religious faith, our music and our words together have become more virile and more buoyant. Both the tunes and the verses of the hymns require subordination to the great moral and ideal purposes of religion. They are not ends in themselves. Their technique is of no consequence by itself. It is called upon to convey meaning, to transform moods, to stir the deepest emotions of the heart. The music and the words together, neither one without the other, should tell the old, old story of infinite love and compassion, of human frailty and recovery, of aspiration and achievement.

"LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT"

It is when we get the union of musical harmony and of noble lines in the service of a great theme, as in "Lead, Kindly Light," that we reach the full power and beauty of our Christian hymns. A few such hymns, wrought into the memory and the emotions of a church, will feed its inner life and strengthen all its forces. To the intelligent selection and use of these treasures of our devotional life we should give careful attention. If our religion is worth while at all, it deserves the finest lyrics our poets can write and the best harmonies our composers can evoke. The art of the church cannot afford to be below that of the world. And it is probably in this realm of art, more than we realize, that the work of the church can be accomplished. It is in the devotional literature of her hymns that the Church has found her greatest unity and inspiration. It is in our hymn book more than anywhere else that the different divisions of the Church are fused together in a holy zeal and joyful fellowship. Here are met together in the common bonds of worship the Quaker poet, Whittier; the Methodist leader, Charles Wesley; the Unitarian heretic, Theodore Parker; the Episcopalian Bishop, Reginald Heber, and the Roman Catholics, John Dryden and John Henry Newman. This is in reality the Church Universal:

> Elect from every nation,
> Yet one o'er all the earth,
> Her charter of salvation
> One Lord, one faith, one birth;
> One holy name she blesses,
> Partakes one holy food,
> And to one hope she presses
> With every grace endued.

The Disciples Hymnal Is

Edited by Charles Clayton M

More Than Five Years Given to Its Prepa
It Is the Hymnal the Churches
We Expect Also to

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

THE publishers regard this Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. A widespread and eager interest in the appearance of this notable work has been already manifested.

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH contains all the great hymns which have become fixed in the habits and affections of the Disciples, and adds thereto the great catholic hymns whose use by our churches has not been encouraged by previous compilers.

In addition, the new book is distinguished by three outstanding features:

Hymns of Christian Unity
Hymns of Social Service
Hymns of the Inner Life

These three features give Hymns of the United Church a modernness of character and a vitality not found in any other book. This hymnal is alive!

The editors have been guided by the purpose to produce a hymnal that will sing the very same gospel that is being preached in modern evangelical pulpits.

Great care has been bestowed on the "make-up" of the pages. They are attractive to the eye. The hymns seem almost to sing themselves when the book is opened! The notes are larger than are usually employed in hymnals.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,

Now Ready for Delivery

rrison and Herbert L. Willett

ation
lave Been Looking For ell Thousands for Use in Christian Homes

The hymns are not crowded together on the page. No hymn is smothered in a corner. The words are set in bold and legible type, and all the stanzas are in the staves. Everything has been done to make a beautiful hymnal.

Aids to Worship

Supplementing the hymns are 100 pages of responsive Scripture Readings and other aids to Worship. The Readings are topically selected, and so arranged as to give naturalness to the responses. The American Standard Version is used. Orders of Worship, special forms for the communion service, and many prayers, responses and sentences topically arranged are in this department.

The Construction of the Book

The Disciples Hymnal is a delight to the eye and to the hand. A half-dozen of the best hymnals in existence were taken to one of the best printing houses in the United States with instructions to make a better book than any one of them. No expense was spared. The plates were cast from new type specially purchased for this hymnal. The paper is the best and of good color. The binding is most attractive. Every device known to the binder's art has been used for the strengthening of the back. Old fashioned tapes have been replaced by cloth running the entire length of the back, and by reinforcements of the first and last signatures. The book is made to last a long time!

Price, per single copy, in cloth, $1.15; in half-leather, $1.40.

Especially attractive introductory terms to churches purchasing in quantities will be made in the early days of the first edition. Returnable samples sent to ministers and music committees on request. Write us today.

) EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Convention Impressions

With Some Questions and a Few Suggestions

By GEORGE A. CAMPBELL

ON SUNDAY, just before the last session of the Des Moines convention, I met in the lobby of the Savery hotel one of the oldest and most honored officers of the best-supported missionary organization among us. "How have you enjoyed the convention and how does this convention compare with others?" I asked.

This was his significant reply: "I have been able to sleep well during this convention. At some former conventions I have not been able to sleep scarcely at all."

I remember to have talked with the same missionary leader at the close of the Atlanta convention. He was dejected. The proceedings had not pleased him.

To sleep well! Should not a saint always sleep well? Sleeplessness and saintliness, I surmise, would form a large and interesting, and perhaps a contradictory chapter of the Church Militant. To be concerned and at the same time content is an accomplishment few have gained. I wonder if the restless soul of Paul slept well when he was writing of contentment.

That the leader slept well while in Des Moines suggests that conditions were satisfactory, the receipts large, the organization running smoothly, the spirit of unity prevailing and the prospects bright. Every secretary, college president and leader seemed happy and confident. The note of victory was everywhere felt.

HOW MISSIONARIES FEEL

Sunday morning I breakfasted with Dr. Osgood and Sunday night I lunched with Dr. Lemmon. These men had not attended one of our international conventions for some time. I think ten years ago they last met with us in St. Louis. Well, they had a good opportunity to measure the change ten years had wrought.

I asked these brethren of the "far-flung battle line" as to the change they noticed. Their answers were practically the same.

"The progress has been wonderful," they said.

On being asked to analyze that statement they marked the growth of unity, the greater interest of laymen, a determination to give ourselves to that which is worth while, the bigness of conception of the Men and Millions Movement, an increased reverence and a vital vision of the worldwide field.

"My, how the children have grown!" cries the friend who enters our home after several years' absence.

"What progress the brotherhood has made," pronounce the missionaries just returned. Their judgment, I believe, is the best gauge we can have. It is heartening to know that the Des Moines Gathering of the Saints cheered them. They will keep at their tasks with lighter hearts.

DES MOINES WORK WELL DONE

The Disciples of Des Moines deserve praise for the simplicity and ease of the working of their organizations. At no time did they violate the principle that the most naturally simple way is usually the best way to perform a task, especially a task related to religious work or ceremony. The Coliseum was commodious but not suggestive of worship or of reverent decorum. It is better suited to a hand-clapping and yelling political convention than to a praying and hymn-singing Zion. A winking electric sign of a rooster at the side of the hall bothered my mind for some minutes. The mature saints doubtless had better concentration of spirit. A good deal of complaint was made of the decorum. Well, we are not the most reverent people in our home churches. In most churches there is an inexcusable hubbub before the minister opens the service. Scolding at the General Convention will not suffice to produce reverent decorum. We must have better training at home as to the meaning of worship.

But there is some excuse for restlessness at our annual gatherings. Only a minority of the speakers can be heard by more than a fraction of the audience. Is not a whisper unheard as bad as an unknown tongue? The human mind is not so constituted as to be long attentive to speakers who cannot make themselves heard. Some presiding officers should have interpreters. I hope the C. W. B. M. will hereafter hold its sessions in churches. The addresses could be repeated at different places, if necessary, to accommodate those wanting to hear.

MINISTRY TO THE SOUL

I hope some day we may hold our convention in a great temple dedicated to worship, in which music and art might minister to the soul. Our love for numbers and bigness betokens youthful and assertive buoyancy; but, by the law of compensation, robs us, at times, of the gifts of the culture of the more devotional and quiet worship. We are a people of different moods. Our hymnology is yet a mixed good and evil. The pioneer mood is still in the ascendancy. The note of doing, sometimes a noisy note, is often far clearer than the note of meditation. The prolonged prayer service is not natural with us. It creates a strain. In this perhaps we well represent our age.

UNITY SOMETIMES LACKING

At times many of us have been discouraged over the lack of unity in our brotherhood. It would seem that a people with the distinctive plea for the union of all Christians ought themselves to be sweetly and effectively united. The spirit of oneness of mind and heart and will should possess them.

Such unity has not always characterized the Disciples in local communities, nor in their general gatherings. The reason for discord we might not agree upon. Perhaps there has been undue stress on doctrine. Love should be given its proportionate emphasis. Truth without the right temper may be made hard and repelling. The Des Moines convention was one of beautiful and encouraging harmony. The delegate principle seems firmly established; but no one thinks the finality of organization among the Disciples is reached in the present General Convention.

Organization to be effective should represent all, enlist all, serve all, conserve all. Our present organizational life is far from fulfilling any one of these purposes well. The General Convention is of great service in unifying the work and the Societies, and in furnishing a means through which the churches may express themselves. But it has not as yet solved all problems. Let me mention a few of the problems of organization that ought immediately to engage our best thought.

ENLISTING THE LAYMEN

Few laymen attend our annual gatherings; few indeed attend our state meetings. If they do go there is no worthy work for them. The committee work at our convention is not seriously done. In none of our conventions, as yet worked out, do we get an expression of our democracy, nor do we get its co-operation throughout the year.

We are the most undemocratic of peoples in our gatherings. Our easy, hurried way of doing things is not democratic. A democracy, worthy the name, is a people that as a whole thinks its problems through. Our gatherings are not deliberative. They are more like chautauquas. We had one committee on resolutions that briefly brought before us some sixteen or twenty pronouncements on some very important subjects. They were passed with only here and there a remark and a suggested change. If we are to pronounce upon the labor question or the marriage and divorce problem or any other vital subject, we ought to have a strong commission studying and carefully considering the subject for a year. At present we resolve all too lightly.

AN UNDEMOCRATIC PEOPLE

Our conventions must be more deliberative, more democratic. The inspirational address has its place, but its place is not that of monopoly.

I think we made no pronouncement on marriage and divorce. No really great deliberative body could overlook this important subject. We must not be afraid of the difficult problems, and we must not be afraid of discussions. For some time after the motion to lay on the table was made with reference to the motion that the American Society should hereafter have nothing to do with the General Convention, I kept my seat. I finally voted for tabling; but I do like motions to table. Courtesy and safety lie in discussion and direct voting. It is strange that a people for many years foremost in debate have less deliberative discussion than any of the great religious bodies.

MORE EARNEST INVESTIGATION

I think we ought to have commissions to report on all important subjects before American Christianity and world Christianity, and that the reports ought to be printed and circulated at the beginning of the convention so all the delegates could vote on them intelligently.

The General Convention must come to relate itself to state and district organization and ultimately serve the humblest pastor and church. A very distressing problem among us is that of getting pastors properly and happily located. Our anarchy is humiliating and superlatively wasteful.

The General Convention will miss its purpose if it becomes solely a grand isolated gathering. How few old preachers were present at Des Moines! Regretfully few. I recall M. M. Goode, A. J. Bush of Texas, W. T. Moore, and a few others who might esteem it an honor to be called "old." Of course Rains, McLean, Richardson, McCash, Haggard, Breeden, B. L. and J. H. O. Smith, J. J. Haley, and others of like age are about ready to quote Browning: "Grow old along with me." And many others of us are not far behind them.

How few places of honor and influence we have for our older preachers! What do our preachers wise in years give themselves to? There is little choice. Usually they become "railroad" preachers, ministering to smaller churches. Often they get and cultivate a small farm. Our brotherhood thus largely loses their constructive counsel. Here is a leak at the top that does not largely engage our attention. J. J. Haley has no superior among us as a man who sees clearly and writes well. We are not honoring or using him as we should. I could give many other illustrations of the ineffectiveness of our democracy.

OBJECTS OF CONVENTION

Represent all, enlist all, serve all, conserve all, should be the object of our General Convention. To do this is the work of the future.

I was impressed with the happiness of the missionaries. The introductory services used to be more tearful than they now are. We are getting accustomed to the world task. The remote places are nearer. We have the joy of duty and of tasks better known. The word "foreign" is dropping out of our consciousness. A task wherever it leads is a task, and all tasks give the reaction of joy.

The union idea is growing among us. Peter Ainslie is making an important contribution. He will not allow our conscience to sleep. The secretaries and missionaries and representaives to conferences are all helping to a more catholic view. Representatives to the Panama Congress brought broadening messages. Throughout the convention there were more notes of universality than I had heard at any other of our gatherings. Every new movement looks away from others, but the proselyting age passes with maturity. We no longer put our literature in the railway stations with the Adventists and Christian Scientists. We are not now looking away from others so much as we are looking towards them. We are ceasing to have a provincial view of truth or of humanity.

I was impressed anew with the wise and masterly leadership of the Men and Millions Movement, with the increased receipts of all the societies, with J. H. Garrison's forward-looking letter, with the layman's session, with the overwhelming vote favoring the General Convention, with the new note of vitality in the American Society, with the superiority of the C. W. B. M. (the women are wonderful), with the alertness of the returned missionaries, with the sending of R. A. Doan out as superintendent of Oriental missions, with the faithfulness of the delegates in regularity of attendance, with the enthusiasm of those to whom national conventions were a new experience, with the friendliness of every one and with the deep earnestness and growing prayerfulness of the Disciples there assembled.

NO EPOCHAL ADDRESS

There was no address that was epochal. I had thought there might be. Most addresses were within prescribed lines, such as Ministerial Relief, Benevolence, Every Member Canvass, Church Extension, etc. I wonder if these are necessary every year.

I had thought that perhaps God would have given to some one an outstanding message that would steady us, thrill us and lift us into new altitudes of thought and feeling. That word was not spoken. I hope it is being prepared, or rather that some one is being prepared to receive it for us. He will have to be big in brain, deep in fellowship with Christ. And what a heart he must possess! One to encompass the sorrow of this sad and blundering generation, and yet such a heart as can keep from going mad. He must be a man who by faith can lead us into the way of building the kingdom of Love. Surely God, knowing our fainting souls, will soon speak the message we so longingly await. He may send some prophet to the Kansas City convention next year.

I wish we could have sent a commission to the suffering war zone. For what purpose? To feel with those at war. To bring back a message that would help us to enthrone in the hearts of America the White Christ. In certain moods while at Des Moines I marveled at our lightheartedness. We scarcely referred to the stupendous war. Perhaps most of us should avoid mention of it. But I pray for some Voice that can divinely interpret this awful cross to us.

I yearned for a deeper word than I heard at the convention. Ah, how often we yearn for an interpretative word we do not hear. The stars; a baby's light of eye, tone of voice, or laughter; the smell of a rose. O, so many things make us yearn for the word we cannot quite hear and cannot at all utter. We journey through life near to the vital and real, but not quite apprehending them.

THE COMMUNION SERVICE

A word as to the communion I must not omit. The service in Des Moines was orderly, impressive, reverent. I think it was a communion with the Lord. His presence was deeply felt. At times I have been fearful of the spectacular effect of our large communion services. Once or twice I have missed attending intentionally. The Des Moines communion helped me.

A few phrases in the prayers I would have changed, and I would not have had the people hold the bread and wine till all were served. It does not seem to me to be the simple or natural way. The essential unity is that all should be in the spirit of prayer at the same time. The mind ought not to be kept long on the emblems. It would be better not to use paper cups. They are too fragile and make too much confusion at the close. I have thought that it would be well if we could have communion at the churches Sunday morning, where our ministers are speaking. The plan would stress our plea for union and avoid all suggestion of the spectacular.

Still, the great communion service, to the majority of those attending, doubtless is the most helpful, the most impressive, and the best remembered of all the services. It is strange what seeming contradictions there are in religious groups. The Disciples, a non-ritualistic people, with no established doctrine of the Lord's Supper, make more of it than any other evangelical body. Custom is stronger than reason.

THE SPIRITUAL REALITY OF IT

It is indeed inspiring to contemplate thousands of faltering but aspiring men and women gathered to meditate on the deep significance of Christ's Passion, and quietly resolving to translate its meaning into their individual lives and to build its mighty Love into a world hopeless without its regenerating power. What a story we would have if we could tell of all the emotions of the assembled hosts, their realizations of failure and of victory, their deep longings for certainty, their memories of loved ones lost to view, their long strivings for saintliness with the flesh still so clamorous, the feelings of insufficiency as the tasks of life take ghostly form before them, and over and around every emotion the deep, deep cry for the Living God.

Blessed Communion, Thou hast spoken to my soul in its profound needs. Thou hast supported me. I am not alone in the struggle. The Church Militant and Triumphant is with me in the Sacrificial Way. Christ is fulfilling His promise to be with His own. The Universe is for us. Down from this mount the little flock shall go to receive the Kingdom, the gift of the Father's good pleasure.

Where shall we find consolation, support, cheer, for Life's last long mile, for the way so dark and rough, and yet so good, save at the Cross of Christ?

The Sunday School

Paul In Rome

SCRIPTURE, ACTS 28:11-31. LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 19.

ROME, but in chains. For years it had been Paul's burning ambition to preach the gospel in the capital of the nation. He had dreamed of it by night, he had thought of it by day, and now his dream was coming true, but how strangely! There are hours when we dare to dream of ourselves as free from limitations, but when we face the actual task we are keenly conscious of those chains which hold us fast. The boat touches the wharf, the brethren from the Roman church surround the great apostle to the Gentiles, his feet press the Appian Way, the seven hills rise before him; now he sees the temples and the forum, perhaps also the amphitheatre—but he is a prisoner.

John R. Ewers

* * *

But Paul had always known his "thorn in the flesh"—he had never been wholly free. Limitations were always upon him. He ran—but handicapped! He fought, but with pain. It takes a strong man to fight on and on against the odds. Pope was sick, but he wrote. Bunyan was in jail, but he penned his visions. Booker Washington was a slave boy, but he led his race. Brainerd was dying with consumption but he preached the gospel to the Indians until he fell. Wharton, with age creeping upon him, turned back to his beloved India. Harper, dying, faced his classes with a smile.

The weak man gives up when he becomes conscious of his limitations, but not the Pauline type. Rome—in chains—but preaching with a new note of earnestness. It was Patrick, uneducated, who with all his crudities and rudeness, carried the gospel to all of Ireland, and, in his day, preached to nearly every living person in that island. He stamped his passion upon that people and we know the power of Irish Catholics to this day—that was one thousand five hundred years ago!

* * *

Chained to a Praetorian Guard, dwelling in his own hired house, misunderstood by the Jews, mentally-torn concerning his approaching trial, weakened by the subtle oncoming of age, keenly aware of the danger of a martyr's death, deserted by all save one or two faithful associates—the house becomes a church, the preacher's voice is vibrant with high emotion. Never was the gospel preached better than by this missionary handicapped in Rome.

* * *

The average church member fails to do his best just because he is aware of his limitations. The average church member wants to do something—but he knows his weaknesses. It may be a habit, it may be lack of education, it may be lack of social prestige, it may be bashfulness, it may be the memory of a former attempt which ended in failure and chagrin, it may even be cheap clothes and financial embarrassment. Oh, there are a thousand reasons which people never tell you, but which the wise minister discovers for himself, as he goes from house to house and seeks to enlist people in active church service.

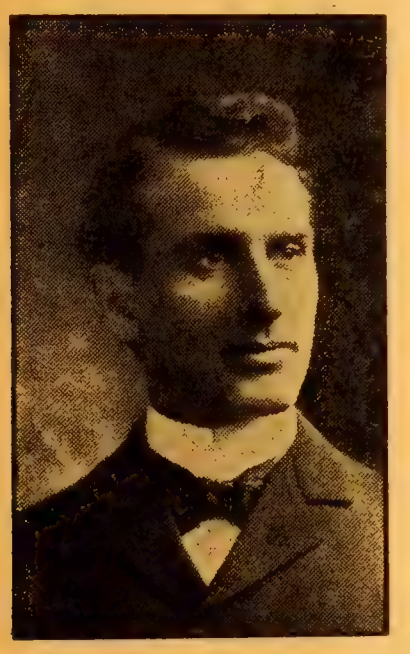
Learn from this lesson to preach the gospel, though in chains! How small our petty handicaps seem when pitted against the real burdens of Paul! No martyr's death threatens us. No real chains bind our arms. What we need is a heart like Paul's—a conversion as real as his.

* * *

Said Charles Kingsley: "I am not so desirous to possess a faith as to have a faith possess me." That's it. A faith that possesses me—do I have that? Deeply loyal to my Master—His will, my law—His wish, my joy. Nothing shall deter me. I will not compromise. I shall not retreat and I will be heard. Though bound by chains, though in hostile environment, though sadly limited, I shall preach the unsearchable riches of God's grace in Christ.

East End Christian Church,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

—In Ohio 350 schools are giving $5,500 this year to American missions. It is expected that 20 of these schools will reach the $100 mark on the day of the offering, the Sunday before Thanksgiving.



—The Des Moines Daily Tribune printed a half-column editorial in praise of the sermon delivered by Dr. Willett at the Plymouth Congregational Church, Des Moines, during the convention week. The theme of the sermon was "The Present Truth."

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

The War and Democracy in England

A SHORT war may not injure the democratic spirit, for it may be a spontaneous outburst of moral heroism; and if peace comes before the military habit is fixed democracy is not injured. But a long war is liable to fix the military habit and tend to bring a whole people downward in a reversion to a more primitive type of social life. Will the democracy of England and France suffer through this war? This is one of the really momentous questions that confronts the western world. Premier Briand of France, who was elected to office as a socialist and who has always represented the more progressive democracy of France, has gone so far as to say this war means greater centralization of power in the hands of a government that can act, and that this centralization of power will come by the consent of the people themselves. Thus the great social democrat, who is indeed one of the outstanding figures of this conflict, seeks to furnish an apology for his conviction by claiming for it democracy's sanction.

Prof. A. W. Taylor

And now several articles are appearing on Mr. Lloyd George, the other outstanding figure of this conflict, as a conservative. Mr. Lloyd George began his career also as a radical liberal. It is safe to say that any change in the democratic ideals of these two men has been the result of the pressure of circumstances and not through calm reasoning. Recently a British officer remarked on the government's assumption of strong-handed powers and the curtailment of personal liberties as a military necessity and added devoutly the hope that when the war was over there would never be any return to the old-time democracy.

Will it be possible that democratic England and France will fight Prussian militarism by military methods until they have habituated their governments to a type of that against which they battle?

* * *

The Fate of the Passive Resistor

Twenty thousand Englishmen have refused, for conscientious reasons, to volunteer, and when conscripted they refused to drill, submitting rather to such punishments as are devised, even being sent to the front untrained and compelled there to suffer the drastic military punishments visited upon a disobedient soldier in time of war. Two thousand have been cast into prison as common criminals, a fate certainly worse than that of going to the front, and many thousands of others have been drafted into auxiliary service, such as that of sweeping the mine fields and other work quite as dangerous as the actual fighting in France. Thirty-four have been sentenced to death, some of whom are Quakers.

Doubtless many who have plead for exemption on account of the conscience clause are not sincere, but are shirkers and cowards; but among them there are at least a very large percentage of sincere, conscientious Christian men who believe in the Tolstoyan doctrine of non-resistance. They are idealists and they may be mistaken idealists, but the fact that they can be condemned to prison and even sentenced to be shot reveals how impossible it is for the war spirit to be tolerant. They are no more conscientious and perhaps not even better idealists than tens of thousands who are risking their lives at the front for the sake of their country, but they are the men who hold the future in a sort of a prophetic grasp; certainly they are impractical, for if every man in any nation refused to fight when a strong military power threatened their commonwealth, it would not effect an end of war but an end of that very idealistic commonwealth.

It is gratifying to live in an age, however, when one European power will permit a conscience clause, even though the military spirit curtails its application greatly. The sentence has never been executed on any of the thirty-four sentenced to be shot and doubtless it never will be. One cannot help asking what would happen in Germany or Russia in such cases. As further evidence of the military idea, we may note that in an interpolation in Parliament it was admitted that the Sermon on the Mount could not be circulated in England today if the quotations were used in connection with a non-war propaganda, and also that Professor Bertrand Russell of Oxford was not only ejected from his position but refused passports in order that he might fill a lecture engagement at Harvard University.

* * *

Chicago Pastor to Lead in Philanthropic Enterprise

Rev. A. J. Francis has been pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Chicago. He has resigned to enter a new kind of work. He will be secretary of the Chicago Community Trust, with headquarters in the Harris Trust and Savings Bank. This organization was established last May. Some of the great financial leaders of the city are directors. It has in charge about a million dollars. The organization is patterned after that of the Cleveland Trust Company and has for its object the offering of a safe place of investment for persons who decide to contribute money or property for philanthropic purposes. Mr. Francis will continue to supply the pulpit of Pilgrim Church until a successor is found, but begins his work at once in the new position.

* * *

Episcopal Rector Speaks His Mind

Over in Newark, N. J., church circles have had a jostle in the farewell sermon of an Episcopal rector. The Rev. Mercer Green Johnston, of Trinity Church, one of the very oldest in this city of old churches. He is a friend of the working classes and frequently addressed their gatherings. His church is somewhat on the aristocratic order, and did not like this course, and thought that his preaching was utterly too plain. He was visited by a committee of the great ones and informed that the business of a preacher was to give his people what they wanted and try to please them as a grocer would try to please his customers. In his closing sermon he told his people that their attitude was sounding the death knell of their church. And he openly accused his Bishop of being hand in glove with the worldly element of the church and helping to injure it. It is not at all likely that anybody slept during this service.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Organization of "Stonemen" Divides

The big men's organization of Pennsylvania called the Stonemen has suffered division. It was organized around the personality of a popular rector by the name of Stone, hence the name Stonemen. At a recent meeting, a number of the men asked for a financial accounting; this was not immediately forthcoming, so they withdrew. The rector charges that rival denominations, jealous of the work of the society, caused its disruption. It is also charged by Mr. Stone that the malcontents have undertaken to inject politics into the organization. It seems probable that the movement is near an end as an interdenominational affair. It was managed in a way to arouse rather justly the suspicions of non-Episcopal bodies that the society was a half-way house into the Protestant Episcopal denomination.

Universalists in Boston Become Active

Universalists in Boston are anticipating the coming of "Billy" Sunday. For a time they proposed erecting a tabernacle and holding rival meetings, but this plan has been abandoned. It is now thought that there will be a concerted effort on the part of the forty-five churches to set forth the fundamentals of their faith.

Famous Social Apologist Dead

Benjamin Kidd, author of "Social Evolution" had much vogue twenty years ago and was hailed as the reconciler of religion and science. He declared in his much-read book that religion was absolutely necessary to social life. He died in London a few days ago and the American press gave but scant attention to his passing. He did much to arouse interest among churchmen in the then young social movement in Anglo-Saxon countries.

General Convention of Protestant Episcopal Church

The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church has just concluded its sessions in the city of St. Louis. There have been interesting discussions of many important things. The high church party undertook to forbid the marriage of divorced persons no matter what the cause of the divorce, but the house of deputies refused to concur in this program. The revision of the prayer-book led to many interesting discussions. The wording of the Ten Commandments was much abbreviated. There was a speech by a priest on prayers for the army and navy in which this pacifist wished to substitute some other prayers. He was voted down overwhelmingly.

Well-known Theologian Changes Chairs

Prof. E. Albert Cook, who is known to many ministers as the author of "The Christian Faith for Men of Today," has been until recently professor of Systematic Theology and Philosophy of Religion in the Congregational College of Montreal, having participated also in the work of four other seminaries in his city. He has been called recently to the chair of Systematic Theology in Howard University, Washington, D. C. The school has white students, but its chief service is to aspiring young colored people of the south. The chair to which he has been appointed is under the special care of the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Church.

Congregationalists Report Large Missionary Gain

The past year seems to have been a favorable one for the missionary organizations of the country. The American Board of Foreign Missions, supported chiefly by Congregationalists, reports the greatest year of its history the past year. The receipts were $1,207,126.54, which represents a gain of a hundred thousand dollars during the year. The society has raised the slogan of "Two Millions a Year for Foreign Missions." The society is projecting wise and statesman-like plans for its future.

New Head for Congregational Educational Work

Dr. Sidney A. Weston has been elected editor and head of the department of Sunday School publications of the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society. Since the retirement of Dr. B. S. Winchester a year ago Dr. Weston has been acting head of the department. He became assistant editor in 1904, and since 1909 has been managing editor. Dr. Weston occupies a strong position among the leaders of religious education and is widely known as a lecturer at summer conferences and institutes and as the author of some of the best graded lesson courses issued by the Pilgrim Press, the editor of others and editor of The Pilgrim Teacher.

Son of Famous Indian Missionary Is Dead

Dr. Adoniram B. Judson, son of the famous missionary, is dead. He was born in Burma eighty years ago. He has lived his own life in this country and earned renown. He was a surgeon in the union army during the civil war. He was an inspector for the New York board of health for nearly ten years, and wrote a number of medical works of merit. He has lived to see the Baptists inaugurate a big plan for a memorial to his father.

A Hundred Years of Harvard Divinity School

On October 5, the Alumni Association of Harvard Divinity School celebrated a hundred years of history since the formal recognition by Harvard University of the Divinity School as a part of the university system. Divinity instruction was given at Harvard much earlier but it is probable that the establishment of Andover resulted in a great stimulation of interest in Harvard.

To Lead in Congregational Tercentenary

Rev. William W. Scudder, D. D., has just entered upon his duties as associate secretary of the Tercentenary of the Congregational Church. Mr. Scudder was born in a missionary home in India. He graduated from Princeton University, and from Hartford Seminary. He has served as pastor, missionary superintendent and will be a well qualified leader to help the Congregationalists realize their tercentenary aims.

New York to Have "Billy" Sunday Next Year

It seems that New York is to have "Billy" Sunday after all. He and Mrs. Sunday visited Gotham recently and agreed on the location of a tabernacle which is to be the biggest ever. The spot chosen is One Hundred and Sixty-eighth street, near Broadway. As at present planned it woud seem likely that the meetings in New York might begin about the first of next March. This will be the most colossal undertaking of the popular evangelist up to the present time.

Disciples Table Talk

"A Day of Prayer" at Euclid Avenue, Cleveland

A year of great achievement is assured Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland, for a special day of prayer was set "for the members and friends of the church." October 25, Wednesday, was the day of observance. Thirteen "Objects of Intercession" were set before this congregation by its leader, J. H. Goldner. Among these are the following: "That God may raise up a large company of permanent intercessors in the church"; "That every member of the congregation may experience a revival of real religion"; "That the Lord may add many souls to the church"; "That all members may feel personally responsible for the financial welfare of the church"; for the success of the every member canvass; the men's dinner and the message to be given on that occasion by J. Campbell White; for the two-year program of advance. Prayer sessions were observed in the church chapel at five periods of the special day, beginning at 6:30 a. m., and closing at 8:30 p. m. The great success of Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, may be accounted for largely by the presence of the spirit of devotion everywhere and at all times prevalent there. J. H. Goldner is an ideal leader for this important church.

"Moving Pictures in Words" at East End, Pittsburgh

John R. Ewers is presenting before his people on Sunday evenings of October and November a series of "Moving Pictures in Words: Seven of the Biggest Stories Known." The following are the titles of the word "movies": "Tempted"; "A Business Man Comes Across"; "Picked Men"; "A Good Outlaw"; "Salome"; "The Man Who Knew"; "That's Gratitude." On Wednesday evenings Mr. Ewers is giving a series of lectures on "Men Who Have Made the Church." The following characters are being discussed: Polycarp; Justin Martyr; Tertullian; Patrick; Athanasius; Augustine; Benedict. The East End Church is known in Pittsburgh as "The Live Church."

Promoting World Peace at First, Philadelphia

The special series of Sunday evening services for the promotion of world peace, at First Church, Philadelphia, Pa., were mentioned recently in these pages. The series began last Sunday and the following are the topics treated, and the speakers provided: Oct. 29—"A History of International Arbitration," Wm. I. Hull, Ph. D., Swarthmore College; Nov. 5—"Dangers of Universal Military Training," President Isaac Sharpless, Haverford College; Nov. 12—"Judaism and War," Rabbi Eli Mayer, Rodeph Shalom Synagogue; Nov. 19—"Christianity and War," the minister of the church, Irving S. Chenoweth; Nov. 26—"Economic Loss Through War," Simon N. Patten, Ph. D., University of Pennsylvania; Dec. 3—"Women and War," Mrs. Lucy Biddle Lewis, member the International Committee of Women for Permanent Peace; Dec. 10—"The Preparedness of a Christian Nation," the minister of the church.

Nebraska State Work Presses Forward

Two years ago the Nebraska Christian Missionary Society had an indebtedness of $4,000. This was reduced to $1,600 by August 1 of this year, and now William Oeschger, the new state leader, writes that the entire indebtedness is wiped out, so that the Nebraska Disciples can press forward to worthy achievement. Already definite plans are being made. Two evangelists, L. W. Myers and Alden L. Hill, have been employed for full time. Both men are out in the field holding meetings. They have already organized several churches. In addition to this evangelistic effort, the State Society is planning to give pastoral assistance to strategic centers of the state, like Nebraska City, Omaha, McCook, Peru, Norfolk, Chadron and other points. A special campaign of efficiency will be conducted at the time of the district conventions in the spring months. A Sunday School expert will be in the state at that time to speak at all conventions, and to conduct rallies. The Jubilee convention will be held at Bethany in July of next year. Elaborate preparations have been made for the state offering on Nov. 5. Every church is being urged to be an honor roll church—that is, to maintain regular preaching all or part time; to conduct a special evangelistic campaign, and to meet the apportionment for state missions. The 1916 Year Book gives Nebraska 201 congregations, with a total membership of 23,468.

Secretary William Oeschger

Winter Plans at Steubenville, O., First Church

First Church, Steubenville, Ohio, has had the most prosperous year of its history. From the standpoint of numbers, efficiency, offerings for missions and deepening of the spiritual life, there has been a marked progress during the last three years. Three years ago this church was doing scarcely anything for missions and when the subject of a living link was suggested, everyone thought it would be impossible. Today the church is supporting four living links and during this year expect to undertake the support of another. The pastor, E. H. Wray, is leading his people to be "Christians to the limit." During the three fall months he is giving a series of evening sermons on "The Christian." Some of the subjects are as follows: "The Christian and His Consecration"; "The Christian and His Purity"; "The Christian and His Conversation"; "The Christian and Politics"; "The Christian and His Church"; "The Christian and His Home"; "The Christian and His Money"; "The Christian and His Friends"; "The Christian and His Sacrifice"; "The Christian and His Prayer Life"; "The Christian and His Glory." This series will close on the last Sunday in December. During the month of January a series of sermons will be given in preparation of the church for the special meetings which will begin the last Sunday in January. For the last three years the Steubenville congregation has been holding its own meetings and has found the results satisfying and permanent for the church. First Church has recently voted to erect a modern Sunday School plant, and to enlarge the present auditorium in order to accommodate growing needs.

Hoosier State Advances in Religious Education

Garry L. Cook reports that Sunday School work in Indiana is moving forward with increased momentum. Recently Bedford, Lowell, La Fontaine, Cambridge City and Broad Ripple remodeled their plants to meet the needs of modern religious educational work. Tab, Pence, Ripley, Madison, Garrett, New Castle and Maplewood Avenue, Terre Haute, have built new plants for the same purpose. Odon, Winchester, Martinsville and others have reported big days. Crawfordsville, Seventh, Indianapolis and Sheridan have already started classes in the new three-year teacher training program. Many new schools throughout the state adopted graded lessons for the first time on October 1.

A New Church in Kansas City

A Country Club District Christian Church has been organized in a Kansas City (Mo.) storeroom, with Frank L. Bowen as pastor. Among those present at the organization were Burris A. Jenkins, James Small, L. S. Cupp, M. B. Madden and Fletcher Cowherd. A live Sunday School has also been organized. It is reported that at this first regular session 175 persons were enrolled as members. Mr. Bowen began meetings in this store, with Bible classes in the afternoon and services at night.

Indianapolis Grows New Organization

One of the most successful missionary enterprises in Indianapolis is the West Side Mission, in the work of which Linn A. Tripp leads. Mrs. George P. Rosebrook is superintendent of the Sunday School. A night school has been started to meet the needs of the young people. Social service work is being featured. The Christian Endeavor Society, with an average attendance of about forty, is wide awake.

Three-fold Aim in Evangelistic Services

Murvill C. Hutchinson of the Fulton, Mo., Church, writes that his people are now in an evangelistic effort with Fife company leading. The three-fold purpose of the meetings are: To strengthen the local congregation; to liquidate a $7,200 debt on the church property; and to reach the students of the three local colleges, especially those of William Woods. At a recent meeting the church expense budget was raised in ten minutes. In one day there were 55 additions to the church membership. Mr. Hutchinson has had printed a Roster of Bible School Workers, which is an excellent idea.

Church and Public Schools Cooperate at Toledo, O.

The mayor of Toledo, O., delivered an inspiring address on "Influence" before the Norwood Church, Toledo, school on rally day. There were 547 persons present. Some forward steps have been taken at this school in religious education. An advanced teacher training class has been organized with 24 students. The texts used are "Studies of the Bible" and "Religious Pedagogy." On Tuesday afternoons there is a High School Bible class, which is studying Burgess' "Life of Christ." The fifth and sixth grades of the public school meet at Norwood Church every Thursday afternoon from 2:15 to 3:15, for Bible instruction, by leave of the Board of Education. The audiences at Norwood are the largest the church has ever known.

"Illinois Day" to Be Observed By Disciples of the State

H. H. Peters writes that November 5 is to be observed by Illinois churches as "Illinois Day." Mr. Peters sends an urgent note to ministers of the state. He says: "It is our hope that every preacher in the state will make a special appeal this time and that two notes may be sounded. First: Let us tell the people of Illinois the great work the Illinois Christian Missionary Society has accomplished. Many of the strongest churches in the state were founded and nourished by this society. Our work in Illinois would not be half so strong as it is had it not been for this missionary agency. Second: Let us tell the people that these achievements are only preliminary to still greater ones. Within the next few months a most thorough state and district campaign will be launched. It has been the aim of our office to supply literature for the day. If anyone has not received a sufficient quantity please notify us. Remember the day, November 5th."

Annual Home-Coming at Rantoul, Ill.

The annual home-coming of the church at Rantoul, Ill., was observed on Oct. 22. This was the closing day of a two weeks' meeting conducted by the pastor, A. F. Hunsaker, during which time there were 17 additions to the church membership. Three former pastors, Secretary Lehman of Eureka, Frank S. Stemm, and H. H. Peters were present at the services and took leading parts. Mr. Peters preached in the morning, Mr. Lehman in the evening. In the afternoon service brief talks were made by the three ex-pastors. The church roll was called and most of the members responded with verses of scripture. A royal reception was accorded the six charter members who were present. F. A. Miller read a tribute to the memory of the departed. At the noon hour the ladies of the church served dinner to about two hundred persons. Mr. Peters writes in high praise of the pastor, Mr. Hunsaker.

J. M. Philputt May Accept Pastorate in Virginia

The Daily Progress, of Charlotteville, Va,. speaks in enthusiastic terms of a sermon recently preached in the Charlotteville Christian Church by J. M. Philputt, formerly of New York and St. Louis. "The True Glory of Life" was the theme considered. Mr. Philputt has been called to this work. The local paper remarks upon the fine impression made by Mr. Philputt, both upon the Disciples and the members of other churches of Charlotteville.

R. P. Shepherd Promotes Community Civic Festivals

R. P. Shepherd, formerly with the Illinois and Cook County Sunday School Associations, is now in the work of promoting Community Civic Festivals. When completed this new bureau will consist of seven distinct departments: Child Welfare and Home Life; Retail Trade Extension; Salesmanship and Advertising; Community Music and Musical Development; Community Festivals and Pageants; Social Economics, and Lectures and Entertainments. Each department will be headed up by an acknowledged expert. One of the most effective chautauqua managers in the country has stated that Mr. Shepherd's scheme of work opens up the way to the plan to which all lyceums and chautauquas must ultimately come—making concrete and measurable contributions to community life and progress. Mr. Shepherd has just published a book on "Essentials of Community Efficiency."

CHICAGO NEWS NOTE

All Chicago Disciples are cordially invited to enjoy "A Love-Feast of Fellowship and Song," at Memorial Church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard, near Cottage Grove avenue. The date is Thursday evening of this week, November 2. This will be the occasion of the first presentation of "Hymns of the United Church," the Disciples hymnal, edited by C. C. Morrison and Dr. Willett. Songs from the new book will occupy the evening. Short talks by pastors and others will be given, but there will be no formal program. A choir of 100 voices from all the churches will lead the singing. The ladies of Memorial will serve supper at 6 o'clock for 35 cents. Singing will begin at 7:30, but late comers will not be considered late. It is expected that this will be the most enthusiastic meeting Chicago Disciples have ever enjoyed.

Kentucky Pastor Goes to Yale University

H. J. Brazelton, of Russellville, Ky., is supplying the pulpit at First Church, Mayfield, Ky., during the year's absence of the minister, J. J. Castleberry, who is spending the year in graduate work in Yale University. Mr. Castleberry closed his seventh year as pastor at Mayfield by conducting a two weeks' home force revival, which resulted in 26 additions, all heads of families but six. On the closing night of the revival the pastor and congregation of the First Baptist Church of Mayfield attended the service in a body. Mr. Castleberry will return to Mayfield in June and resume his fruitful work.

Autumn Festival at Main Street Church, Kokomo, Ind.

The second annual autumn festival was held at the Main Street Church, Kokomo, Ind., on the evening of October 15, under the auspices of the Whatsoever Club. The church was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. D. H. Shields, the pastor, preached on the subject, "I Led Them Straight, Sir."

Young Women of First Church, Springfield, Ill., Give Recital

The Young Women's Guild of First Church, Springfield, Ill., gave a recital on the evening of October 24, in which Mr. Vernon Henshie, organist at Pilgrim Congregational Church, St. Louis, presided at the organ. Mr. Vachel Lindsay read from his poems and Mr. Wallace Grieves of the Springfield College of Music also had part on the program.

Philadelphia Disciple Churches in Union Meeting

The union meeting of the disciple churches of Philadelphia was held at First Church on October 24. There was a meeting of the women in the afternoon followed by a supper served by the C. W. B. M. In the evening service it was expected that Finis Idleman of Central Church, New York, would be present and give a report of the Des Moines convention. The men of First Church held a meeting on Friday of last week, with Thomas J. Farmer of the New York Y. M. C. A. speaking on the topic, "From Prison to Pulpit." On last Sunday the first of the series of "peace meetings" was held at First with great success.

Young Men Lead in Third Church, Indianapolis

The Christian Men Builders' class of Third Church, Indianapolis, Ind., held a special service for the young men of the church and community two weeks ago. Merle Sidener, the teacher of the class, gave an address on "Making Good—Illustrated with Human Exhibits." Mr. Sidener is a former newspaper man. There are about a hundred young men enlisted in this class.

Fifteen-Year Call for C. J. Sharp

One of the most unusual calls ever extended to a minister was recently given to C. J. Sharp, pastor at Hammond, Ind. At the celebration in honor of Mr. Sharp's fifteenth anniversary as pastor

A Free Trip to Alaska—Take the Whole School Along

THANKSGIVING SUNDAY is the day to go, but ample preparation should be made in advance. Everyone who goes is asked to have fellowship in the support of Harry Munro and all our other home missionaries and Bible school workers.

A postal card, stating size of school, will bring all needed supplies. See Alaska and all America through Home Mission eyes. Robt. M. Hopkins, Bible School Secretary, American Christian Missionary Society, Carew Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A Missionary "FARTHEST NORTH" challenges our Bible Schools in their giving to go the "FARTHEST NORTH."

at Hammond, the congregation called their minister to serve them for another fifteen years.

Fort Worth Pastor Returns to Pulpit

L. D. Anderson returned to his pulpit at First Church, Fort Worth, Texas, on October 22, after an illness of three months. The day was made the occasion of a great rally.

Christian Endeavor on the Congo

As many readers of the CENTURY are aware, the world's largest organization of Christian Endeavor is at Bolenge, Africa, on the Congo. A glimpse of this unique organization is given by Mrs. Edna V. Edwards, who is one of the missionaries in that district:

"We have not yet organized our society in this primitive work, but the time may soon come when such need will be felt. Our meetings, however, are carried on much as they are at home, except with a much greater desire on the part of the members to make use of the time. We never have to devise means of getting the time used, but rather to limit a few so that all may have an opportunity to take part. They are as anxious to take up the time as we missionaries are when we are given a minute at one of our National conventions; and the leader must keep guard, as does Mr. McLean of us, to see that one doesn't take up his brother's time. There are songs, prayers and talks on the topic, as the members feel disposed. The leader needs only to read the lesson and open the meeting and the rest of the hour is fully taken up. The members are all Christians, and young and old take part together. Many apt lessons, often vivified by illustrations from their own lives, are drawn from the topic, the hour usually closing with a summary of points made or a brief talk by the leader. This is one place where Christian Endeavor is a success, for the Congo native does love to talk. 'Billy' Sunday's fitting illustration of an ordinary young people's meeting wouldn't suit here at all. Even he would appreciate the enthusiasm that we enjoy in our Congo Christian Endeavor meetings."

Missionary Returns to Task in India

Mrs. C. C. Drummond sailed for Harda, India, on October 3, to join her husband at his mission post under the F. C. M. S. Three of the Drummond children remain behind in order to be in school. The Drummonds have given 16 years to the advancement of the Cross in India.

Hollywood Church to Enlarge

Hollywood, Cal., Church is considering an offer of a very advantageous price for its present church property, with a view of erecting a larger and more commodious church building. Lloyd Darsie leaves this field in three months. This is next to the longest pastorate he has ever held, having spent twelve years at one time in Cleveland, Ohio. He has no definite plans announced after leaving the Hollywood work.

Illinois to Raise $5,000 for Missions from Sunday Schools

H. H. Peters, state secretary of Illinois Disciples, writes that although Illinois has been asked for one-tenth of the $50,000 to be raised from the country's schools for home missions, he feels that this obligation will be met. Most of the schools have ordered the program from the national secretary, R. M. Hopkins, and will make the Sunday before Thanksgiving a day to be remembered. Schools in all states should write Mr. Hopkins for the program, "Farthest North," and make preparations for this day of missionary promotion.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Seattle Sunday School Promotes Interest

Supt E. M. Carney, of First Church Sunday School, Seattle, has evolved a novel plan to keep up interest in the school from October 1 to July 1. All the pupils are to be given an outing to Mt. Ranier next summer, going by boat to Tacoma, thence to Ashford by special train and to Paradise Valley and Camp of the Clouds by motor buses. Nominal fines will be imposed for tardiness and absence during the Sunday School year, but punctuality and regular attendance will mean a two days' outing absolutely free of cost.

Among the Coke Workers of Pennsylvania

A new departure was made recently by Ray G. Manley in the Fayette County, Pa., Coke Mission in the open air service at Republic. The baseball field was secured as a meeting place; the Italian band of Republic called the people together; Miss Kleeberger led in the music with the aid of the little folding organ; Cloyd Goodnight of Uniontown and Mr. Pizzi of the Baptist Italian Mission gave the messages in the two languages. An attentive audience of over 200 Italians and Americans enjoyed the service. The offering on November 26 for American missions will help in this splendid work being done by Mr. Manley.

A Golden Jubilee in Nebraska

The Nebraska Christian Missionary Society will celebrate its golden jubilee anniversary next year. The jubilee offering for Nebraska missions will be taken on November 5 of this year. William Oeschger is now the state secretary.

W. C. Bower Resigns at Central Church, Lexington, Ky.

W. C. Bower has resigned as head of the educational work at Central Church, Lexington, Ky., because of the increasing work at Transylvania College, of which he is a faculty member. He will remain a member of the educational committee of the Sunday School, which is one of the largest in the state.

A Liberal Disciple Layman of Texas

A. D. Milroy, a generous layman of Brenham, Tex., has subscribed $100 per month to pay for the services of the evangelist of the Galveston (Tex.) District. Albert Fitts is the newly chosen evangelist. Mr. Milroy often preaches for the Brenham Church.

Farewell to Byron Hester at Pryor, Okla.

All the churches of Pryor, Okla., dismissed their services for a reception and farewell for Byron Hester, who has just left the Pryor work for Chickasha. Mr. Hester reports 5 conversions as a result of his last day of service at Pryor.

Jubilee Anniversary at Ada, Ohio

On October 1 the church at Ada, Ohio, observed its fiftieth anniversary. A jubilee service was held. In the morning H.

S. Lehr, president emeritus of Ohio Northern University, gave a history of the work in Ada. In the evening P. H. Welshimer of Canton delivered an address on the subject, "The Movement of Which the Ada Church Is a Part." Ada is the Ohio living link of the Canton Church.

★ ★

—It is reported that George W. Wise, pastor at Du Quoin, Ill., is contemplating locating in Salem, Ill.

—Milo W. Nethercutt has been called from Christopher to Herrin, Ill.

—E. E. Violett began a series of meetings with Graham Frank, at Liberty, Mo., on October 22.

—Burris A. Jenkins discussed the Mexican question at Linwood Boulevard, Kansas City, on Last Sunday.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—J. W. Darby is holding a meeting at Muskogee, Okla., where J. C. Burkhardt ministers. Mr. Darby comes from Tulsa, where he has added 306 members to the church there in the past fifteen months.

—John W. Kerns, pastor at Central Church, Austin, Texas, has been prevailed upon by his congregation to refuse the call recently given him by Magnolia Avenue Church, Fort Worth, Texas.

—J. W. Underwood of Anderson, Ind., Central, was the principal speaker at a banquet of the Young Men's Christian Association of Muncie, Ind. Mr. Underwood took his male quartet with him.

—W. P. Bentley has received a unanimous call to continue for a fourth year with First Church, Santa Cruz, Cal.

—Martin T. Pope, pastor at West Plains, Mo., preached, and a number of citizens made talks, at the homecoming day service at the West Plains Church.

—State Superintendent Wilford H. McLain, of the Ohio Sunday School work, between district conventions conducted a Bible school institute at Rushsylvania, October 1, and another at Rudolph, October. 8.

—Six automobiles of singers accompanied J. W. Underwood of Anderson, Ind., on the evening on which he preached the closing sermon of a two weeks' meeting at Ovid, Ind.

—A. T. Fitts, who recently resigned as pastor of South Side Church, San Antonio, Tex., has accepted the superintendency of the Galveston District, to begin at once.

—L. A. Crown, formerly pastor at De Land, Ill., has gone to Genessee, Idaho, to take charge of a federated work.

—T. L. Read, pastor at Emden, Ill., assisted by V. E. Ridenour, singer, closed a three weeks' meeting, with seven persons added to the membership as one result.

—M. M. Davis, pastor at Ross Avenue Church, Dallas, Texas, celebrated the twenty-sixth anniversary of his pastorate on October 15, giving a resumé of his extended ministry in this field from pioneer days.

—J. P. Pinkerton has resigned the work at Terrill, Texas. His successor has not yet been chosen.

—First Church, Canton, Ohio, has called N. B. Crabtree of Cincinnati to take charge of the music, look after the financial work and assist in a general way with the pastoral work of the church. Mr. Crabtree will begin his services November 12. Much attention will be given to work among the boys and girls. Mr. Crabtree was formerly a Y. M. C. A. secretary, and is well equipped for this sort of work. He was for four years chorister of the church at Portsmouth, Ohio.

—A large mixed class on "The Life of Christ" has been organized at the Texas State University in connection with the Bible Chair being conducted there by the C. W. B. M. Professor Frank L. Jewett will have charge of the course. The enrollment at the Bible Chair this year is reported the largest in the history of the institution.

—Prof. Joe L. Clark, a member of the faculty of the Sam Houston Normal Institute at Huntsville, Tex., and a well known Disciple, has been granted a year's leave of absence in order that he may pursue a course in Columbia University.

—David M. Shields, of Kokomo, Ind., First Church, gave the address at the annual banquet of the Kokomo Y. M. C. A., speaking on the theme, "Optimism."

—On October 22 A. R. Liverett, pastor at First Church, Jefferson City, Mo., gave a report of the Des Moines convention to his congregation. On the evening of this day the ordinance of baptism was administered to five candidates. Mr. Liverett has served as pastor at First Church five years and a half, and his work is now at high tide.

—Over 175 persons have been added to the membership at East Dallas, Tex., Church since January 1, 67 of them during the past six weeks. John G. Slayter leads in this field.

—Ernest C. Mobley, of Amarillo, Tex., First Church, has engagements for lectures at the Carson County Teachers' Institute, Panhandle, Tex.; at Fort Worth, under the State Lectureship of the Disciples, and before the College Station Y. M. C. A.

—Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Denny, long time residents of Des Moines, have moved to

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

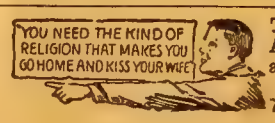
The Consolidated Press Clipping Company
MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO



625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

Then get "The HERALD" A large, live monthly, 25c a year. Sample free.
THE HERALD,
723 W. 62d St., Chicago.

50c Postpaid
Satisfaction Guaranteed
Fits Any Pocket
For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Iron-strong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.
U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55-B—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders:
Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

Ottumwa, Ia., that Mr. Denny may be nearer his secretarial work in the Southeast District.

—Chas. D. Hougham, for four years pastor at Streator, Ill., has accepted the work at Dana, Ill.

—W. D. Cunningham and family, missionaries in Tokio, Japan, sailed on October 8th for their vacation in America. Their address while in this country will be Connellsville, Pa.

—A. E. Cory was the chief speaker on Home Coming Day at Davis Street Church, Ottumwa, Ia.

—Kalona, Ia., has issued a call to B. W. Pettit, but no decision has been reported from him.

—C. C. Crawford, of Indiana, has been called to the work at Albia, Ia.

—A men's class has been developed at First Church, Dallas, Tex., from an original membership the first of the year of 17 to a present enrollment of 85, an increase of about 500 per cent in thirty-nine Sundays. T. H. Mathieson is teacher of the class.

—W. G. Loucks, who is now leading the work at the Boulevard Church, Detroit, Mich., reports ten persons added to the membership there within a month. He writes that the Sunday campaign is new in full swing.

—During the three years' ministry of Clark W. Comstock at Mankato, Minn., 139 persons have been added to the church membership. Mr. Comstock has just begun his new task at Charles City, Iowa.

—The new $20,000 building of the church at Selma, Cal., is nearly ready for dedication. E. T. Nesbitt, the pastor, is endeavoring to secure Hall L. Calhoun of Lexington, Ky., for the dedication service and also for a series of evangelistic meetings.

—Report comes that a pastor has not yet been chosen to succeed Henry Pierce Atkins at First Church, Birmingham, Ala.

—Garry L. Cook, state superintendent of Indiana Sunday School work, gave an address at the teacher training commencement at Seventh Church, Indianapolis, on October 24. His subject was "The Teacher's Preparation."

—E. S. Cummings, superintendent of Seventh Church, Indianapolis, has been elected president of the Marion County Sunday School Union.

—John P. Sala, of one of the Buffalo, N. Y., churches, spoke from the pulpit of Central Church, Peoria, Ill., while on his way home from the Des Moines convention. Mr. Sala stopped later at Detroit to hear Billy Sunday, who will soon conduct a revival in Buffalo.

—The first number of the winter lyceum course at Central Church, Peoria, Ill., will be a reading of "Ben Hur," by Earle Wilfley of Vermont Avenue Church, Washington, D. C.

—A late report has it that J. P. Pinkerton, who has resigned at Terrill, Tex., will enter the newspaper field.

—An unusual feature of the 1916 Texas Christian Lectureship, to be held at Fort Worth Nov. 13-16, will be the absence of a "chief lecturer."

—President E. M. Waits, new leader at Texas Christian University, reports that the campaign to raise $150,000 for this institution is well on the way, and that the leading business men of the city are behind the effort.

Do Your Friends This Favor

Would you like to do a service to your friends, at no cost to yourself? We want to send several complimentary copies of The Christian Century to four friends of yours who you think might like the same sort of religious weekly that pleases you. Give us names and addresses of the four friends to whom you would like several copies sent.

Please fill in all the blanks and mail to us today. You place yourself and your friends under absolutely no obligation by doing them and us this favor. We wish to advise your friends that the paper is being sent at your request, but your name will not be used at all if you so request. Thank you!

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

My Own Name and Address is.....

.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

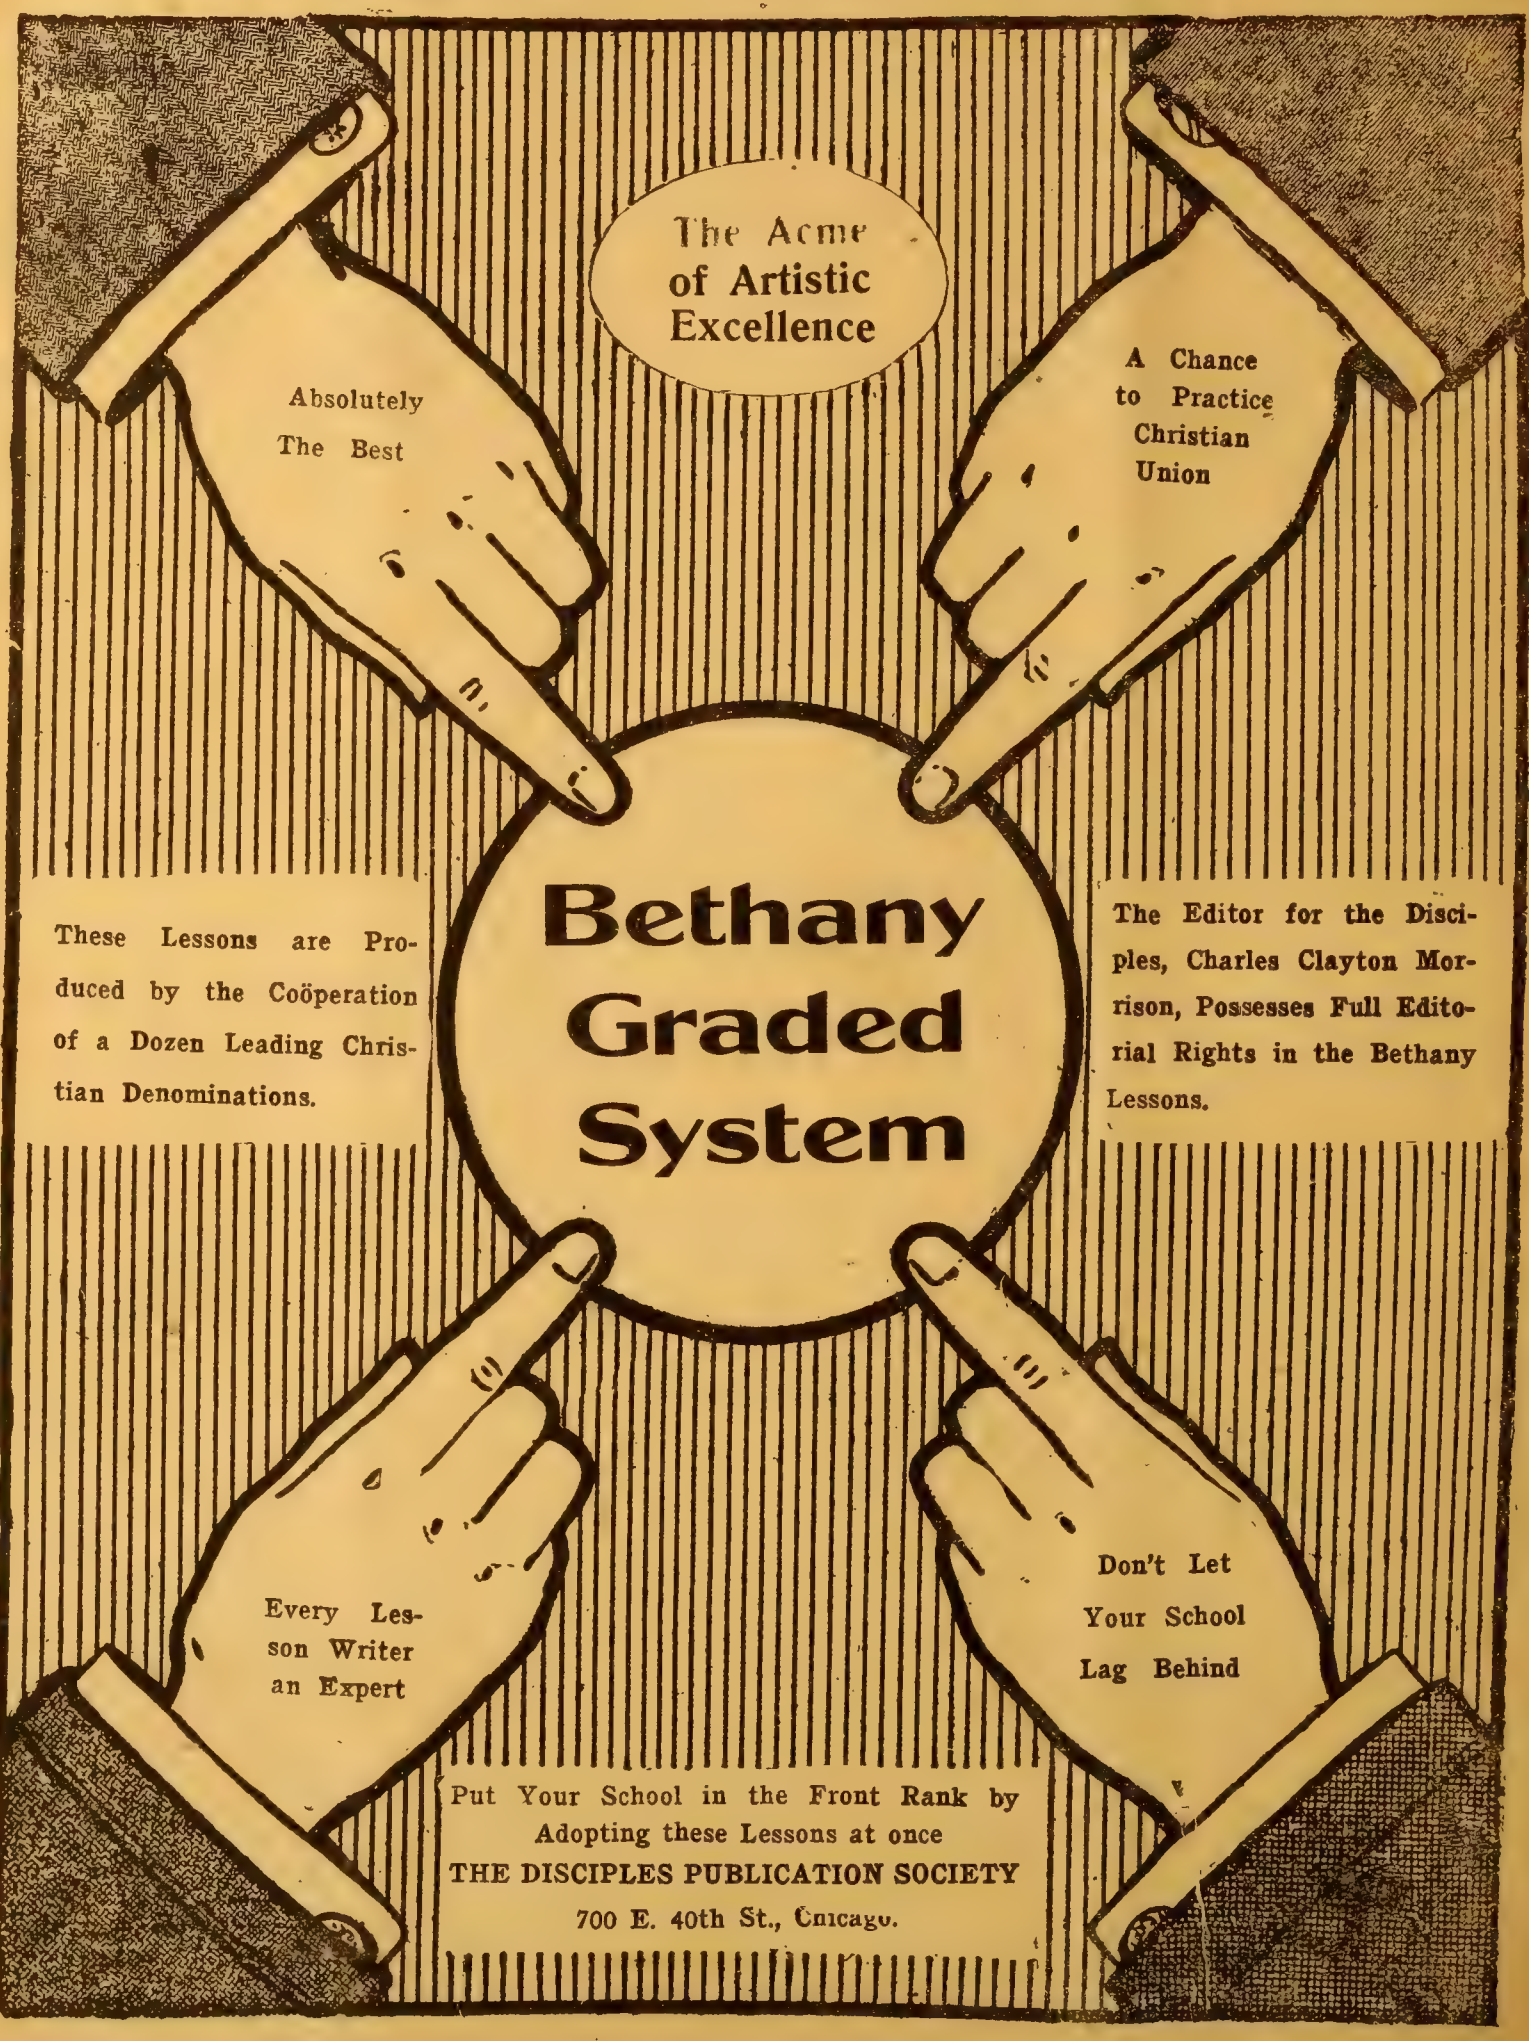
Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:



Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

Disciples Publication Society, 700 East 40th Street CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII November 9, 1916 Number 45

The New Crisis in Mexico

By Perry J. Rice

Photographing the Unseen

By H. D. C. Maclachlan

The Prayer Meeting

Editorial

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Charles Clayton Morrison
Editor

A Constructive Religious Newspaper for Christian Homes

Herbert L. Willett
Contributing Editor

Great Year Ahead for Our Readers

An Unequalled Staff of Writers

WE are able at this time to announce such a staff of writers as has never been equalled by a newspaper among the Disciples of Christ. The writers have won places of authority in all their respective fields of interest. Their presence on our staff will make the "Century" vibrate with life. Here is the list of them:

ALVA W. TAYLOR will revive the department of social interpretations, which our readers of several years ago will recall as our "star" department in those days. It will be richer and more attractive in its new setting, just as the mind of Professor Taylor is riper and more authoritative than in the days gone by.

JOHN R. EWERS is back! He wrote a forthright article on the Sunday School lesson each week for two years which added more new subscribers to The Christian Century than any single feature of the paper. He is better than ever. Read him in this issue. He speaks for himself.

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL, a sage without the years of a sage; a mystic; a friendly counsellor; an interpreter of the things of the soul. His articles will be a frequent feature of the coming year.

IDA WITHERS HARRISON, constructive feminist. She dropped out of our contributorial department a year ago on account of her heavy duties in preparation for the Panama Congress. Our sense of loss was overcome when her services to the Congress brought her the most distinguished recognition accorded any woman at Panama. Mrs. Harrison will write on timely themes of special interest to modern womanhood.

EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES, philosopher and preacher, will follow the promptings of his own interest and write on the vital and thought-provoking themes he never fails to select.

ORVIS F. JORDAN has for several years made of the "Larger Christian World" page a means of broadening the vision and sympathy of all our readers. The same high standards will characterize his conduct of this department in the future, and in addition many contributions of other kinds will appear from his pen.

CHARLES T. PAUL is a unique figure among the Disciples. He symbolizes missionary science and statesmanship, but we have his promise to contribute a series of studies in the spiritual life. As a leader of The Christian Century family's devotions our readers may expect uplift and enrichment from President Paul.

ELLIS B. BARNES, a preachers' writer! Our minister readers talk about the things Mr. Barnes says in the "Century" more than about any other contributions we publish. The Christian Century is not made primarily for preachers, but for thoughtful

FINIS IDLEMAN

CHARLES T. PAUL

ORVIS F. JORDAN

IRENE T. MYERS

E B. BARNES

laymen, that is, plain Christian men and women. This accounts for the intense interest with which ministers read and commend the "Century." Mr. Barnes will write not simply for preachers, but about preachers, and the laymen will enjoy his articles as much as will our minister readers.

FINIS S. IDLEMAN, New York's Disciple leader, who has wrought a transformation in Central Church in that metropolis, will interpret his experiences and report the progress of religion from the point of view of the East.

IRENE T. MYERS has promised to present from time to time a number of articles dealing with certain phases of the new womanhood. Dr. Myers is a writer new to Christian Century readers. A doctor of philosophy from Yale and a world-wide traveler, she is Professor of History in Transylvania College. What she will write will have both authority and piquancy.

EDGAR DEWITT JONES, a writer who uses words with unerring delicacy, who thinks in the most human terms, whose writing has that indefinable something called "charm." Dr. Jones will speak often to our readers on the fine issues of the spiritual life which he senses so unerringly.

H. D. C. MACLACHLAN, pastor of one of the greatest churches of the East, but who keeps his thought-life intensely busy with the deeper things of spiritual culture, will write this year for The Christian Century. He always deals with big and urgent issues.

What shall we more say? When has there been spread so rich a feast as this before the readers of any religious journal? And these are only the features that we are able to arrange for in advance. Besides these there are the carefully selected articles on vital, human conditions and experiences, in the search for which the editorial staff is constantly on the alert. Certainly every person familiar with the current literature of the Disciples will agree with the statement of a very conservative reader who said recently that The Christian Century "is doing more to enrich the mind and widen the horizon of the Disciples of Christ than any other influence among us."

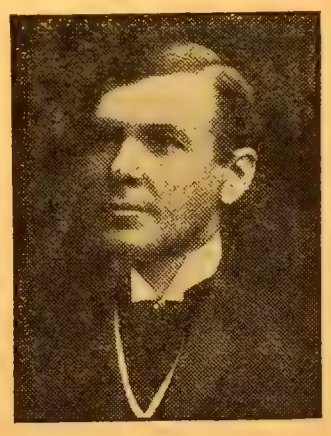
Dr. Willett on the Bible

DR. WILLETT will write a series of articles on the Bible, how it grew, who its authors were, how the books came to be gathered into a single book, what we mean by inspiration and authority as applied to the Scriptures, and many such questions of a practical and critical sort in which every thoughtful Christian man and woman of today is interested. His first article will be forthcoming soon. It will open up a line of study that should be singularly attractive and timely. In anticipation of these articles our readers will wish to get The Christian Century into the hands and homes of their thoughtful friends.

"Why I Am a Disciple"

Some years ago CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, editor of The Christian Century, promised to write a series of articles on the subject, "Why I Am a Disciple." The promise, it seemed, was not kept at the time and the plan to write the series was finally crowded out with other things. The obligation, however, has not been forgotten. This series will be one of the features of the interesting year that is before us. There will be perhaps a dozen short articles. They will be quite personal and intimate, setting forth the way in which the teaching and aim of the Disciples appeal to the editor.

IDA W. HARRISON



H. D. C. MACLACHLAN

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL

EDWARD S. AMES

EDGAR D. JONES

CENTURY SUBSCRIBERS!

Renew Your Own Subscription 6 Months or a Year Without Cost

Return This Certificate

with $2.00 to pay for a full year's subscription to be sent a friend of yours who is not already taking the Christian Century and we will credit you six months on your own subscription for your kindness in the matter. We will also send you a copy of "The Divinity of Christ," by E. S. Ames—a book which sells regularly for 75c.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—I enclose $2.00 for which send The Christian Century for one year to the following new subscriber:

Name_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

For this cooperation on my part, please credit my own subscription six months as promised, and send me a copy of "The Divinity of Christ."

Sent by_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

P. S.—For $6.00 we will send The Christian Century to two persons who are not now subscribers, credit your own subscription for one full year and send you a copy of Dr. W. T. Moore's great "Comprehensive History of the Disciples."

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII NOVEMBER 9, 1916 Number 45

The Prayer Meeting

IS THE PRAYER MEETING DOOMED?

IT IS significant that a certain blight has fallen upon the mid-week meeting of the church. There are to be found some rather large and seemingly successful churches which have had no prayer meeting in years. There is small sense of lack in these churches, except on the part of a few individuals whose training in the church gave great importance to the prayer meeting.

There are churches which have not been willing to confess defeat in holding a Wednesday evening service, and so have changed the character of the meeting. A teacher-training class occupies the hour, or a mission study class. One pastor recently put on a series of missionary lectures for Wednesday evening. Another pastor in an evangelical church is giving a series of lectures on the Greek philosophers. Rather apologetically he undertakes a justification of this course by calling attention to what he calls "Christian" elements in the thinking of these ancient thinkers. In all these churches the prayer meeting has ceased to be, though the church may not yet know it.

Meanwhile, the Christian Science movement has grown up in our midst and depends on its prayer meeting as one of its chief agencies to win people to its faith. The meetings are held in the church auditorium and are attended by hundreds of people. There is something very real to be talked about by the people who have been healed in body or helped in other ways.

Perhaps it is just here that we have a cue to the whole prayer-meeting problem. People go to meetings that have reality. The modern church has been trying to run an old-time prayer meeting in an old-time way and the people have not been interested. While the prayer meeting has been undergoing this change in popular favor, the whole subject of religion in the evangelical church has been subjected to criticism and revision.

Churches in progressive communities are talking more about truth and service and less about personal salvation than formerly. The older evangelicalism used a prayer and testimony meeting in connection with its evangelism. Historically, the prayer meeting was a meeting to strengthen struggling souls who sought a home in heaven. An age that gives a different emphasis in religion has, naturally, lost interest in the old-time prayer meeting.

★ ★

Of course, there are some lesser causes for smaller prayer meetings. The modern church has multiplied meetings through the week in a way unknown to the older evangelical churches. This has been at the expense of the devotional and worshipful meetings of the church.

Then there are many more places to go now than in former days! There is the ubiquitious moving picture show. There is the socialized school building, with its entertainments and classes. Woman's clubs, lodges, and many other agencies unintentionally compete with the prayer meeting and tend to decrease its attendance.

What would happen if the prayer meeting should finally pass away and become only a memory? Many pastors say they would be glad. Yet when the church that has one talks about abandoning it, even the members who never go feel a kind of thrill of horror at the idea of belonging to a church that could not maintain a prayer meeting. Is this instinct sound? Would it be a backward step for the evangelical churches of our day to give up the mid-week meeting? Very positively we think it would. There are elements in the old prayer meeting that are worth preserving, and that must be preserved.

If we give up the prayer meeting, we will give up the only popular assembly of the church where the church members can talk freely about religion. There would remain only the small groups in Sunday school classes, and here the limitations of a set lesson puts metes and bounds to the discussion. The prayer meeting is the most democratic thing the church has. If she loses it, the only thing a Christian can do is to go to church and be lectured by professionals. We can scarcely imagine a live American evangelical church submitting through the year to such a schedule.

★ ★

In these days we are having a definite revival of interest in the subject of prayer. It has come as a reflex influence from the mission fields. The more religious Orient sends our missionaries back to us with more prayer in their souls than when they went out of our rather lukewarm fellowship. This new prayer movement is not exactly a revival of prayer. It is a reinterpretation. Our religious leaders are thinking their way into an attitude toward prayer that will not offend the modern mind in religion. We will no longer storm the gates of heaven with special petitions whose fulfillment would be miracle. We shall seek more often to have God change our minds than to undertake to change the mind of God. We are showing hospitality to written prayers as never before. We feel the deep need that the great religious souls of history should teach us how to pray. If we do learn to pray again, we will certainly demand a prayer meeting.

The older liberalism is a poor, dead thing. If any church of Disciples tries to be liberal in the Unitarian way, and substitutes lectures for prayer meetings, it will have the successes and the deep failures that inhere in that process. We need now to learn the way to be forward-looking and at the same time keep alive our sense of the deeper religious values. There can be no religion worth the name without God. There can be no God worth obeying and loving to whom we cannot speak.

A new intimacy with God will give us a prayer meeting again.

EDITORIAL

SOME CHRISTIAN UNION ADVOCATES

IN THE recent General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at St. Louis there was a bitter fight over the re-election of Bishop Lloyd, who presides over the foreign missionary work of the communion. His offense has been that he insisted on his representatives sitting in fraternal conference with other communions at Panama. The man who led the floor fight in the house of bishops against his re-election was none other than Bishop C. P. Anderson, of Chicago, who won much newspaper notoriety in preaching on Christian union and who is the leader of the Commission on Faith and Order, which promotes Christian unity from the Episcopal point of view.

The party led by Bishop Anderson insists that there can be no Christian union except upon a certain definite basis. In this they agree with a certain type of Disciples. They differ from these Disciples as to what this basis is. That particular kind of Disciple would find his basis in what is rather loosely defined as the "New Testament Church." The Episcopalian would insist that there could be no unity without the three orders of the ministry—bishops, priests and deacons.

A sense of humor is often lacking among ecclesiastics. It would be possible to unite with anybody if it could be done by a process of surrender. Socialists might become capitalists. Methodists might become Catholics. Jews might venerate St. Patrick.

We often hear "Christian union by compromise" denounced. What other kind is there? There are deep convictions that can never be compromised, of course. But two partners in business are always compromising opinions to live together. There is no human fellowship other than in compromise. The unwillingness to compromise on unessentials is a thing that has made wars and enmity—and that keeps sectarianism alive.

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

NOVEMBER 12 is World's Temperance Sunday. If there is anything on which the Christian world has come to practical agreement, it is on the subject of temperance. For a long time certain religious communions were notoriously backward in this reform, but now we can count even upon the Roman Catholic church to join the Protestant forces in many communities in expelling the saloon. There are courageous priests who have led the temperance fight, as in Duluth. These men have often braved out the opinions of some of the leading members of their churches.

While the Protestant pulpit has been particularly effective in advocating the abolition of strong drink from the land, the Sunday School has been the quiet and constructive force which has given us a generation of men and women who from their childhood have learned to fight this evil.

Just now the greatest thing to be feared in the temperance reform is a certain over-confidence inspired by the astonishing victories of the past ten years. A good many people incline to lay down their arms in this battle. While the victory is very near, if all the forces remain marshaled, there could be serious reverses if an adroit enemy should find the Church asleep at its post of duty.

The slogan has been raised, "A saloonless nation in 1920." This seemed impossible of realization at first, but now most temperance people can speak of this goal with great confidence. If, however, it is to be realized, it is very important to elect dry legislatures and a dry Congress this year.

Every good cause in the world will move forward mightily when the great reform is complete. The economic resources that may be turned into useful channels make an enormous total. Terrible as is the drain of war, alcohol has taken through the years a heavier toll of the nations than war. The saloon must go that the kingdom may come.

DISCRIMINATION AND CANDOR

OUR readers will agree with the editorial judgment that the article on the Des Moines convention by Rev. George A. Campbell in last week's Christian Century was a most adequate interpretation of that gathering. Mr. Campbell touched the convention at many points and illuminated every aspect.

In all essentials he agreed with our editorial estimates which appeared the week before. From the standpoint of fellowship and organizational reports the convention was a blessing and an inspiration. From the standpoint of the great world situation which the Christian mind of today confronts the convention was weak, if not unaware.

Mr. Campbell pointedly asks whether the routine annual addresses for the various boards are essential. He seems to suggest that they might be omitted or reduced in number in order to give time to deliberative business sessions. He refers to the one motion he had a chance to vote on—a motion to lay something on the table—and says that he does not like motions to table. (Inadvertently the printer omitted the word "not.") He likes free, open discussion and believes we must have more of it if we are to be a truly democratic people.

Like our editorial, Mr. Campbell's article dealt with the convention discriminatingly, not simply gulping the whole six days down with the word "great," as Dr. Medbury in last week's issue seems to imply we should have done, like one of our contemporaries to which he refers.

Our conventions have many great features, but there are features about them that are not great, and need reconstruction. The only way to effect a reconsideration is to discuss these features with candor.

The Christian Century has a body of readers trained to expect that kind of frank, clean-cut discriminating appraisal both from the editorial pages and from our contributors.

To be discriminating in one's judgment is not a sign either of discouragement or lack of sympathy.

On the contrary, it presupposes a deeper hopefulness and a finer sympathy than wholesale approval.

CHRIST OUR ANCHOR

THE Ruling Passion of life, as Dr. Van Dyke showed most charmingly in his collection of stories by that name, may be any one of a large list of things. From the cradle to the grave we are attached to different pursuits. The child covets a toy only to throw it into the discard. The boy loves the wilds of nature, but after awhile the streets of a great city are more interesting. The young man loves a maiden, but when his love is returned, he often seeks romance in new places. Such is the fickleness of the human heart and its attachments.

We have but few friendships that last through life. The tie that binds us to our parents is broken by death. Our children leave us to make other homes. The marriage relation endures longer than any other human relation, but chivalry and devotion of man and wife are sometimes tested by the passing of time.

Christ is the one satisfying friend of all the years. He meets the need of every period of the developing soul. He is brought to the little child in the Christmas story. To the boy he is the hero who was not afraid even of death, and who marched into Jerusalem on his last journey, well knowing what awaited him. His moral purity is a stay to the young man in temptation. His intellectual depth satisfies the intellect of the mature man. His assurance of the everlasting life brings deep contentment to the heart of old age as it waits for the end long delayed.

Our earthly friends are lost to us when they fail to grow with us. Christ has seemed to us to grow with the years as we have progressively realized the beauty of his character, the deeper spiritual values that stand revealed in him.

It is for these reasons that the anchor has been one of the symbols of the Christian religion. Christ is the one completely satisfying Friend we have throughout life. He gives to our spiritual life a firmness and a poise that we could never know without his gracious presence.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

THE man of the world has an impression that religious people spend much time over matters of trifling importance. We resent his criticisms, of course, but once in awhile something happens which really gives support to his position.

For instance, a recent number of the Christian Standard is at hand in which there are several articles discussing the solemn and important question as to whether we should say "the Christian Church" or "the Church of Christ." Some aver that the two phrases mean the same thing. This is not denied by anybody, but others would regard a stricter verbal accuracy as much safer, though this loyalty to words is to the words of a language not in use in our Lord's day and to a translation that was far from being inspired.

We have heard of a man who insisted on the reimmersion of a candidate because some of her hair floated on the top of the water. There is the case of the man who refused to commune because the bread was broken before thanks instead of afterwards. A good brother once refused to use individual communion cups and was allowed to have one of the old cups for his individual use; this, of course, gave satisfaction to all concerned.

Meanwhile, we are reminded of the condemnation our Lord placed upon the Pharisees. They tithed mint, anise and cummin and neglected the weightier matters of the law. Formal piety obscured human welfare. Against such piety our Lord's face was set like flint. The few times his indignation was aroused was when he was confronted with the petty and inconsequential bickerings of religious partisans who had lost from their lives the wonderful humanitarianism of the Old Testament.

We shall not say that "much ado about nothing" is the vice only of conservative religious minds, but we will say that the church of today faces perils real enough to make verbal quibbles ridiculous in the midst of the battles of the Lord.

LEGISLATION PROTECTING WOMEN

THE Illinois factory inspector's report on labor conditions in the State is a great human document. The subjects of child labor, the labor of women and similar matters are treated. Occupational diseases have been studied with the greatest care. In reference to the labor of women, it is interesting to note that the dismal forebodings of a few years ago about the ten-hour law in Illinois have not been realized.

It was freely prophesied that women would be driven out of industry by men, once their labor was restricted as to hours. Probably there has never been a time in the history of Chicago when the labor of women was more sought after by the big corporations than at the present moment, as is attested by the great display ads. in the city seeking such labor.

Though the law was regarded as a foolish piece of radicalism a few years ago, it is now seen that it is altogether too conservative. The men have secured an eight-hour day in many of the occupations through their unions. The unions enrolling women have not grown strong, so women for the most part had no other protection than that which is afforded by the law. The result is that an over-conservative law allows the women to work ten hours, while the men are on the easier schedule of eight.

The factory inspector of Illinois has the courage to champion the issue of giving women in the State an eight-hour day. Again, it will be urged that the women will be jeopardized in their positions. The reason they will not is that people actually deliver more labor product in eight hours than in ten, owing to the greater efficiency of the worker. The gain to the women workers, many of whom will be the future mothers of the race, would be enormous if they were never worked to the limit of their strength, but always had a reserve to meet illness and the responsibilities of maternity.

THE BUSINESS CREDIT OF THE CHURCH

A MINISTER was heard to say the other day that when he first became pastor of his church, it could not get credit for a gallon of gasoline which the Aid Society needed to cook a dinner. That is a rather startling statement, but it can be duplicated in other communities, we fear. There are a number of reasons why this may be the sad condition of a church.

In some cases the church has a lax business administration, and there is no one person who receives the bills and looks after the accounts. It may be the trustees, or the treasurer, or some other person whose business it is to pay a certain bill. Often a prominent member orders something on his own responsibility and fails to report it.

Then there are churches so badly managed that they are chronically in debt. Every year they expect to have a deficit, and the members make sure there will be one by making a smaller pledge in anticipation of the annual deficit raising business. Such a church is apt to be slow with its bills to the point where the credit of the church is seriously injured in the community.

Of course, there is the evil-minded man who, for some insufficient reason, will impeach the financial integrity of the church. If the church has done right, his attack is usually a boomerang.

The results of a loss of business credit are serious. Sometimes the church will be engaged in a building enterprise and will need credit to tide it over. An unpaid coal bill might kill a big loan.

Business men do not like to join a church that does not pay its bills. Every man has his pet moral aversion. The physician despises patent medicine. The school teacher is annoyed by bad grammar more than are other men. The first and great commandment in the mind of a business man is, "Thou shalt pay thy bills on the first of each month." A church or an individual that rejects this code can be no friend of his.

The church of Jesus Christ has the same obligation as do its members "to provide things honest in the sight of all men."

A GOOD TOKEN

DISCUSSING the question of publicity for Disciples' conventions, the Christian-Evangelist quotes from The Christian Century the following:

> We let our secretaries and mission boards run our business for us while we sit in convention and passively listen to speeches.
>
> When the secretarial autocracy gives way to a democratic method of doing the business of these 10,000 churches of ours, our conventions will have vitality and reality enough to be regarded by the press as having some news value.

and comments thus:

> For once at least we are glad to record our hearty sympathy with a proposition suggested by our Chicago contemporary. We need better business methods in our conventions and we also need better publicity arrangements. We trust that both of these features will receive attention when the Kansas City convention meets in 1917.

We are glad to find in the editorial pages of the Christian-Evangelist this revival of a clean-cut support of the delegate convention. From the beginning of the movement for an adequate organization of the churches of the Disciples into a representative convention our St. Louis neighbor has been actively committed to it. But since the new editor came upon the scene the paper has been strangely silent on the subject. Now, however, Mr. Kershner puts the Christian-Evangelist on the side of an even more thoroughgoing application of the delegate idea than the present General Convention contemplates. Advocating two conventions, one inspirational and the other deliberative, an editorial in the issue of November describes as follows the sort of deliberative assembly it favors:

> All that is required is to have a strictly representative system for the business part of the convention, and to throw the other sessions open to all who can attend. The business should be handled by a select body, composed of representatives, carefully chosen and not exceeding more than a few hundred delegates at any one convention. These men should constitute a committee of the whole to carefully examine, scrutinize and pass upon the reports of all of our societies. Their findings should be reported to the convention at large and from thence to the entire brotherhood.

This, in principle, is admirable. As to certain details, there would probably be differences. It would seem to be undesirable to hold two conventions. There is no reason why popular inspirational meetings could not be arranged by the one representative gathering, to occupy, let us say, afternoons and evenings, while the entire forenoon of each day is given over to the deliberative consideration of the business of the churches.

Let the Christian-Evangelist and the Christian Century join in the consistent advocacy of some such plan as this and the present chaos which threatens the integrity and further growth of our movement will be overcome.

COMMUNITY EFFORT FOR "TRUNK" CHRISTIANS

A Y. M. C. A. in the East used display advertising to urge the "trunk" Christians of the community to renew their allegiance. The "ad" was a catchy one and represented a man rummaging through an old trunk for the long-lost church letter. Behind the advertising movement were the combined efforts of the churches, who were deeply interested in the success of the publicity campaign.

A census was taken of a high grade neighborhood in Chicago not long ago, and not very many people failed to sign up as members of the church. The questioners, however, inquired where the people held their membership, and then the true state of affairs appeared. These former Sunday school superintendents, teachers, Christian Endeavor workers and all the rest were still, in many cases, members of a village church, and were not doing anything at all with religion.

The big leak of the modern evangelical church is not through losses to infidelity or to the non-orthodox sects. It is a leakage such as we have just described.

Could we have a national day when every Disciple minister would practice the Golden Rule and write a letter asking spiritual care for every absent member? If a member lived in a town where we had no church, should not his minister seek the assistance of a minister of some other communion?

Could not many local communities carry on a recruiting campaign with all churches cooperating for the explicit purpose of getting people to join by letter and statement?

The excuses of these "trunk" Christians are numerous. They do not expect to stay long. They need a rest after so much hard work somewhere else. They cannot afford to contribute. They live a long way from the church of their choice. The most potent reason why they are not active servants of Jesus Christ is found in that other Bible trinity—the world, the flesh and the devil.

Real religious interest conquers every obstacle. Real loyalty to Jesus Christ leaps over every hindrance.

THE DEATH OF PASTOR RUSSELL

THE newspapers announced last week the death of "Pastor" Russell on a train en route from Los Angeles to New York. Thus ends the career of a very interesting character.

He was a clerk in a store in earlier days and studied the Bible, unaided by the schools. He arrived at some opinions which were a curious fusion of Universalism and Adventism. He looked for the end of the world in 1914 and held strongly to the idea that the punishment of incorrigible sinners was death and not hell. It was on the basis of this latter belief that he undertook at times to make an appeal to liberal people.

In the realm of Christian teaching "Pastor" Russell was a bizarre figure and will be soon forgotten.

His great achievements have been in the field of publicity for religion. Here he has made some very astonishing successes.

His colporteurs have peddled the books of the "Millennial Dawn" system from one end of the country to the other. Few religious books have ever had such a circulation. The presses of the movement have poured out a perfect flood of tracts, papers and other literature, and there has been no lack of money to get this scattered abroad. No little sect in the history of America has ever become so well known.

In addition to printing, "Pastor" Russell was quick to seize the importance of the moving picture as a religious medium. He produced a film which has been shown to great audiences all over the country. It set forth the Russellite propaganda.

"Pastor" Russell has been much criticised. He was divorced from his wife. He came into notoriety in connection with his "miracle" wheat. Yet the flood of gold that poured into his coffers seems never to have been used for his personal luxury nor for any evil practice. One who heard him could scarcely doubt that he believed his own doctrines. He was a tyrant in his own family of the faith. This fact will soon be forgotten.

It remains to be seen whether he has added another denomination to our American church life.

A Word From the Publishers

THERE is a well-known conviction among publishers of religious newspapers that people of provincial interest, narrow outlook and sectarian prejudices are much more likely to "hustle" for their paper than are the people of broader intelligence and non-sectarian sympathies. There is much to justify that opinion.

It is hardly to be wondered at, therefore, if an occasional religious journal deliberately adopts an editorial policy that appeals to the prejudices, ignorance and sectarian feelings of such readers in order to capitalize their zeal in building up the subscription list.

We received some time ago a letter from a man who claims to be an evangelist. He had received a sample copy of The Christian Century and took occasion to write us a heated letter on the meaning of baptizo. His letter contained about three hundred words. By actual count thirty-four were misspelled. He used "done" for "did" and said "had went." For the first personal pronoun he used "i." But he was dead sure about the Greek! The letter closed with an indignant refusal to subscribe for The Christian Century, and conveyed the information that he was a reader of a certain other paper, which he named, and that at the last place where he held a meeting he had taken over fifty subscriptions for it. Our correspondent asked us to convey to the editor of The Christian Century the suggestion that any further discussion of baptism was impertinent, inasmuch as scholarship had at last spoken with finality!

What we now wish to point out is that this illiterate reader is a big asset to that newspaper. He "hustles" for it. He "boosts" it. He and a thousand others of like spirit really maintain it. Shall the children of larger light, of wider outlook, of catholic sympathies, be less zealous and less practical in their generation than the children of provincial and sectarian prejudices?

The Christian Century has staked its all on the faith that a sincere and earnest interpretation of the best thought of the best thinking portion of our brotherhood would command precisely the same kind of zealous and enthusiastic backing that is given those newspapers whose policy is determined by the desire to catch and hold the class whose attitude is represented by our correspondent above.

And we have not been disappointed!

In the three years of its present management the friends of the paper have grown not only in numbers but in zeal. Most of our new subscriptions are obtained by present subscribers. Laymen and thoughtful women and pastors in all the states put forth earnest effort to introduce the paper into the homes of their churches.

Our readers are our best agents!

There is a rapidly increasing company of big-minded laymen—business men—who see plainly that the future effectiveness of the Disciples as a religious force depends upon the success of the Forward Movement now taking shape among us. Many of these business men are just as active and practical in their work for The Christian Century as the preacher referred to above is for his paper.

These men "hustle" for subscriptions.

We appreciate this kind of cooperation. It sustains and justifies our faith.

And now we wish to call the attention of our readers to the present great opportunity to secure new subscriptions from their friends.

Just show that two-page announcement on pages 2 and 3 to almost any thoughtful churchman or churchwoman you know, and ask for two dollars, and you will get it!

The pastor of a church of over 1,200 members sent in his own $2 for renewal last week accompanied by a fine list of new subscribers whom he had solicited.

A judge, one of the most distinguished citizens in his city, makes it a rule to bring at least one new subscriber with his own renewal. Our list shows he now has at least a dozen "stars in his crown."

We were a little timid about the way ministers would feel when asked to pay $2 a year, like everybody else, but judging from the returns, they feel good about it. Rev. W. G. Ryan of Youngstown, O., enclosing his check for $2, says, "I consider that I am getting a bargain in getting The Century for $2 per year, and I will not accept it for less."

That seems to be the way they all feel, and it confirms us in the opinion we have held all along that we were doing unwisely in selling for one dollar a paper that costs over three dollars a year to produce.

A great year is before us. All are agreed that editorially The Christian Century is the most attractive and constructive newspaper published among the Disciples. We, the publishers, are determined to push it with renewed vigor.

But whatever degree of success we shall attain will depend, finally, upon the cooperation and zeal—in the most practical way—of our present readers.

THE PUBLISHERS.

The New Crisis in Mexico

By PERRY J. RICE

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article contains an analysis of the Mexican situation and a constructive suggestion for the further action of the American people. Mr. Rice lives in El Paso, and has naturally had exceptional opportunities for studying the tendencies and prospects south of the Rio Grande. It would seem, however, that, apart from this presumption in favor of whatever word he might speak on the Mexican problem, there is every argument in favor of the particular suggestion he here makes for the immediate relief of the suffering Mexican people.

THE smoke and dust of the great quadrennial political battle in the United States, with all its partisan shibboleths and its misrepresentations, has prevented us from seeing the conditions in Mexico as they are. Now that this battle is drawing to a close perhaps we shall be able to think seriously and calmly of our duty as a Christian people to our near neighbor on the south.

CARRANZA ABLE, BUT LOSING

The fact is that something approaching a new crisis is impending. While it may be truthfully said that the de facto government is more largely in control of the country than any government has been since Diaz left, still its control is far from complete, and herculean problems are confronting the leaders. Missionaries who have been at work in Mexico for years and who have recently come again to the border for safety are more perplexed and pessimistic than they have ever been. They frankly say that Carranza is the only man in sight who possesses the qualities of leadership necessary to restore order, but they are now doubtful if he will be able to achieve this much desired result. They fear that he will not be able to maintain the measure of control he now has very much longer unless something is done to aid him. The outstanding reasons for this feeling may be set down as follows:

In the first place, there is poverty, want and misery affecting many people in various parts of the country. It is confidently asserted that in many localities the people are at the point of starvation, and that some are now starving. No crops adequate to meet the needs of the inhabitants have been raised for a number of years; there is no remunerative work and no money in circulation. This fact more than any other accounts for the present unrest and the repeated uprising of the people. They are hungry, and enlistment in bandit bands offers temporary relief at least. The masses of the people in Chihuahua do not like Villa, but they do fear him, and when he or his lieutenants promise immunity from his wrath, and food, even though these promises are likely to be broken, having nothing else to do and nothing in sight to subsist upon they join his bands. Hunger drives many good men to do unworthy things, and it ought not to be surprising, therefore, that the Mexican peons who, as everybody knows, are of low grade intellectually and morally, yield to its appeal. They do not want to fight. They are tired of war, but they see no hope for themselves or for their country and so grasp at straws.

GREAT LACK OF FUNDS

The de facto government is seriously handicapped for lack of funds. It cannot operate successfully, and is in no position to meet the situation arising out of this widespread feeling of unrest and hopelessness. It can not successfully prosecute its campaigns, and so bandits rove at will and continue to commit whatever depredations they may wish. In some instances recently they have quite overcome the government forces for brief periods at least, and this again lends itself to heighten the fear and feeling of distrust on the part of those wishing to be loyal to Carranza and his government.

What makes matters still worse, the constitutionalist army and civil officials are not above suspicion. In many instances it is said that they have been proven untrustworthy and have yielded to temptations of graft. This ought not to be surprising when we remember the whole situation. Bad as it appears, it is probably true that there is less of graft now than there has been any time during the revolutionary period. The officials are generally of a higher order than heretofore, but still they have not, in all instances, stood the test, and this fact also complicates the situation seriously. It is one of the main reasons for the skeptical attitude now manifest on the part of those who know the facts.

HATRED OF AMERICANS INCREASES

Besides all this there is widespread, and, I am told by reliable witnesses, increasing hatred of the "gringoes." Even if Carranza wished to cooperate with us in an effort to suppress banditry it is doubtful if he could do so and maintain even a semblance of authority over his forces. The Mexican people generally dislike Americans. They have not been able to understand the motives of the administration at Washington. They are suspicious of us. Too much has been said in certain circles in favor of intervention, and of taking over a portion of their territory, to permit them to feel at ease regarding our plans and purposes. They do not distinguish between official acts and language and the utterances of partisan and irresponsible newspapers. Our troops are scattered all along the border in manifest readiness to cross the line at any moment. Some of them are even now on Mexican soil. This may be a wise and prudent course for the United States to follow under all the circumstances, but the Mexican people, remembering the past, and looking at everything from their own viewpoint, as everybody else does, cannot understand us, and they are suspicious and feel a growing sense of distrust and hatred.

There is, of course, the possibility that Carranza may continue to control the situation in a measure and gradually work out the problem, but the task looks well-nigh impossible of achievement unless he has help of some kind. If he could be adequately financed it would greatly help, provided his own officials could be trusted to properly use funds placed at their disposal, which, as I said, is open to doubt.

ANARCHY LOOMING

If Carranza fails, real anarchy seems inevitable. There is ever the possibility of intervention on our part, and it may come to that. Many have persistently predicted it and feel that now at length it is inevitable. Not all of these prophets by any means are personally interested, nor do they desire war. They simply see no way out of the muddle but the forceful way of armed intervention. It may come to that, but in my humble judgment, there is at least one more move to make which might work wonders. It is at least worth thinking about.

The present crisis calls for immediate and practical relief. The people of the United States should organize for it and forward as speedily as possible great quantities of food and clothing to the starving, naked Mexicans. We are ministering thus to the Armenians and Syrians, and surely we should have an equal interest in our nearer neighbors. Such a ministry on our part would mean more for the peace of Mexico than any single thing that could be done. It would not only minister to their immediate temporal necessities, but it would tend to quiet the feeling of unrest and distrust of which I have spoken, and would make it far more difficult for bandits to organize their bands for purposes of plunder. It would serve to allay the anti-American sentiment and thus make it far easier for our government to deal with the whole situation.

WHAT SHOULD CHRISTIAN AMERICA DO?

Why should we not do this? The American people have taken tons of wealth out of Mexican mines and shipped thousands of trainloads of lumber and cattle across the border. Hundreds of our people have grown rich off of Mexico. This may have been done legitimately. I am not now questioning the method; I am stating the fact. Some have grown rich out of the very distress and sorrow of Mexicans in these recent years. Surely we owe them generous treatment now in these days of their deep poverty and dire necessity. In what better way could Protestant Christians of the United States demonstrate their desire to help the Mexican people than to minister now to their physical needs? It is eminently the Christian thing to do whether it accomplishes all the results desired or not. May it not be the cheapest way to help Mexico out of her distress and enable her to realize her ideals of freedom and justice,—ideals for which her people have fought, blindly and ignorantly, to be sure, but heroically, as well, for a century.

THE PRESENT NEED.

The Mexicans need our practical help; they need it immediately, and we owe it to them and to ourselves to give it to them. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ so soon to meet in St. Louis might promote such a program of relief. Surely someone should undertake it. The need is very great, and it presents both a responsibility and an opportunity. If we must go into Mexico, let us go with a bread line and thus pave the way for the teacher and the missionary who must follow.

El Paso, Tex.

A clergyman, a man of about sixty, looks older than he really is, a fact of which he hates to be reminded. At a small rural station an aged and bent farmer, panting violently, boarded the train.

"I have had to run," he said, "nearly half a mile to catch these cars." Then, addressing himself to the clergyman, he went on: "It's a bad job, sir, when old folks like you and me has to run."

The clergyman, frowning, asked the farmer how old he was. "I'm eighty-six," was the reply.

"O!" said the clergyman; "there's twenty years' difference between you and me."

"Goodness, sir," exclaimed the old man, "you don't mean to tell me you're one hundred and six!"—Boston Transcript.

Photographing the Unseen

What Being a Christian Means

BY H. D. C. MACLACHLAN

> "But we all, with unveiled face reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit."

THESE words of Paul tell us how to become Christians. A Christian is one who is like Christ—how do we become like him? By exposing ourselves to his influence. The Apostle uses the figure of a glass or mirror, but the same idea is more accurately expressed in the modern art of photography, by which a picture of an object is transferred to a sensitized plate; still more accurately in X-ray photography, the peculiarity of which is that it makes copies of things which are invisible to the eye, thus fitting in with the fact that in spiritual photography the one photographed is the Unseen Christ.

As the bones of a body otherwise invisible are made visible on the X-ray photographic plate, so is the character of Jesus Christ, himself unseen, reproduced in the character of those who submit themselves to him.

THE UNSEEN CHRIST

There are four elements in this spiritual photography: First, the object to be photographed—the Unseen Christ, "Beholding, as in a glass, the glory of the Lord"; second, the sensitized plate, the human soul prepared by faith, "with face unveiled"; third, the picture, the copy of the X-ray; fourth, the time exposure, "from splendor to splendor."

The greatest of all realities are the unseen realities. We have only to name them to make this clear. Justice, honor, purity, faith, hope, love—who ever saw these or weighed them in the balances or saw them quoted in the markets of the world?

Now, the highest of all the Invisibilities is God, or, what for us Christians is the same thing, Jesus Christ. In Him are summed up all the other invisibilities. He stands to the world for all those unseen things that shine afar as the goal of human endeavor; for all those ideals which the Apostle had in mind when he wrote: "In whom, though now we see him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

The hope of the race is in being brought under dominion to him. The hope of the individual life is to reproduce his life. And there is this peculiarity about his invisibility—that it was once visible.

ABSTRACT IDEALS COLD

The Unseen Christ was once a man among men. His character and work we know. Abstract ideals are at best cold and distant. They must be clothed in flesh and blood if they are to move the world—which is the very thing we have in Jesus Christ. Invisible now, he once was visible—a man among men, a character to be admired, imitated and loved by his brotherman. Therefore, even in the Unseen Christ we have a definite, concrete moral achievement set before us—a character to imitate—a life to reproduce in ourselves.

But if the Unseen Christ is to be reproduced in human lives, these lives must be prepared to reproduce him. No object can be photographed unless on a sensitized plate—i. e., on glass so treated chemically that the rays of light from the object will leave their mark upon it when exposed to their influence in spiritual photography. The human soul is the sensitized plate. It is prepared by faith. Faith so alters its nature that it becomes responsive to influences from the unseen world—making us sensitive to Jesus Christ, so that his spirit can leave its mark upon us.

THE SENSITIZED SOUL

If a photographic plate could speak I think it would say: "A little while ago I was irresponsive to the light which simply passed through me, leaving no impress of itself upon my surface. But now I intercept its rays, I reproduce its images, line for line, light for light, shadow for shadow, so that even those who have never seen the objects to which I am exposed, can see in me a copy of them. I can do more than that. I can make other copies. I can reproduce them indefinitely. I can scatter far and wide pictures of the face first photographed on me."

WHAT IS FAITH?

Is not that the very language of the soul that is sensitive to the Unseen Christ? Can it not say: "A little while ago spiritual things made no impression on me? I had no love for God and his Christ. My life was a copy of evil rather than of good. But now it is different. Faith has changed me so that the Divine Nature can reproduce itself in my life, and in me the world can see what God and Christ are like."

But, you say, what do you mean by faith? Just receptivity—the attitude of being willing to let God have his way with us—the attitude of the plant when it turns its face to the sun, the attitude which says: "Lord, I want to be like Thee." Nothing more is needed to begin with. We cannot make ourselves like Christ. That is his part. All we can do is to be willing to be made like him—to open the doors of our souls so that he can enter in.

The trouble with many people is that they try to copy Christ. We cannot do that. He must copy himself in us. We are only the sensitized plates; he is alone the thing to be copied and the light that copies.

THE PICTURE

What is the result? A picture in flesh and blood of the Unseen Christ. That is what being a Christian means—reproducing Christ. I am getting more and more out of patience with the idea that would define the Christian life in any other way than as Christ living over again in us, under modern conditions, it is true, but essentially the same life he lived so long ago in Galilee and Judea. It is not believing certain things; it is not doing certain acts; it is not belonging to a certain church; it is not submitting to certain ordinances. It is being a picture of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Mr. Moody said of Henry Drummond that he was the most Christ-like man he ever knew. What splendid testimony! Which of us would not have it said of us rather than that we were the richest, or cleverest, or most powerful people on earth? Yet, if we are Christians at all we are in the same class as Drummond. We may not have traveled so far as he, because we have not submitted ourselves so entirely as he did to the Unseen Christ, but we are on the same road. If we are not like Christ in some measure, we are not Christians in any measure.

MARKS OF THE CROSS

Of some of the old saints it is recorded that they lived in such close touch with the Unseen Christ that the very marks of the cross appeared on their bodies. That is probably an invention of the pious imagination, but what is not an invention is that the marks of the cross must be reproduced in our characters and lives. We must be crucified with Christ. Was not that Paul's test? When his enemies challenged his standing as an Apostle, after exhausting all other arguments, he turned round on them and, with indignation flashing from his eyes, brushes them aside with an imperial wave of the hand, as he says: "Henceforth, let no man trouble me."

Yes, the marks were on him and they must be in us. If we would be copies of him, we must reproduce him as he was, even to the nail-prints, the spear thrust and the crown of thorns!

TIME EXPOSURE

But all of this does not happen instantaneously. You will note the expressions, "from glory to glory." The photographic plate requires a time exposure. The Christian does not become like his Lord in all particulars. All at once there may be sudden conversions, but there are no sudden sanctifications. "From glory to glory," from likeness to likeness is the method of Christ—reproduction in the human soul.

There is a note of encouragement here for those who get impatient with their slow progress in the spiritual life; who, looking at their copy and then at themselves, begin to wonder whether they are really photographing him at all.

In the first place let me say to them that the very fact that they are worrying about their spiritual growth shows that they are growing. Only a partial copy can tell that it is not a complete one. Only a life that has already begun to be like Christ is distressed because it is not more like him. Your sanctification is not so much your work as Christ's work in you. Your attitude is that of faith. It is the rays from the object that make the picture. The photographic plate is powerless to do so of itself. Your part is by prayer and the study of God's word and the faithful attendance on the ordinances of the church and the diligent performance of the duties of life, to keep itself sensitized towards God. He will do—is doing—the rest. "Work out your own salvation, for it is God that worketh in you."

A NOTE OF WARNING

But there is a note, too, of warning here. If we are making no progress in our religious life, if this year finds us colder and less hearty in our service; if the things of this world are gaining a greater hold on us than they should, it is certainly because we have removed ourselves from the influence of the Unseen Christ and are exposing ourselves to other copies that obliterate and annul the picture of his face!

Have you ever seen a composite photograph? If you have you will understand what I mean. It is got by exposing a photographic plate to a number of different objects, so that one copy is superimposed on another and the result is a picture at once of everybody and nobody. How like that are the lives of many professing Christians. The picture of Christ is indeed there, but so covered up with copies of the world's pleasures and ambitions and greeds that it is almost unrecognizable. In certain lights—on Sundays in the dim religious light of the church—you can get a glimpse of the Christ face, but in other lights, on Monday, Tuesday, etc., on the street and in the market-place, you can only see the face of Mammon. It is a divided allegiance—a copy that is not even half a copy and you know what Christ says about such: "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

Now there are certain great angels which meet us in the way of life. Pain is one; failure is one; shame is one. Pain looks us full in the eyes, and we must wrestle with him before he blesses us. Failure brings in his stern hand the peace of renunciation. Shame bears to us the sense of sin, which is the knowledge of God. His hidden face shines with the mercy of heaven, and well for us if we may look into it.—Margaret Deland.

* * *

God's Victors

BY THOMAS CURTIS CLARK

God's battles are forever won,
  Though oft his warriors bite the dust;
Triumphant in their death they lie,
  Who fall in warfare just.

The final issue standeth sure,
  When right and wrong in conflict meet;
Who fight for right may be laid low,
  But right knows no defeat.

A Danger to Protestantism

By Shailer Mathews

A DANGER to which Protestantism — particularly progressive Protestantism — in America is exposed is that its churches shall become mere agents of social service. There are many people who, in reaction from extreme orthodoxy, have come to feel that the sole business of the church is to push social reform.

This danger is particularly strong in America just now because social workers have come to see that the church, instead of being hostile to their ideals, is the greatest force by which their ideals can be put into operation. Such a valuing of the church brings no small satisfaction to those of us who have endeavored to set forth the social significance of the spiritual life. But we can not let social service take the place of God. People can not be amused into conscientiousness. Picnics are not the equivalent of prayer meetings, and Sunday School baseball leagues have not yet developed into revivals.

It was natural in a period of awakening and transition that men should jump to the conclusion that the church ought to stand for every good cause. It was easy to forget that society will organize institutions for each newly-realized need. But even those of us who feel most deeply the social obligations of Christianity see that a church as an institution does not have the same field of responsibility as Christian individuals. These last may be organized in a great variety of institutions, each of which performs some function set by the division of labor in our world. Church leaders can delegate to these institutions certain duties, but they can not delegate the duties of spiritual parentage.

A Protestant Church can not be an ethical asylum; it must be a home in which souls are born into newness of life. We want efficiency in organization and in activity. We want our ministers to be alive to the needs of the hour in politics and industrial reform, quick to come to the championship of overworked women in factories and the rescue of little children who are giving up their lives that the cost of production may be kept low. We want the message from the pulpit to be heartily in sympathy with our modern thinking. But most of all does American Protestantism need a spiritual passion, a contagious faith in the supremacy of God's spiritual order and an alarm at the misery that waits on sin.

From many a community there is already rising a cry for elemental religion. With all their scientific business success, American laymen are asserting that they want to be assured of God and immortality and the worth of righteousness. They want companionship in spiritual loneliness, comfort in hours of pain, courage in moments of moral wavering. Their souls are athirst for the unknown, and they will be satisfied with nothing save the water that comes from the River of God.

If the awakening of Protestantism were to mean simply a renaissance of ethics, or a sort of descriptured positivism, American society would be defrauded. When it asks for the bread of life, it will not be satisfied with treatises on eugenics.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE ON RURAL PROBLEMS

A COUNTRY Life Conference of more than passing interest to Community Church workers was held at the Hotel La Salle in Chicago on Wednesday of last week under the auspices of the Country Work Department of the Young Men's Christian Association. The general theme of the conference was "Balancing Country Life Progress." The prepared addresses on the various phases of the country life movement as well as the discussions from the floor were distinctive in their emphasis upon fundamental human values and their recognition that every type of rural life expert becomes really useful in proportion as he is inspired to work, not for land's sake nor for stock's sake, nor even for education or religion's sake, but for life's sake.

The conference was the first of its kind to be held west of the Alleghenies. Gatherings designed to bring about a greater amount of co-ordination among the various institutions serving the social and spiritual life of rural and village communities have been held in the east for some five or six years. The main purpose of these previous meetings has been to create awareness of the scope and character of country life problems on the part of those educational institutions and the country churches of the east with their ministry. But the Chicago Conference was projected along more comprehensive lines. Its purpose was to discover the proper place and emphasis which each type of community service should have in order to secure the greatest amount of human well-being.

The discussions naturally fell into four general subdivisions relating to problems of the country home, the country school, the country church and the country community, the last with special reference to miscellaneous movements seeking the improvement of rural life. Now and then the voice of the hobbyist was heard in such dogmatic statements as "The fundamental problem is better transportation, intensive agriculture, better stock," etc., but the general trend of the discussions was to emphasize the fact that our classification of rural problems as economic, agricultural, educational, religious, and so forth, is superficial and misleading. Every problem is a community problem, and the whole range of community interests is concerned in its solution. Hence the need of co-ordination of all the agencies serving the community.

The very character of the rural problem is such as to emphasize the need of a united church. A unified community program requires a unified community consciousness to make it effective. This is impossible when the religious sentiment is divided among three or four rival institutions. Only a united church can give that tone and vigor to the social conscience which will make the church powerful as an agent of social progress. It is not the business of the rural church to become a farmer's club, but to furnish the inspiration and enthusiasm and sense of moral solidarity which is essential to the success of any worth while program.

A united church has become a necessity for social progress.

As you grow ready for it, somewhere or other you will find what is needful for you in a book, or a friend, or, best of all, in your own thoughts—the eternal Thought speaking in your thought.—George MacDonald.

Preachers' Problems

By Ellis B. Barnes

IT has been suggested that such a department as this in THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY might be of interest to ministers. It is not to be too ideal, too unworldly, so to speak, just plain common sense talks to and from each other, keeping out of the clouds on the one hand, and out of the clods on the other. This is to be a brotherhood and family affair where, to borrow a line or two from Emerson, we may become gay at times, and then "gray and autumnal, and think in undress, and old shoes that do not pinch my feet, and old friends who do not constrain me, and plain topics where I do not need to strain myself and pump my brains, the most suitable." There are our sentiments exactly, though there is no reason why now and then one may not put his hand on the rainbow, or his foot on the neck of the storm.

* * *

FEES AND OTHER THINGS

With this announcement I expect problems to fly in this direction for solution as doves fly to the windows, but apart from the assurance that the problems will be properly pigeonholed, no promises can be made, except that, like the commentaries which wax eloquent in explaining passages which need no explanation, and remain perplexingly silent when we would give a year of our life if they would enlighten us on some texts—we may be depended upon to do our best. Let there be no misunderstandings in the very beginning. I am not out for any office within the gift of the nation or of the denomination, if such we be, and therefore have no stimulus to make promises which I cannot redeem. I propose above all things to tell the truth, unless savagely corrupted by editorial gold—corrupter of youth and of old age—found bulging in yellow spheres in the pockets of the aforementioned editors whose mission in life is to guide the people under their care in paths of honesty and virtue. So to my soul I say in the still watches of the night, Beware of the shining metal!

I shall be as impartial as truth and as fearless as a shipwrecked sailor on a desert isle with not a foe within five hundred miles. The brave and the just may count on me. Those who come for counsel can get it upon the payment of a small fee, if fee they possess, which will heighten the value of the counsel, especially if sent in the same envelope with the request for oil to pour upon troubled waters. The larger the fee, the more disinterested my efforts in behalf of my clients, and also the more lavish and crystalline will be the wisdom which will flow in rivers, lakes, or oceans, as the case or the fee may require. Fees with large oval fronts and southern exposure will lubricate and set whirling in rhythmic cycles the mental machinery, so that the initiated will believe that the orchestra which discourses the music of the spheres has come to earth for a season to thrill the souls of those who came to us for help with large fees such as above described. They are as rare as they are popular, and in consequence, will be joyfully received and judiciously expended. Those who have no fees to offer will receive the same prompt and satisfactory attention as those who thrust upon us their munificent rewards, only our services to the former are conveyed on less expensive stationery. But whether you come with full or empty hands, your privilege in either case is to rain down the riddles upon us. The rain may be followed by a steady drought, but that is not an unusual occurrence.

* * *

AN HONEST CONFESSION

Candor compels me to confess that I am not the man for this office. A much younger man than I would give greater satisfaction in dealing with the problems. Neither their number nor their profundity would puzzle him a whit. When one reaches the age to which I have attained by hard manual labor, and by unusual skill in side-stepping the old gentleman with a scythe who tries to make his flowing beard do duty for the scantiness of his wearing apparel, and when my beautiful auburn locks, once the household's pride and joy, are scattered far and wide, I think it is fitting that I should retire in favor of a young man just beginning his ministry who knows more of problems than he knows of people. It is wonderful as one nears the summit of life's hill how his interest in folks increases, and his knack of solving problems about folks loses all its ambition. Nearly all young theologians, preferably those in their first charge, know who Cain's wife was, what became of the salt that remained an unsavory reminder of Lot's wife, or whether Balaam's beast traveled best shod or barefooted. Such a youth should mount the tripod on which I am now hoist, as the poets say, and blow a blast upon his pen, as Pat would say, which would compel the problems to come spinning to his feet in carload lots, and his enemies to scatter though they were as thick as the leaves in the Mississippi Valley. Even if he could not do this all at once he ought to have the job. Too much ought not to be expected of the young in the beginning of their careers which are certain to go thundering down the corridors of time. Why corridors? Why a hen?

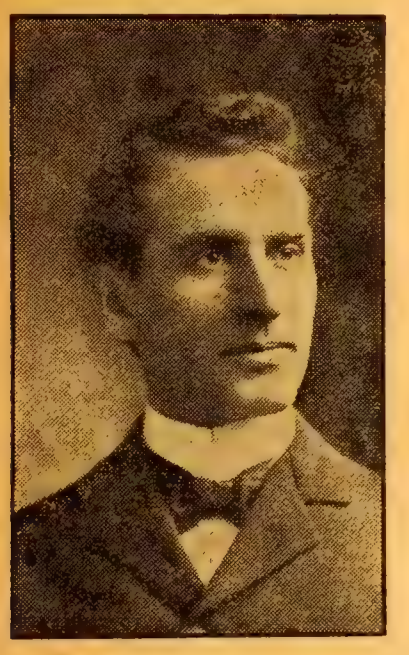
* * *

WHAT SHALL WE TALK ABOUT?

What is to be the scope of this department? That is yet undecided, though the experts are holding daily conferences on the subject. Some wish to devote some of the space to politics, some to theological discussion, but both subjects will have to be handled with masterly skill to prevent complications. We hope the advocates of both interests will not press their contentions to the breaking point. A few representing special interests want to inject a discussion on the probable effect of the Great War on the price of pig-iron, but we will not suffer that, no, not for an hour. So our friends may regain their wonted composure. What has pig-iron ever done for me?

A few want to revive the discussion between big "D" and little "d," but to us it is very unfair for a big fellow to be always jumping on a little fellow, so we rule that out. In former discussions the big "D" won hands down. Little "d" was completely outclassed.

Every fellow with a bee in his bonnet, a whimsey in his brain, a fad in his fiber, or a crook in his constitution, need not lay the flattering unction to his soul that he will be admitted to our columns. They are for the initiated who well understand something of the lengths to which we will go for them in our self-sacrificing labors. Even those with fees to offer will not necessarily be heard on all occasions. There are spots on our toboggan slide which even the yellow cannot grease. Others will be admitted if they furnish proof that a speedy cure can be effected. Time will determine our policy. Meanwhile, the faithful are enjoined to watch the daily papers for particulars. Nobody knows what may happen in these tremendous days of the autumn of 1916.



However well and happy and successful we may be, sorrow and pain are never far away, and the world-pain is everywhere; and there is no peace or joy for us at any time, however bright and prosperous our own affairs, if we can not feel that in and through and over all the sickness, sorrow, pain, and loss, and shame, and sin, there is the Eternal Goodness.—John White Chadwick.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

The Question of the Eight-Hour Law

Editor Dunn of the Railway Age Gazette denounces the Adamson Law as cowardly and unjust, yet admits that had President Wilson allowed the strike to come on it would have been the greatest calamity since the Civil War. He contends that the Clayton act should have been repealed and labor leaders forbidden to call the strike under penalty of imprisonment. Mr. Dunn is an able student of railway problems and a striking writer. The writer of this page heard him last summer make a very able appeal for a raise in freight rates, but noted also that he ignored entirely the question of railway capitalization; in other words, in making his contention for a raise in railway rates he refused to discuss watered stock, over-bonding or any other form of fictitious capitalization. His fervency was all for the railway corporations; there was none displayed for the public.

To have repealed the Clayton act would have been to have removed from legislation the most striking peace of "humanizing" in the modern record, because it definitely declared that labor is not to be considered a commodity and that consequently the laborer is not to be looked upon as a part of the property interest. Every progressive in Congress, without regard to party, voted for this enactment. Indeed, have not the President's opponents ignored one very telling point, that a majority of the Republicans in both House and Senate themselves supported the Adamson Law?

The wail that arbitration has suffered a defeat comes from men whose conversion is evidently very recent and over the sincerity of which there may be some pale cast of doubt, it being a fact that until the tables were turned and power was lodged on the other side of the fight they had never before admitted the principle of arbitration. It must also be recognized that with the demand for the eight-hour law the President also coupled a demand for future arbitration, and he should not be damned for the one without being praised for the other. Mr. Garrettson of the railway brotherhoods talked very much in this case like the railway managers had always talked in previous cases; in other words, the employes do not differ in their spirit from the employers, once power is in their hands. The great public must in the end compel these warring factions to arbitrate.

A very interesting contention for the adoption of the eight-hour law without investigation can be made upon the theory that it would be impossible to investigate its working until you have tried it; in other words, that the only scientific process is to adopt the eight-hour law and appoint a commission to study the effects with a view to final legislation when results are all tallied—just what Congress did.

* * *

America Playing the Good Samaritan

A movement is on foot to raise the stupendous sum of $13,000,000 for the relief of the French war orphans. This would, indeed, be a magnificent practical repayment, through American sentiment and sympathy, to the French nation for its hundred years of unbroken friendship. The Jewish people are also inaugurating a stupendous program to raise $10,000,000 in this country for their people who are suffering from the war. This added to the $6,000,000 already sent would perhaps be the largest single philanthropic enterprise the war has brought forth. America is profiting to an untold degree through the agony of Europe. If she is to redeem herself from the suspicion of materialism and justify her claim to high ideals and great generosity, she will supply both these funds and many others. The raising of these funds raises a very interesting question to the churches. How many of them make any response to these calls of need so tremendous at this time? Can it be possible that the church machinery is so heavy that the church can do nothing more than keep it going? Can it be that the church people are so conventionalized that great popular beneficences such as this must appeal altogether to private individuals and to other societies?

Who Prevents Church Unions?

In a home mission survey covering the western part of the state of Washington, with 702,000 population, less than three per cent of the lay members expressed any denominational preference. All were for Christianity and desired a church in their community but they did not prefer one sect above another. What they wanted was a church that would preach the gospel of a righteous life and keep the fires of the true religion burning. Yet the denominational leaders are able to make attempts at arranging for union churches very difficult. The Washington Home Missionary Council tries to arrange unions with definite denominational affiliation preserved. This is doubtless the prudential thing to do in many cases, but one can not help feeling that it would be better oft-times to cut the withes and organize federated churches outright and without too great a sense of tenderness towards the sectarian minority.

A great deal has been made of the supposition that peoples of various races and nationalities can not be fused. President Wilson pleads for a proper treatment of the alien in America in order that America may be able to fraternize with and lead the nations from which they come in the new internationalism. Petitions are now being circulated by the Federal Council of Churches asking that adequate legislation be enacted soon upon this question. Too much has been made of historic, national, racial and linguistic antagonisms. Because they have existed is no sign they must persist. What is civilization for if not to substitute rational progress for the old blind antipathies? Christianity should certainly lead in this undertaking, for with Christ there is neither Greek nor Jew. Its ability to do so when once the undertaking is really made is illustrated by the success of Labor Temple in New York City, where there is now a strong church drawn from many nationalities, a Sunday school of a thousand, and 174 accessions to the church roll last year.

No Change in Wedding Ceremony

In the revision of the prayer-book there was a strenuous effort on the part of many of the Episcopalian leaders to secure a change in the wording of the marriage ceremony of the Protestant Episcopal church at the general convention in St. Louis. The committee on revision of the prayer-book was continued, but the change in the ceremony was not made this year.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Detroit, Mich., Engages a Social Engineer

The Rev. John G. Benson, of Brazil, Ind., where the largest Methodist Sunday School of the world is located, has been selected by Bishop Henderson as Social Engineer for an area around the city of Detroit. This office evidently gets its name from the well-known book by Professor Earp. It will be the business of Mr. Benson to make surveys of religious, social and industrial conditions around the rapidly growing automobile city. This city is meeting many new problems by reason of the growth of population, which is so rapid that houses cannot be built fast enough to provide homes for the people.

Methodist Commission on Unity to Meet

A meeting that will doubtless prove one of the great historic events of American Methodism will be the assembling of the Joint Commission on Unification of American Methodism which will convene in Baltimore Thursday, December 28. At this time there will either be progress in the direction of the unification of northern and southern Methodism or else the whole project may be declared impracticable. Northern church leaders are asking the lay members to assemble in prayer each day during this great crisis for their church. There is opposition to the union of a formidable sort, both in north and south, but this may be overridden by the modern spirit of unity and cooperation.

Rev. R. J. Campbell Tells Story of Change

A new book has recently been issued in England from the hand of Rev. R. J. Campbell called "A Spiritual Pilgrimage," in which Mr. Campbell tells the story of his life from the religious viewpoint. He was brought up in the north of Ireland in the strictest of Protestant surroundings, but relates that even in boyhood days he once constructed an altar and a crucifix. At Oxford he was deeply influenced by Dean Paget of the Episcopal church but felt that there was no consistent way of being a Catholic without being a Roman Catholic. His statement concerning the religious value of Protestantism for him is very interesting. He says: "The twin sources of my religious life were the Ulster Presbyterianism of my childhood and the Anglo-Catholicism of my Oxford days. To the latter, humanly speaking, I owe my soul. In evangelical phrase, I was born again with it—and this apart altogether from purely theological consideration." He relates how hundreds came to him while he was a City Temple pastor to make confessions and to use him in a way as a priest, though he did not pretend to give absolution. The book is the statement of a man who has gone over completely to the sacramentarianism of the high English church. Those familiar with his former religious books will doubtless feel that he has lately been traveling pretty rapidly.

Chicago Preachers Will Discuss Advertising

The Protestant ministers of Chicago will hold a big meeting to discuss church publicity at the Advertising Association of Chicago on the evening of November 16. Over a hundred of the advertising men of the city will be present. The 10,000 pieces of church advertising that were on exhibition at the convention of the World's Advertising Clubs in Philadelphia will be shown here. The ministers have formed a branch of the ad men's club and will be given some of the privileges of the club at a very low fee.

Gideons Take a Stand Against Smoke

The Gideons, the Christian traveling men's association, met in national convention recently and passed a resolution condemning men who in "defiance of the laws of cleanliness and decency" persisted in smoking in public dining rooms. They also determined to make an effort to secure the abolition of the custom of serving alcoholic drinks in dining rooms.

New York Bible Institute Promotes Evangelism

The National Bible Institute has held outdoor evangelistic meetings in New York City the past summer, as previously, and one of the fruits is a fine new Gospel Hall for Christian workers to be opened at Bergen Avenue and 153d street. Classes for training Christian workers will be held, and special services for the Jews and Germans of the neighborhood in their own languages. These in addition to the Institute's regular evangelistic work. The new hall was opened on September 29. Don O. Shelton is president of the Institute and Thomas Little director. During the spring and summer over 2,000 open-air meetings were held, attended by nearly 250,000, and over 2,500 professed conversions. The Institute is extending its outdoor work to Brooklyn, with encouraging prospects.

English Moderator and Leading Presbyterian Dies

For the first time in the history of the English Presbyterian church a man elected to the office of moderator has not lived to fill out his term. The Rev. W. M. MacPhail has been the moderator, and he passed away at the comparatively early age of fifty-nine years. He was a great authority on Presbyterian law and practice for England.

Week-day Religious Education in New York

Two churches of New York are making special efforts in the direction of week-day religious instruction for their children this year. St. Andrew's Methodist church has a school conducted by the Rev. Harry Webb Farrington of the Methodist Sunday School board, who has spent the past two years in Gary, Indiana, serving as chairman of the Association of Religious Directors and establishing there the first Methodist religious school. The West End Presbyterian church is also doing something of the same kind for its children, but the leaders in this church express dissatisfaction with the Gary plan. The Methodists define their plan as follows: "The aim will be: To unify every activity in the church for the children; to especially relate it to the Sunday School; to emphasize the moral and religious aspect of the child's public school work; to seek to develop physical, social and moral values of its 'after school' and home time; to know the local community in order to protect the children from its evil forces and to bring it into touch with its good forces; to know each child personally, in order to assist the parents in any particular problem of its life."

The Sunday School Lesson in Today's Life

CONDUCTED BY JOHN RAY EWERS

"A Living Sacrifice"

SCRIPTURE, ROM. 12:1-8. LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 26

TODAY we conclude the study of Paul's career. His life is a call to devotion. From the moment when the Living Lord impressed his soul on the Damascus road until he bowed his head under the Roman sword, Paul was personified CONSECRATION. "One thing I do." "With might" he did whatever was to be done to bring in the reign of Jesus Christ.

How he rebukes our divided allegiance! We are hyphenated Christians. We serve two masters—or try that impossible scheme. We love the world and heaven. Paul had his dualism. He had his battles with his flesh. Never, however, were there any mental reservations, never any half-hearted service, never any split allegiance.

* * *

What a revolution would be wrought in our own souls by a complete, definite, clear-cut, positive, determined, intelligent, commitment to Jesus and His program. What soul-wrestlings we undergo! Not even the spirit is always willing, however weak and pitiable the flesh may be. Recently I received a great shock—a man whom I had considered rock-ribbed and eternal as the hills in his Christian loyalties gave marked evidence of wavering. The granite rock seemed about to turn into jelly!

Emerson once remarked, "You can't nail currant jelly to the wall—and the iron nail is not to blame for that." How we tremble when some granite character begins to melt. We feel the tragedy of the divided allegiance and the need of positive devotion to God. "One thing I do," "One is your Master."

* * *

With all the earnestness, therefore, of his red-hot soul, Paul says, "I beseech you by the mercies of God to present your bodies as living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto God—your spiritual service." Holy and wholly. Let us seek for the crux of the situation today. A reporter from one of our dailies asked me last night for an interview on "America's Greatest Sin." Some New York minister has said it is selfishness and some local opinions were being sought. My answer was in a word, "Materialism."

We are smothering out the SPIRIT with STUFF. The spiritual service of which Paul speaks is the neglected grace. How much time is given to cultivation of the soul of a man? Here is the wild rush for money, houses, lands, autos, servants, and stuff, stuff, stuff,—impedimenta.

* * *

Is there time to stroll in the autumn woods and commune with God? Is there time to visit the neighbor and invite him to church? Is there time to go to the art gallery and study, intelligently, a picture? Is there time to read a poet? Is there time to hear the orchestra? Says the Chinese proverb, "Had I but two loaves of bread, I would sell one of them and buy a white hyacinth to feed my soul."

The Great Teacher said, "You can-not live by bread alone." Why, we thought we could! With Pillsbury at the present price we thought we were doing pretty well to have biscuit at all. But you can't feed your soul ground wheat—a finer pabulum is demanded. Music speaks to the soul, friendship feeds the heart, meditation is like consecrated food. Love is a soul-food. The soul grows while you contemplate the beauties of nature and when you minister at the bedside of the sick. The choice must be made between spirit and stuff. There are piles and piles of stuff on earth, but spirit is at a premium. If you want the most unusual possession pray God to enrich your soul.

Great souls—yes, GREAT SOULS—are the need of America today. "By the mercies of God—present your bodies as living sacrifices."

Tennyson's Faith

"I should be sorely afraid to live my life without God's presence; but to feel that He is by my side now just as much as you are, that is the very joy of my heart."—Tennyson, to a friend.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY desires to use in this space each week a story of the work of some men's class or women's class, or men's brotherhood, which is getting results in community upbuilding or in the promotion of missionary or temperance or benevolent work. Each story should contain about six hundred words. If you have a good story, tell it. Address, The Christian Century.

Disciples Table Talk

Kentucky Rural Church Institute Has 750 Registered

One of the most promising and significant signs of the times, so far as church life is concerned, is the large number of successful rural church conferences and institutes that are being held over the country. Report comes of an institute which has just closed its sessions at Fox Creek church, Anderson county, Ky., in which 750 persons were registered, 87 of whom were from outside the county. Thirty-three received diplomas on commencement evening. G. J. Parrish, pastor at Fox Creek church, writes that there was not a dull number on the program. The house was crowded from the first hour of the morning to the last hour in the evening. The institute goes to Elizaville next year. These rural institutes are a pleasant change from the old-time county convention, which met simply to meet. That the people will respond to a convention which meets with a purpose is evidenced by the great popularity of the rural church conferences. On the program of the Fox Creek Institute were such speakers as H. W. Elliott, F. F. Grim, W. E. Frazee, W. J. Clarke, A. W. Fortune, O. E. Kelley, A. McLean and C. D. Bohannon. The chief lecturer was Mr. Kelley, who is a rural church specialist, coming from Terre Haute, Ind.

Making the Prayer Meeting Count

Carl A. Burkhardt, pastor at Tabernacle church, Franklin, Ind., is announcing before his people a veritable college for religious study beginning with the first of the new year. On Wednesday evenings, after a brief devotional period, the persons assembled will go to separate class rooms for study of the course which has been elected by each. There will be classes in the History of the Church, in Missions and in the History of the Disciples' Movement. Also a very attractive course will be presented on the Social Applications of the Teachings of Jesus.

New Program for Illinois Disciples

At the meeting of the Illinois State Board at the Peoria convention, a committee of six was appointed to take up the matter of a closer articulation of state and district work. That committee consists of the following men: S. H. Zendt, Bloomington; W. S. Rounds, Taylorville; A. K. Adcock, DuQuoin; C. E. French, Virginia; C. C. Carpenter, Princeton, and the state secretary, H. H. Peters. The first thing the committee did was to make a study of plans in operation in Missouri, Iowa, Indiana and Ohio. A meeting of the committee was then held in Bloomington, and a tentative program decided upon. According to this program, it is believed by the committee that the state should be redistricted, with five districts exclusive of Chicago, instead of eight, as at present; that the work in Chicago be left to the Chicago Christian Missionary Society, but that the society be affiliated with the Illinois Christian Missionary Society; that all money raised for state or district work be paid into the treasury of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society; that the district conventions be held as they now are; that the district secretary be a member of the state board; that all the Disciple evangelists be employed by the state board and their work directed by the same; that the matter of living links be left with the state secretary and that missions be supported just as rapidly as churches become living links. This program is to be submitted to the district conventions for action. The final report of the committee will be presented to the next state convention. This committee approves the present plan of combining the Sunday school work with the state missionary program. H. H. Peters, state secretary, writes that suggestions concerning this proposed program will be gladly received by the committee from Disciples over the state.

Disciple Pastor of Auburn, N. Y., Leads in Federated Church Program Plans

E. W. Allen, of the church at Auburn, N. Y., finds it a pleasure to be able to work at Christion union as well as to preach it. As investigator and prime mover in the work of the Federated Church campaign now on in Auburn, and as president of the Ministerial Association, he has a tremendous opportunity to make the union idea shine forth in the New York city. This federated campaign extends from October 16 to Easter, 17, and has set as special days the following: October 15, rally day for the Sunday schools; October 29, mobilization day for the churches; November 12, community church day for Auburn. On Sunday school rally day some 100 per cent aims were striven for. On mobilization day, at the morning service, the Lord's Supper was observed, with the note of consecration of every church member; the evening service was devoted to the theme of personal evangelism; this day was observed also as rally day for the Christian Endeavor societies. On November 12, community church day, the morning sermons will be upon the theme, "Auburn Without Christ—What Would It Be?" The evening sermons will be from the text, "Josh. 24:15. For three weeks preceding community church day articles of one-half column daily are being run in the local papers, these being by pastors of the various churches. In the afternoon of this great day there will be held mass meetings for men and women. Mr. Allen writes that all the Protestant churches of Auburn are actively represented in this campaign—a thing never before realized in any movement. The Ministerial Association meets frequently at luncheon to discuss and put forward the maturing plans. Plans and programs for the months immediately following New Year have not yet been determined upon. Mr. Allen reports that mobilization day brought more church members to worship than were ever before seen in Auburn. One large church reported 94 per cent of its members present at the morning service. A helpful feature of the campaign is the use of an "All Auburn Church Movement" covenant, signed by church members. This pledges the signers to daily Bible reading and prayer, attendance upon church meetings, financial aid to the church and personal work for conversions.

Home-coming and Church Membership Day at DuQuoin, Ill.

Sunday, October 29, was set by the Disciple, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches of DuQuoin, Ill., as "Home-coming and Church Membership Day." Special sermons were preached by all pastors, including A. D. Adcock, who leads in the work of the Disciples. One of the Sunday schools made an interesting feature of a great flag constructed out of 650 small pieces brought by as many people to the Sunday school service.

North Carolina Pastor Serves Community

Hayes Farish is pastor of the church at Belhaven, N. C., which is one of the best churches of the state, with a Sunday school which has the reputation of being the most modern in its organization anywhere in North Carolina. But Mr. Farish's activities are not confined to church promotion. He is identified with every social movement of the city. He holds the position of secretary of the Belhaven Community Fair Association, which promoted a most successful fair November 1 and 2. During the past year seventy-five persons were added to the membership of this church, and the largest offerings for education and missions in the history of the church are reported. There are about 300 members now actively in the work. Through November and December Mr. Farish is preaching two series of educational sermons, one of them dealing with themes of spiritual culture, the other with "The Plan of Salvation."

Akron Sunday School Puts Home Missions Where It Belongs

At a recent meeting of the executive council of the Sunday school of High Street church, Akron, Ohio, it was unanimously voted to make an effort to bring the school's offering to American missions this year up to equal that which has been made for foreign work. This will mean an increase of about 35 per cent. Each class has been apportioned, and the school will strive to raise $700. If all schools should take some such step, there would be no difficulty in raising the $50,000 asked by the A. C. M. S. from the schools for their important work. The Akron school will make a big feature of the "Farthest North" program gotten out by the society. High Street has led the brotherhood in gifts to home missions for two years.

Nebraska Church Entertains Missionaries

The church at Fairbury, Neb., recently enjoyed a service participated in by Miss Bertha Lacock, of Puerto Rico; Mrs. Ross, of Indianapolis (mother of Emery Ross of Liberia, Africa), and Miss Cora E. Henry of Lincoln, Neb. A reception was given to the visitors on the afternoon preceding the Sunday of the service. The Fairbury church will cooperate with the other churches of the town in a great union effort.

Another College for Training Workers in Indianapolis

Some time ago Seventh Street church, Indianapolis, organized the first college for training Christian workers in the city. Now the Hillside church, C. M. Fillmore, pastor, has organized another. The sessions, which are held weekly, on Thursday evenings, will continue until June. The meetings open at 7:30 o'clock with devotional service, followed by forty-five minutes of class study in the various groups. The course will consist of outline Bible study, teacher training and story telling. The Bible study class will be under the direction of Mr. Fillmore. The aim the first year will be to get a general outline view and analysis of the Bible as a whole. The class in teacher training will be in the charge of Miss Flora Drake, a teacher in the public schools, and her work will be devoted exclusively to methods of teaching. The story telling will be in charge of Mrs. Charles M. Fillmore, superintendent of the primary department of the school.

Large Young Men's Class Talks Politics

The Loyal Sons Bible class of the church at Council Bluffs, Iowa, is the largest organization of its kind in that section of the country. About 150 young men are enrolled in the work. After a week's consideration and investigation, the class has adopted resolutions commendatory of E. T. Meredith and recommending him as the right man for all young men to support for the governorship of Iowa. It was planned to send copies of the resolution adopted to each pastor of Council Bluffs, with the suggestion that he preach on temperance and the present political situation in Iowa.

"Atkins Day" at Mexico, Mo.

The coming of Henry P. Atkins to First church pulpit, Mexico, Mo., was made the occasion of an unusual welcome service to the new leader and his family. "Atkins Day" was enthusiastically observed. More than 800 persons were present in the morning service. Cooperation with every department in the church was pledged by the members. A telegram was read from W. A. Shullenberger, former pastor of the congregation. Above the pulpit in large white letters were inscribed the words, "Welcome, Atkins."

Ohio Sunday Schools Promote Educational Ideals

Wilford H. McLain, state superintendent of the Disciple Sunday school work in Ohio, is doing valuable constructive work for these schools. He is emphasizing educational ideals, minimizing the spectacular. And he is getting a reaction from the state's leaders. The pastor of a prominent city church writes to Mr. McLain as follows: "You have my idea exactly. It impresses me that the day of the hurrah and the spectacular is over. What we need in our schools more than anything else is a constructive program that runs through the year and has for its purpose the building of Christian character." Rally day this year was made the occasion in many schools of presenting the educational ideal and planning a program along such lines for the year. Hudson, O., school shows the right spirit in raising on its rally day a purse of $50 to support a medical assistant in Africa. Paulding school used rally day to emphasize the importance of religious education before the church and community. These schools are only typical of the high class Ohio schools which are feeling the influence of Mr. McLain's wise leadership.

Disciples Doing Good Service for Illinois

As H. H. Peters goes about the state of Illinois, in his secretarial tours, he picks up a good deal of interesting information concerning successful churches and useful Disciples. When he does find such, he tells about it. He writes that he has recently visited Normal, Ill., the twin city of Bloomington, where is located the Illinois Soldiers Orphans' Home, a state institution. Here he found in charge Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Claggett, loyal Disciples. For many years they were leaders in the church at Lexington, Ill. Mrs. Claggett is a cousin of W. F. Richardson, of Kansas City. The institution will soon celebrate its fiftieth anniversary. Plans are now in operation for the enlargement of the home to take care of fifteen hundred. There are now 490 children in the home; 87 of these are children of Civil War veterans, 127 being orphans of Spanish-American soldiers.

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

Indiana Will Do Its Part for Sunday School Missions

Indiana Sunday schools have been asked to raise $6,000 of the $50,000 which must be reached by all the country's schools on Bible School Day for Home Missions, Nov. 26. Last year 290 schools gave $3,590.05. It is hoped to enlist the great majority of the state's 718 schools this year. Garry L. Cook is leading in this effort.

G. B. Stewart Addresses Patriotic Meeting

George B. Stewart, of the Lenox Avenue church, New York, spoke upon the theme, "World Citizenship," at a patriotic meeting of the men of Harlem held on October 31. William M. Calder, Representative in Congress for ten years and now Republican candidate for the United States Senate, also spoke on "Patriotism." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. A bountiful dinner was a feature of the occasion.

Brings Ancient Prophets Down to Date

Lin D. Cartwright, of the Fort Collins, Colo., church, is preaching during November and early in December five sermons on "Modern Messages from Ancient Prophets." The following are the themes discussed: "The Rediscovery of the Prophet"; "Amos: An Ancient Cry for Justice"; "Hosea: The Prophet of a Wooing God"; "Jeremiah: A Prophet of the Higher Patriotism"; "The Eternal Need of Prophets."

F. E. Mallory Goes to Washington, Ind.

Frank E. Mallory, of Denver, Colo., has been called to the pulpit at Washington, Ind., from which R. A. Bennett recently resigned, and has accepted to begin work Dec. 1. Mr. Bennett, who has taken up work with an Indiana social service organization, came to Washington from Marion, Ind., only a year ago, but since his arrival has won the respect and admiration of the entire community because of his support of a broad spirit of Christian unity. During the recent union evangelistic campaign he stood loyally by the idea of cooperation of the denominations. He has also taken active part in many community projects during the period of his pastorate.

Indiana Church "Resolves" Against Gambling Devices

During the recent carnival at Richmond, Ind., there was great freedom in the use and exploitation of various gambling devices, and the churches of Richmond are up in arms. At First church, L. E. Murray, pastor, resolutions were passed, condemning gambling practices, criticising the Commercial Club for its part in promoting such devices as were used at the carnival, and calling upon the city government to enforce the law hereafter.

Missouri Congregation Makes Money from Old Paper

The members of the Shelbyville, Mo., church have been gathering up old papers and magazines for several weeks, and the other day a pile of "junk" was sold for over $60. The church membership has now been divided, and the two sides will vie with one another in making the biggest haul for the next sale.

South Bend Pastor Considers the Modern Home

O. J. Cohee, pastor at Indiana Avenue church, South Bend, Ind., is not lamenting over the passing of the old-fashioned home. He holds that the modern institutionalized home is enlarged—that it takes in the church, the school and the factory. "The mother of today," Mr. Cohee said, "dare not say that her home is her own, and that it is enclosed by four walls, for to do so would be to make of it a monastery."

P. J. Rice Closes Seventh Year in El Paso, Tex., Church

On October 29, Perry J. Rice celebrated with his congregation the seventh anniversary of his coming to the Texas field. Mr. Rice preached in the morning on the theme, "Being a Pastor in Times Like These." He spoke of the bewilderment of many people due to the changes, political, social and theological, which are taking place, and of the dangers incident to our great prosperity. "The business of the preacher," he said, "is to preach the word, not fads and fancies, nor shibboleths of the past, to interpret the gospel in a way to meet present day needs. He must avoid the things that ensnare and find his satisfaction and reward in the enrichment of his own moral and spiritual life." At the close of the sermon an impressive recognition service was held. The elders and deacons, the Sunday school officers and teachers and the leaders in the C. W. B. M. and Christian Endeavor and the choir were

ON THE SUNDAY BEFORE THANKSGIVING (Nov. 26) OUR BIBLE SCHOOLS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE TO AMERICAN MISSIONS.

1. A Good Plan is to give the whole offering that day, increasing it with an urgent personal appeal.
2. A Better Plan is to set a definite goal, asking each class to give a definite portion of that amount.
3. The Best Plan is to render the program "Farthest North" and take the offering as outlined in it. (Supplies are free.)

Every school should be expecting and announcing the use of one of these plans—Is yours?

REMIT TO ROBT. M. HOPKINS, BIBLE SCHOOL SECRETARY, AMERICAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY, CAREW BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

Our new missionary in Alaska—"Farthest North"—impels us in our giving to go to the "Farthest Limit."

all called to the front of the church, and asked to stand facing the audience, while the pastor spoke a few words of appreciation of the fidelity and faithfulness of these and many others in the church.

Mr. Rice begins his eighth year with unusual promise. There have been 14 additions to the church during October, and the membership is larger and better organized than ever before. A voluntary offering of $112 has been raised for Armenian and Syrian relief during the past two Sundays.

J. N. Haymaker on Prohibition

J. N. Haymaker, of Wichita, Kan., newly elected president of the General Convention, believes in the prohibition principle. Here is a recent testimony from him: "I have lived in Kansas for nearly thirty years and have worked hard to accumulate what little I have, and yet, I would give it all up rather than have Kansas go back to the open saloons."

Disciple Speakers at Country Life Conference

Prof. A. W. Fortune, of Transylvania College, and Prof. R. E. Hieronymous, formerly of Eureka, were in attendance at the Country Life Conference at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, October 25. Dr. Hieronymous, who has for several years been connected with the University of Illinois as community adviser, appeared before the conference with an address on "The Community of the Country Side."

The Kansas City Convention Will Not Be Held in May

Through newspaper reports information came to this office that the next general convention would be held in May. This is an error. It will be held in October, as usual. In the report of the committee on resolutions, there was a recommendation that the executive committee consider the question of the advisability of changing the time to May, but there was no action of the convention itself in that direction.

From 1 Member to 150 in Reading, Pa., Work

In 1897 H. G. Weaver went to Reading, Pa., and found one member of the Disciples church. He believed in the possibilities of the field and began to develop them. Twenty years have elapsed, and, without any outside assistance, financial or otherwise, the church has become possessed of a property, until recently well located for the work, and a good congregation and Sunday school have been grown. Each of these organizations has about 130 members. Reading is a city of 108,000, with eighty congregations, nearly half of which are of the Lutheran or Reformed faith. Sixty-two percent of the city's population is not affiliated with any church. Four preachers have gone out from this congregation: W. S. McCallum, minister of Second church, Johnstown, Pa.; George Ruth, now in Bizbee, Ariz.; A. J. Cook, now at Mitchell, Ind.; and H. S. Weaver, a nephew of the organizer of the work, who is now serving the church at Burlington Junction, Mo. The church at Adamstown, Pa., ten miles from Reading, is a child of the Reading church. The population around the old Reading church has changed in character so that a change in location is found necessary. The present property has been sold and over $10,000 is in hand toward the purchase of a new site and an adequate building. Over $15,000 more will be needed. About $8,000 of this will be secured from the congregation and community. The problem is to secure the rest of the money needed for the development of this unusually fruitful work.

Texas Church Does Profitable Farming

A profitable experiment in farming has been carried out this year by the little church in Italy, Tex. The congregation rented twenty acres of land on a nearby farm, the members subscribing $85 toward financing a cotton crop. All work was paid for out of this money. The crop has been picked and made half a bale per acre. The cotton sold at $100 per bale. After paying the landlords a fourth and counting out the picking and marketing expense a profit of about $500 was realized on the original investment of $85.

Mrs. D. R. Lucas Recovering

Mrs. D. R. Lucas, wife of the deceased Disciple leader, suffered a stroke of apoplexy at Des Moines convention, and it was thought for a time that she could not survive, but she is now reported much better.

Lafayette, Ind., Will Not Let G. W. Watson Go

As stated in these columns a short time ago, Goerge W. Watson, pastor at First church, Lafayette, Ind., was called to succeed H. H. Peters at Paris, Ill. When Mr. Watson asked the board at Lafayette to release him to the new field, they voted unanimously to reject his request. While their pastor was at Des Moines,

Notes of Chicago Churches

"Folk Songs of the Nations" at Jackson Boulevard

On Friday evening of last week the choir at Jackson Boulevard gave a concert, "Folk Songs of the Nations," with all the choir taking part in suitable costumes. A number of solos lent variety to the exercises of the evening.

The women of the Loyal Women's class of Jackson Boulevard, taught by Mrs. Austin Hunter, gave a banquet to the men's class, of which Mr. Hunter is teacher, on Tuesday of last week. This was not the windup of an attendance contest, but, as Mr. Hunter puts it, was "out of the goodness of the women's own hearts." About 130 persons were present.

Jackson Boulevard official board has plans made to visit every member of the church during the present month.

The "Sing" at Memorial Church

The Disciples' Hymnal, "Hymns of the United Church," has been duly christened, and has already begun its usefulness. About 300 persons assembled at Memorial Church on last Thursday evening, over 200 of these coming in time to enjoy the spread which the ladies of Memorial had arranged for the company. Prof. H. Augustine Smith, of the music department of Chicigo Theological Seminary, led in the singing of the hymns from the new book, and delighted those present with his interpretations of the hymns and human interest sidelights concerning their authors and the circumstances of their composition. Miss Emma V. Miller presided at the organ. Mr. Morrison and Dr. Willett, editors of the hymnal, gave interesting talks concerning the makeup of the book, Mr. Morrison dealing especially with the hymns, and Dr. Willett with the excellent "Aids to Worship," which form a most valuable feature of the hymnal. Brief and entertaining talks were given also by C. G. Kindred, E. S. Ames, W. F. Shaw, O. F. Jordan, C. G. Brelos, J. E. Wolfe, W. G. Winn, Austin Hunter and D. Roy Mathews. Most of the Chicago churches were well represented at the meeting. Especial praise should go to Edgewater, which sent about fifteen representatives, and to Austin, which had about the same number present. These churches are among the most distant from the place of meeting, yet they were among the leaders so far as representation was concerned. Perhaps the most pleasant feature of the entire service was the singing of chosen hymns by the congregation under the gracious leadership of Professor Smith. The only criticism heard expressed was that "we did not get enough singing." The spirit of the meeting was of the finest, this being one of the most encouraging gatherings of Chicago Disciples in their history.

Adult Department Features at Irving Park

There is a very much alive adult department of about 75 members at Irving Park, Chicago. The leaders of the department have planned to feature a series of six meetings for the winter and spring—one every six weeks. At these meetings addresses will be given, with special music, but great variety will characterize them. The first of the series was held on the evening of October 31, with two talks as features. Dr. Sharpe, of the University, spoke on the value of the Bible and its study to modern life, and a Mrs. McNabb, a leader of women in Chicago political life, gave an instructive address, directing her talk especially to the women present, and dealing with the present political situation from the viewpoint of woman's part in it. This meeting was open only to the adult department of the Sunday school. Some of the meetings will be "free for all." Irving Park church is to have a high school chorus as a feature of one of its evening services soon. The leader of the music at Irving Park is also the director of this chorus, which has about 100 members. W. G. Winn leads the activities of Irving Park church.

the church and Sunday school voted unanimously that Mr. Watson should be urged to continue as pastor, and the students of Purdue University attending the church joined in the chorus with a special petition. Many citizens of the city outside the church have urged Mr. Watson not to leave this field. The result of it all is that the Paris call has been turned down.

Ohio Pastor Talks to Prisoners

A new system of treatment has been inaugurated at the Barberton, Ohio, jail. The police of the city started the move. The plan is for all men held in the local jail to attend Sunday morning church service held at one of the theaters of Barberton. C. H. Holcomb, of the Disciple church of Barberton, talked to the men at the first service. Evangelist William Leigh, of Akron, sang for the men. A whistling solo was another feature. It is reported that this first meeting is counted a pronounced success. Barberton's interesting experiment is being watched closely by cities over the state.

C. R. Scoville Urges Big Reforms at Coffeyville, Kan.

In a men's mass meeting attended by over 2,500 men, at Coffeeville, Kan., C. R. Scoville, holding a union meeting there, put through a petition to the governor of the state to close joints at South Coffeyville. He also urged the organization of a law and order league to fight gamblers, bootleggers, etc., in Coffeyville. Several prominent citizens made stirring speeches. Among the over two thousand converts made during the union meeting are two former chiefs of police. Arthur Long leads as minister in the Coffeyville church.

M. L. Pontius of Jacksonville, Ill., Speaks on Socialism

M. L. Pontius, pastor at Central Church, Jacksonville, Ill., began a series of six lectures on Socialism on Oct. 24. The lectures are given under the auspices of the Intermediate C. E. Society of the church. They are illustrated with still and motion pictures. The first lecture treated the topic, "Women and Children Who Toil." Mr. Pontius told of his experiences in the factories disguised as a laborer. He stated that investigations show that the highest wage paid the child is a little over four dollars, and the minimum about two dollars for ten or twelve hours per day of exhausting work. Mr. Pontius stated that he did not consider the solution of the child labor problem to lie in socialism or labor unions.

* *

—The East Columbus, Ind., church has called to its leadership D. E. Milligan of Rush county, Ind.

—The congregation at Warsaw, Ind., burned a $700 mortgage late in October.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—The death is reported of Robert M. Giddens, for many years pastor of Woodland Street church, Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Giddens received his education at Lexington, Ky., in Kentucky University. He was 75 years old at the time of his death. The funeral services were conducted from Vine Street church, Nashville, Carey E. Morgan being in charge.

—The church at Milwaukee, Wis., ministered to by Robert L. Finch, will probably become a living-link of the University Place church, Des Moines. The Milwaukee work has been a hard one since its organization ten years ago.

TELL US WHAT'S HAPPENING in your part of the country, in the churches, schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, etc. Send to THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY personal news notes of ministers and other well-known—or little known—Disciple leaders. Especially are our readers interested in learning of movements among the churches and in Bible classes for community betterment. The News Department of the CENTURY considers every reader a regular reporter for its columns. Send in something this week, to reach us by Friday, if possible.—News Editor.

—J. D. Hull, of Portland, Ind., church, recently gave an address on the every member canvass in Redkey, Ind.

—At the Men's Bible Class at University Place church, Des Moines, there were 239 persons present on October 15, with visitors from seventeen states, from New York to California—and one visitor from Africa, Dr. Jaggard, missionary in the Congo region. The women's class had 275 in attendance.

—The Chickasha Daily Express speaks highly of the impression made by Byron Hester, new pastor of the church there and recently of Pryor. J. W. Darby, of Tulsa, Okla., has characterized Mr. Hester as "the most promising young man in the state," and he has become known in Eastern Oklahoma as "The Little Minister."

—T. W. Bellingham, of the Benton Harbor church, Mich., has been again elected president of the Second District of churches. He has held this position for six years.

—John B. W. Hilton, father of J. W. Hilton, of East Side church, Lincoln, Neb., passed away on October 26, in Lincoln. Mr. Hilton has at times been affiliated with the churches at Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, and Dorchester, Neb. W. P. Aylsworth had charge of the funeral service.

—Walter Mansell, the new pastor at Warren, O., with his choir leader, is arranging for a great evening of message and song on "The Beatitudes." The exposition of the sermon on the mount will be interspersed wtih music illustrating the theme.

—Broadway church, Louisville, Ky., W. N. Briney, pastor, reports receipts during the past year of $9,150. Of this amount $2,249 was for missions.

—During and following the Bulgin union meetings at Lawrenceburg, Ind., there were 34 persons baptised and one was received by statement. There have been nearly 100 additions to the membership at Lawrenceburg and at a mission at Bright, Ind., during the past year of ministry of J. D. Garrison. Most of these came as a result of home force activity.

—At Oakland, Cal., church, arrangements have been made for special Bible studies at the midweek prayer-meeting services, beginning Nov. 1. H. A. Van Winkle, new pastor in charge, will conduct the class.

—T. M. Carney, of Obion, Tenn., has been called to the work at North Side church, Ft. Worth, Tex.

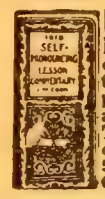
—Secretary R. M. Hopkins sends to this office a copy of a new book issued by the Missionary Education Movement, entitled, "The South Today." It is by John M. Moore, of Nashville, Tenn. This work would be an ideal text to be used in mission study classes during the winter. It may be secured from the A. C. M. S. office, Carew building, Cincinnati, at a low price.

—Miss Cynthia P. Maus, of the national Sunday school work, recently addressed a conference at First church, Grand Rapids, Mich., on the problems of the teen age.

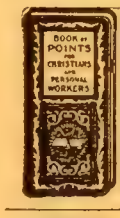
—The Oakland, Fruitvale, Alameda and South Berkeley, Cal., churches are to hold a union meeting at Oakland church, on Nov. 12. A picnic lunch at 1:30, a great service at 3, union C. E. service at 6, and a mass meeting at night will be features.

—A. L. Crim begins a new work at Eugene, Ore., this week.

—L. G. Batman, pastor at First church, Youngstown, in a recent sermon, declared that the time is ripe for a great appeal for peace to be made under the leadership of American statemanship.



CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO



Then get "The HERALD" A large, live monthly, 25c a year. Sample free.
THE HERALD,
723 W. 62d St., Chicago.

BOOK OF PRAYERS
Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

POCKET S. S. COMMENTARY
For 1917, SELF-PRONOUNCING Edition on Lessons and Text for the whole year. Right-to-the point practical HELPS and Spiritual Explanations. Small in Size, Large in Suggestion and Fact. Daily Bible Readings for 1917, also Topics of Young People's Society, Motto, etc. Red Clo. 25c, Mor. 35c, Interl. for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, MONON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

BOOK OF POINTS
AND TESTIMONIES for use of Christians and Workers in all meetings. Answering Objections, Excuses or Doubts. Helps for leading and taking part in Prayer Meetings and in giving personal Testimonies. Better understanding of hard places in Scripture, etc. Full of practical suggestions. Don'ts for Workers when dealing with Inquirers. Cloth 25c; Morocco, 35; Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Bible Readers and Christian Workers Self-Help Hand Book
Short and plain articles by nearly 100 experienced Christian writers. Just the Help over hard places you have been looking for. How to lead, teach, testify, pray and grow. Young Christians helper, experienced workers' guide. Pkt. size, 128 pgs., Red Cloth, 25c, Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wntd. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

50c Postpaid
Satisfaction Guaranteed
Fits Any Pocket
For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Iron-strong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.
U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55-B—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

—Ninth Street church, Washington, D. C., raised more than the $33,000 needed to clear the indebtedness on the newly erected Sunday school building.

—Last year at Eureka College there was an increase of 40 per cent in the attendance at the college proper, with a total gain of more than 30 per cent.

—In the recent civic parade and pageant at Peoria, Ill., conducted under the auspices of the local Association of Commerce, Howett Street church won a prize of $35 offered for the most attractive float appearing in the pageant.

★ ★

ILLINOIS NOTES

C. C. Wisher, Saybrook, has accepted a call to the church at Camp Point and will begin his work January 1, 1917. Mr. Wisher is closing a successful pastorate of six years at Saybrook.

Claude E. Cummins has been appointed superintendent of the Christian Chapel of Paris by the board of First Church, Paris. Mr. Cummins is preparing for the ministry.

C. W. Cauble, state secretary of Indiana, dedicated the new church at Palestine, Illinois, October 15. He raised $1,000 more than was needed. J. A. Parker, the pastor, speaks in high terms of Mr. Cauble. Mr. Parker reports nineteen additions at regular services.

W. W. Weedon, for five years pastor at Mt. Carmel, has accepted a call to the churches at Allendale and Barney's Prairie, a country church about seven miles from Allendale. Barney's Prairie enjoys the distinction of being the oldest church of our people in Illinois.

H. L. Hayes has been with the Keensburg Church six months. He has had forty additions. The Keensburg Church usually has half-time work, but they have employed Mr. Hayes' service for full time.

B. H. Bruner of Arcola has accepted a call to the pastorate of Third Church, Danville, and will begin his work there about the middle of November.

T. L. Stipp, a worthy and well-known minister among our people in Eastern Illinois, is chaplain of the Old Soldiers' Home at Danville.

The Webber Street Church in Urbana laid the corner-stone of their new building Thursday, October 26. They expect to dedicate about February 1, 1917.

Geo. W. Watson of Lafayette, Indiana, has declined a call to the pastorate of First Church, Paris, Ill.

Secretary L. O. Lehman says the attendance of Eureka College is the largest in the history of the school. Eureka College now has one of the best plants in Illinois.

Bruce Buckler, a junior in the University of Illinois, preaches for Rural Retreat, a country church near Hindsboro; Union Prairie, near Arthur, and Oreana. In the midst of a strenuous college life he finds joy in serving these churches.

Frank S. Stamm has moved to Urbana and is engaged in holding meetings and supplying pulpits for near-by churches.

Homer E. Sala, president of the next state convention, will do some special work in behalf of the society this year.

A. F. Larson, recent pastor at Toluca, has moved to Columbia, Mo., and expects to take special work in the Bible College and University of Missouri.

H. H. Peters,
State Secretary.

Do Your Friends This Favor

Would you like to do a service to your friends, at no cost to yourself? We want to send several complimentary copies of The Christian Century to four friends of yours who you think might like the same sort of religious weekly that pleases you. Give us names and addresses of the four friends to whom you would like several copies sent.

Please fill in all the blanks and mail to us today. You place yourself and your friends under absolutely no obligation by doing them and us this favor. We wish to advise your friends that the paper is being sent at your request, but your name will not be used at all if you so request. Thank you!

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

My Own Name and Address is.....

.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

Disciples Publication Society, 700 East 40th Street CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Here is the only book that tells the story of the Disciples movement from first-hand observation. Dr. W. T. Moore is the only man now living who could perform this task, and Dr. Moore has told his story in his

"Comprehensive History of The Disciples of Christ"

You cannot afford to let this opportunity slip to secure this book for your library at practically half price!

This is a sumptuous volume of 700 pages, beautifully printed and bound. The pictures themselves are more than worth the price of the book. Here is a real portrait gallery of the men who have made the Disciples movement, from the earliest days to the present living minute.

Here is the Extraordinary Proposition We are Making on the Few Copies of the Book Now Remaining

Send us only $2.50 and we will mail you, postpaid, a copy of the $4.00 Cloth Edition. If you wish the half morocco (originally sold at $5.00) send us $3.50. The full morocco (originally selling at $6.00) will be sent you for $4.00.

Special Offer

How You May Have the Book Free: Send us two paid new subscriptions to "The Christian Century" and your own renewal (all at the regular $2.00 rate) and we will send you the book in cloth without a cent of cost to yourself.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

THE DISCIPLES HYMNAL IS THE MOST BEAUTIFUL HYMNAL EVER PRODUCED BY THE AMERICAN CHURCH

It Sings the Message You Preach!

EVERY modern-minded pastor has had this experience: After preparing a sermon on some great, human, social problem or duty, he has searched his hymnal through to find a hymn that would gather up and express in song the theme of his sermon. And he found none which in modern terms struck the social note. As a result he felt, after his sermon was preached, that half its power had been lost.

One of the unique features—among many others equally distinctive—of the new hymnal

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

is its section on "The Kingdom of God," with sub-sections entitled "Social Aspiration and Progress," "Loyalty and Courage," "Human Service and Brotherhood," "The Nation," "Peace Among the Nations," etc., etc. In this section are 101 great hymns which sing the evangelical social gospel which the modern pulpit preaches. Many of these hymns have never before been used in a church hymnal. Here are some of the authors' names:

John Addington Symonds
Emily Greene Balch
John G. Whittier
William DeWitt Hyde
Charles Kingsley
Nolan R. Best
Richard Watson Gilder
Algernon C. Swinburne
Felix Adler
Ebenezer Elliott
W. Russell Bowie
Thomas Wentworth Higginson
Gilbert K. Chesterton
Washington Gladden
Frank Mason North
Charles Mackay
John Hay
William Pearson Merrill
Katherine Lee Bates
Frederick L. Hosmer
Rudyard Kipling
John Haynes Holmes

Think of being able to sing the social gospel as well as to preach it! The social gospel will never seem to your people to be a truly religious gospel until they learn to sing it. The Disciples Hymnal is the only church hymnal in which the social note of today's evangelical preaching finds adequate expression. The use of this hymnal will thrill and inspire your congregation with a new vision and purpose.

Price $1.15 in cloth, $1.40 in half leather

Special introductory terms to churches. Returnable copy sent to pastors or committees.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th Street - - - - Chicago, Illinois

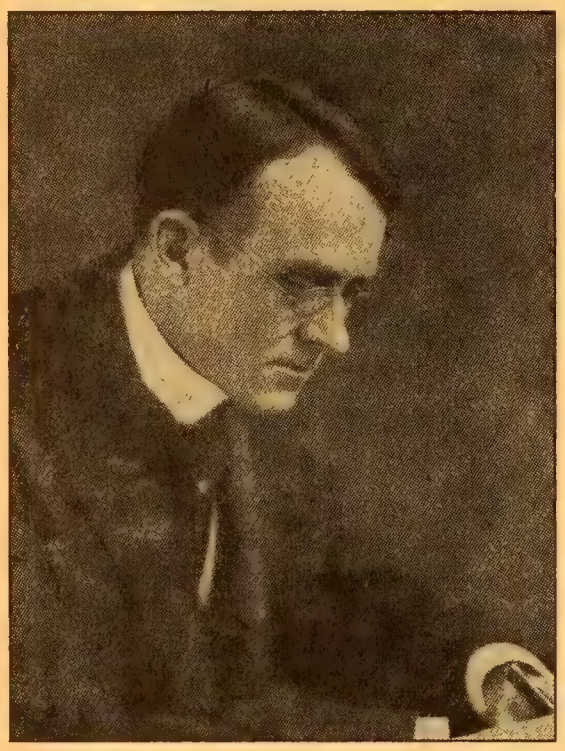
THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII November 16, 1916 Number 46

The Recognition of God

By L. O. Bricker

Learning to Walk—Among Immigrants



By F. E. Lumley

The Growth of Faith

Editorial

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Charles Clayton Morrison
Editor

A Constructive Religious Newspaper for Christian Homes

Herbert L. Willett
Contributing Editor

Great Year Ahead for Our Readers

An Unequalled Staff of Writers

WE are able at this time to announce such a staff of writers as has never been equalled by a newspaper among the Disciples of Christ. The writers have won places of authority in all their respective fields of interest. Their presence on our staff will make the "Century" vibrate with life. Here is the list of them:

ALVA W. TAYLOR will revive the department of social interpretations, which our readers of several years ago will recall as our "star" department in those days. It will be richer and more attractive in its new setting, just as the mind of Professor Taylor is riper and more authoritative than in the days gone by.

JOHN R. EWERS is back! He wrote a forthright article on the Sunday School lesson each week for two years which added more new subscribers to The Christian Century than any single feature of the paper. He is better than ever. Read him in this issue. He speaks for himself.

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL, a sage without the years of a sage; a mystic; a friendly counsellor; an interpreter of the things of the soul. His articles will be a frequent feature of the coming year.

IDA WITHERS HARRISON, constructive feminist. She dropped out of our contributorial department a year ago on account of her heavy duties in preparation for the Panama Congress. Our sense of loss was overcome when her services to the Congress brought her the most distinguished recognition accorded any woman at Panama. Mrs. Harrison will write on timely themes of special interest to modern womanhood.

EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES, philosopher and preacher, will follow the promptings of his own interest and write on the vital and thought-provoking themes he never fails to select.

ORVIS F. JORDAN has for several years made of the "Larger Christian World" page a means of broadening the vision and sympathy of all our readers. The same high standards will characterize his conduct of this department in the future, and in addition many contributions of other kinds will appear from his pen.

CHARLES T. PAUL is a unique figure among the Disciples. He symbolizes missionary science and statesmanship, but we have his promise to contribute a series of studies in the spiritual life. As a leader of The Christian Century family's devotions our readers may expect uplift and enrichment from President Paul.

ELLIS B. BARNES, a preachers' writer! Our minister readers talk about the things Mr. Barnes says in the "Century" more than about any other contributions we publish. The Christian Century is not made primarily for preachers, but for thoughtful

Finis Idleman

Charles T. Paul

Orvis F. Jordan

Irene T. Myers

E B. Barnes

laymen, that is, plain Christian men and women. This accounts for the intense interest with which ministers read and commend the "Century." Mr. Barnes will write not simply for preachers, but about preachers, and the laymen will enjoy his articles as much as will our minister readers.

Finis S. Idleman, New York's Disciple leader, who has wrought a transformation in Central Church in that metropolis, will interpret his experiences and report the progress of religion from the point of view of the East.

Irene T. Myers has promised to present from time to time a number of articles dealing with certain phases of the new womanhood. Dr. Myers is a writer new to Christian Century readers. A doctor of philosophy from Yale and a world-wide traveler, she is Professor of History in Transylvania College. What she will write will have both authority and piquancy.

Edgar DeWitt Jones, a writer who uses words with unerring delicacy, who thinks in the most human terms, whose writing has that indefinable something called "charm." Dr. Jones will speak often to our readers on the fine issues of the spiritual life which he senses so unerringly.

H. D. C. Maclachlan, pastor of one of the greatest churches of the East, but who keeps his thought-life intensely busy with the deeper things of spiritual culture, will write this year for The Christian Century. He always deals with big and urgent issues.

What shall we more say? When has there been spread so rich a feast as this before the readers of any religious journal? And these are only the features that we are able to arrange for in advance. Besides these there are the carefully selected articles on vital, human conditions and experiences, in the search for which the editorial staff is constantly on the alert. Certainly every person familiar with the current literature of the Disciples will agree with the statement of a very conservative reader who said recently that The Christian Century "is doing more to enrich the mind and widen the horizon of the Disciples of Christ than any other influence among us."

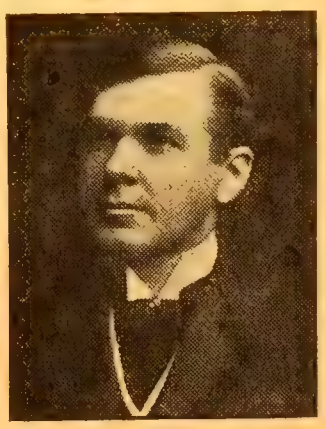
Dr. Willett on the Bible

Dr. Willett will write a series of articles on the Bible, how it grew, who its authors were, how the books came to be gathered into a single book, what we mean by inspiration and authority as applied to the Scriptures, and many such questions of a practical and critical sort in which every thoughtful Christian man and woman of today is interested. His first article will be forthcoming soon. It will open up a line of study that should be singularly attractive and timely. In anticipation of these articles our readers will wish to get The Christian Century into the hands and homes of their thoughtful friends.

"Why I Am a Disciple"

Some years ago Charles Clayton Morrison, editor of The Christian Century, promised to write a series of articles on the subject, "Why I Am a Disciple." The promise, it seemed, was not kept at the time and the plan to write the series was finally crowded out with other things. The obligation, however, has not been forgotten. This series will be one of the features of the interesting year that is before us. There will be perhaps a dozen short articles. They will be quite personal and intimate, setting forth the way in which the teaching and aim of the Disciples appeal to the editor.

Ida W. Harrison



H. D. C. Maclachlan

George A. Campbell

Edward S. Ames

Edgar D. Jones

CENTURY SUBSCRIBERS!

Renew Your Own Subscription 6 Months or a Year Without Cost

Return This Certificate

with $2.00 to pay for a full year's subscription to be sent a friend of yours who is not already taking the Christian Century and we will credit you six months on your own subscription for your kindness in the matter. We will also send you a copy of "The Divinity of Christ," by E. S. Ames—a book which sells regularly for 75c.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—I enclose $2.00 for which send The Christian Century for one year to the following new subscriber:

Name_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

For this cooperation on my part, please credit my own subscription six months as promised, and send me a copy of "The Divinity of Christ."

Sent by_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

P. S.—For $6.00 we will send The Christian Century to two persons who are not now subscribers, credit your own subscription for one full year and send you a copy of Dr. W. T. Moore's great "Comprehensive History of the Disciples."

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year, to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII NOVEMBER 16, 1916 Number 46

The Growth of Faith

"LORD, INCREASE OUR FAITH!"

These words of the despairing disciples have been the heart cry of Christians ever since. There are so many things that tend to lower the power of our spiritual life.

There is the alternation of faith and lukewarmness that seems to come to all churches. The pastor watches the decline of interest in his members with sinking heart and much self-examination. One day an opposite tide sets in. It is this alternation of religious interest that lies at the bottom of the revival habit of the church. It is quite clearly our duty to work for a steadier burning of the lamp of religious life. A flickering light will never properly light the world.

It is true, also, that there are in all churches faith-producers and there are faith-consumers. There is a mere handful in many churches that rally against every discouragement and fight the harder in difficult times. Nine-tenths and more are fair-weather Christians who have no power in themselves to originate faith. They eat it up. Some unusual cynics and pessimists consume enormous quantities of the spiritual voltage generated by those who produce religious conviction.

There are the intellectual assaults on faith. Perhaps the preachers do not realize how many infidels they make. Robert Ingersoll was the son of a minister. His father was of the strict Calvinistic sort. The reaction of Ingersoll, his unfaith, was a rejection of a system of ideas and of legalistic regulation of conduct that were abhorrent to him.

★ ★

The writer met recently the wife of an engineer, an intelligent lady in things not religious, who had never been in a church that did not materialize heaven and hell. She thought theosophy was nearest to her belief, but had great difficulty in receiving all of that rather hazy doctrine. Her troubles in religion were made by its official interpreters. We have reason to believe she is to find a home again in the church, now that she has found progressive evangelicalism.

There are also the destructionists of the "liberal" sort. A preacher declared not many years ago: "The work of a preacher in this generation is to destroy. It remains for another time to build up again." We record gratefully that he has long since left the ministry for business. The errors and delusions that have trailed along with religion disappear more rapidly when they are pushed out of the way by truth. The growth of a child's body is accomplished not by sloughing off the arms periodically to make place for longer arms. The little arms imperceptibly lengthen and perhaps much of the tissue of the small arm is included in the larger one.

Our sins tend to destroy faith. We are tempted to believe that our moral failures are typically human and that Christianity is impractical or even impossible. A certain man who proved untrue to his wife has since declared that he cannot believe in God any more. Though he does not see it clearly, the very hour when he renounced his wife he turned his back on God and on faith in spiritual realities.

It is not with the faith-destroying forces that we are chiefly concerned. They are all impotent enough, once we learn the processes by which an active and ardent religious life is created.

Faith grows by honest investigation. Whenever the church has to say to a candid mind: Do not read that book, or Do not hear that speaker, she has confessed defeat. All the church needs to counsel is the deep and thorough investigation that will compass all the facts. Philip's reply to Nathanael was a very wise one, "Come and see."

There is the faith born of experience. One must have lived and have suffered to know the deepest things of the spirit. The mere intellectual apprehension of Christianity is but the ante-room of the largest faith. Doubt-cursed souls must travel to Gethsemane and stand by Calvary with our Lord in order to reach the triumphant conclusion of Thomas, the Doubter, who said, "My Lord and my God."

★ ★

Prayer is a great quickener of faith. The beggar's prayer, which always seeks of God material ends, shekels, will not produce faith, but may discourage it. The prayer of communion with the living God has in it great possibilities in the quickening of faith. The poor father of the demon-possessed boy prayed, "I believe; O, Lord, help thou mine unbelief." His halting prayer was heard.

The living fellowship of the church is full of encouragements for faith. A certain man of our acquaintance, sixty years of age, is now studying the fundamentals of religion preparing to enter the church. Last spring as he lay in a hospital, apparently dying, a church took up the whole burden of the support of his family. In the terror of his soul he found a wonderful peace in the pastor's prayers. His faith rests on an astonishing evidence of the reality of religion. As on Sunday morning we look over the congregation and see the drunkards that have been converted, the misers that have been softened, the shrews that have been made tender, our hearts swell with a sense that religion has right here in the church its living epistles.

Faith is of course a great adventure. But the adventure of unbelief is far more hazardous and less satisfying to reason, conscience or deep instinct. The nature of religious certainty is not that of a proposition in geometry, else we should never speak of faith. Faith is the big hypothesis for the soul's life.

Spiritual things seem to some unreal. They are the most abiding of the realities.

The things that are seen shall pass away. The things that are not seen shall abide.

EDITORIAL

AN ASTONISHING VICTORY

AN EVENT of even greater significance than the election of any particular candidate for President is the way the dry forces won at the last election. There were offensive battles in Michigan, South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Idaho in which the states voted for prohibition amendments to the constitution. In Utah, Florida, New Mexico, Texas and Iowa it is thought that legislatures and governors have been elected which will give the states prohibition by statutory enactment. In Missouri the majority against the drys was cut down as compared with the vote in 1910 and it is said that Kansas City voted dry. In Michigan a signal victory was won when Detroit voted dry along with the rest of the state. There are now twenty-four of the states under prohibition and perhaps twenty-five. It is said that this means that 65,000,000 people in the United States are living under prohibition.

The defensive battles went well. In Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Arizona and Arkansas amendments to the state constitution were proposed which would have gone far to nullify the dry law. These amendments were prepared by brewers who wished the privilege of selling beer. In no case did such effort win.

As soon as thirty-six states go dry the federal enactment to the constitution will follow like day follows night. If the states mentioned above make statutory enactments against the liquor traffic there will remain only six more states to capture until the terrible habit that has enchained America will be a matter of history. Thus will be completed the history of one of the greatest moral battles that has ever been fought.

It is no time for the church to relax in her testimony. The idealism of religion is the big force behind this great reform which is sweeping the nation. We must not cease our testimony until the last trench of the enemy is taken.

"BRIMSTONE CORNER"

THERE is a church in the downtown district of Pittsburgh which has the rather suggestive title of "Brimstone Corner." There was a day when this nickname accurately stated the kind of message to be heard there. The Brimstone church was once a popular church. It was not that men loved such a church, but they feared the thing it bore witness to. Like the devil worship of Africa, religion rested upon the influence of fear.

Modern religion does not undertake to conceal the fact that the life of the soul is surrounded with real perils. The fact that we no longer materialize the warnings of Scripture does not take away the validity of these warnings. Sometimes the Scriptures speak of a burning lake and sometimes of a bottomless pit. There is mention of fire and there is also the picture of the wail in outer darkness. To materialize these figures is to be involved in contradictions and absurdities. To acknowledge the spiritual perils of life is another thing.

There is the peril of a dwarfed soul life. The man who has been most injured may be like a leprosy victim, feeling no pain. He is unconscious of the big spiritual world in which his fellows live so joyously and freely. There may be, on the other hand, the pain of remorse and the terrible judgments that follow sin.

Our gospel, however, is not a "gospel of hell." It is a gospel of Jesus Christ. Hell is no good news. Salvation is.

The question of preaching much the results of sin is one that relates to the strategy of preaching. The message of fear brings a response most immediate and open. Preaching the gospel is a method requiring more time to secure results, but involving the change of the whole moral structure of a man. Such changes take time, but they alone are to be regarded as the true Christian product.

If a man wants good reports in a newspaper he will run a "Brimstone Corner." If he wants a good accounting before God he will take the slower and more difficult course.

CHRIST, THE GOOD SHEPHERD

THE Christ of experience is very dear to the Christian soul. No criticism can take Him away from us, for we have known Him each for Himself. There is no need that any should prove to us His existence or power to save.

We think of our Christ as the Good Shepherd. Life is full of dangers, some of them unforeseen. The Good Shepherd protects from the evils that would threaten our soul's life. Even when through our self-will we wander away from the fold, He pursues us still in His love. There is no hiding place where His love cannot reach and where His power cannot save. Our Christ takes no attitude of aloofness. He is come to seek and to save the lost.

It is the business of the Shepherd to provide for his flock. This is not always easy. There are dry times when only a few places have the living water. In these times there are but a few spots where the green grass grows. Yet the keeper of our souls never fails. In a time of materialism and worldiness there is always the fellowship of those who love Him if we but seek it. Though our world be war-swept, there is yet the great pervasive spirit of the Good Shepherd which draws men gently but firmly toward the better way.

The Good Shepherd has proved His love by the best of all tests: He was willing to lay down His life for His sheep. He has never forgotten them. Though the universe has many mighty concerns, He has not ceased to care for and love those who have been given into His keeping. Thus through sacrifice and service His devotion has been sealed.

There is an intimacy in the love and care of the leader of the flock. He knows His sheep by name. They need not fear that their individual problems are small in His eyes. They are not forgotten, nor will they be passed by. This intimacy of fellowship grows with the passing of the years into the communion of everlasting life.

TALKING RELIGION STRAIGHT

THE Cleveland Young Men's Christian Association has found out that it pays to talk religion straight, says Association Men. This organization has a religious work committee that takes itself seriously and business men on the committee have taken it upon themselves to talk to young men personally about their religious life. Instead of "stealing up on the blind side" of a young man they have found it easier and better to come to the issue with him straight.

The idea has spread to other Association groups over the country and they now begin talking religion to a man as soon as he steps over the door mat. They find that when it is talked without cant, and from the standpoint of experience, almost any kind of a man will listen.

It is just such a type of activity that should fill the churches. Most of the evangelism of today is personal evangelism, but unfortunately most of it is done by the pastors. There are thousands of Christians in America who have never known how to approach anyone on the subject of his religious life. They can present a business proposition successfully, but they fall down when it comes to presenting the claims of Christ upon men's souls.

When in the preaching, the prayer meeting talks, the Sunday School lessons and everywhere else, religion is reduced to reality, when far-fetched theory is eliminated, when every element of cant and hypocrisy is laid aside, it will be as easy and natural to talk about religion as about anything else that pertains to the higher life of man.

Religion has done things for each of us if we are real Christians. It has done different things for different people and the interpretation any one man might give would be partial. The testimony from experience, however, has a convincing power that nothing else can have. It is one thing to bring to our friend a proposition from Paley's Evidences. It is another to tell him of our experience with Jesus Christ.

CHURCH UNION IN ENGLAND

SINCE the war began there has been an astonishing movement in English free church life in the direction of church union. Many of the leading denominations have been declining in church membership and Sunday School enrollment and the failures of the churches drove them together.

Under the leadership of the president of the Free Church Council, Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, there was recently held at Oxford a convention with two hundred representatives of the leading evangelical bodies of the country present. Committees were appointed looking toward a practical form of union in which the present denominational organizations by a natural evolutionary process should be merged at last into a closely integrated free church movement. In Scotland the dissent from the state church has long been organized so that most of it is included in the United Free church. An even more inclusive organization is designed for England.

These are difficult times for organized Christianity in England. There are infidel papers openly espousing the cause of free-love and other abominations. Infidelity is a more resourceful movement there than here.

Troubled with lukewarmness and division within and faced by powerful foes without, the church in England can see no solutions for her problem but the larger loyalty and the deeper enthusiasm that will come from a union of her forces.

Many American denominations have their roots in English life. Union in the mother country could not fail to have important bearings upon our American church life. Already the more reactionary journals of the denominations in America are grumbling over the prospect of English reunion. They cannot fail to see in this movement the handwriting on the wall for division and disunity on this side of the Atlantic.

IN OPINIONS, LIBERTY

A SUGGESTIVE symbol of Christian unity was enacted by the Chicago Disciples' ministers at Memorial Church on the occasion of the first presentation of the Disciples Hymnal, "Hymns of the United Church," recently. All the ministers of the city save one or two were present. The evening had been spent mainly in congregational singing, which was interspersed with solos and duets and short speeches by all the ministers. Toward the end of the evening the leader announced a hymn from Tennyson's "In Memoriam":

> Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
> Whom we, that have not seen Thy face,
> By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
> Believing where we cannot prove.

This hymn is set to a beautiful and virile tune by Dykes. The congregation sang the first two stanzas and was asked to skip the third stanza, singing the fourth and fifth.

Then the ministers, who were all grouped in the front, were asked to face toward the congregation and sing the third stanza. A more lusty lot of independent thinkers can hardly be found anywhere than that group of fourteen Chicago preachers. Each man thinks his own way through his problems and clings as tenaciously to his own set of views as men can. Conservatives and liberals stood together. There were Willett and Jordan and Kindred and Ames and Hunter and Shaw and Brelos and Sharpe and the rest. But they sang out with fervid humility:

> Our little systems have their day;
> They have their day and cease to be;
> They are but broken lights of Thee,
> And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.

Few in the house missed the subtle suggestion, and all took up again the fifth stanza:

> Let knowledge grow from more to more,
> But more of reverence in us dwell,
> That mind and soul, according well,
> May make one music as before.

As an illustration of that unity of faith which is grounded in liberty of intellectual opinions the little drama was a beautiful success.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH SOUTH AMERICA

THE next big missionary movement for our churches is to be directed toward South America. There is no continent in the world concerning which there is so much ignorance. It is clear that if we are to have the enthusiastic support of our forces in entering upon the new task there must be much more information about "the neglected continent."

Fortunately the missionary leaders are just now putting out many new books that will prove very helpful to missionary students.

The Methodists have made their contribution to the literature of the subject in a rather recent book by Bishop Stuntz on "South American Neighbors." There is much information in this volume concerning the missionary work that is being done by the various religious bodies and regarding the situation in the various countries.

The well known missionary statesman, Robert E. Speer, has just given us a book called "The Unity of the Americas." The book is very brief in compass and low in price. It is designed especially for the use of laymen.

The Episcopalians have a text-book which particularly describes their own work. This is written by Arthur R. Gray and is called "The New World."

J. H. McLean of the Presbyterian denomination has written "The Living Christ for Latin America."

The Disciples should take great interest in a novel called "El Supremo," from the pen of Edward Lucas White. This book deals with the great dictator of Paraguay. It is said no country in human history was ever so devastated by war and tyranny.

By all odds the most authoritative interpretation of the religious situation in South America will be the reports of the Panama Congress which are just now coming from the press. They will contain the addresses of experts and will give us the most statesmanlike interpretation of the task of the Protestants in the continent to the south of us.

WHERE THE JEW IS A GENTILE

THERE is only one place in all the world where the Jew is a Gentile and that is in the domain of the Mormon. In Utah the son of Abraham is lumped off with Mohammedans, denomination Christians, infidels and agnostics as a "Gentile."

Meanwhile the Gentile forces of Utah are putting up a formidable opposition to the dominant hierarchy. Though the popular religion has entrenched itself in politics and controls the great sources of wealth for the community, the growth of dissent in the state is marked.

It is encouraging to note that the Protestant missionary forces are now cooperating in a way not to bring about wasteful competition. There has been originated the Utah Interdenominational Commission, which acts as a clearing house for the religious activities of the leading religious bodies. Baptists, Congregationalists, Disciples, Episcopalians, Methodists and Presbyterians, all are now cooperating in the spirit of good-will. They have agreed to place their men and funds in such a way that these may bring the maximum results for the Christianity they seek to promote.

It is to be said of Mormonism that it has commanded a most astonishing loyalty from its followers. This was born from the days of persecution. Almost any kind of a religious sect may be made to thrive from the blood of martyrs. For these many years Mormonism has been compelled to subsist upon stories of a now distant past. These will soon lose their potency to arouse party feeling.

VISIT THE PUBLIC SCHOOL

SOCRATES once rebuked a young man who had engaged a teacher without inquiring what that teacher would do to his soul. He urged that if it was a swift horse that was to be trained, the owner of the horse would make sure that the trainer was competent for that particular piece of work.

It is astonishing to behold the faith of many Americans who send their children to public school one year after another and never investigate the kind of teaching their children receive. This may be faith in the schools. It is more likely carelessness.

There has been enormous improvement in educational methods in recent years. But concerning the moral and spiritual influences of the public schools, a question or two should be asked.

What kind of a person is the teacher? Does she teach for a salary only, or is there a real enthusiasm for the developing life of childhood? Is she the kind of a person you would wish your child to be like?

In the teaching there is, of course, no formal religious instruction. Yet an inflection of voice, a twist of interpretation, may damage religion in the eyes of a child. Would the teacher of your child be interested in conserving or destroying religion?

What do you know of the moral influences of the playground? Does your school still take the antiquated attitude that it is none of the school's business how the children play? Is there a supervisor for the playground who not only keeps order, but uses the games in an educative way?

Really, these are but a few of the questions that should be asked. Every now and then there is a scandal in connection with the schools which is aired in the juvenile courts. It was made possible by the indifference of parents as well as by the school's methods.

THE DECLINE OF PROFANITY

PERHAPS not everyone would agree that profanity is growing less frequent. There may be in some quarters an increase of slangy and semi-profane speech, but the misuse of the Holy Name seems to us to be growing beautifully less.

The increase of education and cultural standards in America have something to do with it. Coarse and violent language does not befit a gentleman. There is a powerful social taboo operating against the man whose language does not square with the modern demand for cleaner speech.

The growth of the gentleman's code among us makes men desire not to wound their fellows. We do not speak of any unfortunate fact of a man's family history in his presence. Least of all, do we speak evil of his relatives. There is something of this personal consideration in the unwillingness of many men to drag the name of the Lord Jesus into the mire.

We believe, also, that the kind of psychology which supports profanity is passing. We have no use for men who have violent fits of rage. The teamster who swears and beats his horses is now arrested, not indeed for profanity, but essentially for the state of mind out of which it proceeds.

The decline of active infidelic propaganda may also be part of the movement for cleaner speech in reference to deity. There may be much doubt in our modern world. There are many men unable to believe. But there are rather few men who brag about their lack of faith and who are inclined to insult the faith of others.

In the Roman Catholic church there is a society organized for the protection of the name of God. It rests upon a sound instinct. Reverence is a tender plant in the human heart. It must be tended and watered with the greatest care. Profanity is the hot desert wind which kills it. In evangelical circles we may hope for men to confess Christ only when they learn to speak reverently on all occasions of the Holy Name.

The Recognition of God

The Divine Presence in National and Individual History

BY L. O. BRICKER

THE men who wrote the books of the Bible considered that they were writing the story of God's dealings with men. Old Testament history is written from this viewpoint—it is simply a record of God's ways and doings with men. Whatever was undertaken God inspired it; whatever was done God did it; whatever happened he sent it; whatever victories were achieved God wrought them; whatever defeats were suffered he permitted them.

GOD IN JEWISH HISTORY

The Jews regarded their history as a record of the dealings of God with their ancestors. When their earliest pioneer migrated from the region north of the Persian Gulf to the region bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, the historian said that Abraham was called of God to go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance. When the millions of his descendants were in bondage in Egypt, and all baby boys were being slain by order of Pharaoh, the historian said that God put it into a mother's heart to hide her little son, Moses, and willed that he should be found by the King's daughter and receive the best education and training possible.

Later on, when this vast multitude of slaves revolted from their Egyptian taskmasters, under the leadership of Moses, the historian said that God delivered the Israelites by the hand of Moses. When the Nile overflowed and epidemic after epidemic of disease smote the Egyptians, the historian said that God had sent disease and vermin and death to scourge the slaveholders into willingness to emancipate their slaves. When the fleeing slaves, pursued by the armies of Pharaoh, were driven into a pocket—made by the impassable sea and unscalable mountains—they found it possible to cross the narrow and shallow neck of the sea, owing to a strong east wind that blew the waters out to sea, they said that God sent the east wind to give them passage and deliverance.

GOD DRIVES OUT ENEMIES

When wandering in the terrible desert and wilderness of thorn scrub, threatened with starvation and destruction by the fierce desert tribes, but finding food and conquering their enemies, they said that God sent them food and drove out their enemies before them. When their great leader gave them a code of laws in religion, morals, government, diet and sanitation, they said that God wrote the laws with his own finger upon tables of stone and gave them to Moses.

> "And whatsoever ye do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father, through Him."

Rev. L. O. Bricker

When they erected a tabernacle in the wilderness, they said it was after the pattern revealed by God unto Moses in the mount. When they went to war it was in accordance with plans of campaign revealed to them by God himself. When they were ruled by Judges, they said that God chose the Judges and administered justice through them. When they set up a kingdom they said that God selected their king. When they were freed and prosperous, they said that God was blessing them for their obedience; when poor and enslaved, they said that God was punishing them for their wickedness.

"FROM THE HAND OF THE LORD"

Whatever they received, it was from the hand of the Lord. When prophet-preachers appeared among them and spoke of the glorious things that would come upon them and their children as the result of their lives of obedience, and of the terrible things that would follow their disobedience, they said that the words of the preachers were the words of God.

This is the way the history of the Hebrews is written, and this is the only way to write history; it is the only true way; it is the only adequate explanation of events. This is the way the history of our country should be written. We pride ourselves that we have clearer views and conceptions of God than these men had three thousand years ago, and no doubt we have; but it is to be deplored that we do not have an equally controlling sense of the divine presence in our lives, and of the operation of the divine power in our national affairs.

IS GOD IN AMERICAN HISTORY?

We ought to see the religious significance in the great events of our national history, and we ought to write our history from that viewpoint. The history of our country should read this way:

"When the Continent of North America was about to be overrun by the uncivilized hordes of Eastern Asia, God depressed the narrow isthmus which joined the two continents, and made the Behring Sea too deep and wide for them to cross, thus saving our country for the Christian pioneers who should bring religion across the Atlantic ocean from Europe.

"When Columbus was steering his vessels westward from Spain and they were pointed straight for the shores of New England, God sent flock after flock of land birds, and mass after mass of floating sea weeds to lure him to the south, so that he might land upon one of the Bahama Islands, and thus save our great continent from the evils of a decadent Spanish civilization, which is manifest to this day in Mexico and the Latin-American republics.

"Then the Lord stirred up adversaries against our fathers in England, in France, in Holland, making life intolerable for them, in order that they might be driven into the land prepared for them, and which God had saved for them.

"In the 17th century, when England and France were struggling for supremacy in the New World, and our country was about to be despoiled by the Bourbons, God nerved the arms and aimed the blows of a little band of heroes at Quebec, and saved America from the rule of the Roman Catholic Richelieu and Loyola.

"When the missionaries under the lead of Marquette, Joliet, La Salle and Hennepin, were about to fix on us the religion of the Jesuit and the rule of the despot, God raised up the Iroquois against them, and flashed His opposing will in the tomahawks and arrows of the savages."

WASHINGTON AND DIVINE PROVIDENCE

This is the way American history should be written, and it was written that way in the beginning. After the war of the Revolution, George Washington did write it that way in his inaugural address, saying: "When I contemplate the interposition of Providence, as it was visibly manifest in guiding us through the Revolution, I feel myself oppressed and almost overwhelmed with a sense of Divine munificence. No people can be found to acknowledge and adore an Invisible hand which conducts the affairs of men more than the people of the United States. Every step by which we have advanced to the character of an independent people has been distinguished by some token of Providential agency."

The "Father of His Country" not only saw the hand of God in the affairs of men in those stirring times, but he acknowledged it openly and gratefully and made what he wrote to read like chapters out of the Bible.

Why should history not be written that way? Certainly it is the way the New Testament means that our history should read, and our individual lives be regarded.

IN NEW TESTAMENT LIFE

In the New Testament the daily life of the Christian is overshadowed, undergirded, beset behind and before by the Heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus and the Holy Spirit. The disciple goes forth in his daily life led by the Spirit of God, conscious that the Heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus have taken up their abode in him; he lives in daily communion and fellowship with Christ; whatever he does and says is done and said in the name of the Lord Jesus. This is the distinguishing mark of the New Testament Christian—there is constant and continuous recognition of God, and acknowledgment of the presence of the Lord Jesus in his daily life.

Do you mark the words—"recognition" and "acknowledgment"? This is the only difference between the New Testament Christian and the twentieth century Christian: God is not in our thoughts as he was in theirs; the praise of Christ is not on our lips as it was on theirs; the consciousness of God does not light up our faces and thrill our hearts as it did theirs; when we write letters to our friends we do not fill them full of Jesus, as they did; when we talk together we do not talk of God as they did. We fail to recognize God and to put the name of the Lord Jesus where it belongs in our thought and life and conversation.

This was the glory of the men whose story is told in the Bible—they had the knack of giving the right name and interpretation to things. There is the story of Jacob, who lay down to sleep one night under the stars and dreamed all night of God and heaven and the angels; and heaven seemed so near that the angels could come and go on a stair of light.

INTERPRETING EVENTS

How easy it would have been for Jacob to have gotten up in the morning, rubbed the sleep out of his eyes, and said: "What a strange and beautiful dream I had last night," and then to have gone on his way and forgotten all about it. But he had the grace to put the right interpretation on it and give it the right name, saying: "God was in this place. This is none other than the house of God and the gate of Heaven." And he built there an altar of sacrifice and remembrance; and he was never the same man after that. Things just as wonderful and beautiful as that have happened to you; but you gave neither the right interpretation nor name to them; you built no altar of remembrance to them; and now you have forgotten all about them, and remain unblessed.

A QUOTATION FROM PAUL

When one you love as you love your own life falls sick, and, after a long and terrible illness, gets well, and you write to some friend about it, what do you say? Oh, you mention the doctor, and maybe the nurse, and possibly some remedy that appeared to do good; but do you ever use such language as Paul uses in his Epistle to the Philippians concerning Epaphroditus: "For indeed he was sick, nigh unto death; but God had mercy on him, and not only on him, but on me also; and heard our prayers and raised him up, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow." Why do you not write it that way?

In the verse following our text, the Apostle continues as follows: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." Teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms? What is the teaching and admonition of the Psalms? It is this: If the Lord has done something for you; if any experience of life has brought you near to some new truth; if in your perplexity you have found wisdom; in your burdens new strength; in your sorrows some new well of consolation—tell it out, make it known.

PERSONAL TESTIMONY

The Psalms call upon every soul for personal testimony. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." "Come and hear, all ye that fear the Lord; and I will tell you what He hath done for my soul." "I have not hid Thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared Thy salvation. I have not concealed Thy loving-kindness and Thy truth; I have told them unto the great congregation." I have not hid—I have declared. I have not concealed—I have told. It is this declaring and telling and speaking to one another concerning what the Lord has done for us that is so lacking in our modern religious life. And both we and others are great losers thereby.

TODAY'S GREAT NEED

Our greatest need today is for the cultivation of our spiritual perception and the enlargement of our spiritual vision. We are living in stirring times, times that are ripe for some imminent unfolding and new revealing of the power of God. What form this unvailing may take none can tell. But it behooves every one of us to be spiritually alert. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching."

First Christian Church, Atlanta, Georgia.

THE TRUE NEED

By Thomas Curtis Clark

I do not wish to see my sins more plain,
But this: to know Thy life, without a stain.

I would not see the vileness of my heart,
But this would know: how pure and true Thou art.

I would forget my paltry life, so small,
And know Thy greatness, Thou, my All in All.

O teach me not how deep my spirit's night,
But flood me with Thy beams, Thou Perfect Light!

Learning to Walk—Among Immigrants

Some Suggestions Looking to the Solution of a Baffling Problem

BY FREDERICK E. LUMLEY
Of the College of Missions

THE Christian churches of America have been and are being mightily affected by the inpouring tide of immigrants. These immigrants are contributing to the changed conception of religion that is prevailing more and more. They are undermining the sacred regard for certain institutions. They are hindering the movement to make religion moral and vitally social. But the churches have only recently opened their eyes to such effects. Sometimes persons who are awakened rudely and with a shock of surprise from deep sleep move about for some minutes in a dreamy, random and often ridiculous or occasionally stormy manner before they get connected up with the march of events. And social institutions often do irrational things at the first consciousness of a serious situation, and because of their massiveness awaken much more slowly than individuals. Having dimly perceived that something is modifying the influence of the church in America and at the same time putting millions of strangers about her doors, there are shakings and quakings and eye-rubbings and curious efforts to see what the trouble is.

"AMERICANIZING" FOREIGNERS

As the truth comes home that a new situation faces organized religion there is maturing a heroic determination to withstand the shock, if possible. Consequently, vast schemes are being planned and immense sums of money appropriated for the purpose of easing the contact, and the first and most natural proposal of half-awake persons is to make over these old-world materials and shape them up for our new American social life. "They must be Americanized," we shout, and plunge into the fray. By which we usually mean that they must be civilized, for are they not boorish and ignorant and superstitious and poor?

Needless to say, some who entered the engagement first have been disillusioned. They have discovered that the task is a much larger and nobler one than awakening—that is to say, youthful—enthusiasm permitted them to realize. For one thing, the aliens do not always care to be worked over. They do not yield readily to the crude methods of purely partisan and misguided enthusiasts. Although in America, they still attach some value to their own ideals and customs and can not see at a glance the superiority of ours. For another thing, it is not well and widely known just precisely wherein our immense superiority can be found, and this ignorance disables the interpreters of our life to others. No one can say just what we would like to make these immigrants into, once it is settled that we ought to make them over. In addition, there is vast ignorance of just how to do the thing, after it is settled that it ought to be done.

THREE DIFFICULTIES

Here, then, are three fundamental difficulties, in addition to the swarms of minor ones, facing the Church as it undertakes to deal with the situation: the subtle and unyielding nature of the materials, the type of individual and social life to be constructed, and the method or methods to be employed. I hardly see how much can be accomplished, with the energy and money devoted to this task, that will be worth while accomplishing until our minds are clarified upon these points. And while I do not believe that one of these questions is more important than the others, I think there is a logical and necessary method of procedure in their solution and, therefore, begin at the beginning and select the first one for emphasis here only because space prohibits discussion of all three.

The first task of the Church that would make a contribution to the unification of our American life and to its salvation is to understand the materials with which it must deal, and this is an intellectual process. It is not a game which mere enthusiasts can play. In fact, their enlistment is a hindrance until we get to the place where a definite method of work can be set in operation, where heat rather than light can serve its purpose.

OVERCOMING PREJUDICES

Those who would understand this problem must undergo a purging process. There are subtle biases and prejudices to root out and a sane, open-minded and informed state to cultivate. There must be a thoroughgoing willingness to see what is to be seen and nothing else. And if anyone thinks this mental neutrality an easy position to realize, let him try to attain it. We are all subject to a strain on the emotional side and tend to look either too favorably or too unfavorably upon the immigrants. And as we look we act—unfortunately, either way.

It is conceded by most workers among immigrants that few understand them thoroughly. Accordingly, all efforts should be directed to making up this deficiency. What are their instincts and what sorts of behavior do they prompt? What influence has their geographical environment in Europe or elsewhere had upon them through the centuries? What age-old customs are their portion? Have they any fundamental defects of nature that are liable to be infused through heredity into our American life? What races do they belong to and what has race-character to do with their ability to become adjusted here? What values do they bring with them that are worth conserving here?

SOME UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

These are a few of the unanswered questions about foreigners and we are almost helpless in our dealings with them until we have new light. We know where they came from and how many of them came, their ages, sex, and a few other unessential details about them. But very few persons have actually penetrated to their inner lives and revealed to us the essential things. As I see the situation, no sane policy of dealing with them can be advanced without more facts of the order indicated.

But what is the equipment of the Disciples for understanding these questions? A recent review of the situation makes it pathetically apparent that we are far behind other religious bodies of our size and wealth. We have only a handful of trained workers and they are the product of the trial-and-error school, the heartless academy of experience. And while no blame attaches to them, except perhaps for their enthusiasm, they are inadequately equipped because they have been unable to study the problems mentioned. Few of them can analyze the immigration problem and focus it. They have not been in the native physical and social environment of these people across the seas. They are Americans with the American point of view and have very often not seen the absolute necessity of "thinking black," to use Dan Crawford's apt phrase.

"ROUTINEERS" NOT NEEDED

Besides these there are numbers of others who fall far in their rear. The majority of our workers are competent only to carry out plans that others suggest. They are routineers and social mechanics with no real insight into the nature of what they are doing or why. As a consequence, most plans are dictated, not by the facts or actual needs, but by the feelings and fads of the hour. I think there is no more urgent need this hour than for workers to go back to actual study of immigrants, and for boards and others employing them to make it possible.

This raises the inevitable question of our equipment for preparing workers. What agencies have the Disciples that can train young people how to study and understand immigrants? The briefest and truest answer is that we have none. The review of the situation before mentioned disclosed the humiliating fact that there is not a single institution among us that is ready or can get ready very soon to make good this defect. Only two colleges deal with the immigration question in more than one course. But to be a college graduate and to have taken a course or two in anatomy, physiology and hygiene is not to be a doctor whom any sane person would employ. And yet boards and other agencies regularly employ persons with less preparation for a far more complicated and far-reaching task. To merely mention this is to make it ridiculous.

It is essential, therefore, that the boards adopt the recommendations of the Commission of Immigration at the Des Moines Convention and adhere to them absolutely. Merely whole-souled persons are no longer acceptable to the foreign societies. Why should they be to the home boards? And anticipating a criticism of this position, I would say that it would be far better for our work among immigrants to wait than for us to go on as at present.

THE DES MOINES RECOMMENDATIONS

But we cannot be idle. All the money available could well be devoted right now to the equipment of one institution—and I am, of course, much concerned about which one—for the preparation of missionaries to immigrants. The Commission on Investigation urged "all our colleges" to develop adequate facilities for such preparation. This seems to me impossible and undesirable. "All our colleges" can never undertake to adequately do this work, for it is too costly, and at our present employment rate there would be more faculty than students. Besides, hardly any of our institutions are located in close proximity to foreign settlements, and training cannot be adequate without laboratory practice and study under expert guidance. Furthermore, one faculty and one institution can train all the workers our boards can use—and more—for the next decade or two. The undesirability of many colleges engaging in this work is found in the diversion of funds from other needy departments and in the petty rivalries which would surely develop.

A CONCRETE PROGRAM

The Disciples can spend two or three score thousands of dollars a year in this Christian approach to the immigrant problem. They are offered the services of several dozen young men and women. How can this money and these young people best be used to make a certain, valuable, successful contribution to the solution of the problem? My answer is briefly:

I.

Name and adequately equip a training school where by class-room work and laboratory research, at home or abroad, the immigrants may be studied and understood.

II.

Select a body of these young people carefully and appoint them to the task of preparation. Let them study until all that can be known is known.

III.

Employ them in actual service only as they have proved intelligent and reliable and devoted in study.

IV.

Have certain of our leaders spend a year or two in selecting one or more foreign peoples among whom the Disciples can work.

V.

Give our trained workers a field among these peoples and expect them to make it into a corner in the Kingdom.

Indianapolis, Ind.

The Passing of Felipe Jimenez

Something of the Life Story of a Modern Apostle Paul

BY S. G. INMAN

MEXICO has lost one of her most useful citizens. Felipe Jimenez, who died at Monterey on October 21, was not only a great preacher of the Gospel, but also a patriotic citizen and a man of influence in his own community and his state. He preached the Gospel for some thirty years in Mexico, being identified with the Baptist Mission the first half of this period and with the Disciples Mission the second half.

When Felipe was about nineteen he heard that the despised "Protestántes" were going to have a meeting in his village on a certain night. He and several other young men banded together on that day to break up the meeting. They went to the little room where the service was being held, with their pockets full of stones, thinking to knock out the lights and cause a general confusion which would stop these daring preachers from ever holding a meeting in their town again. Somehow or other, the way the service was conducted, and especially the singing, got hold of the young men to such an extent that they did not throw stones that night.

CONVERTED BY A HYMN

The next evening Felipe was the only one of the young men present, but he had come in a far different spirit this time. He listened spell-bound to the story of the Gospel, and when the invitation hymn, "There's a land that is fairer than day," was sung, Felipe went forward and made his confession of faith in Christ. When his own mother, who was a devout Catholic, learned about it, she told him that she would be compelled to drive him from home if he persisted in joining these "devil worshipers"; but nothing could dissuade Felipe from being baptized.

As soon as he was initiated into the Church his mother made good her threat. He was compelled to leave home. Carrying a little package wrapped in a towel, containing all of his belongings, he set off afoot across the mountains to a mining town, where he hoped to get work. During the time he spent in that town he was thinking about and praying for his mother. After some months he decided to return home to make another effort to convert her. On arriving at the edge of the town he saw a crowd of people down by the river-side. He went over to see what they were doing, and what was his surprise to find that the minister was leading his own mother down into the watery grave of baptism!

A PREACHER OF GREAT POWER

Felipe immediately gave himself to the preaching of the Gospel. He never had the privilege of preparing himself in any theological seminary, but he was a constant reader. I have never listened to any of the renowned preachers of the world with more pleasure than I have listened to the sermons of this great soul. I do not know that I ever heard any evangelist equal him on the themes of Repentance and the Love of God.

When I went to Mexico in 1905, Felipe was stationed in our little church at Saltillo. He and his family were in a half-starved condition, notwithstanding the fact that he had been offered positions which would have paid him many times more; he was staying faithfully by the work. I soon discovered that he had the missionary spirit of the Apostle Paul; he yearned to go out to the neglected parts of Mexico. Some four months after my arrival on the field—when, of course, I spoke only a very little Spanish and Felipe no English at all—I agreed, in answer to his continuous pleadings, to go with him on a tour through the northern part of the state of Coahuila, where he said there were great neglected fields. That trip marked the beginning of our work in northern Coahuila, where we now have more members than we have in the older station in Nuevo Leon.

A DESPAIRING JOURNEY

I shall never forget that trip in which we went into town after town where there was absolutely no religious influence of any kind. I remember that on one night we got into a town at about eleven o'clock. There was nothing like a hotel and we went from house to house, inquiring for a "Protestante" who might be willing to give us a night's lodging. We were sent to many different places; finally one man told us that he was friendly to the cause and would be glad to have us come in and spend the night with him. It was a good thing we carried our blankets along, for it was a question of finding, not a vacant room, but a vacant space on the floor. There were some twelve or fourteen people already sleeping in this one room of the house, but we laid our blankets down and had a good night's rest.

As we traveled from town to town the burden of the need bore down upon us very heavily, but it seemed impossible for us to find any way of supplying that need. We did not have enough workers for the stations that were already open. The last place visited was Las Esperanzas. This was the center of a great coal mining district which was just being opened. The New York company was building a model mining camp, with good dwellings, club houses, school houses, and a church house for anyone who wished to use it. There were already about 15,000 people in that mining town and not a single Christian worker!

LIGHT FROM ON HIGH

This was the climax of the appeal. We were about crushed with the need and did not have any place to talk over the situation, so I remember we walked out on the railroad track into the suburbs of the town. It was drizzling rain. As we discussed different plans, each seeming hopeless of carrying out, I laid my hand on Felipe's arm and said, "Only God can show us the way. Let us pray." We stopped there on the railroad track and took off our hats and in the drizzling rain prayed that God would reveal a way to answer this awful need. All at once the plan came to me as clear as if it had been diagrammed on paper—just how the work should be rearranged and that Felipe himself should come to this field. He agreed to the plan, although it meant the leaving of a greatly beloved work. We returned to Monterey and submitted the plan to the Mission, which approved it at once. It was then passed on to the Board at Indianapolis. They wired their acceptance, and within three weeks of that time Felipe was located in the center of that great, new mining district at Sabinas, where we now have a large school and a church that has a predominating influence in all that district.

A MODERN PAUL

From that beginning our work has extended to Piedras Negras and other important towns in Coahuila and southwestern Texas. To Felipe Jimenez, more than any other human being, is due the beginnings and the development of this splendid work.

During my ten years' residence in Mexico, Felipe has been my closest friend. Countless hundreds owe their knowledge of Christ and their power for efficient service to this great man, who, in his zeal to preach the Gospel to the lost man, so often reminded his friends of the Apostle Paul. His passing should challenge others to volunteer to fill his place in the only army that offers the final victory to Mexico.

A Few Definitions

Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D., in "Christian Work"

A CAREFUL reading of many editorials and the utterances of numerous public men, eminent lawyers and university professors leads me to suggest that the following definitions might be added to our dictionaries in order to make present discussions intelligible to the next generation:

"Preparation for war"—Universal military service and an efficient army in a nation which we dislike.

"Preparedness against war"—Universal military service and an efficient army in our own nation.

"Militarism"—The army and navy of another nation.

"Reasonable preparedness"—The army and navy of our own nation.

"A courageous man"——One who is scared nearly to death lest Germany shall attack us and who looks under the bed every night expecting to find the Kaiser.

"Coward"—One who is willing to fight if necessity should arise, but who declines to live in constant fear of attack and who believes that if our country behaves itself and deals justly with other peoples the prospect of such attack is too remote to justify getting into a panic and diverting to military preparedness money and energy that are needed for helping and saving men instead of destroying them.

"Redblooded manliness"—The animal instinct in man which prompts him to fight another man or to resent a fancied injury with a blow.

"Atrocity"—A barbarous act committed by the side with which we do not sympathize.

"Justifiable retaliation"—An atrocity committed by our own side.

"Patriotism"—The glorification of national selfishness and arrogance, prejudice against other nations, and, in general, the possession of those qualities in a nation which are despised in an individual.

"Honor"—Disposition to look for slights, attitude in a government analogous to that of the cavaliers of a former century who went about armed and challenged to a duel on the slightest provocation.

"International law"—Mutual agreement between nations in time of peace, but in time of war to be respected only in so far as it is to the interest of a belligerent government to respect them.

"Liberty"—The right to do as one pleases in all circumstances and at all times, irrespective of the moral quality of the act or its interference with the rights of others.

"Mollycoddle," "Weakling"—One who dares to face the perils of life without a revolver, and who foolishly believes that it is as true of nations as it is of individuals that "he that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city."

Modern Womanhood

Conducted by Mrs. Ida Withers Harrison

Election Day Reflections

(Written on November 6)

ON this seventh day of November a President of the United States will be elected, and the political complexion of the coming Congress will be decided. Four years ago there were only six states—California, Colorado, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and Washington — where women could vote in a presidential election. Today there are twelve; women will vote for President for the first time in Arizona, Illinois, Kansas, Montana, Nevada and Oregon.

In a word, the number of states giving their women the elective franchise has doubled since the last Presidential election, and this is a fact to make the most determined opponent of woman suffrage sit up and take notice. There are some types of mind so slow and so conservative that a new point of view is as painful as a surgical operation; argument is wasted upon them; the only thing to reach them is the logic of events. And yet we must remember that we live in an age when changes are so swift and so sweeping that even an alert mind must be on the stretch to keep up with them, and so preserve a sympathetic attitude to those whose beliefs are reluctant of alteration. Time was when great movements took a century or a half century to mature; now they move in decades and half-decades. Have you noted that not only are four millions of women in twelve states of our country voting today, but also that the wholesome infection is spreading to the north and south of us? In this good year of 1916 four of the great Canadian provinces have given their women full suffrage, three of them, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, in their provincial parliaments, with but one dissenting vote; in British Columbia it was granted by referendum, with an overwhelming majority. Within the past few weeks the state of Yucatan, in our sister republic to the south of us, war-torn Mexico, has given its women full suffrage.

* * *

But whether we have noted this great onsweeping tide or not, the political parties have seen the significance of it, and in their great conventions last summer, for the first time in the history of the Republican and Democratic parties, woman suffrage planks were put in their platforms, and their candidates, Woodrow Wilson and Charles Evans Hughes, have announced their conversion to the good cause.

Both parties have promptly enlisted the activities of women in their campaigns, not only in the twelve states where they have full suffrage but also in states where there is only partial suffrage, and even where there is no recognition of their political rights. We have had the Hughes Alliance among the women of the Republican party, and the Woodrow Wilson Leagues among the Democratic women. Women have been campaigning across the continent in private cars and special trains for one candidate, and going over the highways and byways in their own automobiles, presenting the claims of the other to the homes and hamlets of our land. Thus have the women of the country, whether they are converts to woman suffrage or not, waked up in the past few weeks and found that they are in politics, whether they want to be or not!

It is thus in Kentucky, one of the most conservative states in the Union, and in Lexington, one of the most conservative towns in the old Commonwealth. The national, state and county campaign committees urged the women to organize, and so we have the Hughes Alliance, installed in handsome downtown headquarters, distributing literature, exhibiting moving pictures and conducting a spirited campaign for their candidate; we have the Wilson League, with over one thousand members, in rival quarters across the street, letting no grass grow under their feet. It has been a pretty fight, and conducted with the most careful courtesy on both sides.

The celebration of Wilson day on October 28 by a mass meeting in the opera house was put in the hands of the Wilson League, and when they beguiled one of their number to be on the program she found to her dismay that she was heralded in the papers as the first woman who had ever made a political address in central Kentucky in a presidential campaign; it is needless to say that to have the honors and responsibilities of a pioneer thus thrust upon her was a terrifying experience; but when she saw the friendly faces of neighbors and fellow-townsmen she found it a natural and an easy thing to talk to them of matters profoundly affecting their common welfare as individuals and as citizens of a well beloved country.

* * *

And so we shall find all of the new duties of citizenship, so soon to fall upon us; they are formidable only when we view them from afar, when we come to perform them they are as simple as the social and household duties we have borne so long.

I heard President Wilson, in an able address this fall, show how the emphasis in our government had shifted in these latter days from legal questions to questions of social welfare. He said that at the outset of the history of the United States it was a lawyers' history, and almost all the problems were those dealing with law and method; but that now we must solve the problems of the relations of human beings to one another, not merely their legal, but their moral and spiritual relations as well. These are the things in which every woman in the land has an interest, and we must address ourselves to their study and understanding so as to bear ourselves worthily in the complex and difficult times in which we live.

I. W. H.

Harnack on Culture

"May I ask your excellency to explain specifically what Germans mean by their word Kultur?"

"I shall try to do so," answered Professor Harnack. "By Kultur we mean three attitudes or aspirations of the mind and heart.

"1. Thoroughness; the wish and the will to go to the bottom of anything.

"2. Altruism; the opposite of selfishness. Matthew XXV explains what I mean. We wish to form a union, wide as human life and deep as human misery.

"3. The wish to see all temporal things in an eternal light; the desire to connect all our thought and action with the everlasting; the purpose and prayer to be co-workers with God in making ourselves and our fellowmen better and happier."

* * *

There is no man so sane as the man who is swayed and mastered by the Holy Spirit.—S. D. Gordon.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

How a Little Christianity Could Have Saved a Labor War

The employes of the Standard Oil Company at Bayonne, N. J., have been upon a strike for the second time in two years. On both occasions there was bloodshed and several fatalities. In both cases the shooting was done by guards engaged and paid by the corporation. In the first place, this is an assumption of feudal rights in a modern democratic order. Whenever a corporation, Standard Oil or other, engages private guards, arms them, pays them, and uses them under the sanction of police officials, they have simply engaged, like the old feudal lord, a band of paid retainers. In practically every case where this has been done investigation has proved that these feudal retainers were men of low character—thugs, gunmen, professional strike-breakers, harpies who in a spirit of adventure and with lack of fellow feeling make it their business to use brute force. They would accept pay from the labor union quite as quickly as from the corporation and execute their bidding to the extent of destroying property and taking life if only it could be done under the protection of the policeman's star; in other words, they are simply paid soldiers of fortune.

The workmen presented, in this last strike, a petition for a raise in wages, saying that it was impossible with the rising cost of living for them to work on the present scale of from $1.75 up to $3 per day, the greater number of course upon the former wage. Now suppose that instead of replying that this wage was the equal of that paid by other employing concerns in the city of Bayonne, Mr. Rockefeller and his fellow owners of the Standard Oil had said, not with a materialistic spirit but with a true Christian spirit, "We will look at this thing from the standpoint of the human beings concerned," they would have recognized of course that $1.75 per day, counting all time for loss of work during the year, was not enough for men to support families on. Then instead of taking counsel with the wage system prevailing they would have taken counsel with their stupendous profits; in other words, they would have done what Henry Ford and some other modern leaders in the labor world would have done. and have paid their men not from the standpoint of a competitive wage system, but from the standpoint of a just distribution of the common profits of an industry. A little Christianity, in which master and man apply a sense of personal sympathy and mutual welfare to their industrial relations, would settle the strikes.

* * *

The Public Preparing for the Strike

The threatened railroad strike furnished another illustration of the unpreparedness of the public to enforce the demands of the now famous third party to every industrial difficulty. In all strikes both employers and employes suffer great loss, but the public usually suffers several times greater loss than both the parties to the combat combined. Yet, strange to say, the public as the greatest loser, has taken almost no steps to prevent its losses. Formerly the let-them-fight-it-out attitude was maintained, but strikes and lock-outs have become so numerous that the great third party has awakened to the folly of taking all the brickbats as an innocent bystander. President Wilson made compulsory conciliation an integral part of his plan for the settlement of all railway strikes and will call upon the coming Congress to put through the complete program.

But beneath all judicial plans for the settlement of strikes once threatened or actually begun there must be recognition of the great underlying economic anl social causes that bring on the crises. The United States government reports show that fully 70 per cent of adult male workers receive less than $15 per week in their pay envelopes and that the time lost from work runs all the way from one to seven months per year, averaging two months for industrial workers. That means that the wages of seven out of every ten of the industrial wage-earners who are or will become heads of families is less than $700 per year. As an actual fact, the same records show that one-fourth of all the heads of families in industrial occupations receive less than $400 per year; one-half less than $600 per year, and four-fifths of them less than $800 per year, with every tenth one actually earning less than $300 per year.

With the rising cost of living anyone competent to read this paragraph knows that the American standard of living cannot be maintained by these industrial wage-earners. The social economists and welfare students are agreed pretty generally that $1,200 is a minimum wage to maintain an American standard of living for a family of five in the great cities; that in cities of second class $1,000 is required, and that in the towns and villages $750 is a minimum living wage. Thus it will be seen that to probe to the seat of the real difficulty there must be a more adequate distribution of the common profits of industry between the capital income and the wage fund. This condition is the culture bed for the strike and while compulsory conciliation will doubtless furnish a sovereign means to settle actual disputes, it will perhaps do even more by calling public attention to these fundamental facts.

* * *

A Great Japanese Christian and His Latest Benevolence

News came to this country recently of the magnificent benefaction of a native Japanese Christian, Baron Morimura, who has given $100,000 to found a lectureship on Christianity in the Imperial University in Tokyo. It has only been within the last year or two that there has been any Christian movement among the students of the Imperial University. As disciples of Spencer in their philosophy and all too largely of Bismark in their political ideals and with a thorough-going materialistic spirit in the faculty, the old religious bonds have been broken and the new and better have not been acquired. Baron Morimura's endowment is a significant augury of a new day among the thinking young men of Japan, for the Japanese student of today holds about the same religious attitude as did the American student of a generation ago. He is in the transition stage from the old to the new. It was this same Christian philanthropist who last year as a part in the great evangelistic campaign financed the printing of Christian literature in newspapers that reached more than 6,000,000 readers daily.

The world is thirsting not for theories but for great good works of faith—for practical solutions of the difficulties of society—for the harmony of light and life—and wherever these appear it will now accept them gladly as the manifest signature of God.—J. H. Thorn.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

English Non-Conformists Get Together

A recent conference of English Non-Conformists was held at Oxford and was attended by the picked official representatives of nearly all the leading free denominations of England. Much progress was made in the direction of bringing into existence a union of all the cooperating bodies. A declaration of principles was drawn up which will be of great significance to their future activities. It states:

"1. That in any federation of churches it is essential that communicants who are in membership with any of them shall be admitted to the communion of the Lord's Table in any other and all of the federating churches.

"2. That it is essential to any federation of churches that a federal council shall be created, consisting of members duly appointed by the Assemblies or Supreme Courts of the federating churches.

"3. That the federal council shall have general advisory powers and such executive and administrative powers as in the future may be committed to it from time to time by the federating churches."

Dr. Aked, Peace Advocate, Is Active Again

Dr. Charles F. Aked made a trip to the Pacific Coast, and preached in his church, the First Congregational, San Francisco, on October 15. The auditorium was packed and many hundreds were turned away, as he discussed "God's Plan for America in the Re-creation of the World." He lectured a number of times on the coast and gave valiant service in the California Dry campaign. He is now back in the east and will preach on his return at Manhattan Church, in New York.

Death of Leading Chicago Pastor

Rev. B. F. Aldrich, pastor of the First Congregational church, Chicago, died recently. He was in the midst of a very active ministry in a territory in Chicago where his services were much needed. The church is located near the loop on the West Side, where the neighborhood has greatly deteriorated. During July and August this church held out-door services in the nearby park, which were greatly appreciated. There have been moving pictures exhibited on the church lawn, and many other attractions have added to the effectiveness of the service of the organization. The music of this church is rendered by a number of chorus choirs under the direction of the noted song leader, H. Augustine Smith. The Rev. Mr. Aldrich was the presiding genius of the varied activities of the church and combined sound scholarship with a helpful social attitude. This church has been known as the next-door neighbor of Chicago Seminary, which moved recently to the campus of the University of Chicago.

Churches Get Big Checks For Aged Ministers

Three denominational boards each received checks for $450,000 recently. These were their respective shares from the estate of the late Mrs. E. S. James of New York, who left this money for the endowment of old age pensions of the ministers of the Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist churches. It is said to be the largest check the Methodists have ever received in one sum. The Methodist Board of Conference Claimants has decided upon still more aggressive plans to carry out their purpose to protect the aged and unfortunate ministers of their denomination.

Proselyting in China Reported

The proselyting evil is spreading from America to China. It is said that agents of the Seventh Day Adventists, Russellites, Tongue-Speakers and others are visiting the orthodox mission stations and drawing away some of the converts after their isms. Among the specific examples of this given in missionary reports is the activity of the Seventh Day Adventists in the Presbyterian mission at Tsingkiangpu. The Chinese are much perplexed by the confusion of doctrine given them.

A Church of a Million Members

A report by the committee on the state of the church showed that the Protestant Episcopal church has 1,080,000 communicants and 5,750 clergymen. About 1,000 of the clergy are not engaged in parochial work. A merger of the clergy relief fund with the church pension fund was effected, the former being on a charity basis and the latter on an actuarial basis. To pay accrued liabilities under the new plan a sinking fund of $5,000,000 is being raised, $3,295,052 of which is already in hand. It is expected to have the full amount by March 1. The actuaries in charge of the pension fund have fixed the rate to maintain pensions as 7.4 per cent of the clergyman's yearly salary, to be paid by the individual parishes. Pensions will be paid clergymen having reached the age of 68 years or those disabled. The sum of $600 a year is to be the minimum, with a maximum of over $2,000.

Union Seminary Has New President

The death of President Francis Brown will not leave Union Seminary long without a president. The position has already been offered to the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, now the pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church of New York, and an alumnus and member of the board of trustees of the institution. Mr. Coffin is now on the way home from a visit to China and his decision is not announced.

Object to Revising Mrs. Eddy

There is an objection from English quarters to the revision of Mrs. Eddy's works by the present board of managers of the church. An English woman by the name of Miss Bill is calling upon English Christian Scientists to break connection with the mother church of Boston on account of changes made in the books of the late healer. The changes referred to were made necessary by reason of the fact that Mrs. Eddy wrote poor English, and in other ways her works had crudities of thought and expression.

Week of Prayer Comes Earlier

The week of prayer has been set a week earlier than the ordinary schedule this year. It will begin the last day of December and extend through the first Sunday of January. The appeal from the Evangelical Alliance for the observance of the day is full of appeal for the church to meet the needs of the present world crisis.

The Sunday School Lesson in Today's Life

CONDUCTED BY JOHN RAY EWERS

"Loyal to Christ"

Lesson for December 3. Scripture, Rev. 1:1-8, 17, 20

THE book of Revelations, like other Biblical books, is intended to strengthen the distressed hearts of Christians in time of trial and disaster. It lifts the eyes from earth, with its suffering, to heaven, with its eternal joys. "To him that overcometh shall be given the crown of life." Such a book is needed in this day of world-war. This is no time to lose courage, to feel that God has forsaken us. God will have His way and the world shall profit.

* * *

In the Carnegie Institute, in this city, are wonderful mural decorations. At the bottom are the mills, with fierce heat and sweating men, but above, in the clouds of steam, are angelic forms. Above the battlefields is Christ—crucified anew—put to an open shame—but bound to win in the end. Already come tales of revivals of religion. Already the prophets are heralding the dawn of a new day for the church. World statesmen see temperance, democracy and fraternity, together with constructive active peace, issuing from the womb of war.

* * *

An agnostic army surgeon ripped the temporary bandages from the cruel wounds of an English boy. This poor chap had been smitten to the earth with a projectile jostled over the rough ground in the ambulance, only to hear the surgeon say, "It must be an amputation." So near exhaustion was the soldier-lad that the surgeon hesitated. "Can you stand it, my boy?" he asked. A weak hand fumbled in the blood-soaked, mud-caked boot; a testament, given him by his mother, was disengaged. He read. Then, looking up with a smile, he said, "I am ready now." The doctor testified that he believed the boy was so composed by that reading that he could have operated without the anesthetic. As the soldier was convalescing the surgeon came to him and said, "Give me that book; if it can work miracles like that, I want it for my own."

The hymns of the church rise from the trenches. The Y. M. C. A. huts are crowded. Converts are many, religion is real. A great seriousness is coming over England and France. The still, small voice of God will soon be heard. The wrath of men shall yet praise Him!

The most dangerous land in which to live today is America. Soft luxury soothes us into spiritual sleep. Mammon has his temple crowded with devotees. Christ is being obscured. The smoke of mills, the heaps of shells, the stacks of money obscure Christ. Some Savonarola will have to make a bonfire of our follies! Idolatry is among us. Singing multitudes dance before the golden calf. It is awful to be twenty-years-old in America today! Unless the moral equivalent for war can be discovered we are lost.

One of our eastern colleges is full of agnostic young men. A friend of mine just back from college says, "What those young men need is a preacher who can put as much 'pep' into his sermons as the football coach puts into his game."

There you have it. Every Sunday School teacher and every preacher should today burn his brains to put fire into the setting forth of Jesus Christ. Shame on us for our half-hearted declarations in such a day as this! Preach Christ with power! Call men to His service. Set forth His excellencies. People always run to see a fire. Have a fire in your pulpit, a blaze in your class-room. Sick and tired of monotonous, droning, half-awake parsons, no wonder thousands go to hear Billy Sunday. Wake up! Preach Christ with a new passion, or else quit!

The Calendar of our church bears this motto, "This church is loyal to Christ and in love with men."

East End Christian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A Philanthropic Men's Class

THE Euclid Avenue Christian Church, Cleveland, Ohio, has good reason to feel proud of its Men's Bible Class, which meets each Sunday under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Cowdery. The class is not exceptionally large, the average attendance being about sixty. It is in the spirit and practical helpfulness of its members that the class shows its greatness.

Many big tasks in the church are assumed by this class. In the spring a "Father and Son" banquet was provided for the men and their sons. It was a most inspiring event and was handled entirely by the men's class. Just at this time the men are planning to give a similar dinner to the men of the church and their friends, at which dinner Dr. J. Campbell White is to present the great world task of the church and challenge to men to take up the work. This same class has helped to conduct services at the City Rescue Mission and also takes a large part in the annual every member canvass of the church.

* * *

While the tasks mentioned are of a public nature and are more spectacular there are innumerable little programs of helpfulness carried on in a quiet way. These men have organized themselves into committees of two in order to help out families in need. In many cases rent and provisions have been provided for needy families for a period of five or six weeks, and, best of all, employment has often been found for the fathers. In one case a helpless victim of drink was saved from a workhouse sentence, his family clothed, rent paid and work provided.

Just at this time the men are working on a pledge to the church at Marion, Ohio. The class has pledged five hundred dollars to help this church to clear off the indebtedness on its building.

For nine years these men have gone out on one evening every other week to call on the unchurched and invite them personally to the services of our church. This has been a great help to our pastor, Mr. J. H. Goldner, and is but an instance of the splendid support which he receives in leading his great church into the fields of greatest usefulness.

In fact, this class is but an example of the efficient adult Bible class which meets or endeavors to meet its full responsibility to the church and the community. May it live long.

T. E. HANN.

★ ★

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY desires to use on this page each week a story of the work of some men's class or women's class, or men's brotherhood, which is getting results in community upbuilding or in the promotion of missionary or temperance or benevolent work. Each story should contain about six hundred words. If you have a good story, tell it. Address, The Christian Century.

Disciples Table Talk

Big Columbus (Ind.) Churches Reunite

In 1899 a number of members of the Tabernacle Church, Columbus, Ind., organized a new body, which held its meetings in a local theater. The first pastor of the new congregation, called the Central, was E. B. Widger. Services were soon being held in the city hall. The following year a building had been erected, a feature of which was a roof garden; this feature gave wide notoriety to the church. On October 29 of this year there were present at Tabernacle Church most of the members of Central Church, with their pastor, Eugene Martin. Mr. Martin was invited to sit beside W. H. Book, Tabernacle pastor. He was asked to offer the opening prayer, and did so. Then Judge Hacker, of the Tabernacle work, announced that Mr. Martin had something to say. The minister came forward and made a short statement to the effect that a merger of the two churches had been proposed by the Tabernacle leaders, that Central congregation had accepted the proposition and that nothing remained to be done except the ratification on the part of the Tabernacle. It was at once moved that the merger be ratified, and every member of the Tabernacle congregation present voted in support of the motion. Meanwhile, it is reported, Mr. Book, of Tabernacle Church, sat with tears running down his cheeks. In many other parts of the house there was evidenced much emotion. Mr. Martin presented a list of the members of his congregation, saying that they had all loved their church, but that they loved the cause of Christ more, and that they had come to the conclusion that they could do more for him working with the sister congregation. Brief, inspiring talks were made by Mr. Book and by Z. T. Sweeney, a member of Tabernacle Church for many years. The plan for the merger was kept a secret from the Tabernacle congregation until the morning of the reunion day. Mr. Book learned of it but a short time before the morning service. A local paper reports that "the scene in the church following the benediction was like an old-fashioned revival meeting. There has not been such a hand-shaking time in Tabernacle for many years."

Professor Athearn's Year at Boston University Opens Auspiciously

Professor Walter S. Athearn, who has just entered upon his new work as Professor of Religious Education at Boston University, writes that the Community School of Religious Education is well under way, with a student body of 368. The indications are that the enrollment will pass the 400 mark within a short time. Professor Athearn states that in the interest of efficiency it will soon be necessary to deny admission to many wishing to take the courses offered. He sends word that he is working up a laboratory center at Malden, Mass., where will be developed demonstration schools, with laboratory and experimental opportunities. A community program of week-day religious schools will be launched. Professor Athearn is rejoicing in the fact that his new work in Boston is absolutely unhampered. His colleagues are strictly modern in their point of view, and a very warm religious spirit dominates the entire institution.

Community Church in Rush Hill, Missouri

V. T. Wood, of Christian University, writes that he began work on November 1 with the Rush Hill (Mo.) Community Church. This organization is a result of the preaching of B. G. Reavis and has in its membership Methodists, Lutherans and Disciples. Although there is a debt to be grappled with, Mr. Wood thinks success will crown the work at Rush Hill. He states that he has never seen a happier people.

Tithers' League at Lafayette, Indiana

George W. Watson, who has decided to refuse the call to Paris, Ill., recently given him, writes that the work at First Church, Lafayette, in which field he has labored for several years, was never more hopeful. Upon his return to Lafayette from Des Moines he preached a sermon on tithing, and advocated the principle as a solution of all the Church's financial problems. The idea was heartily received by the congregation, and Mr. Watson believes that at least half the congregation will join in a Tithers' League. Four-fifths of the official board of thirty members have already agreed to tithe during 1917.

Graham Frank Continues to Carry Double Burden

It is an evidence of the great ability of Graham Frank that he has been able to carry so gracefully the double burden of a pastorate and the general secretaryship of the General Convention. There have been times, however, that Mr. Frank has thought it might be wise for him to be released of one of these responsibilities. On his return to his home in Liberty, Mo., after the Des Moines convention, he told his board of officers that he had no request to make of them or of the church in regard to his carrying the double work. He explained that he felt it incumbent upon him to continue as secretary of the General Convention, and that if the board and church felt that it was unwise for him to carry the double responsibility they might consider his resignation. The board declared that they were in favor of the continuance of the same arrangement as in previous years. The congregation approved the proposal of the board, with a few negative votes.

Forward-Steps in Cleveland

A Two-Year Program for Euclid Avenue Church

In October, 1918, Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland, O., will be seventy-five years old. Plans are now being made for the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee. It is the purpose of this church, under the able leadership of J. H. Goldner, to carry out a very definite program of achievement in the two years remaining before the date of celebration. Here is the plan in brief, as outlined by Mr. Goldner: A one-third increase in membership and budget in the church and every one of its organizations. The plan has been submitted to the church membership, and it has been enthusiastically received. Already a "tightening up" is taking place in all the church organizations, and a spirit of activity prevails. To carry out the two years' program the resident membership of the church must be increased from 900 to 1,200, the annual budget from $15,135 to 20,180. The average attendance of the Sunday School must be increased from 404 to 538; the C. W. B. M. from 167 to 223; the King's Daughters from 130 to 173; Ladies' League from 86 to 115, the Endeavor Society from 55 to 83. This plan marks out some hard work, but enthusiasm over the program is reported in all organizations.

Rev. J. H. Goldner

"Friendship Evening" at Franklin Circle, Cleveland

Something rather unusual was the recent "Friendship Evening" observed at Franklin Circle Church, Cleveland, O., to which W. F. Rothenburger ministers. The evening was under the auspices of the young people of all departments of the church. A special committee met all guests at the door. The pastor spoke on "Friendships That Make or Ruin," and a ladies' quartet of Washington State were the especial guests of the evening. Forty young people ushered those in attendance into the chapel at the close of the service for a "Get-Better-Acquainted Time." Some lively and effective singing, including solos and chorus songs, added to the interest of the evening. Mr. Rothenburger reports that 345 persons attended the service, of whom 90 per cent were young people. He states that this was the most impressive and forceful evening ever held at Franklin Circle. He says that this church is being made a strong religious center in Cleveland. At 23 of the meetings held during the week just closed there were a total of over 2,532 in attendance. Mr. Reece Jones, former manager of Hiram football team and president of the students council, has recently been called to have charge of recreation work at Franklin Circle.

A New Secretary of the Foreign Society

Bert Wilson has served the Foreign Society as Western Secretary, with headquarters at Kansas City, Mo., for the past three years. At Des Moines, he was elected one of the secretaries of the society, and will move his family to Cincinnati about the first of the year 1917. This new honor and responsibility that has come to Mr. Wilson is ample proof of the success of his work during the past three years of his service. Through his ministry many churches have been aroused to larger interest, new living-link churches and individuals have been brought into line, personal contributions and annuity gifts have been secured, new missionaries have been discovered, and many young ministers have been born anew under the spell of his missionary passion. The elder secretaries of the society write thus of the new leader: "The brotherhood is to be congratulated. Bert Wilson has the spiritual attitude; the map of the world is stamped on his heart, and he possesses the vision of a prophet. On the platform he is commanding and convincing; with the pen he instructs and pleases and inspires. His good judgment makes him valuable in any council of his brethren. He has endeared himself to the brotherhood of all the middle western region and more than met expectations. His clear, telling arguments for world evangelization, his warm-hearted messages, his Scriptural appeal to the consciences have had a strong influence. Under God, a wise and inspiring leader takes his place in the on-going of the brotherhood. He is as tireless as Edison. The sacrificial apostolic spirit dominates his whole life. The new secretary thinks in a large mold and his big heart includes the world. The selection is a most valuable contribution to the life of the Foreign Society in all of its developments. The generous-hearted and willing brotherhood will respond to his clarion calls for an increasing advance movement all along the line."

Secretary Bert Wilson

—The church at Chico, Cal., Galen L. Rose, minister, recently held a week of special services following up a union campaign. Thirty-one persons were added to the membership of the church. Morton L. Rose did the preaching.

Practical Economy

Baking powders made from alum or phosphate may be bought for a trifle less than Royal Baking Powder, which is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes.

Alum powders are not only cheap, but they differ greatly in leavening power.

If a cheap baking powder is used for a fine cake and the cake turns out a failure there is a waste of costly materials worth more than a whole can of the cheap baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder produces the finest food, and its use therefore, results in an actual saving.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Notes of Chicago Churches

The New President of the Church Federation Council

At the annual election of the Church Federation Council of Chicago, representing eleven denominations and several hundred churches, Professor Herbert L. Willett was elected president for the ensuing term. For the past two years Rev. M. P. Boynton of the Woodlawn Baptist Church has been the president. The council is the appropriate clearing house of all the interests of the united Protestantism of Chicago. Its chief public manifestations are the bimonthly meetings held in the Loop, where important matters of civic, social and religious interest are presented and speakers of note are heard. It has departments of evangelism, social service, Sunday observance, peace, young people's work, etc., and maintains a representative at the Juvenile Court and at several of the public institutions of the city. The efficient secretary is Rev. W. B. Millard, who has admirably administered the affairs of the council during several recent years.

Charles A. Young Returns to Chicago

For several years there has been need of an institution in Chicago for the training of men and women preparing for the ministry, the mission field and other forms of Christian service, but not prepared to enter a regular divinity school. Every year there have come to the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, the Chicago Theological Seminary and other graduate schools, persons who were unable to enter because of lack of previous collegiate preparation. Yet, in all Christian bodies workers of this grade are needed and utilized. For several years such a plan to meet this need has been forming among representatives of five or six of the leading Christian bodies of this city. When the Chicago Theological Seminary moved from its buildings on the West Side of the city to the University of Chicago it seemed practicable to utilize the plant thus left for a school of the type desired. The organization was effected with a board of directors representing the Congregationalists, Baptists, Disciples, Methodists and Presbyterians and a dean and faculty have been selected. The work has been begun under promising conditions. In addition to the classroom work, public lectures by the leading ministers and teachers of Chicago are to be given weekly through the winter. Rev. Charles A. Young, recently of Berkeley, California, and formerly publisher of the Christian Century, has been made acting president and will represent the new interdenominational institution in the field.

A Community House in Chicago

The Des Moines Convention urged and authorized the Board of Church Extension to build a Community Church House for work among immigrants in Chicago or New York by using offerings from the churches during this coming year, from October 1. This Community House will be a gift to the immigrant work, but the board will hold title to the property. G. W. Muckley, Church Extension Secretary, writes: "We must do that work this year or yield the field to the Baptist brethren, who are anxious and ready to do the work. Here is one of the ripest opportunities in Chicago. We have a splendid beginning with a superintendent ready under the American Society. If you have not sent your

ON THE SUNDAY BEFORE THANKSGIVING (Nov. 26) OUR BIBLE SCHOOLS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE TO AMERICAN MISSIONS.

1. A Good Plan is to give the whole offering that day, increasing it with an urgent personal appeal.
2. A Better Plan is to set a definite goal, asking each class to give a definite portion of that amount.
3. The Best Plan is to render the program "Farthest North" and take the offering as outlined in it. (Supplies are free.)

Every school should be expecting and announcing the use of one of these plans—Is yours?

REMIT TO ROBT. M. HOPKINS, BIBLE SCHOOL SECRETARY, AMERICAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY, CAREW BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

Our new missionary in Alaska—"Farthest North"—impels us in our giving to go to the "Farthest Limit."

September offering, will you help us by sending an offering from your congregation by December 15?"

Nanking University Representative at Hyde Park

Dr. John W. Williams, vice-president of Nanking University, spoke at Hyde Park Church on the afternoon of November 5. He considered the present political situation in China and spoke also of the work of the university. Dr. Williams will leave the United States for his Nanking work on November 30.

* * *

Secretary Stephen J. Corey gave an address at the meeting of the Disciples Club on Thursday evening of last week. The meeting was held at the University of Chicago.

Metropolitan Church begins a protracted meeting on November 19 with J. H. O. Smith, the new pastor, preaching.

Dr. Charles M. Sharpe, of the Disciples Divinity House at the University of Chicago, preached at the Evanston Church on November 5.

At Evanston Church, during 1916, there has been the largest number of pledging members in the church's history.

C. C. Morrison has spent the last ten days in New York City, working on the reports of the Panama Conference, and especially of the Regional Conferences held in the South American capitals.

Another Disciple Minister Writes Fiction

Among the Disciple ministers who have already become known as fiction writers are Harold Bell Wright, Frank Waller Allen, Peter Clark Macfarlane and Abe Cory. The latest addition to the list is a man who has won deserved fame for his books of spiritual studies, "The Inner Circle" and "The Wisdom of God's Fools." Every Disciple, of course, possesses copies of these helpful books. But the latest venture of Dr. Jones is a work of fiction, and is practically ready for the publishers. It is entitled "Fairhope, the Annals of a Country Church."

A Worthy Educational Schedule at Toledo, O.

Central Church, Toledo, O., known as "The Church of the Open Door," has published in pamphlet form an outline of the educational work which is planned for the current year. Bible lectures, entertainments, travelogues, lectures to mothers, boys' clubs, choir classes and Bible School classes for pupils of all ages are listed.

K. F. Nance, Disciple Minister, Returning from War Service

K. F. Nance, for several years pastor at First Church, Hutchinson, Kan., who was compelled to retire from active pastoral work for a time because of ill health, went after a brief rest to France, where he enlisted as a volunteer in the ambulance service in the French army. He has recently returned to America, and is now visiting with his brother in Baltimore, Md. During his service Mr. Nance suffered a very serious injury to one of his eyes, this organ being affected by poisonous gas let loose by the Germans.

A Great Missionary Church

There are few churches in the brotherhood that have a better record for missionary service than Jackson Street Church, Muncie, Ind., to which F. E. Smith ministers. This congregation has two living links in Asia and two home missionaries in Indiana. Mrs. Lulu Snyder Hamilton is stationed at Nanking, China, and Mrs. John Bierma is at Rath, India. Sarah A. Yeazel works in behalf of the church at Valparaiso, Ind., and S. W. Nay devotes himself to the religious welfare of the steel workers of Gary, Ind. All these are working under the auspices of the Muncie Church. The Jackson Street organization is reported to have sent more delegates than any church of its size to the recent Des Moines Convention. The church made the strongest financial and missionary showing of all Indiana churches reported. Last week 155 emissaries of this church were sent out over Muncie, visiting the 850 families of the congregation in behalf of the every member canvass.

Oklahoma Secretary in a New Phase of Work

Several months ago A. R. Spicer, the energetic and able secretary of the Disciples churches of Oklahoma, suffered a nervous breakdown, and was compelled to rest for a time. Mr. Spicer is now greatly improved, but is not strong enough for regular pastoral or evangelistic work, but will be glad to conduct from two to four Lord's day campaigns for the preparation of churches for the coming of a new minister. Byron Hester, newly called to Chickasha, writes that Mr. Spicer was asked by the church board of Chickasha to occupy the pulpit there for two Lord's days preceding Mr. Hester's coming, and so enthusiastic is the congregation over his good work that Mr. Hester writes especially in behalf of Mr. Spicer, asking that churches consider him for such service. At Chickasha Mr. Spicer directed his messages toward preparation for the new leader's coming and considered the relationship of the Church to the minister in such way as to inspire all the people with a new spirit of responsibility. A tentative program looking to the introduction of the new pastor to the Chickasha community was adopted. Mr. Hester states that Mr. Spicer is a past master at church organization and publicity programs. Mr. Spicer's address is Oklahoma City.

First Christian Church of South Bend, Ind., Raises Debt

The sum of $22,000 was raised Sunday morning, Nov. 5, at First Church, South Bend, Ind., at the close of the week's celebration of the seventh anniversary of the building of the present commodious church home. This sum, together with the other available assets of the church, is sufficient to clear all indebtedness. The services were under the direction of George L. Snively, of Lewiston, Ill., assisted by the pastor, John M. Alexander. Mr. Alexander writes that First Church was organized sixty-five years ago, in August, 1851. There were thirty-eight charter members, and they raised $600 to erect their first building. Recently this congregation installed a Powers 6A moving picture machine for educational purposes. There were five persons added to the membership of the church on Nov. 5. Mr. Alexander states that George L. Snively is a prince among men and commends his services to other congregations who may need leadership in such campaigns as this.

Texas Christian Lectureship at Fort Worth

This week, Nov. 13-16, is being held at Fort Worth, Tex., the 1917 session of the Texas Christian Lectureship. The general topic for discussion is "The Modern Church and Present Day Conditions." The following are a few of the speakers at the meetings, and the themes discussed by them: "The New Testament Church," J. B. Holmes. "The Modern Church vs. the World Situation," Hugh McLellan. "Plague Spots on Modern Civilization," G. A. Faris. "The Problems of Commercialism and Secularism," V. W. Wallace. "The Problem of Leisure and Amusements," W. S. Lockhart. "Organization of the New Testament Church," M. M. Davis. "Organization and Enlistment in the Modern Church," J. G. Slayter. "The Problem of Reaching the People," Graham McMurray. "Does the Pastor of the Modern Church Meet the Needs of the Hour?" W. M. Williams. "Does the Ecclesiastical Machinery of the Disciples Bind the Brotherhood with Sufficient Strength?" Cephas Shelburne. "Overlapping in Young People's Work," E. C. Boynton. "The Church and Evangelism," W. P. Jennings. "The Church and Fraternalism," E. C. Mobley. "Problems of Social Adjustment," Dr. E. R. Cockrell. "Meeting the Challenge of the Rural Districts and Towns," A. E. Ewell. Other addresses were given by J. A. Crain, S. W. Hutton, A. A. Everts, E. J. Willis, Clinton Lockhart, Mrs. Terry King, F. W. O'Malley, T. H. Mathieson, C. M. Schoonover, A. N. Glover, J. W. Kerns and H. R. Ford. J. B. Holmes is president of the lectureship.

"The Ozark Idea" in Third District, Mo.

J. H. Jones is the aggressive superintendent of missions and Sunday Schools in Third District, Mo. Mr. Jones reports a remarkable year of county conventions, despite the political pressure. All the conventions—about twenty in number—have had as their keynote an insistence upon the cooperative idea and the spirit of missions. In Jasper county a booster committee had visited every church in the county in autos in behalf of the coming convention. As a result there were reported 217 registered out-of-town delegates at the convention, which met at Carterville. Some of the leading spirits of the county are C. C. Garrigues, D. W. Moore, J. E. Johnson, C. H. Swift, W. F. Shamhart, R. W. Hoffman and Dr. John Clark. Other counties did almost as well as Jasper. The "Ozark Idea" seems to have taken hold of the Third District. The birthplace of the "idea" was First Church, Joplin, Mo. The congregation conceived the idea that if we are "our brothers' keeper," then a strong church should be willing to loan its pastor to sister churches of the district in their conventions. So C. C. Garrigues, Joplin pastor, attended 18 of the conventions, delivering 38 addresses, at the same time keeping up his regular work at Joplin. Including his trip to the Des Moines convention, he traveled over 3,000 miles. His two big addresses were on "The Whole Church and the Whole Task," and "Financing the Kingdom." In these addresses Mr. Garrigues made an appeal for every one of the organized interests of the brotherhood; striking banners representing each of them were effectively used. Every member canvass and tithing were advocated, and many churches have prepared campaigns along these lines. Over 10,000 pieces of literature were distributed during the conventions. As a result of the great success of this plan of convention work the Third District management is planning to publish a pamphlet on "The Ozark Idea" for the use of other districts and churches.

H. W. Hunter Lectures on Great Men of the Bible

H. W. Hunter, who ministers to the church at Wellington, Kan., is conducting a series of Thursday evening studies on "Great Men and Women of the Old Testament." The following are the themes being considered during the winter: "Noah—A Study in Hope." "Abraham—A Study in Faith." "Jacob—A Study in Deceit." "Esau—A Study in Uncontrolled Passion." "Joseph—A Study in Harmonies." "Moses—A Study in Leadership." "Aaron and Miriam—Studies in Ambition." "Joshua—A Study in Faithfulness." "Caleb—A Study in Courage." "Deborah—A Study in Patriotism."

"Men of Yesterday" Series at First Church, Bloomington, Ill.

Edgar D. Jones, pastor at First Church, Bloomington, Ill., is delivering a series of addresses on Sunday evenings of November on "Mighty Men of Yesterday." He may carry the series into next month. The November talks are on "Savonarola—The Flaming Torch of Venice." "Martin Luther—The Apostle of the Reformation." "John Knox—The Fighting Saint." "John Wesley—The Evangel of Spirituality."

Good Advertising for Tithing

The following advertisement has been sent out over the country by the Tenth Legion Committee of the East Dallas, (Tex.) Christian Church for the past six years, but no one has yet claimed the reward:

"REWARD, $100.00 IN GOLD

"For the name of one Christian who has faithfully paid one-tenth of his income to God and has not prospered as well or better than before on his entire income!—Tenth Legion Committee, East Dallas Christian Church, 4024 Worth St., Dallas, Texas.

"This is to certify that this bank will pay in gold the check of Arthur A. Everts, Chairman, for $100 for the above reward.

"(Signed) S. J. McFarland,
"Vice-Pres. Security National Bank, Dallas."

The reward has now been raised to $500.

★ ★

—F. L. Moffett, of South Street Church, Springfield, Mo., has been elected president of the Greene County (Mo.) Christian Church Association.

—The church at Edon, O., has completed its new addition and is now entering upon a larger social and educational program. F. L. Farnsworth, of Hillsdale, Mich., delivered an address there recently on "The Place of the Bible School in Every-Day Life." S. B. Braden is entering upon his fifth year of service at Edon.

—E. W. Elliott, a Kentucky bred man, spent nine years in Florida, but is now back in the Bluegrass State as pastor at Glasgow. He writes that his work has started off hopefully.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—A. W. Conner, the "boy man" of Indiana, has been conducting a campaign among the boys of Noblesville, Ind. Mr. Conner is an expert in treating boy problems.

—C. W. Cauble dedicated the newly remodeled First Church at Russiaville, Ind., raising more than enough money to cancel the indebtedness.

—A religious census of Greencastle, Ind., was recently taken, under the auspices of the County Sunday School Association, which met in convention last month in the First Christian Church.

—A. G. A. Buxton, until recently rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Council Bluffs, Iowa, has announced his withdrawal from that ministry to enter the ministry of the Disciples fellowship.

—W. D. Endres, of First Church, Quincy, Ill., has just returned from Wichita, Kan., where he attended the funeral of his father, Conrad Endres.

—Hermon P. Williams is to fill the pulpit of First Church, Tacoma, Wash., until next June. First Church school has a men's class of over 100 members.

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.
Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.
Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.
Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.
Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6 50 Net.

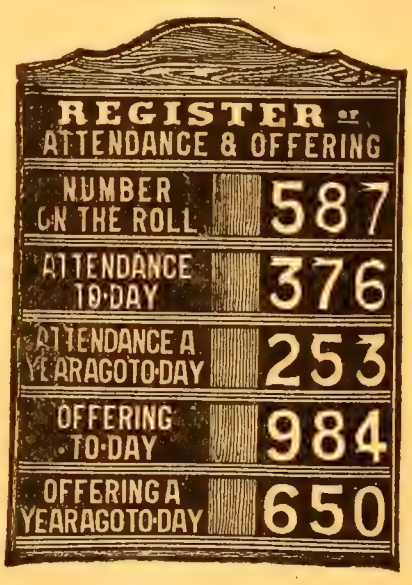
By Express or Freight at Purchaser's Expense.

Disciples Publication Society,
706 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which Is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.



Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

Then get "The HERALD" A large, live monthly, 25c a year. Sample free.
THE HERALD,
723 W. 62d St., Chicago.

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

THE DISCIPLES HYMNAL IS THE MOST BEAUTIFUL HYMNAL EVER PRODUCED BY THE AMERICAN CHURCH

It Sings the Message You Preach!

EVERY modern-minded pastor has had this experience: After preparing a sermon on some great, human, social problem or duty, he has searched his hymnal through to find a hymn that would gather up and express in song the theme of his sermon. And he found none which in modern terms struck the social note. As a result he felt, after his sermon was preached, that half its power had been lost.

One of the unique features—among many others equally distinctive—of the new hymnal

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

is its section on "The Kingdom of God," with sub-sections entitled "Social Aspiration and Progress," "Loyalty and Courage," "Human Service and Brotherhood," "The Nation," "Peace Among the Nations," etc., etc. In this section are 101 great hymns which sing the evangelical social gospel which the modern pulpit preaches. Many of these hymns have never before been used in a church hymnal. Here are some of the authors' names:

John Addington Symonds	Thomas Wentworth Higginson
Emily Greene Balch	Gilbert K. Chesterton
John G. Whittier	Washington Gladden
William DeWitt Hyde	Frank Mason North
Charles Kingsley	Charles Mackay
Nolan R. Best	John Hay
Richard Watson Gilder	William Pearson Merrill
Algernon C. Swinburne	Katherine Lee Bates
Felix Adler	Frederick L. Hosmer
Ebenezer Elliott	Rudyard Kipling
W. Russell Bowie	John Haynes Holmes

Think of being able to sing the social gospel as well as to preach it! The social gospel will never seem to your people to be a truly religious gospel until they learn to sing it. The Disciples Hymnal is the only church hymnal in which the social note of today's evangelical preaching finds adequate expression. The use of this hymnal will thrill and inspire your congregation with a new vision and purpose.

Price $1.15 in cloth, $1.40 in half leather

Special introductory terms to churches. Returnable copy sent to pastors or committees.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th Street - - - - Chicago, Illinois

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII November 23, 1916 Number 47

Were Two Thousand Years Wasted?
Editorial

The Home of the Soul
By Joseph Fort Newton

"In Perils of Robbers"
By W. C. Macdougall

"Quitters"
By John R Ewers

CHICAGO

THE DISCIPLES HYMNAL IS THE MOST BEAUTIFUL HYMNAL EVER PRODUCED BY THE AMERICAN CHURCH

It Sings the Message You Preach!

EVERY modern-minded pastor has had this experience: After preparing a sermon on some great, human, social problem or duty, he has searched his hymnal through to find a hymn that would gather up and express in song the theme of his sermon. And he found none which in modern terms struck the social note. As a result he felt, after his sermon was preached, that half its power had been lost.

One of the unique features—among many others equally distinctive—of the new hymnal

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

is its section on "The Kingdom of God," with sub-sections entitled "Social Aspiration and Progress," "Loyalty and Courage," "Human Service and Brotherhood," "The Nation," "Peace Among the Nations," etc., etc. In this section are 101 great hymns which sing the evangelical social gospel which the modern pulpit preaches. Many of these hymns have never before been used in a church hymnal. Here are some of the authors' names:

John Addington Symonds
Emily Greene Balch
John G. Whittier
William DeWitt Hyde
Charles Kingsley
Nolan R. Best
Richard Watson Gilder
Algernon C. Swinburne
Felix Adler
Ebenezer Elliott
W. Russell Bowie
Thomas Wentworth Higginson
Gilbert K. Chesterton
Washington Gladden
Frank Mason North
Charles Mackay
John Hay
William Pearson Merrill
Katherine Lee Bates
Frederick L. Hosmer
Rudyard Kipling
John Haynes Holmes

Think of being able to sing the social gospel as well as to preach it! The social gospel will never seem to your people to be a truly religious gospel until they learn to sing it. The Disciples Hymnal is the only church hymnal in which the social note of today's evangelical preaching finds adequate expression. The use of this hymnal will thrill and inspire your congregation with a new vision and purpose.

Price $1.15 in cloth, $1.40 in half leather

Special introductory terms to churches. Returnable copy sent to pastors or committees.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th Street - - - - Chicago, Illinois

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CENTURY SUBSCRIBERS!

Renew Your Own Subscription 6 Months or a Year Without Cost

Return This Certificate

with $2.00 to pay for a full year's subscription to be sent a friend of yours who is not already taking the Christian Century and we will credit you six months on your own subscription for your kindness in the matter. We will also send you a copy of "The Divinity of Christ," by E. S. Ames—a book which sells regularly for 75c.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—I enclose $2.00 for which send The Christian Century for one year to the following new subscriber:

Name_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

For this cooperation on my part, please credit my own subscription six months as promised, and send me a copy of "The Divinity of Christ."

Sent by_____

Street Address_____

Town_____ State_____

P. S.—For $6.00 we will send The Christian Century to two persons who are not now subscribers, credit your own subscription for one full year and send you a copy of Dr. W. T. Moore's great "Comprehensive History of the Disciples."

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find

$.....

Name.....

Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII NOVEMBER 23, 1916 Number 47

Were Two Thousand Years Wasted?

HISTORY IS A LAMP FOR OUR FEET.

No one would deny in any other field than in religion that we are to be guided continually by the experiences of mankind. We carry our political ideas back all the time to the record of the past that we may discover what success they had in the long ago. Even science often finds that it is rediscovering.

Protestantism in its reaction against Rome made the mistake of rejecting the witness of church history. Since Rome based her claims in religion upon an unbroken history, Protestantism thought to meet these claims by indicting the Christians of many centuries. The reformers were right in insisting that there was no static church through the ages. They were right when they showed that popes and councils and theologians were not consistent with each other. They were wrong in trying to find some other static basis for religion. We know now that we do not want a static religion. We glory that Christianity has changed in every age, for that is the proof that it is alive.

★ ★

We miss much, however, on account of our ignorance of the great figures and movements of Christian history. An examination of intelligent Protestant laymen would reveal but few today who know about Chrysostom, the "golden-mouthed" preacher of the gospel of Christ. He spent his life in the service of the poor. He showed hospitality to a company of monks who were being persecuted for heresy. He denounced the sin of luxury in his age, not sparing even the dissolute empress. For this offense he was sent into exile, where two hundred and forty beautiful letters were written which should be restored to their rightful place in the devotional reading of Protestants.

Nor are Protestants aware that some of their most precious truth found its first formulation by St. Augustine, who next to St. Paul is doubtless the greatest theologian in the history of the Church. Valuable as are his doctrinal formulations, of far greater value is the record of his religious life. A few cents procures the wonderful book known as "The Confessions of St. Augustine." There is in that book the story of a conversion which is full of beauty and wonderful spiritual insight. It reads today so simply and forcibly that it needs only a red cover and a modern printing to give it vogue again. Yet St. Augustine is for our deacons but a name.

St. Francis of Assisi was an outstanding example of the power of Christianity to bring into being real saintliness. He needed no canonization by ecclesiastics, for the hearts of humble people in his own generation gave him his place in history. He was one of the early interpreters of Christianity in terms of social service.

Because Christianity took on forms in the different ages which are not useful now, is no evidence of mistake. Even our boasted modernity will make way for another and perhaps better form in a few more hundred years. It is true that the religion of Christ was transformed by the philosophy of Greece when the gospel was taken to the most cultured and thoughtful people the world has ever known. That was needful then. When the gospel went to Rome, it became organized in forms which are still the basis of the Roman Catholic church. It is the untimely survival of Greek theology and Roman government that is "wrong" in the history of the Church.

But while these things were going on, the Church was bringing into being some of the most remarkable souls the world has ever known. When has a religion ever paid more in martyrdoms than did early Christianity? When has religion ever shown such zeal and consecration in extending itself as when the first missionaries went to the forests of northern Europe to convert heathen and cannibals, our ancestors?

Most of all has the medieval Christian suffered at the hands of the Protestant. Even now there is no term of reproach more discrediting than to call a man "medieval." Yet this was an age of faith. In a time when government was weak, when anarchy threatened, the Church was the strong support of civilization, and fostered the schools, hospitals, courts and medical practice which came to perfection in a later age. The priceless gems of the learning of antiquity were preserved by the faithful monks of this period. If there was corruption in the Church in those days, there was also piety and devotion. It was the medieval man that learned in the name of religion to reverence women and little children and to pledge his life for their defense. The Crusades may have been ill-advised. In spite of this, they remain one of the most splendid monuments to the faith and unity of the Church of the so-called "dark ages."

★ ★

Even the later history of the Church is not well understood by religious men and women of today. The rationalism of Germany a hundred years ago, the Oxford movement in England with its revival of the authority conceptions of the Roman Church, the meaning of the more recent mystical movements in the spiritual life of Christianity, all form subjects for study and opportunities for the enrichment of the religious life.

An interest in church history does not mean that we shall be tempted to repeat the mistakes of the past. It means the opportunity to avoid them intelligently.

The communion of saints has neither geographical nor temporal limitations. It is our duty to annihilate miles that we may have fellowship with such great Christians as Chundra Lela of India. The centuries are no proper barrier to separate us from communion with every great soul that has found God.

The history of the Church has the power to break down our intellectual conceit and shallowness. Once we come to know the story of God's activities for two thousand years, we may give ourselves to an intelligent preparation for Christianity's final triumph.

EDITORIAL

TWO DECADES OF PROGRESS.

CLOSE students of religious progress in the United States continually discuss the growth of the Disciples in the things of the spirit. In the same epoch in which there has been such great numerical growth, there has also been a new grasp of the principles of the movement.

It is in the past twenty years that candidates for the Disciple ministry have started going in considerable numbers to the great universities for post graduate work. Twenty years ago a little group found each other in Yale. At the same time there were a few men in Harvard and in Union Seminary. These men have been followed by others and it is now reported that the Disciples lead all religious bodies in the number of ministerial students in Yale. This educational impetus has given our movement independent thinkers.

In the past twenty years the Disciples have begun to take the missionary task seriously. Before that time the missionary enterprises of the brotherhood were pitiably small. It has been possible to write histories of missions and leave the Disciples out. The great Edinburgh Conference was held in 1910 and the Disciples in the assembly were not heard. Lately, however, we have come into some prominence in the world of missionary enterprise.

It is in the past twenty years that a change of emphasis in the message of the movement has begun. Christian union was a well-nigh forgotten duty twenty years ago, as a study of the periodical literature of the time will show. The preaching of that time concerned itself with the task of "Restoration," which was interpreted in such a way as to offer the program of confounding every sectarian in sight and of winning him over to certain ways of thinking. We are more modest in our doctrines now, but just because of this, increasingly more effective and passionate in our plea for unity.

Shall we say that the chief development of the period has been a quickening of the religious life? This has been the most recent tendency. Like education, piety and theology, the new movement will, we believe, prove to be really a great forward stride.

LAW AND LEGALISM

HUMAN speech is very imperfect. Words are not static but take on new shades of meaning in the life experience of each individual. It is this variation in the understanding of terms which often forms the basis of a wordy argument, whether in a law court or in an assembly of preachers.

One of the words which is in process of change is law. Over in the law court its meaning is very clear. It is a rule of social conduct. The rule came into being at a fixed point in history. It is capable of change or of being abolished. It is conceivably an imperfect rule.

The law of nature is a different concept. Events have been observed to follow each other in a way which suggests cause and effect. This is so invariable in human experience that one of the most fixed things in our thought is the scientific concept of law.

All of this has been turned neatly by the legalist in the Church. He confuses law as a social concept and law as a scientific concept. He claims for the kind of law that refers to custom and social conventions the same binding force that belongs to gravitation and the same kind of immutability that is to be found in logarithms.

Most things that legalists call law are but the commandments of men. Since the men who gave them were religious men, these commandments deserve respectful treatment. The true law of religion is not in the form of commandment; it is in the form of revelation. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is a great spiritual law, quite foreign to legislative law, and as scientific as gravitation.

The curse of legalism is its distortion of ethical truth. A commandment is given an importance which does not belong to it in human experience. The "commandments" of legalists are a kind of Procrustean bed to which every man must be fitted.

Law, in the conception of the Christian, has all of the authority of the universe behind it. There is law in religion in the scientific sense. It is our great duty to discover and to live by the laws of the spirit which Jesus Christ revealed.

THE LESSON OF CALVARY.

THE grotesque theories of the atonement have not been sufficient to wean the heart of the race away from the old story of Calvary. Through nearly two thousand years of Christian history, amid doctrinal changes of various kinds, there has always been interest in the story of the crucifixion.

We all have a feeling that in a man's last hours his character makes a more complete revelation of its quality than at other times. The old school histories used to give the last words of the presidents of the United States. If Jesus Christ, in the face of the hostile mob, had voiced a word of hate, if he had shown fear or in any way let go of the divine quality that had always been his, the story of the cross would never have been told through the Christian centuries.

Christian interpreters early insisted that the cross was to be our teacher. We were told to take up our own cross. Following Christ involved a cross.

The meaning of this teaching was that there is no situation in which one may not carry the idealism of Jesus Christ. In the midst of our compromises with duty, in the falterings of our steps, in the dimming of our spiritual light, we are reminded again and again by the cross that it is better to die than to be false to God.

The heart of the Christian is profoundly moved by the story of the cross. He knows that in a deep and spiritual sense the cross represents something that Christ paid in behalf of our redemption. It is the token and pledge of the undying love of God for a sinful world. It is the symbol of a loyalty so strong and so true that there is none to compare with it.

With the intellectual formulation of doctrines of the atonement we may find little satisfaction. They have been honest efforts but frequently misspent. With the religious message of an atoning Christ who would make all men good friends of God, the Father, we must always find the greatest joy.

THE GROWING MODESTY OF SCIENCE.

WHEN the new scientific movement first came to us, it was received with anything but welcome on the part of ecclesiastical leaders. The story of the blows given and exchanged by Huxley and his ministerial critics is a very interesting one. At the time that Darwin wrote his "Origin of Species," it is said that a scientific society was actually under the surveillance of the police to prevent its saying anything that was not orthodox.

As a result of the war waged between preachers and investigators, there came into the science of fifty years ago a certain fighting quality most unscientific in character. With this came a dogmatism in some matters which was not scientific at all.

It was the fallacy of this older order of scientists to imagine that their explanations were of the same degree of certainty as were their facts. It was one thing to study fish until practically every species was catalogued and classified. It was another thing to exalt a hypothesis to a position of such certainty that to deny the hypothesis was to make of one's self a fool.

A certain French pseudo-scientist declared that there was no soul, for he had searched the brain with a microscope and had not found it. There was no God, for the telescope had never revealed his dwelling place. Scientific men nowadays commonly find a place in their thinking both for God and the soul.

Of late there has grown up a scientific study of religion. It has occurred to scientific minds that so widely diffused a phenomenon as religion, existing as it does in so many places and so universally in history, must have a reason for its existence. The study of religion may or may not lead a man to be an orthodox Christian. At least it will convince any thoughtful man that religion is not a matter to be dismissed from court with a sneer.

Meanwhile, the church has learned a new humility in the presence of the facts of the laboratory. It is becoming impossible to dismiss a scientific theory because it does not square with dogma.

WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT IT?

A GROUP of citizens were discussing immoral conditions in a certain community. They had about exhausted the subject when one of the number queried, "Well, what can you do about it?" Wherever the discussion is, there will the cold water-thrower gather himself together.

That interrogation brings many a good discussion to an end. It has in it the suggestion that the interested few are attempting the impossible. The talk is all to no purpose. All the enthusiasm of the good will waste itself against granite boulders. Such cynicism has in it the chill of death.

In the presence of evil, if Christian people can't do anything, what is their Christianity worth? If nothing can be done, why not all desert the sinking ship? What is the use to spend time and money in vain? If the Christian people can't cope with great evils they can't cope with any. If we must pay thousands of dollars a year to keep up churches and then confess, when a real issue arises, that we are hopeless, why not divert the money to some agency that will try, at least, to give us value received? It is ennobling to hear the pastor quote in the pulpit, "The gates of hell shall not prevail," and humiliating to see the gates prevailing at the primary.

"But think of the evils that might come upon us if it were not for the Church in the community!" Yes, and think of the money we could save if it were not for the high cost of living! When we take refuge in the unknown we proclaim our inability to do our duty to the known. The argument for the church as a policeman may be a good one—a menace to evil by its presence. But the Church as a prophet to rebuke and lead to repentance is a figure far more appropriate.

ROOM IN THE RANKS FOR US ALL.

DON'T despair when someone differs from the established order. He is as likely to be a genius as a heretic. At any rate, let us call him a genius until he shows that we put too much trust in him. It is better that we should think too much of him than too little; better that we should boost than burn our thinkers. Then, if they are erring and headstrong, we must covet the glory that comes from converting a sinner from the error of his way. As long as we lay so much stress on doctrinal tests, so long will we have doctrinal troubles. Let us encourage each other, not necessarily to see through the same glasses, but to work together for the same ends.

If we have hearts united in a common task, the disagreements will always adjust themselves. We know what orthodoxy in work is. We are not so sure of orthodoxy in belief. There are no heresies in doing good. So why not be patient with those who disagree with us, and make room in the ranks for all?

CHRISTIAN HUMILITY

IN NO point is Greek ethics farther removed from the Christian than in the matter of pride and humility. The Greeks taught the duty of a certain kind of high-mindedness which we call pride. The ethics of Jesus inculcates the virtue of humility and the first beatitude gives a blessing to the man who is poor in spirit. Hence the enemies of Christ have called his teachings slave ethics. They were good for slaves, but not for free men.

The attempts on the part of some people to be humble on occasion are pathetic. Humility with them is an emotional matter. They find no difference between humility and being humiliated. There is, indeed, a world of difference.

Most of us have some petty pride which we use to cover a multitude of sins. If we are convicted of any lack, we think at once of something in which we secretly believe we excel the whole of mankind. A man who knows nothing of poetry may console himself by saying that he is really very clever in making money.

When a man becomes humble in the Christian sense, he does not think of himself more highly than he ought to think. Without losing self-respect—one of our most valuable possessions—he sees his faults and virtues in clear perspective. It is the man who can do this that has real hope for spiritual growth.

There is also a social implication to humility. We are to judge ourselves in relation to our fellows. The small boy loves to show off his accomplishments. The mature personality can take pleasure in the achievements of others. The proud man will contend over a small point of honor. The humble man, with no less of courage, will make sacrifices for the peace of the community.

Micah tells us we must walk humbly with our God. This humility on its Godward side he makes one of the three great saving attitudes. Humility in the presence of God involves reverence for the sacred things of life. Without reverence religion would perish. The soul that knows not humility is not a Christian soul.

THE FREEDOM OF LEARNING

THE emancipation of learning from the domination of ecclesiastics is a long story. Galileo was made to recant a scientific doctrine that was inconvenient for the theologians. Bruno was burned. We ought to be allowed to forget the horrible story of what it cost humanity to free the schools from the trammels of dogmatism. But conditions do not permit us to forget.

The nearest thing the Disciples have to a heresy trial is the treatment of their teachers. It is not many years since a college board undertook to re-establish its reputation for orthodoxy. A state board and a college board heckled a professor on the matter of his interpretation of the narrative of the Virgin Birth and other matters of opinion. The man was questioned about the theory of two Isaiahs. Meanwhile the questioners were the heretics. They no longer believed the principle "In matters of opinion, liberty."

There has come to be a more skillful and a meaner method of making theological discriminations in some of our schools. The self-appointed champions of orthodoxy develop a suspicion upon the basis of a report from a disgruntled student. The suspicion is forwarded to the president or the board of trustees. The suspected professor is entirely unaware of what is going on until he finds himself put out of his position.

For the Disciples to go back on the principle of the freedom of learning is to take their stand by the side of the Roman Catholics, who still exercise dogmatic control over their teachers.

If our teachers cannot be trusted in the classroom, then it would seem that error is stronger than truth.

We believe that most colleges among us are free. If there is one that is not, we are interested only in its conversion. Such an institution becomes a stumbling block to faith, a hindrance in our struggling world, a menace to truth. It would be God's service to expose a school that loves a dogma more than truth.

THE NEGLECTED PEOPLE.

THE churches of a community often find themselves in most eager competition to secure the friendship and allegiance of some new family regarded as particularly desirable. The various devices employed to attract this new family are often ludicrous and sometimes painful. While all this is going on, there are usually a number of people who have lived around the church for a long time and yet no one has sought them out. They might make a plaint in biblical language, "No man has cared for my soul."

There are business men who have lived in the town a long time. Because a certain man is never seen in church, all assume that he is a hopeless case. He is not as hard as he appears. Often he wonders why the people who solicit him for various kinds of church help, selling him ads and tickets and what not, do not solicit him for his soul. Perhaps he wonders if the church really lives for the sake of cultivating religion.

There are people in the boarding houses. They come and go so much that it is hard to keep track of them. They are the most lonesome of all people. In these ranks are young men and women away from home, and some divorced people. There are bachelors and spinsters and all kinds of solitary souls.

In a community said to be over-churched the writer once found several families which reported that in twenty years a preacher has never crossed the threshhold of their homes. Perhaps there was something wrong with the system in that community.

The denominational system makes us afraid to talk over our church prospects together. Ideally, preachers ought to be able to divide responsibility in a community so accurately that no sould would go unshepherded. It would be easy to devise a system to do this, aside from the human element involved.

If precious souls live in a semi-heathen ignorance of Jesus Christ, it must be said that a divided church has broken down the efficiency of Christian work until souls are lost from the kingdom.

THE CHURCH QUARREL.

THE first church quarrel was along the roadside and the question at issue was, which disciple was greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Our Lord showed these quarreling disciples a little child and said that they must be like him in spirit, guileless. When the trouble broke out again, in the very hour when the shadow of the cross fell across our Lord's life, he took a towel and girt his loins and washed his disciples' feet, declaring that there is no true greatness apart from humility and service.

Can you run a line right through the membership list of your church and say that this part goes with one contentious leader and the other with some equally un-Christlike person? It is the unhappy fact in more than one church.

The real combatants in such a church trouble are usually few in number. Their noise and activity give an impression that they are many, although they are but a few. Most people in a church love peace and quietness above all things.

The church quarrel keeps people from enlisting more than anything else could. People are not hunting troubles. They have enough of their own. They do look for peace and fraternity and for a quiet walk with God. A church that talks much about the faults of its members and little about Christ will draw to itself of its own kind, and the last state of that church will be worse than the first.

Blessed is the peace-maker who knows how to speak wisely and kindly in the time when men's feelings outrun their judgment. There are ways out of most of these unfortunate situations. We need to learn in our churches what the Chinese mean by "saving face." The disturber must usually be allowed to "save his face." The church need not seek the defeat and humiliation of any man.

The unity for which Christ prayed was first of all a unity of his own disciples in a local group. A congregation with internal disharmony cannot bear testimony for the coming of Christian union. Union, like charity, begins at home.

TESTING RESULTS IN CHURCH ADVERTISING.

THE use of publicity for the church is now well established. The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has organized an auxiliary society of church advertising and a national secretary will soon be chosen. One of the first things to be studied is the relative value of the various publicity methods.

The test of advertising depends upon the result one seeks to achieve. Some advertisers spend much money just to secure an attitude of friendliness on the part of the public. If this be the function of church advertising, there can be no checking of results on a bunch of cards put out promiscuously on door-steps.

It is clear that the church will sometimes want an immediate verdict from its publicity. A special speaker is coming and he should have a general hearing from the community. What will be the relative value of window cards, post-cards, door-to-door material or newspaper display advertising? Perhaps the results would vary in different communities.

A certain pastor has used advertising to test the degree of hospitality various sections of the city have for the message of the church. Four different localities were chosen and on successive weeks these localities were covered with advertising literature. The results in the audience were tabulated by counting the people present who were not members. It was a surprise for this pastor to learn that the very section which he had most neglected made the biggest response to his efforts. He has since become convinced that the new neighborhood represents the largest opportunity for a forward movement that his church has.

One of the ways of testing results in advertising is to note the relative progress of churches which advertise and those which do not, in the same community. It will be seen in most cities that publicity is a most valuable aid for religious work when it is rightly conceived.

THE EDUCATIONAL SIGNIFICANCE OF CHICAGO.

THE announcement of a five million dollar medical college in Chicago in connection with the University of Chicago helps to make clear the significance of Chicago as a future center for education and cultural influences in America.

There are two or three facts that make Chicago of central importance. In the first place, it is the largest big city near the center of population. The geographical location helps to give it its opportunity. Again, Chicago is becoming enormously wealthy, and men of money in this city since the days of President Harper have been led to see the importance of using their money to make Chicago an educational center. Furthermore, the enterprise of this young giant of a city pushes any project, even an educational one, with unusual power.

The five million dollars will be used, in part, to take over the present properties of Rush Medical college and the Presbyterian hospital. In addition, a large medical school will be developed on the Midway for undergraduate students of medicine. It is believed that the world's leading medical school will be in this city, and that students will soon not be going to Europe for post-graduate training in considerable numbers, as in former years.

This is but one of many educational projects which are under way for Chicago.

Meanwhile, Disciples continue to allow petty considerations to prevent a broad missionary policy for this city. The Christian Woman's Board of Missions has withdrawn its entire appropriation from Chicago. The Illinois Christian Missionary Society has for years refused to recognize Chicago as a missionary situation. Both societies undertake to exploit Chicago churches for money. The total amount of money given by the American Christian Missionary Society to Chicago would not finance one mission in proper modern style.

In days to come, when students and professors are lost to the Disciples in Chicago for lack of strong churches, men will rise up to call these societies—not blessed.

ALASKA AND THE CHILDREN

OF ALL the enterprises of our home mission work, it would be hard to choose one better adapted to catch the imagination of our children than the new work in Alaska. It has the charm of distance, and of strange surroundings. The situation is new and the work will be constructive. From the very start, the enterprise will belong to the Sunday Schools in a peculiar sense.

Giving in the Sunday School has a larger meaning than can be expressed by the work that is done by the money. However successful the new mission in Alaska may prove to be, it will always be true that the biggest work has been done in the hearts of thousands of Sunday School people whose missionary enthusiasm has been kindled by this enterprise.

It is for such reasons as this that missionary offerings in the Sunday School may be defended from the standpoint of religious education. We are making education now something more than the memorizing of facts. We continually need to "do something" about the facts that are given. For this reason the Sunday School that hopes to train its pupils in the consciousness of world-wide brotherhood finds a missionary enterprise like Alaska of peculiar value.

It would be an unfortunate and lop-sided missionary education for any school to cultivate feeling for foreign missions and not arouse any sense of our patriotic duty to the less fortunate of the peoples who live under the Stars and Stripes. In our Alaskan enterprise we have opportunity to present to the child mind the conceptions both of religion and patriotism.

The Home Mission work of the Disciples has now for years been under the inhibition of a big annual deficit. Not much new work has been planned. The Alaska enterprise affords a chance for the Disciples everywhere to show our Home board that a well-advised forward movement will have the cordial support of our people.

The Home of the Soul

BY JOSEPH FORT NEWTON

News Note: Word comes from London that Dr. Newton has accepted the pastorate of City Temple there. He will begin his work in this conspicuous pulpit in the spring of 1917.

THE sad and stately music of this great Psalm, singing of the mortality of man in immortal words, befits the funeral hymn of humanity. How thin and unreal, beside its restrained emotion and majestic symplicity, do even the most deeply felt strains of other poets sound. Like the God of whom it sings, it has been, for ages uncounted, an asylum for pilgrim souls in this twilight world. As some old "ancestral home shelters generation after generation of a family, and in its solid strength stands unmoved, while one after another of its somewhile tenants is borne forth to the grave, and the descendants sit in the halls, where for centuries before their ancestors sat," so God is the home of all who find any real home amidst the fluctuating shadows of time.

"ON THE EDGE OF ETERNITY"

Hebrew tradition describes this Psalm as the prayer of Moses, the man of God. Its author, whoever he may have been, must have been a man grown gray with a vast experience, and he was standing on the edge of eternity, and his words, like the solemn notes of the voice of nature, have "power to make these noisy years seem moments in the being of the eternal Silence."

Touched by the twilights of time, he meditates and prays. It is lofty poetry, but pensive, even mournful, attuned to the still sad music of mortality—as of the autumnal glory of a great leafy wood when the leaves are falling and the birds are going South. Nearby there is the sound of perishing, of slow decay, of the swift funeral of morning flowers, and the hush of profound sleep. In the distance is the silent but all-devouring rush of floods, invisible, irresistible, overwhelming.

WHERE IS MAN?

And where is Man, pursued of Time and overtaken by Death? At first he seems utterly lost—the child of a day, whose life, even at its longest, is as a watch in the night, as the grass that flourishes in the morning and withers at eventime, so quickly is he cut down. There is the swift passing of Time, the numbering of our days, the story of our brief leasehold of threescore years and ten, full of labor and sorrow—the tragedy of man defeated by the seasons, losing heart, wearing his soul out in wistful vigil.

> "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." Psa. 90:1.

But that is not the conclusion of the whole matter, nor is man utterly cast down. The wise old Bible does not close even its grand funeral hymn on a note so unutterably sad and haunting. It tells us the simple truth, makes us pause and take breath and ponder, the while we look before and after, brooding over things passed and dreaming over things to come; but it does not leave us hopeless.

A NOTE OF VICTORY

Never, thank God; and in the last lines of this chant we hear the faint note of victory, like the tender, timid bird-song in the funeral music of Chopin—a bow of hope flung across our dim sky, arching over our fugitive years and fleeting joys. Frail we are and vanishing, here today and tomorrow gone, but we are not the companions of the perishing flowers; we are heirs of a divine beauty that fadeth not away. As upon the delicate petal of the lily God imprints His thought of whiteness, as upon the still frailer haze of drifting cloud He paints His bow of promise, so upon the soul of man, whose life is like a vapor, whose day is a span, He imprints His image and the glow of His eternal beauty. The glory of man, his dignity in life and his hope in the dark night of death, is in the prayer, "Let the Beauty of the Lord, our God, be upon us."

It is by living a noble life that man passes out of the realm of things that fade; by fellowship with things that are eternal that he is made master of the chances and changes of the years—set free from the tyranny of Time and the terror of the Tomb. Here lies the path to citizenship in that tranquil country where the sting of mortality cannot hurt, and where a thousand years are as a day.

MAKING THE UNIVERSE HOMELESS

There are times, we all know, when the universe is our home, and others when we are homeless in it—exiles amid familiar scenes, smitten with world-strangeness, forlorn and lonely. This change from one mood to another may happen in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. Often we are homeless in the midst of friends, and again we are at home in the infinity of the wilderness. Art, philosophy, religion are so many efforts of man to make the universe homelike, or rather to make our minds at home in the universe. Below all other desires, if he will search his heart, man finds the wistful longing to exchange the precarious finite home for one secure and infinite; for, if his home is in eternity, it cannot be left or destroyed.

Nor is it altogether a matter of mood, like the shifting of light and shadow; but we ourselves, as all our teachers tell us, can make a home of the universe, or be homeless in it, according to our way of thinking and acting, and above all, by the wisdom and power of faith. Why does the House of Life seem suddenly shattered by the tragedy of world-war, leaving us shivering and shelterless?

OUR TRUE CITIZENSHIP LOST

No one has given a truer answer than the literary editor of the London Times:

> We have lost our citizenship in the City of God, because we have lost our sense of common humanity. We feel ourselves to be citizens of the same City of God with the old Germans, with the music-makers and seekers of wisdom; and the universe is not homeless when we think of them. Each nation recognizes its kinship with the past of the other; will it not also hope for a kinship in the future? Either we are all citizens of the same City of God, and war between us is Civil War, a monstrous iniquity to be forgotten, as soon as it may bring peace; or else there is no City of God and no home for man in the universe, but only an everlasting conflict between creatures that have nothing in common and no place where they can gather and be at rest.

True, terribly true; no far-shining City of God, but only the clash of blind forces, and all doomed to be crushed together in the end. Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but man has not where to lay his head in peace until he has learned to live in peace with his fellow men. It is injustice, cruelty, brutality, and the inhumanity of man to man that makes us homeless wanderers in the world! When men turn the gracious earth into a wild hell of savage slaughter, it is no wonder that heaven seems remote and unreal, and the beat of the mighty Father-heart is faint and far off. Even our own land seems almost alien, and familiar scenes are strange, when such things are done under the sun.

Not only war, but all the sad injustice of man, whether personal or social, adds to "the weary weight of an unintelligible world," and the faith of many is crushed in the budding. O when will man learn that he cannot know God, cannot be at home in this universe so long as he is unbrotherly and uncharitable. It is only when we do justly, and love mercy, that we can walk with God, and know that He walks with us, making the world a home.

Dante Rossetti has a sonnet sequence entitled "The House of Life," wherein he sings in soft, silvery notes of youth and change of love and fate. It is beautiful—

A moment's monument
Memorial from the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour—but the real House of Life, the Home of the Soul, is in God, who is from everlasting to everlasting. He has been our dwelling-place in all generations, our help in ages past, our hope in times to come, and to know God is to be at home. From Him we come forth in the morning, in Him we live and move and have our being, and to Him we return at eventide — "when that which drew from out the boundless deep turns again home." In Newman's great poem, "The Dream of Gerontius," the souls in pain are heard singing this great Psalm. Even so we may chant it, humbly confiding in the Ancient of Days who will redeem us alike from vain forebodings and from futile regrets.

ALL LIFE A PART OF ETERNITY

Such a faith teaches us to so number our days that we may not merely count up and spell out their syllables, but attain to the wisdom of love and the patience of hope. One may so follow this faith in his heart until he begins to regard all life, as the wise men say, in the light and aspect of eternity. Here is the secret, as Eckhart, the mystic, learned it long ago, of being younger tomorrow than we are today—that is, one step nearer the source from whence we came. So learning, man may master his fitful, fretful life by means of tranquility and joy, living in quietness and confidence.

And yet nothing is more pathetic than our human life. Nearly all who take large and long views of the life of man and his slow, stumbling march, are touched with a certain subdued sadness. We see in it the philosophic pity of Aurelius, and the profound compassion of Jesus. No great and tender soul is free from it, and sometimes it deepens into a bitter, poignant melancholy, as in these words whose author you would hardly guess:

A myriad men are born; they labor and sweat and struggle for bread; they squabble and scold and fight; they scramble for little, mean advantages over each other; age creeps upon them; infirmities follow; shames and humiliations bring down their pride, and their vanities; those they love are taken from them, and the joy of life is turned to aching grief. The burden of pain, care, misery grows heavier year by year; at length ambition is dead, pride is dead, vanity is dead; and longing for relief is in their place. It comes at last—the only unpoisoned gift earth ever had for them—and they vanish from the world where they were a mistake and a failure and a foolishness—a world which will lament them for a day and then forget them forever. Then another myriad takes their place, and copies all that they did, and goes along the same profitless road, and vanishes as they vanished—to make room for another, and another, and a million other myriads, to follow the same arid path through the same desert, and accomplish what the first myriad, and all other myriads that came after it, accomplished—nothing.

Unless you had met those words you would hardly expect to find them in the autobiography of Mark Twain. Upon all men, even upon the prophet of the religion of laughter, there falls, at times, a withering sense of the vanity of life, of the futility of mortal aspirations, faith and hopes. Life seems a dead level of monotony. Man is seen performing the same antics in the same grave fashion as in all the past — heaping up wealth which another will inherit; following pleasures which turn to dust, or fire, on his lips; thinking, as always, that he will endure forever, and calling after his name the place that shall soon know him no more. It is a bleak and dreary mood, and one which makes the heart of even the strongest man old, forlorn and sad.

The answer to that bitter mood—that which takes the pain out of the pathos of life, leaving only a tender pensiveness—is the faith of this stately Psalm. All the journeying generations, all the swarming myriads who pass like falling leaves, live in God, who is the Home of the Soul, even as He lives in them.

NO SOUL IS FORGOTTEN

No soul is outside of God. The dead of ages past, our own dead—"all the dead, small and great," as the seer of Patmos saw them in his vast and tender vision — have their life and hope in Him. Not one is forgotten—not even that little sleeper, buried from an emigrant wagon, whose tiny grave George Prentice found as he sat down to rest in a lonely forest. He was a poet and saw the whole scene once more—the father digging the grave with his own hand, and the mother waiting with the babe in her arms. He saw them lay it away, and drive on, and on, and on, looking wistfully back.

But a greater Poet than he looked upon that scene, even He who watches the fall of a sparrow, and He remembers that little one. And not only one, but all—those torn by wild beasts in the dawn of time, those who fell on red fields of war, those smitten by plagues, those who died in the filth of the slums—all are in the Home of the Soul. It is this grand Christian faith, turned into a telescope of revelation and prophecy, that gives to the universe the sweetness of a home, and the warmth of a fireside—

In my Father's house
There are many rooms.

GOD'S TRANSCENDENCE

Happily we have heard much in recent years of the indwelling of God in man. It is a profound and precious truth, revealing the greatness of the soul, explaining its hunger for the Infinite, and lending authenticity to its instincts and intuitions. But it is not the whole truth. Taken by itself, it may easily lead—indeed it has led in some cases — to something hard to know from self-worship, joined with the idea of a poor, limited, fumbling God whom hostile forces almost overcome. What we now need is a new and profound sense of the transcendence of God, of His immeasurable greatness and goodness.

True, God lives in us, but we also need to know that we live in Him, ensphered in His life and love and power from everlasting to everlasting. This is the deep, unconfessed, unformulated faith of humanity. Without it man could hardly live; or, living, he would only weep.

THE HOUSE OF LIFE

Santa Teresa had a House of Life, the Upper Room of which was a place of prayer, and there she had the joy of home "as the great angels have it, untold and hidden," Each of us may know that joy, like the old man in the Faber poem, of whom the poet said:

Always his downcast eye
Was laughing silently,
As if he found some jubilee in thinking;
For his one thought was God,
In that one thought he abode,
For ever in that thought more deeply sinking.

Once an old peasant fell asleep and dreamed at the close of the day. In his dream he saw his tiny hut expand into a vast temple, more beautiful than any he had ever seen. The dingy rafters were lifted up and became dim and lofty arches. The dirty windows became rich, stately and multicolored, showing the faces of the Master and His followers. The hearth became an altar, its flickering fire a sacred flame, and his children, living and dead, were priests performing holy rites. It was a dream of faith — and there shall come a time when man shall awake from his lofty dreams and find his dream still there, "and that nothing has gone but his sleep."

"In Perils of Robbers"

Some Missionary Experiences Among the Villagers of Central India

BY W. C. MACDOUGALL

LIFE on the mission field is for the missionary not unlike an Irish stew: it has a little bit of almost everything in it.

The following is but one of the many experiences of the writer while on the field. It had in it elements of the ridiculous as well as the sublime. It happened in the early Indian spring weather while the winter season chill was still in the night air and the tang was still in the atmosphere of the early morning hours.

THE "HOLI" FESTIVAL

It was the time of the Holi festival. What is "Holi"? Well, it is anything but holy! In brief, it is our Western Hallowe'en multiplied a hundred-fold —and then some. It is a time of mud-slinging, of rotten egg throwing, and of water dashing—dirty water, further colored with any one of a dozen different kinds of ink, is deposited upon almost any wayfarer who may happen to pass the way of one so minded. It is the day when the Indian seeks to pay off old scores, or to vent his spleen. It is also a time of all-night carousals and even of darker things, such as reversion to primitive promiscuity. Moreover, it seems to be a time when the primitive hill women of Central India, at least, are privileged to levy blackmail on any stranger, who, during the time of this particular festival, happens to pass through their villages.

Among the cities and villages of the plains, where the population is predominantly Hindu, the writer had frequently been abroad on these festival occasions. Yet he had never suffered any indignities. Hence he had been thrown off his guard. When, about three years ago, word came to him while he was engaged in finishing up some class-work in the Bible College at Jubbulpore, before proceeding on furlough, announcing that there was a young man some thirty miles distant in the hill-country of Mandla who was ready to become a Christian, he ventured forth alone among these primitive people of the hills, never dreaming that the Holi festivities would occasion him any difficulties.

BY THE BICYCLE EXPRESS

It was mid-week when word came from the evangelists, asking me to come out and see this young man. Friday noon, when college classes were over for the week, I made ready for the journey. With a light-framed bicycle and a knapsack, the loans of a Jubbulpore friend, I started on the thirty-mile journey about four in the afternoon. Five miles of the road led out over the excellent government highway. But the rest of the way was for the most part little more than a jungle path. It lay over rugged, boulder-strewn hills and down through deep ravines, often the bed of mountain torrents. Sometimes the bicycle carried me. At other times this courtesy was reversed.

About two hours after nightfall the first stage of the journey was accomplished without any molestation, for I was already known in the villages through which I passed. Nothing thus far disturbed my peace of mind, save a strange tremor down my spinal column as I threaded my way after dark through a rather wide belt of tiger jungle. It was some time after eight when I arrived at the village where I intended to spend the night. This was the only village for miles around that had a school. On the mud verandah of this school I purposed to spend the night. Through the courtesy of a friend in the village a cot was brought me. This friend and some others came to have a chat with me before I had finished my evening meal of tea and "chapatti"—a pancake—like bread, which is made from whole wheat ground in the primitive Indian fashion. Far into the night we talked, seated around the flickering light of a dirty and broken lantern. Religion was our theme.

SLEEPING UNDER DIFFICULTIES

Bidding me farewell they went out into the night and I, tired and sleepy, turned into the cot just as I was. But the cot was certainly not made for me, and the blanket which I had brought did not suffice to keep the chill of the night away. More than once in "the wee sma' hours" of the morning I spent some time trotting up and down the village path beyond the school to take the chill out of my bones.

With the first token of dawn in the sky I was again abroad and, repeating the menu of the night before, was out on the road before six o'clock.

Descending to the brink of a river just beyond the village, I managed to cross it with bicycle and all by jumping from rock to rock. But it must be confessed that more than once I barely escaped a morning plunge. Beyond the river lay a good stretch of pathway. Along this my good bicycle sped me. But soon it issued in many branches. Which was the right one? This I did not know, for now I was traversing an unknown section. I turned aside to inquire in a nearby village; alas, this was where my troubles began. In me the village-women saw an opportunity for blackmail, white man though I was.

A LICENSED HOLDUP

More quickly than it takes to describe it I was surrounded, upon reaching the centre of the village, by more than a hundred women and children, with some men also—the last named as spectators to see the fun, and the despoiling of the "sahib." An old woman, seizing my bicycle, blurted out that they were going to beat me with mud and sticks as this was "Holi." At once, in a language not my mother-tongue, I began to exercise all the ability I possessed. Not a few of those men into whose eyes I looked for that brief moment had more than served their apprenticeship as thugs in the old days, not so far distant, when their calling was both an honorable and a religious one. Into it they had been born and for success in it they had regularly sought the help of their gods.

With nothing but plain speech and a vigorous command to the old woman I made my way at last through the crowd. There was no longer any lingering to inquire as to the way. I took the first path that led forth from the village and sped toward the hills, about half a mile distant. For a short space the men and women followed me and then desisted.

A CRITICAL SITUATION

I clambered up the rugged hill pathway, carrying the bicycle, only to find another village nestled on its summit and one in which I had greater difficulty than in the previous one. Forth from this village I was chased by its women. They ran me down a narrow lane, fenced on both sides by tall bamboo lattice-work. Again my bicycle was my salvation. Into a third village I came. I had to pass that way, for there was no discoverable path around it. Soon forth from this village also its women were hunting me. Down a similar bamboo lattice-fenced lane they were hurrying me and again, as before, I had hopes of escaping them. But much to my surprise there stepped forth from a break in the fence, some fifty feet in advance of me, a stalwart young hill-woman, who, armed with a large ten-foot bamboo pole, planted herself in the pathway directly before me.

What was I to do? There was no time to deliberate, for the women from behind were closing in upon me rapidly. Whatever was to be done had to be done at once, for I was no match for that group of hill-women. Moreover, I was especially anxious that nothing might happen that would prejudice the preaching of the Gospel, which for the first time had just been undertaken in that large area.

AN OPTICAL ILLUSION

The bicycle I used had a collapsible pump. Seizing it I raised it to my eye, and then pulling it out to its entire length, I levelled it on the young woman. For a moment she stared at me in blank amazement. Then with a shriek and a throwing up of her hands she fled by the way she had come—I fled also, pump in hand. But the path was thorny and it cost me a puncture. However, I escaped and when I found rest far from the maddening, howling crowd, a cool pool in a rocky ravine invited me to find the place of the puncture and to mend it with a repair kit, which fortunately I had in hand.

But this was by no means the end of my troubles. In three or more other villages, through which I passed, I had experiences akin to those already described, and in each case when they drove me into a tight place I found that the bicycle pump functioned in its newly discovered capacity in a manner most comforting to me. These people of the hills can enjoy even a joke that is on themselves. I knew that in time the women would learn from others that the pump was "not working."

At last I arrived at the village toward which I had set out. There I was received cordially, for the young men had already wrought a good work. Not a little time was spent in talking with the people and in treating some of their ordinary diseases with simple remedies, such as are always carried on tours of this nature.

A QUIET TALK

I found, however, that there was no chance in the village for a quiet talk with the young man whom the young evangelists had informed me was ready and anxious to become a Christian. We sought a quiet hillside beyond the village. There beneath a tree we sat down and talked and prayed together. Out of it all there arose a conviction, not only that this young man was ready to become a Christian, but also that with some training he might become a messenger of Christ to these hill-people. In the joy of this new-born conviction the little discomforts of the way sank below the horizon of consciousness. One week from that time I baptized that young man in Jubbulpore, and a little later his wife also.

That was on the eve of our furlough, and since coming to America I have learned that problems and difficulties have come to him. If perchance any mistakes have been made in handling his case I think that one of them at least has been that in our eagerness to see him secure training we took him too suddenly out of his old group life and placed him in an environment so utterly different from the one in which he had lived out among the hills that he could not get adjusted before he was taken with an acute case of loneliness and homesickness. Out of these grew grave and powerful temptations. No one suffers from homesickness so acutely as the primitive man of the hills.

A GRAVE PROBLEM

Failure to recognize the importance of such a consideration creates grave problems for the young convert. I have hopes that if this young man lives he may yet be of great service in directing his people to Christ.

The young Christian as well as the missionaries need the daily and earnest prayers of the people in the homeland, for the task is a stupendous one and the temptations are many that beset those who are just learning to walk in the way of the Christ.

There are two ways of defending a nation. One is to build vast navies, line the shore with brazen guns, create a huge army, and then say to the other nations: "Touch us, if you dare!" The other way is to be so just in our dealings with men at home and nations abroad, to exercise such righteousness and good will, that no nation anywhere in the world will want to attack us now or forever. That nation will be greatest in the eyes of the future—perhaps a newer future than we think—which dares take the new and latter way.—Christian Work.

Protest

By Victor Starbuck

God, I am tired of the hating, the cunning, the craft and the stealth;
I want to go back where the trees are waiting with brimming flagons of health.

I am wearied to death of the clamor, the weighing of loss against gain;
I want to go back where the moon's pale glamour lies white on the long-flowing lane.

To return to the gossiping grasses, the dust and the sky and the dew,
Where the night-wind whispereth low as it passes and earth seems splendid and new.

I long to flee far from the ringing of coin and the blazon of type,
Where the silence is sweet as a thrush's singing, and silvern the cricket's pipe.

Yea, let me go from the city, the fret and the fume and the stress,
To fields where the clouds look down in pity, and night has a mother's caress;

Where the wind-shaken leaves are sobbing; to stand 'twixt the sky and the sod,
And feel the pulse of my spirit throbbing close to the heart of God.

Preachers' Problems

By Ellis B. Barnes

The Growing Literature of Peace

MY preaching brethren, be it known unto you that in these chill autumnal evenings, to my great pleasure and profit, I have been absorbed in the study of a few volumes of the peace literature which is now coming from the press with more frequency than it did a few months ago when the bellumists were developing their bellow. Then, too, the political campaign is taking up the space which in the recent past was used to show why we should get ready to slit the jugular of our enemies who were coming across the seas in the hope of slitting ours.

So the coast is clearer than it was for the pacifist. He is nearing his inning, not that he will have one in any sense as the chlorites and the chlorates, the dreadnaughts and the super-dreadnaughts, the dirigibles and the submersibles have had theirs. Maybe the peace advocate will be permitted to look at the game through a hole in the fence, but he will never have a chance to swing the big stick because his short-sightedness would prevent him from hitting a balloon, even if he had enough muscle to swing the aforementioned bulldozer. He may even be allowed to sit in the bleachers, provided he does not throw a pop bottle at the umpire for permitting the game to continue when the participants have only "balled things up" in a general way, and should be told to go way back and sit down. Now the pacifist has no intention of doing the umps any harm, but if the names that the pacifist wears —thanks to his friends, the enemy— indicate anything, he may be carrying a bomb in his fountain pen, knowing that the pen is mightier than the sword.

But if he can't play the game in as spectacular a way as does the bellumist, he is playing it well in his own way. He is having his say, he is talking right out in meetin'. "A plague on your talk," do I hear some mighty-mouthed maker of noises say? "What we want is action." Well, so be it. Action is what the pacifist wants too, but of a different kind, and we would never know that either party wanted it unless someone had said so in magazines and books and on the lecture platform. Up to the present the pacifist has talked in a way that does his sanity and his religion credit, and can do no harm to the world if his policies are carried out, which is more than can be said of the opposition. Gee! I hope the bellumists will not select me as a subject on which to try their lyddite.

* * *

CALLING NAMES

This war controversy would have attained dreadful ferocity if the bellumist had not resorted to the calling of names. I for one am profoundly grateful that he unlimbered his verbal artillery. His rapid fire vocabulary mowed us down in numbers that would embarrass arithmetic to count. Still, we are all here, wounded only by epithets which are harmless because they were so highly charged that in nine cases out of ten they failed to explode. The wounds are of the Pickwickian order, as are the weapons. The pacifist has been resolved into as many types of "coddles" and undesirables as there are varieties of "ates" and "ites" in the tribes of explosives. Anything is better than to be killed with deadly weapons, and the verbal bombs were filled with hot air.

Thus we live, and as I often say with much eclát, we wag along our weary way from the cradle to the grave. It would be a great step forward in civilization if the bellumist would wage his wars offensive and defensive against all foreigners as he has against the pacifists; little harm would be done, no blood would be shed, and the world would go on unto perfection, unmoved by a hair from its usual activities even when the bellumist was firing his bellow that could be heard around the world.

This "bellow" of the bellumist is not an original conception with me. I am indebted for it to my friend Professor Hull, of whose volume on "Preparedness" I spoke in a recent number of The Christian Century. It is so good that I hope it will do its perfect work in ridding the country of much unnecessary clamor.

* * *

WAR STRIPPED OF ITS GLORIES

All the new volumes I have seen in recent months are well worth reading. They are the beginnings of a great library, soon to be, of classics on the subject of international peace. In them the fallacies of the fighters are revealed, and the peace argument is so clearly and strongly stated that one might well be glad that he is not called upon to refute it. There is a wealth of information in some of these books that shows that the scholar has been at work for years. One almost feels like saying that the last word on the subject has been spoken, but when he is ready to say that, along comes another volume that seems to begin where the former ended, and one's little cup is made to run over.

War is stripped of its glories as bare as a tree when peeled by the lightning; you see it in its horrors, not its gold braid, its heroic music, its flashing steel. You see the ghastliness of war, and the difference between its by-product and its graves. You will be taught as you study this peace literature the folly of reverting to barbarous days and of seeking to apply laws to our modern life that had an excusable application only in times when man was emerging from his cave-life.

You will be touched by the fervor of these writers as you are when you read some heroic appeal in the Old Testament, for these men feel deeply, and their pens are steeped in convictions that go clear through to the other side of their souls. An hour or two with them gives strength to the weak hands and the feeble knees. They gather up the troubles of the time into a trumpet, as Luther did, and sound an alarm that none but mighty men could do. There is no leanness in their devotion or enthusiasm. These pacifists are fighters, as those who know of the work Dr. Charles E. Jefferson has been doing, will admit; but they fight with the weapons of the spirit.

E. B. B.

"New America"

Edwin Markham wrote a song, "New America," for the New York Labor Forum, celebrating Independence Day. The song was read by Secretary Carl Beck of the Mayor's Committee and then sung by all the Labor Singing Societies. Following is the final stanza, which is reproduced by permission of the poet:

God, show us Love's great way,
And lead us, day by day,
To your great ends.
Oh, may our new land be
From sea to whitening sea,
One Temple of the Free.
One house of friends.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

The President Freed From Claims of the Bosses

As one result of the recent presidential election, President Wilson is strikingly freed for the coming four years of his administration from party bonds, sectional claims and the bosses. The Solid South did not elect him, but the new West, in which he carried every state but two, and came near carrying those. No more can the sectional demands of New York dominate in Washington councils because of party prudence. Excepting in the case of Hayes, whom at least one-half of the American people will not admit was elected, no President of modern times has been elected without the vote of New York. Again, Mr. Wilson is freed from any obligation of any kind to the big Democratic bosses—Murphy in New York, Taggart in Indiana and Sullivan in Illinois—for all three of them failed to deliver an electoral vote. The Democratic party as a party was not elected, but Woodrow Wilson as a progressive was re-elected.

* * *

A Victory for the New Nationalism

A second element in President Wilson's triumph was, without doubt, his preaching of the new nationalism, in which he advocated the adoption of an ideal that has long been held by a minority, once very small but in these latter years growing greatly in numbers. This new nationalism puts "America first," but not, as Senator Beveridge phrased it, "America only." The President's magna charta of this new political ideal for America is summed up in his declaration that America should put humanity first. He would have her made the arbiter of justice in a world that is governed not for economic and political objectives, but for the sake of humanity. The issue is clear cut. One side would have America govern her international affairs according to the well-tried methods of the past. They would commit her to the doctrine of the ages, that all right in the last analysis rests upon might and that therefore the only nation that can be assured of right is the one which is thoroughly panoplied with might. The President takes the prophetic viewpoint and advocates a modification of the ancient theorem, substituting justice for force and putting the man above all other considerations. In other words, he would have his country that has been so thoroughly established upon the theory of rights arise in these later days one step higher to the theory of duties, and apply her fundamental democracy to international relations as she has so successfully applied it to internal relations.

The charge that America has lost prestige is much stressed beyond the actual facts, but if our government has lost prestige, it is only because the world of the old ideals cannot understand and, therefore, underrates the world of the new ideas. Accustomed to the ideals of force, they are quick to believe that the ideals of justice are the counsels of weakness.

* * *

The Human Factor Versus the Economic in Politics

A third fundamental thing that seems to have moved the voters has been the striking antithesis in which the President has put the human factor over against the economic in his administering of national and international affairs. The imperialistic nations are all agreed in protecting the property rights of their citizens wherever they are disposed to make investments. This has meant, of course, that the individual would be protected by the coercive power of his strong nation in every corner of the world where the strong nation was able to coerce the weaker nation. The President has taken clear issue with this doctrine and has based his action upon the theory that a man who invests for the sake of speculative profits under a foreign government does so with his eyes open to all possible consequences and must make one of the conditions of his speculation the chance of protection under the government where he invests. In other words, he refuses to pledge the lives of American youths as an insurance for investors, speculators of any type of economic adventure beyond our borders. This involves a clear-cut issue with imperialism in favor of human and democratic international relations.

* * *

England's Moral Weakness Laid Bare

The answer of 5,000,000 Englishmen to the summons of their country was the most magnificent response ever given in modern times to a patriotic cause. But England's leaders are finding that they must still further put their man-power under requisition in this national crisis if they are going to effectually overcome their enemies in Germany and Austria. We have been often reminded of Lloyd-George's famous remark that England had three enemies, Germany, Austria and drink, and that the greatest of these was drink. The present crisis demonstrates the truthfulness of the doughty Welshman's observation, for while England can muster 10,000,000 to make munitions and to shoot them she cannot muster the moral power to prohibit the drink traffic, the greatest of the three enemies. Is it not a ridiculous situation when a great modern government, able to conscript the lives and limbs and homes of its people to meet a crisis in its national life, is at the same time unable to abolish the traffic that makes that same manhood weak and depletes the national exchequer without recompense? Never in the history of the land has there been so much drinking among women or so many arrests of women for drunkenness. How insidiously King Alcohol makes his conquests, striking at womanhood and the home and the depleted finances of the nation! The breweries and distilleries use enough sugar to add a considerable percentage to the amount that could be allowed to every family in the United Kingdom, and the government can say to these families, "Curtail your use of sugar," but they dare not speak a word to the brewers about the use they make of it. In the face of Russia's and Roumania's action and of the action in France in regard to distilled spirits it seems incredible that England is unable to rear the standards of national welfare above the power of the liquor traffic.

* * *

Religious Work for the Troops

While a considerable number of militia has been removed from the Mexican border, new men have been sent in number more than enough to take their place. The Young Men's Christian Association has been very active in providing Association activities for the soldiers and will continue this work at least until January 1. They have been compelled to create a special budget to meet this need.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Methodist Young People Evangelize

The Epworth League of Methodist young people observed Nov. 12 to 19 of this year as "Win-My-Chum" week. During this week special meetings were held at which there was an effort made to bring the friends of the Epworth Leaguers into affiliation with the church. The headquarters of the Epworth League are in Chicago and the Chicago leagues were very active during the week of special promotion.

Bishop Cheney Is Dead

The Rt. Rev. Charles Edward Cheney, a bishop of the Reformed Episcopal church, is dead. He has been a minister in Chicago for fifty-six years, and was held in universal esteem even by those who differed from him theologically. Bishop Cheney was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., Feb. 12, 1836. He was graduated from Hobart college in 1857 and from the Protestant Episcopal Theological seminary, Alexandria, Va., in 1859. He served as assistant rector of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church, Rochester, N. Y., for a few months, arriving in Chicago in 1858. He became rector of Christ church, which was then a Protestant Episcopal church. Because of his unwillingness to use the ritual of the church in the baptizing of infants holding the ritual taught baptismal regeneration, he was brought to trial by Bishop Whitehouse. He was deposed from the Protestant Episcopal ministry, but because of irregularity in the trial, the decision was set aside by the courts. Bishop Cheney was defended by Melville W. Fuller, afterward chief justice of the United States. The Reformed Episcopal church having just been organized by Bishop George David Cummins, Bishop Cheney withdrew with his congregation and united with the new church. This was in 1873. On Dec. 14 he was consecrated missionary bishop of the northwest, and in 1878 was made bishop of the synod of Chicago, while never surrendering his position as rector of Christ church.

General Funston Runs Afoul the Preachers

General Funston has objected to the ministrations of certain preachers in his military camp, saying that these preachers were telling his soldiers they are lost when they are not. Dr. J. B. Gambrell, secretary of the General Baptist convention of Texas, has told the general he would not be influenced by his objections. Other preachers have inquired if the general would forbid Roman Catholics to say mass and Christian Scientists from reading from "Science and Health." The point of these queries is that the evangelical finds it of the essence of his message to proclaim that men out of Christ are lost.

Dr. Gulick at Work in Behalf of Peace

Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, a foremost authority on things of the Orient is touring the country under the auspices of the Social Service Union. He is sent out to counteract the effect of the jingo propaganda against Japan that is going the rounds of the press. He will visit Pittsburgh soon, speaking in several prominent churches and before the union ministers' meeting. He will also address the Chamber of Commerce.

Important Work for Bishop Hartzell

The veteran Methodist bishop of Africa, who was recently retired by the operation of the age limit, will be sent out on another pilgrimage by the Sunday School forces. He has been chosen by the World's Sunday School Association to visit all Mohammedan lands, following the war and observe conditions with the idea of finding new opportunities for Sunday School work. It is said that the prestige of Mohammedanism has been greatly shaken by events in recent years, and it is assumed by many far-seeing leaders that there will be a new opportunity to interpret the gospel to the readers of the Koran when the world war is over.

Will Build a Christian Science Hospital

The Christian Science Monitor of October 7 has an announcement of considerable significance. The followers of Mrs. Eddy are to build a "sanatorium" in which to treat invalids with the Christian Science treatment. This will be a resort for poor people without homes or relatives, available in time of need. The paper ascribes the credit of the enterprise to Mrs. Eddy, who is said to have proposed such a plan in 1905 but to have later changed her mind about the immediate practicability of it.

Christmas Ship Bound for Armenia

The committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief is now planning a Christmas ship to be sent to these stricken countries. A list of the various kinds of food products desired has been made out in consultation with Syrians in this country and the food values at present prices have been taken into account. The offerings taken upon the day that the President of the United States designated for relief were generous. The receipts during October were over two hundred thousands of dollars, and a large part of the offering will doubtless be forwarded during this month. Most of this money has been cabled to the distribution centers, from which it will be given to the people by effective agents of the United States government in the countries affected.

Federal Council Meeting

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will meet in St. Louis the week beginning December 6. The various commissions of this great organization will also meet, which will bring together many hundreds of the leading churchmen of the thirty-two co-operating denominations. This will be the first meeting of the Federal Council held in the middle west. The organization represents what elements of unity are to be found in evangelical Protestantism of the United States.

Harry Monroe Has a Successor

The Pacific Garden mission of Chicago has more than a local reputation, since it is known everywhere as the place where "Billy" Sunday made his beginning in the Christian life. The superintendent of the mission in recent years has been Harry Monroe. His recent death ended this service, but the mission is now able to announce that it has called the celebrated missioner, Mel Trotter of Grand Rapids. He has organized forty-six missions in cities of the middle west and raised $200,000 to finance them. The new superintendent was given a royal welcome to Chicago at the mission on November 10.

The Sunday School Lesson

"Quitters"

The Lesson in Today's Life

BY JOHN R. EWERS

"BE thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." It is a long race, but only the one who finishes can hope to win the prize. Nothing is promised to the one who drops out by the way. All the world hates a quitter. He who puts his hand to the plough and then turns back is not worthy of the kingdom.

Lot's wife tried to travel, walking backward—she was not a success as a traveler! If one tries to make his way toward Christ, all the time looking back at the delightful things he left behind, always thinking of those old good times, it is only a question of time until he surrenders. The old Israelites kept everlastingly brooding over the kind of soup they used to have in Egypt. Manna was too dainty—they wanted onions—miserable perverts—leeks and garlic—ugh! But the church has thousands who are turning wistful faces back toward the "weak and beggarly elements of the world." They never have tasted the royal banquet.

A new convert in a Cincinnati mission put it this way, very forcefully: "When you have dined on roast turkey you can say, 'No thank you' when invited to go back to cold potatoes!" "Taste and see that the Lord is good." Try Christianity and test it out. Unless Christ is better than Mammon—then Mammon for mine. I want the best.

* * *

The trouble is that the lukewarm Christian makes a mess of the whole thing. He is just good enough not to dare to have his fling in worldliness, he just misses the high jinks of the regular worldling, and he is not good enough to get the big values out of Christianity. Poor fool, he misses everything. Either get deep enough into religion to taste its sweets or else plunge, head-first, into the Epicurean way of living. It's too bad to miss all the fun.

One of our leading ministers says, "There is not a dull moment in my life." Good for him; he has found the philosophy. Do you think Jesus had a dull, slow, uneventful time? Not for a minute; his days were full of thrills. The dull time is only experienced by the lukewarm. No wonder God will spit them out. Who wouldn't? And what a lot will be thus expectorated!

If a ball team lays down or a prize fighter lacks gameness, the crowds jeer—that is the one thing they won't stand. "It isn't whether you win that counts—but only—"How did you fight?" Gameness. Sometimes I think that God's biggest awards will be to the game fighters with temptation. Here is a fellow who used to drink. A troop of devils haunt him day and night. It's a fight every minute. But he pounds along; maybe he falls now and then, but he gets up, brushes off the dust, and digs in again. God bless him—and he will. Or in fighting any other sin—gameness is what counts. Paul had to give his body the black eye.

* * *

A saint is not a soft, flabby, goody-goody, mollycoddle, good because he lacks the nerve to be bad! Never! A real saint is a fellow with purple, jumping blood that booms and bangs through his veins, throbbing with red-hot passion, but who, because he has dedicated his life and energy to Christ, uses all his powers for God and his church. Quit? Never. Die first! "You have not resisted unto blood striving against sin." There is a text for you. Preach on that. The young men will appreciate a talk on that. It touches life. Stand up and fight that temptation until your tongue hangs out and your knees shake and, even then, your head may be "bloody but unbowed." Your system needs a regular fight like that. Your spiritual muscles are a bit soft. Some morning jump into that big temptation and beat it to death, pound the life clear out of it. Never say "Quit."

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY desires to use in this space each week a story of the work of some men's class or women's class, or men's brotherhood, which is getting results in community upbuilding or in the promotion of missionary or temperance or benevolent work. Each story should contain about six hundred words. If you have a good story, tell it. Address, The Christian Century.

Disciples Table Talk

Disciples Missionary Will Serve Y. M. C. A. in India

P. A. Sherman, who spent seven years in India as a missionary under the Foreign Society, will sail from New York on November 25 for India. He goes under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association for work among the Indian troops. He answered the call of the Association for men who could speak to the Indian soldiers in their own language. Mr. Sherman expects to spend one year either in India, British East Africa or Mesopotamia. Since his return from India a year and a half ago Mr. Sherman has been taking the medical course in Michigan University and will continue his work there when he returns. Mrs. Sherman remains in Ann Arbor. Miss Ennis, who is on furlough from India, is attending Michigan University and making her home with Mrs. Sherman.

Christian Men of Columbia, Mo., Get Together

The men of First church, Columbia, Mo., gathered at a banquet on the evening of November 2, to the number of about two hundred. This was the regular get-together occasion held each year by the church men, led by the men's Bible class of the Sunday school. Prof. W. C. Gibbs, of the faculty of the university, served as toastmaster. Prof. Alvin L. Wills, of Christian College, made an address on "The Work of Men's Bible Classes in the Church." Alva W. Taylor, of the Bible department of the college, spoke on "The Efficient Church." Mr. Taylor urged the use of the survey method in church work—the finding of the rotten spots—and the righting of these weak places. He pointed out some "sore spots" in Columbia religious life. Madison A. Hart, pastor of the Columbia Church, among others, also gave a brief talk.

Fellowship Meetings at Galveston, Tex., Central

The pastor at Central Church, Galveston, Tex., J. B. Holmes, has planned a unique program which will preface the fall evangelistic effort of the church. Representatives of a number of Galveston's churches will speak on the contributions to the religious thought made by the particular religious bodies which they represent. It is being impressed upon the churches by this discussion that the points of agreement are far more numerous than the points of disagreement between the various bodies. Mr. Holmes preached a special sermon to voters on the Sunday preceding the national election on the subject, "The Pool of Politics."

Carthage, Mo., Pastor Talks Politics

C. H. Swift, pastor at Carthage, Mo., discussed, on Nov. 2, the third amendment to the state constitution, at the Salem Methodist Church, northeast of Carthage. The church building and the yard surrounding it were crowded. After the address the women of the community served a supper. The "third amendment" has to do with statewide prohibition, and keen interest was shown in Carthage over the subject. The Carthage Ministerial Association held a street temperance meeting just before the national election.

A Story of Rural Church Success in Indiana

Sexton is a village in Rush county, Indiana, midway between Rushville and Dunreith. There was no church in the town. An abandoned Anti-Means Baptist Church building was standing about two miles distant. The building was purchased and removed to Sexton on a lot donated by Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ward, of Rushville. G. I. Hoover, the state evangelist of the Indiana Christian Missionary Association for Eastern Indiana, was asked to hold a meeting and ascertain the practicability of organizing a church. The result was the organization of a Church of Christ. The house of worship was dedicated free of debt. C. M. Yocum, of Rushville, preached the dedicatory sermon. Since the meeting the district evangelist has preached for the congregation once a month. The official board of the church has held a regular business meeting every month since it was organized. The house of worship has been placed in splendid repair and is an exceptionally well equipped rural church property. The church has a good Sunday School, a strong Ladies' Aid Society, and a splendidly developed auxiliary of the C. W. B. M. Eighty-nine accessions have been gained for the fellowship of the Sexton church under the labors of the district evangelist—fifty-three by baptism, two immersed believers from other fellowships and thirty-four otherwise. The church numbers in its fellowship many of the most substantial citizens of the community. It is free of financial debt in every department of its work. Moody Edwards, for three years the pastor of the Little Flat Rock Church, and now at the College of Missions, Indianapolis, has been called to the regular ministry of the congregation. The church takes its place in the brotherhood as a self-supporting, gospel-sustaining, missionary-giving congregation, with the promise of a splendid future.

Notes of Chicago Churches

Rev. F. D. Butchart, who will speak at the coming Quarterly Rally.

Chicago Disciples in Quarterly Rally

The Quarterly Rally of the Chicago Christian Missionary Society will be held in the First Methodist Church, corner Clark and Washington streets, on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26. The meeting will begin promptly at 3 o'clock. This rally is to be held in the interest of the work of the Russian Mission, of which Mr. Keusseff is the missionary. The American Christian Missionary Society has engaged Miss Bertha Merrill as a helper and visitor for this work in Chicago. Plans are on foot to enlarge the plant and extend the work over a larger territory. The American Society is working with the local board in the promotion of this work. On the program at the November meeting F. D. Butchart, of Cleveland, will be the speaker of the afternoon. Mr. Butchart is the American Society's missionary in the mission among the foreign speaking peoples in Cleveland. He is pastor at Broadway Church. W. G. Winn is secretary of the Chicago missionary organization.

Irving Park Church Hosts to High School Chorus

On Dec. 3 the great chorus of over a hundred voices from Carl Schurz High School will sing the "Messiah" at the Irving Park Church at the evening service. Mr. Winn, pastor at Irving Park, recently spoke at the high school and took occasion to invite the chorus over. The invitation was accepted. Many nationalities are represented in this band of young people. Members of other churches are invited to hear them at Irving Park.

Jackson Boulevard Prepares for Thanksgiving

Jackson Boulevard will have its usual sunrise prayer meeting on Thanksgiving morning at 7 o'clock. Usually about a hundred persons attend these interesting gatherings. Refreshments are served to those present at the close of the service. On Thanksgiving evening a homecoming will be observed, and it is hoped that former members of Jackson Boulevard will make an effort to be present. It is a well-known fact that this popular Chicago church does not hold protracted revivals; every Sunday is a day of ingathering. On last Sunday there were ten accessions to the church membership.

★ ★

W. G. Winn will deliver the C. W. B. M. sermon at the North Shore Church on the morning of Dec. 3.

Dr. H. L. Willett will take part on the program of the First District (Ky.) Educational Association, to be given at Mayfield, Dec. 1 and 2. It is expected that over five hundred teachers will be present on this occasion.

The International Christian Woman's Board of Missions

Headquarters, COLLEGE OF MISSIONS BUILDING,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

In 42 Years Has cultivated the Missionary Spirit, disseminated Missionary Intelligence, and encouraged Missionary Effort in the Churches.

Has collected and expended for the Advancement of the Kingdom of Christ $5,361,581.52.

Has planted and cultivated for the Church of Christ, work in 46 States of our Union, in Canada, Jamaica, India, Mexico, Porto Rico, Argentina, Africa, China and New Zealand.

Now Has Established Work for Maintenance in this Year:

EDUCATIONAL
The College of Missions, a Graduate School for the special training of missionaries for Home and Foreign Fields. 66 other Institutions—Mission Schools, Negro Schools, Bible Chairs, Mountain Schools. 4,347 students enrolled. The Bible a text-book.

EVANGELISTIC
In 30 of the United States and in all our Foreign Fields.

MEDICAL
3 Hospitals, 10 Dispensaries, 40,000 Treatments annually.

BENEVOLENT
3 Orphanages, 1 Home for Women and Babies, 380 Women and Children cared for.

BIBLE SCHOOL
83 Bible Schools in Foreign Fields, 5,110 Members.

FOREIGN WORK AT HOME
Mexican in Texas, Oriental in California and Oregon. Among European Foreigners in Indianapolis.

COLPORTEUR
On our Foreign Fields distributing Bibles and Christian Literature.

NEGRO WORK
Educational and Industrial Institutes in 6 States. Settlement Work in Indianapolis, with negro population of 40,000. Evangelistic Work in 9 States.

CITY MISSION
Indianapolis, San Antonio, San Francisco, Portland, Los Angeles.

WITHIN 5 YEARS PURPOSES:

Enlargement of Forces and Equipment on all Fields. Sending 100 New Missionaries to Foreign Fields.
Adding 100 Workers to the Homeland Forces.

Do the Churches believe in the program of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions? Do they wish to co-operate in work entrusted to this Board? Do they desire fellowship in the extension of the Kingdom in the lands not otherwise entered with the Gospel Message?

These questions can be answered in the minds and hearts of the men and women of the Church on the First Sunday in December, C. W. B. M. Day.

You have seen what this Board has done and what it plans to accomplish with God's help and His people's. The officers entrusted with the direction of the work, the assembling of the workers, and the gathering of the funds for the maintenance of the enterprises, believe that the Churches will give what is asked of them on the First Sunday in December, or from the Missionary Budget of the Church.

Free Literature on Request. Address

Christian Woman's Board of Missions

College of Missions Building, INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

THE SPECIAL THANK OFFERING OF THE BIBLE SCHOOLS ON THANKSGIVING SUNDAY IS SACREDLY DEVOTED TO HOME MISSIONS.
Many schools will render a progam prepared for the day and take with it a generous offering.
Others will have a special prayer of thanksgiving, a word of explanation, and will give the regular offering, increased as much as possible.
Every Bible School among us should thus cultivate the spirit of Thanksgiving. Is yours? If not, ask the superintendent why.
Your personal offering will represent your school this year and will greatly help Home Missions. Give as God Hath Prospered You.
Remit Thanksgiving Offerings Promptly to Robt. M. Hopkins, Bible School Secretary, American Christian Missionary Society, Carew Building, Cincinnati, O.
Our new missionary in Alaska—"Farthest North"—impels us in our giving to go to the "Farthest Limit".

Vachel Lindsay at the University of Chicago

The Senior class at the University of Chicago announces that a lecture-recital will be given under its auspices by Vachel Lindsay, the poet, in Leon Mandel assembly hall, at the university on Tuesday evening, November 28. The program is to be a varied one and will include, in addition to Mr. Lindsay's reading and chanting of his own works, a poem game invented by him, and an interpretation of his poems by Miss Eleanor Dougherty, of the 1916 class, who will complete the program with dancing. Mr. Lindsay has already appeared before the English departments of several eastern universities.

John R. Golden, Prohibition Candidate, Becomes Pastor

John R. Golden, who came out as candidate for governor of Illinois on the Prohibition ticket, has accepted the pastorate of Central church, Decatur, Ill.

Men's Class of Two Hundred at Mt. Sterling, Ill.

Allen T. Shaw, resigning pastor at Sterling, Ill., is a man's man. He has drawn together into a business men's class over 200 men. The Sunday School attendance is about 600. It is with regret, Mr. Shaw writes, that he is to leave this field at this time. He has been called to Pekin, Ill., and has accepted, but he tried to induce the church there to make use of a supply minister until next June; they insist, however, upon Mr. Shaw coming to his new work Dec. 1. A strong pull upon Mr. Shaw is the situation at Pekin, where there is a growing sentiment on the part of some of the Disciple leaders, reciprocated by members of the Baptist Church, in favor of uniting the two churches. This is a challenge which he feels he cannot refuse to accept. All departments of the Mt. Sterling work will be left in fine condition. The Sunday School has been thoroughly graded and the church put upon a sound financial basis. Mrs. Shaw will deliver the C. W. M. B .address at Mt. Sterling.

Good Fellowship at Benton, Illinois

A. Leroy Huff, pastor at Benton, Ill., writes that the Methodist, Baptist and Disciples churches of that town have just closed a union revival, held in a tabernacle. There were about 200 accessions to the membership of the churches of the town, and Mr. Huff states that the fellowship during the meetings was the finest he has ever observed. Many of the leading men of Benton enlisted with the churches. Mr. Huff is now leading in a two weeks meeting with the Disciples congregation at Lincoln, Ill., where the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches are in a simultaneous campaign.

Over Two Hundred Accessions at Frankfort, Ky., Since Jan. 1

Roger T. Nooe is the aggressive leader at Frankfort, Ky. He reports that 221 persons have been added to the membership of this church since Jan. 1. About a hundred of these came in during the W. T. Brooks meeting, which has just closed. F. H. Cappa led the singing. Mr. Nooe writes appreciatively of the permanency of the work done by these men.

Modern Methods Work in Kentucky Rural Church

J. Boyd Jones, of Central Church, Terre Haute, Ind., spent part of his vacation in Mason county, Kentucky, and had the pleasure of worshipping in old Mill Creek Church, where he spent three years during his college course at Lexington "practicing on the patience of the saints." Mr. Jones cites this church as an illustration of the fact that modern methods of work are practical in a rural church. About four years ago J. L. Finnell, a Lexington student who had been trained in the Jackson Avenue Church, Kansas City, and in Central Church, Lexington, came to Mill Creek, and as soon as he entered upon the work he introduced modern methods of promotion. The congregation responded immediately. In a few short weeks half-time preaching yielded before full-time, the minister's salary was more than doubled, and the building was remodeled. During Mr. Finnell's pastorate of four years 173 persons have taken membership with the church. Mr. Jones writes that "the wise one" told Mr. Finnell when he first came that his up-to-date plans would not work in the country, but he went at his task and the result was a new birth for the church. It has now become a recognized leader in community betterment. Mr. Finnell is still in Lexington working for his Master's degree.

Why They Like "The Christian Century"

"As a subscriber to, and reader of, 'The Christian Century,' I want to express my appreciation to you of the splendid paper you are giving us. Success to the 'Century'!"—G. H. Farmer, Main Street Church, Fredericksburg, Va.

"I believe that the 'Century' is doing the best work at the present time that it has done since I have known it. Keep up the good work"—Lin D. Cartwright, First Church, Fort Collins, Colo.

"The 'Century' is something I positively can't do without."—Emory Ross, Monrovia, Liberia.

"The third page of the 'Century' is worth the price of the paper."—W. W. Wharton, Jacksonville, Ill.

"I find the 'Century' to be the best religious paper I have ever read."—J. Lapsley Alderson, Monroe City, Mo.

"I must have 'The Christian Century.' It is the logical, sound, progressive publication of our brotherhood. The 'Century' for me!"—O. P. Warren, Veedersburg, Ind.

"The 'Century' has become my closest friend in my own efforts in propagating the plea of the Disciples, as it has endowed me with the spirit necessary to the fulfillment of this great plea. Its constructive attitude is very much needed in this day."—Huell E. Warren, Moulton, Ia.

"I like the 'Century' fine these days. The program for the coming year is one that ought to appeal to every thoughtful minister and layman."—Arthur Dillinger, Altoona, Ia.

"I enjoy the splendidly inspirational features of your paper. You give us some fine things to think about. I wish the 'Century' a still wider reading."—Chas. E. Smith, Udell, Ia.

"I am greatly enjoying the 'Century' these days."—R. T. Nooe, Frankfort, Ky.

Church Membership Doubled in Nine Months

W. G. Loucks came to East Grand Boulevard Church, Detroit, Mich., only nine months ago, but already seventy persons have been added to the membership, doubling the list of members. Eighteen were added on Nov. 12, seven of these by baptism. The women of this congregation are organized for systematic pastoral work.

Village Church of Iowa to Promote Farmers Institute

The banner village church reported at Des Moines was that at Altoona, Ia., to which Arthur Dillinger ministers. This is a rural field, and the congregation is trying to reach out to the entire community. On last Tuesday evening was held a men's banquet, with about 200 men present, this being preparatory to a farmers institute to be held in December. The Sunday School at Altoona is booming, and Mr. Dillinger has two Bible classes during the week, with twenty students in each. Genuine university work is being done in these classes, Mr. Dillinger reports.

Annual Meeting of First Church, Bloomington, Ill.

The annual meeting of First Church, Bloomington, Ill., Edgar DeWitt Jones, minister, was held Thursday evening, November 9. Reports were made from all departments showing the year ending October 31 to have been one of marked progress. There was raised in all departments a total of $15,509.93, of which sum $1,721.65 was for missions. The minister officiated at 68 weddings and conducted 46 funerals; preached 94 sermons in First Church and 40 sermons and addresses elsewhere. Ninety-two persons were received into the church during the year, 59 by confession of faith. In addition to this number, 17 of the boys and girls in the Bible school made confession who were not baptized. Especially notable was the report of the church school. With a teaching force of 56, 19 officers and an enrollment of pupils of 794, not including the Home and Cradle Roll departments; with an average attendance of 414, maintained without resort to rallies or special days, and without adequate equipment. First Church will unite with the other churches of Bloomington in a union meeting which will open for a six weeks' series of services Dec. 28. This church maintains four salaried workers and plans for the future are big with possibilities.

President Pritchard to Address State Teachers

President Pritchard has been asked to deliver an address before the Illinois State Teachers Association, which convenes in Springfield the latter part of December, on the subject "The Relationship Between the College and the University." This topic is a very live one in Illinois just at the present time, when much is being done to co-ordinate and articulate the work in the colleges of the state with the work of the state university. The enrolment for the present year in the college indicates that there is a strong movement towards the colleges, especially for the first two years of college work. President Pritchard is also vice-president of the College Section of the Teachers Association.

Union Meeting at Springfield, O.

C. M. Burkhart of Springfield, O., church, writes that the union meeting now being held in Springfield, and led by George Wood Anderson, is meeting with success. The services are being held in a tabernacle seating 7,000 persons. In preparation for the meetings Traverce Harrison, of the Bellefontaine, O., church and T. L. Lowe of Columbus addressed the Disciples of Springfield. These men have both gone through meetings led by Mr. Anderson.

Long Beach, Cal., Disciples Celebrate

Long Beach, Cal., Disciples of Christ will celebrate, on Sunday, December 10, the twenty-second anniversary of the organization of First church. It is hoped to have present every charter member of the congregation, who is at present living in Southern California. Fifty additions to the church membership are expected at that season. Geo. F. Taubman leads at First church.

* *

—The church at Beardstown, Ill., has appointed J. F. Paris, one of the members, as news reporter. Why not other churches adopt the idea?

—The congregation at California, Mo., is worshipping in the local opera house while their new $15,000 building is being erected on the old site. R. E. L. Prunty leads at California.

—W. H. Newlin, who has been serving the churches at Brownsburg and North Liberty, Ind., has taken the work at Bicknell, Ind., where is a fine new building adapted for the most up-to-date activities. That Mr. Newlin has done good service at Brownsburg is seen in the fact that from now on there will be full time preaching there.

—Oscar Ingold has taken the work at Mangum, Okla.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—J. E. Moorman, for two years pastor at Smithville, Mo., will begin work with the King Hill church, succeeding N. O. Rogers, who resigned to take post-graduate course in a Chicago school.

—Thos. H. Adams is holding his own meeting at Central church, Richmond, Ind.

—During the two years' service of E. O. Sharpe at Central church, Colorado City, Colo., there have been nearly a hundred persons added to the church membership and a long-standing debt has been wiped out. Mr. Sharpe is to leave the Colorado field, but has made no decision as to future plans.

—F. N. Calvin came to Central church, Waco, Texas, four years ago, beginning a second pastorate in this field. He has met with great success in every respect. About a hundred persons have been added to the working force of the congregation in the past year, and the attendance at the services is the largest in many years. Mr. Calvin was pastor of one of the St. Louis, Mo., churches for several years.

—Allen G. Gordon, of Niles, O., has been called to the work, at Paris, Ill. No decision is as yet reported. Mr. Gordon is a Bethany College man.

—Speaking upon the significance of the recent election, L. J. Marshall, of Wabash Avenue church, Kansas City, Mo., said: "Never before in my memory has a man made a presidential campaign based so much on his personal record as did President Wilson. The votes cast for him were not so much for the party as for the man of American and international affairs."

—J. Harry Bullock, for five years pastor at Green Bay, Wis., has begun his new task as pastor at Viroqua, Wis. Mr. Bullock has also served as state Bible school superintendent.

—Seventh Street church, Richmond, Va., H. D. C. Maclachlan, pastor, celebrated on last Sunday, on the occasion of going back into its newly renovated church home. One feature of the celebration was the installation of four hundred copies of the new Disciples hymnal, Hymns of the United Church.

—In connection with the recent series of evangelistic services at Sedalia, Mo., the Hamilton and Brock company held a number of meetings at the various railway shops of the city.

—Geo. W. Kemper, of Richmond, Va., has been re-elected president of the Virginia State Missionary Society. The 1916 convention was held at Norfolk.

—The trustees of the disbanded Central church, Columbus, Ind., are making an effort to sell the building. The proceeds of the sale will be devoted to payments on long-standing church debts.

—During the Crayton S. Brooks meetings at Johnson City, Tenn., more than a hundred persons were added to the membership.

—Grant W. Speer, of Central church, Toledo, O., is answering the arguments of skeptics in a series of sermons. One of his topics was "The Power Behind the Medium, or the Secret of Spiritualism."

—The Christian Endeavorers of Dallas, Tex., held a "mock trial" at Oak Cliff Christian Church on Nov. 13, and will promote a Christmas giving exercise at South Dallas church in December.

—Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind., will supply the pulpit of First Church, Birmingham, Ala., for several months.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
Made from Cream of Tartar
NO ALUM—NO PHOSPHATE

—Graham Frank, of Liberty, Mo., has been chosen a delegate to the quadrennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches, to be held in St. Louis next month.

—F. F. Walters, during his five years' pastorate at Wichita Falls, Tex., has built a $50,000 church home, and practically doubled the attendance in all departments of the church. Missionary offerings have been increased from almost nothing to $2,000 per year. Mr. Walters will not continue with the Wichita Falls work longer than Jan. 1. He has not made future plans, however.

—First church, Huntington, Ind., observed rally day on November 12. Automobiles were used in getting out members not able to walk. E. W. Cole leads at Huntington.

—G .L. Bush, of Carrollton, Mo., is assisting T. H. Capp in revival at Mitchell Park, St. Joseph, Mo.

—Norman Brighton, until recently pastor at Park Avenue, Des Moines, has assumed his new task at Fargo, N. D.

—On election night the pastor at Mattoon, Ill., interspersed the evangelistic features of the evening—the church was then in the midst of a revival effort—with reports of returns from the election. The sermon preached by the evangelist was on "The Kingdom of Christ," the text being "The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever."

—I. J. Cahill, Ohio's state secretary,

50c Postpaid

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Fits Any Pocket

For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Ironstrong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.

U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55-B—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

gave an address before the Y. M. C. A. of Youngstown on Nov. 12. His theme was "The Challenge of Today to American Manhood."

—By a canvass of the city, the leaders of the Carlisle, Ky., church found fifty persons who are members of the Christian church, but who have not affiliated themselves with the Carlisle organization. A series of evangelistic services is now being held by the pastor, F. B. Bourland, and an effort is being made to get hold of these derelicts.

—E. E. Moorman, of Englewood church, Indianapolis, Ind., talked on the World's Temperance Lesson before the Friday Noon Bible Class of the local Y. M. C. A.

—The new $20,000 building of the church at Bowling Green, Mo., church will be dedicated on Nov. 26, C. H. Winders of Indianapolis being the dedicator. A revival series of three weeks will follow, led by Mr. Winders. J. A. Stout is pastor at Bowling Green.

—C. S. Early began a meeting for Ralph V. Callaway and the church at Clinton, Ill., on last Sunday.

—The school at Canton, O., reports 400 volumes in their library for Sunday school teachers. This is the largest library of this sort in the state.

—C. S. Wikoff, pastor at Colfax, Ia., is preaching a series of sermons with the following themes: "Christianity the Ethical Religion"; "Christianity the Social Religion"; "Christianity the Revealing Religion"; "Christianity the Inspiring Religion"; "Christianity the Common Ground."

—A. B. Houze, with the Central congregation, Lima, O., celebrated his fourth anniversary of service with this church on November 12. During this period 350 new members have added to the congregation, and the missionary and benevolent offerings have been increased more than 100 per cent. The indebtedness on the church property has been reduced by $8,000. The third annual every member canvass will be promoted on Dec. 12.

—The church at Pomona, Cal., recently made the California Christian Home at Long Beach a gift of a Jersey cow.

—At the annual meeting of the Child Saving Institute, held in Omaha, Neb., Nov. 8, Judge Willard Slabaugh, of First Christian Church, was elected president.

—Last year the Foreign Society sent out thirteen new missionaries. It is hoped to send not fewer than fifteen during the present year.

—The church at Pleasantville, Ia., J. M. Elam, minister, is planning to make that church a living link in the Foreign Society during the current missionary year.

—A sermon preached by W. N. Briney, of Broadway Church, Louisville, Ky., was printed in full in the Courier-Journal. The subject of the sermon was "The Call of Kentucky."

—Mrs. J. B. Yates, of South Broadway Church, Denver, Colo., has just been installed as matron of the Colorado Christian Home.

—Percy M. Kendall is directing the music for the revival meetings now being held at Central Church, Youngstown, O. I. J. Cahill is preaching.

—The Committee on Resolutions at the Des Moines convention, of which H. O. Breeden was chairman, recommended that the churches be asked this year for not less than $200,000 for foreign missions and that an effort be made to reach not less than $600,000 in the total receipts.

—The Union Ministers Meeting of the Church Federation Council of Chicago will meet on Nov. 27 in the First Methodist Church, corner Clark and Washington streets. Very important matters will come before the meeting, such as the question of closing the saloons on New Year's Eve and the holding of watch night services on the same occasion. The Imperial Quartet will furnish music at the meeting.

—Second church, Lawrence, Kan., has its new building about completed.

—The last two sermons of W. D. Ryan's series of "Beacon Lights of the Twentieth Century" were on "Jane Addams, or Showing the Other Half How to Live," and "Billy Sunday, or the Lure of the Sawdust Trail."

—M. E. Hoon has succeeded W. T. Barbre at Rockville, Ind., church.

—L. E. Murray, of Central church, Richmond, Ind., celebrated his sixty-third birthday on Oct. 23. He spent the day with the Middletown, Ind., church by especial invitation. Mr. Murray was at one time pastor at the latter town.

—R. W. Abberley is leading in a meeting wth T. S. Handsaker at San Diego, Cal.

—Elwood, Ind., church has a new $2,000 organ.

F. B. Thomas will hold a series of meetings at Heyworth, Ill., during this month.

—Dr. H. J. Hall, of Franklin, Ind., is the president of the county Sunday school organization of Johnson county.

—W. H. Cannon, of Decatur, Ill., has accepted the work at Mackinaw, Ill.

—B. G. Reavis, of Mexico, Mo., has just closed a successful evangelistic effort at South Side church, Hannibal, Mo.

—E. E. Davidson, of Kansas City, Mo., has closed a series of meetings at Shreveport, La., being assisted there by Prof. Tally. Claude L. Jones serves this church as pastor.

—W. H. Hampton, evangelist, closed a series of meetings at Wyaconda, Mo., with 14 persons added to the church membership. His sermon on the Crucifixion created a strong impression.

—R. E. Hieronymous, of the University of Illinois, and a well-known Disciple, addressed the Chicago Association of Commerce last week on "A Better Community."

—I. N. McCash was installed as president of Phillips University, Enid, Okla., on Nov. 17.

ILLINOIS NEWS LETTER

John R. Golden, former secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society, has accepted a call to Central Church, Decatur, and will begin his services after a series of evangelistic meetings at Saybrook.

The board of directors of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society met Nov. 8 and took favorable action upon the new plan of state and district work.

The trustees of Eureka College held their semi-annual meeting at the college Tuesday, Nov. 14. The attendance at the college this year is the largest ever. All the buildings are in good shape; the new gymnasium is quite an attraction to the young people; and the entire college group is looking forward joyously to the new Science Hall.

The Minges Evangelistic Company began an evangelistic campaign with Central Church, Peoria, Nov. 12. Homer E. Sala writes that the prospects are splendid for a great meeting.

The state secretary spent Sunday, Nov. 12 with the Second and Centennial churches of Bloomington. Our people are strong in Bloomington and Normal. With Edgar D. Jones at the First Church, S. H. Zendt at the Second, L. G. Huff at Centennial, A. E. Gilliland at Normal and R. H. Davis at Third (Colored), we have an array of strength that makes our work here an important factor.

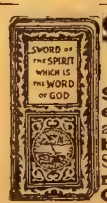
Guy B. Williamson is on his third year at Paxton. There have been 120 additions to the church during his ministry. Last year the church gave $319 to missions, which was quite an increase over any previous year. In many other respects the work is equally encouraging.

The five churches in Lincoln are engaged in a simultaneous campaign. A. L.

A man deeply interested in Home and Foreign Missions, whose organizing gifts and powers and whose ability as a speaker fit him for field work in America, should write to "Missionary," this office, asking for a conference.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.



Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company
MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size. 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

Huff, our pastor at Benton, is conducting the meeting for First Church. Reports have come to our office that are encouraging. This is the favorite method of evangelism in some Illinois communities and it seems to work very well. Some of the preachers state that it is even better than a big union tabernacle meeting.

B. H. Sealock of Illiopolis recently spent a night with Paul Million and the Latham Church. Both of these men are working with the problems in their respective communities in a thorough-going manner. They are studying the real situation and trying to meet it.

Evangelist Lew D. Hill of Decatur has been active in central Illinois since the opening of the evangelistic season about Sept. 1. He conducted a good meeting at Antioch in Vermilion county, with one addition by statement. Also, at Prairie Chapel, he held a revival, with 47 additions in three weeks, forty of these by primary obedience and seven by statement. He has just closed a meeting at Hallsville, with 34 additions; and has an open date before the holidays.

The students in the Disciples' Divinity House of the University of Chicago are not enrolled in the Year Book this year because the list came to our office too late. Because of this we wish to give publicity to the names and addresses of these ministers of the Gospel, as follows:

F. C. Buck, 84 Middle Divinity Hall.
Harry William Cordell, 53 Middle Divinity Hall.
George F. Chandler, 5815 Drexel Ave.
Miss Opal Daniels, 1154 E. 56th St.
Wilfred Ernest Gordon, 5829 Maryland Ave.
John G. Hirschler, 148 South Divinity Hall.
E. V. Horne, 106 Middle Divinity Hall.
John L. Imhof, 142 South Divinity Hall.
Howard E. Jensen, 6053 Ellis Ave.
Blanche E. Jensen, 6053 Ellis Ave.
John L. Lobingier, 36 Middle Divinity Hall.
Harry Leach, 5761 Dorchester Ave.
Sam C. Kincheloe.
W. C. MacDougall, 5815 Drexel Ave.
Miss Bertha Merrill.
Mrs. Annie Agnes MacDougall, 5815 Drexel Ave.
N. O. Rogers, 38 Middle Divinity Hall.
William V. Roosa, 98 Middle Divinity Hall.
Charles J. Ritchey, 6053 Ellis Ave.
John I. Roberts, 124 South Divinity Hall.
W. B. Sharratt, 137 South Divinity Hall.
Mart Gary Smith, 109 Middle Divinity Hall.
James E. Wolfe.
Herbert L. Willett, Jr., 6119 Woodlawn Ave.

Christmas Bells

Soon the bells will peal forth the announcement of Christmas Day, reminding all of the good tidings, "Peace on earth, good will to men." Wherever bells are rung the sweet, mellow, pleasing tones of the Steel Alloy Bells will be heard. During the sixty years that Steel Alloy Bells have been on the market the reputation they have established is indeed an enviable one.

Those in need of a bell should write the C. S. Bell Company of Hillsboro, Ohio, for their beautiful catalogue descriptive of Steel Alloy Bells, also for their special donation plan as the price of these bells has not been advanced, and by ordering now you will have a bell in time for Christmas services.

Do Your Friends This Favor

Would you like to do a service to your friends, at no cost to yourself? We want to send several complimentary copies of The Christian Century to four friends of yours who you think might like the same sort of religious weekly that pleases you. Give us names and addresses of the four friends to whom you would like several copies sent.

Please fill in all the blanks and mail to us today. You place yourself and your friends under absolutely no obligation by doing them and us this favor. We wish to advise your friends that the paper is being sent at your request, but your name will not be used at all if you so request. Thank you!

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

My Own Name and Address is.....

.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

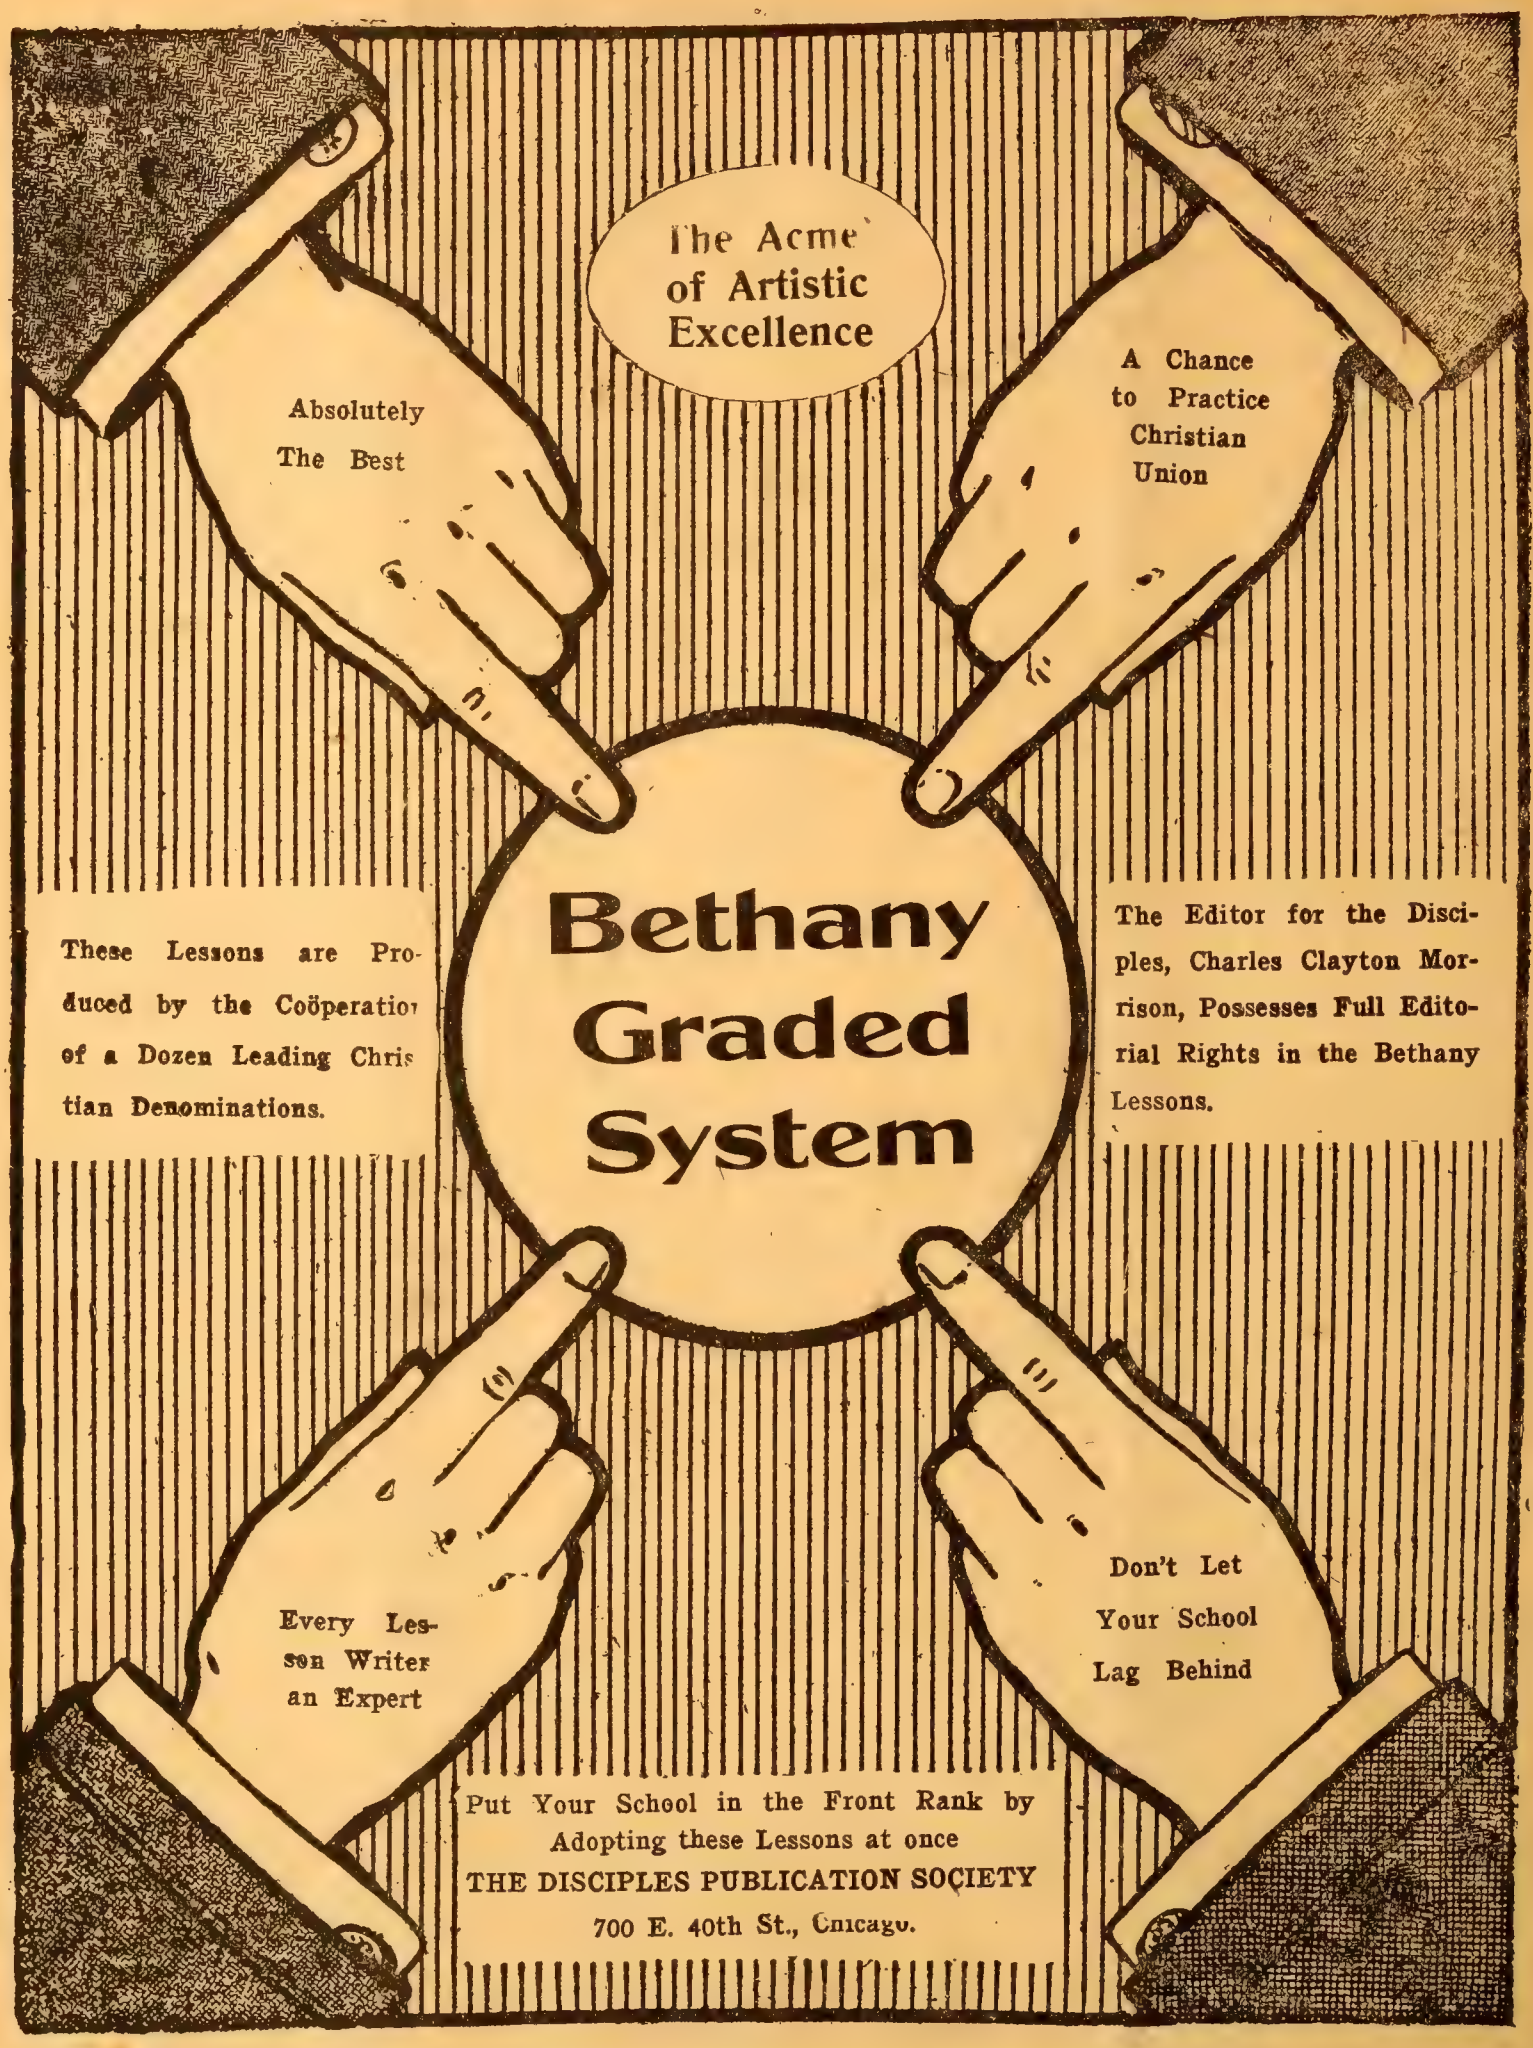
Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:



Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

Disciples Publication Society, 700 East 40th Street CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII November 30, 1916 Number 48

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY NUMBER

CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Charles Clayton Morrison
Editor

A Constructive Religious Newspaper for Christian Homes

Herbert L. Willett
Contributing Editor

Great Year Ahead for Our Readers

An Unequalled Staff of Writers

WE are able at this time to announce such a staff of writers as has never been equalled by a newspaper among the Disciples of Christ. The writers have won places of authority in all their respective fields of interest. Their presence on our staff will make the "Century" vibrate with life. Here is the list of them:

ALVA W. TAYLOR will revive the department of social interpretations, which our readers of several years ago will recall as our "star" department in those days. It will be richer and more attractive in its new setting, just as the mind of Professor Taylor is riper and more authoritative than in the days gone by.

JOHN R. EWERS is back! He wrote a forthright article on the Sunday School lesson each week for two years which added more new subscribers to The Christian Century than any single feature of the paper. He is better than ever. Read him in this issue. He speaks for himself.

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL, a sage without the years of a sage; a mystic; a friendly counsellor; an interpreter of the things of the soul. His articles will be a frequent feature of the coming year.

IDA WITHERS HARRISON, constructive feminist. She dropped out of our contributorial department a year ago on account of her heavy duties in preparation for the Panama Congress. Our sense of loss was overcome when her services to the Congress brought her the most distinguished recognition accorded any woman at Panama. Mrs. Harrison will write on timely themes of special interest to modern womanhood.

EDWARD SCRIBNER AMES, philosopher and preacher, will follow the promptings of his own interest and write on the vital and thought-provoking themes he never fails to select.

ORVIS F. JORDAN has for several years made of the "Larger Christian World" page a means of broadening the vision and sympathy of all our readers. The same high standards will characterize his conduct of this department in the future, and in addition many contributions of other kinds will appear from his pen.

CHARLES T. PAUL is a unique figure among the Disciples. He symbolizes missionary science and statesmanship, but we have his promise to contribute a series of studies in the spiritual life. As a leader of The Christian Century family's devotions our readers may expect uplift and enrichment from President Paul.

ELLIS B. BARNES, a preachers' writer! Our minister readers talk about the things Mr. Barnes says in the "Century" more than about any other contributions we publish. The Christian Century is not made primarily for preachers, but for thoughtful

FINIS IDLEMAN

CHARLES T. PAUL

ORVIS F. JORDAN

IRENE T. MYERS

E B. BARNES

laymen, that is, plain Christian men and women. This accounts for the intense interest with which ministers read and commend the "Century." Mr. Barnes will write not simply for preachers, but about preachers, and the laymen will enjoy his articles as much as will our minister readers.

FINIS S. IDLEMAN, New York's Disciple leader, who has wrought a transformation in Central Church in that metropolis, will interpret his experiences and report the progress of religion from the point of view of the East.

IRENE T. MYERS has promised to present from time to time a number of articles dealing with certain phases of the new womanhood. Dr. Myers is a writer new to Christian Century readers. A doctor of philosophy from Yale and a world-wide traveler, she is Professor of History in Transylvania College. What she will write will have both authority and piquancy.

EDGAR DEWITT JONES, a writer who uses words with unerring delicacy, who thinks in the most human terms, whose writing has that indefinable something called "charm." Dr. Jones will speak often to our readers on the fine issues of the spiritual life which he senses so unerringly.

H. D. C. MACLACHLAN, pastor of one of the greatest churches of the East, but who keeps his thought-life intensely busy with the deeper things of spiritual culture, will write this year for The Christian Century. He always deals with big and urgent issues.

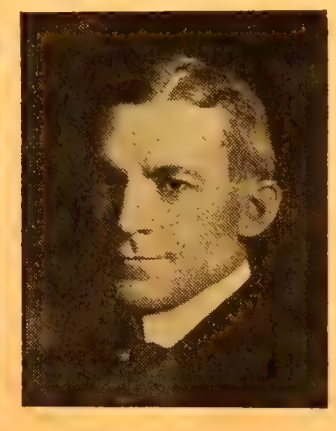
What shall we more say? When has there been spread so rich a feast as this before the readers of any religious journal? And these are only the features that we are able to arrange for in advance. Besides these there are the carefully selected articles on vital, human conditions and experiences, in the search for which the editorial staff is constantly on the alert. Certainly every person familiar with the current literature of the Disciples will agree with the statement of a very conservative reader who said recently that The Christian Century "is doing more to enrich the mind and widen the horizon of the Disciples of Christ than any other influence among us."

Dr. Willett on the Bible

DR. WILLETT will write a series of articles on the Bible, how it grew, who its authors were, how the books came to be gathered into a single book, what we mean by inspiration and authority as applied to the Scriptures, and many such questions of a practical and critical sort in which every thoughtful Christian man and woman of today is interested. His first article will be forthcoming soon. It will open up a line of study that should be singularly attractive and timely. In anticipation of these articles our readers will wish to get The Christian Century into the hands and homes of their thoughtful friends.

"Why I Am a Disciple"

Some years ago CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, editor of The Christian Century, promised to write a series of articles on the subject, "Why I Am a Disciple." The promise, it seemed, was not kept at the time and the plan to write the series was finally crowded out with other things. The obligation, however, has not been forgotten. This series will be one of the features of the interesting year that is before us. There will be perhaps a dozen short articles. They will be quite personal and intimate, setting forth the way in which the teaching and aim of the Disciples appeal to the editor.



IDA W. HARRISON

H. D. C. MACLACHLAN

GEORGE A. CAMPBELL

EDWARD S. AMES

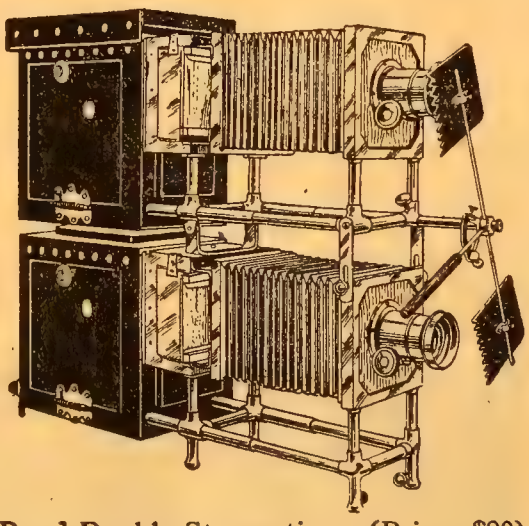
EDGAR D. JONES

Great Books by Disciple Authors

HISTORY OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST. By W. T. Moore. A comprehensive story of the Disciples' movement from the early days to the present. A sumptuous volume of 700 pages, beautifully printed and bound, and sold by the original publishers, Revell's, at $4, $5, and $6 for cloth, half morocco and full morroco respectively. We now offer this great work for $2.50, $3.50 and $4.00. The pictures in the book are alone worth the price of the volume. Only a limited number in hand. Order today.

THE MEANING OF BAPTISM. By Charles Clayton Morrison. The New York Christian Advocate says of this book: "'The Meaning of Baptism' is probably the most important book in English on the place of baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856." Says The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed possible." Price of the book, $1.25.

THE MORAL LEADERS OF ISRAEL. By Herbert L. Willett. A thrilling and luminous interpretation of the Old Testament prophets, setting forth the historical situation within which each prophet lived and toward which his message was directed. Each of the great leaders is made to live anew. In Two Volumes, Each, $1.



THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST. By Edward Scribner Ames. Professor Geo. A. Coe says of the book: "These sermons display a remarkable union of intellectual boldness and spiritual warmth. Such a book serves to clear the air and to focus the attention at the right point." Price of book, 75 cents.

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS ADVOCATING CHRISTIAN UNION. Charles A. Young, Editor. Contains Thos. Campbell's "Declaration and Address," Alex. Campbell's "Sermon on the Law," Stone's "Last Will and Testament of the Springfield Presbytery," Errett's "Our Position," and Garrison's "The World's Need of Our Plea." Beautifully illustrated. Price, $1.

THE EARLY RELATION AND SEPARATION OF BAPTISTS AND DISCIPLES.. By Errett Gates. Of this book The Congregationalist says: "A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches." Price, 75 cents.

Your Church Your Sunday School
Your Adult Class

Should have a stereopticon for its regular use.

Bond Double Stereopticon (Price, $90)

The Bond Opticon

is a complete Stereopticon of the latest design. Light, durable, and easily operated. One that can be freely moved about and used under all conditions, presto-light or electricity, direct or alternating current. Complete in itself; no extras necessary! This instrument will give new meaning to your work of religious education. The Bond Opticon sells at $40.

Bond Royal Double Dissolving Stereopticon

In this machine you will find a perfect, complete, high-priced Stereopticon. The lamp house is strongly constructed and is built to comply with the fire underwriters' regulations. With this machine a continuous entertainment can be carried on. With the dissolving attachment, one picture fades away into another one, so that the audience does not get a white glare on the curtain.

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago

Each One Get Three!

Now is the Time to Get New Subscriptions for the Christian Century

Three New Subscriptions From Each Present Subscriber

Enlarged and enriched beyond anything ever offered in Disciples journalism, the Christian Century is entering upon a new epoch in its history. We desire to have agents in every congregation and will pay a good cash commission for new subscriptions. Yet we know that no paid agents can do the needed service so well as our regular readers. A paper like the "Century," appealing to the more thoughtful and discriminating men and women of our churches grows by the principle of contagion — others catch it from you.

Nine out of ten of our new subscriptions come through our present readers. We have judges and lawyers and teachers and doctors and merchants and ministers and thoughtful homemakers who work for us — not in our employ, but because they believe they are doing their friends a great service by telling them of this newspaper and inducing them to subscribe for it. It is in such readers that the strength of The Christian Century consists, and upon them its hope for future usefulness rests.

We are asking every present reader to get three new subscribers within the next thirty days. It is the easiest thing you ever tried to do!

Just show that two-page announcement of our outstanding features for the coming year (found elsewhere in this issue) to almost any thoughtful churchman or churchwoman you know and ask for two dollars, and you will get it! Testify to your own delight in reading The Christian Century. Tell of the work this newspaper is doing for the broadening vision of the Disciples of Christ. Tell of the most important thing of all—the service this newspaper is rendering in interpreting the sweet reasonableness of the Disciples' plea to the larger Christian world beyond our own communion, and you will be surprised how readily your thoughtful friends will respond with their subscription.

We will reciprocate for this kindness on your part: We will extend your own subscription six months for each new subscription you secure.

Three new subscriptions from every present reader! Our circulation trebled from January, 1917, onward! Is not that a goal worthy of our united endeavor?

Think up three persons who ought to be taking the "Century" and go straight for their two dollars now.

When you send in the names, addresses and cash, address

Subscription Department, The Christian Century

EACH ONE GET THREE!

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII NOVEMBER 30, 1916 Number 48

Let Us Be Thankful

DO YOU BELIEVE IN THANKSGIVING?

A preacher of the "liberal" persuasion once refused to join in a union service because he no longer believed in Thanksgiving. He thought the day had been born in the time when men looked for daily interpositions of Deity setting aside natural law, and this kind of thing had no place in his world outlook.

There are some who have changed the meaning of Thanksgiving day. Whereas the Pilgrim fathers at one time had a daily ration of five grains of corn, their grandsons believe that the day is well kept now by gourmandizing and getting drunk. These have found some other god than Jehovah.

Thanksgiving day will be used for family gatherings. It will be the day for a record crowd at a football game. It will be a day of rest for some tired people. It will be the sign for others to begin the mad rush of the Christmas season. Will it be for any the kind of day contemplated in the proclamation of the President of the United States?

The day is an unusual one, for it rests not upon any ecclesiastical tradition, but upon the direct call of our government for a day in which the people shall give thanks to Almighty God. This is a very extraordinary thing in a republic which has so jealously kept religion and government separated. If the day had no other meaning but to remind us again that we are a Christian nation and that our President has called the citizens to prayer, it would still be a day fraught with tremendous significance.

America has been in danger of losing her soul. Even now she is tempted by Mammonism in a way never before known in history. She was born to be a prophet nation as was Israel of old. We need Thanksgiving day as a time to remind ourselves of our national destiny to be the home of liberty and fraternity and the humanitarian spirit.

★ ★

The day challenges our citizens to some religious thinking. Perhaps we might be vaguely thankful without Deity, but it seems to us there can be no abiding spirit of thankfulness without a deep faith in God. For this reason the citizen who is an atheist (is there really such a man?) will find Thanksgiving day very embarrassing. Thanksgiving day started among people who believed in God. It must continue to live through the support of Christian faith.

But the God of the Thanksgiving day faith is a God who does things. We may admit that the special providences of an older day in religion are no longer regarded as our surest and best reasons for believing in God. We enjoy our friends, not for the freaks and extraordinary things in their conduct, but for their habits and their characters. Even so in religion, we have learned to love God and depend upon him for His orderly method in doing His work. There is room for providence within the laws of nature. If all providence were outside the laws of nature, we would be in a chaotic universe. The theological liberal therefore who rejects Thanksgiving day because of any thought that it involves an invasion of the supernatural in the province of the natural needs to give the whole study of providence deeper thought.

★ ★

For what shall we be thankful? There is a thoughtful faith that might give thanks for our whole world just as it stands. Our world is in process. It is not what we wish it to be eventually, but it has done very well.

But there are some features of our modern life which are more worthy of a thoughtful thanksgiving than others. We will scarcely talk very much about our wonderful prosperity. There are several things wrong with it. It is built from blood money. It is not well distributed. Most men find themselves actually poorer in this era of high prices. As the price of bread soars and coal is in some communities unobtainable because our cars are hauling ammunition, the children of the great cities will know nothing of our boasted prosperity.

We may well be thankful that we are at peace with all the world. This peace may be an accident we do not deserve, but it has given us time to think, and we have grown very certain in the last three years that we would not rush precipitately into war. The jingoists who have found occupation in stirring up hatred and suspicion toward other nations have grown increasingly unpopular. For this we are grateful to God.

We should be thankful for the growing spirit of internationalism in this country. It is yet in its infancy. It has expressed itself chiefly in terms of missions and war relief. But we have definitely left behind us the provincialism of the older days. The sorrows and burdens of humanity the world over are becoming our problem. When this shall be completely so, we shall be a greater people.

There is a kind of thanksgiving on which the curse of God rests. The Pharisee went into the temple to give thanks. He prayed thus: "I thank God that I am not as other men are, even as this publican." We may boast of our peace on Thanksgiving day as if we had earned it. We may talk as braggarts about our national achievements. Such a Thanksgiving day is one in which Ego is the deity.

Thanksgiving day is a time for humility, the humility begotten of the recognition of a Power higher than ourselves. It is a day when we should take account of all the ways in which God's work is greater than our own.

Why would any truly thankful man remain away from the sanctuary on the one day the President of the United States has asked him to go? It would seem that we would be drawn to the sanctuary with a divine compulsion, once we recognize the wonderful place God has had in the life of our people.

EDITORIAL

THE DIFFICULTIES OF CHURCH UNION

ALTHOUGH the Cumberland Presbyterians had the satisfaction of seeing the parent body concede most of the matters which were issues between the two denominations in the course of the years, yet when the union came it was not perfect. There are still over fifty thousand unassimilated Cumberland Presbyterians, in 1,446 congregations, though many of these are listed in the minutes of the denomination as not reporting.

It might have been expected that the union would be hearty and unanimous. It is disappointing that it has not proved so, although there can be little future ahead for the unassimilated elements.

It is just this problem of the unassimilated that makes church union difficult. It would seem to an onlooker that a church union must decrease denominationalism. Sometimes it might increase it. One plus one makes three, for there is the union church and two unassimilated fragments of other churches.

There must come again into the consciousness of the church the realization that schism is sinful. This is a doctrine to be found forcibly presented in the New Testament. It is to be found written broadly upon the pages of church history. In America, where individualism gives way slowly to the sense of social responsibility, the idea may not come quickly, but it must come in the end.

There is real point in the good old Disciples doctrine that when we lift up Jesus we have one of the remedies for partyism. We need the big loyalty of devotion to Him as a cure for the narrowness and jealousy which lies at the base of much of the current denominationalism. When men love Christ more than party, when they make Him the Lord of their lives, they will be willing to sacrifice everything upon the altar of His service.

A NEW KIND OF REVIVAL

IN THE days gone by a church sought to revive interest among its members by bringing in a preacher who would preach doctrines in which the interest of the congregation had flagged. The revivalist was often a man of inferior culture whose chief strength was in his violent emotions. Under such preaching the church was whipped into some semblance of life.

A new and far better method is revealed in the "Educational Week" which will be promoted at First Christian church, Springfield, Ill. Rev. Frank Waller Allen has arranged for a whole week in which there will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions. The entire program of the church will be presented at these sessions. The various missionary enterprises will have their days, but in addition there will be an educational day, a social service day, etc. During the week the church will be visited by a considerable company of people.

We could wish that all of the good churches of the section were in a circuit like the circuit Chautauqua and that the fine program of Springfield church might fertilize the leading congregations of the whole central Illinois country.

This kind of method revives religious interest, not by calling the people back to something, but by calling them forward. Its essential method is that of progress and education. At the end of such a week, the church will have assimilated so many facts of vital significance that its life will be permanently quickened.

What most of our churches need is not less of the kind of thing they are already getting, but more. One service a week is not enough to keep the membership of a church at its best. There must be special seasons when there can be afforded a comprehensive survey of all the good work in which the church is engaged.

THE QUIET HOUR

ONE of the best things the Christian Endeavor Society has ever done has been to establish a quiet hour for those of its members who take this covenant. This is the one thing which American Christians most need. They seem to fear solitude as if it were a plague.

Social life is the opportunity of service and of mutual improvement. It is solitude which gives man a soul. The hour alone with God is a testing time for our use of life. We may well question whether our precious days are being spent in a way well pleasing to Him and in a way in which we shall ourselves be pleased when we look back upon them from the vantage ground of old age.

There is something curative about the quiet hour. Not only do our tired nerves find the rest they need. Our minds may now seek the comradeship of the choice souls in literature with whom they love to dwell. An hour with a devotional book helps us to iron out the little animosities of life and get back to the broad and Christian way of looking at things.

It is in this quiet hour that each Christian soul may ask himself, "Who am I?" Not all of us have enough personality to find the answer to that question pleasant. Alone with our thoughts and surrounded only with the invisible presences, we must put to one side the hypocrisies of life and in deep humanity face all of our shortcomings. The hour of our meditation reveals our littleness, but if we tarry long enough in the secret chamber we shall find also a vision of our possible greatness.

Most people think they are too busy for a quiet hour. Being busy is a state of mind. Some very busy people we know are only fussy. They do not accomplish more than some people of seeming leisure. We have time for the things that are of real importance. If the culture of an immortal soul seems to be of importance, we will find the time to be alone with God.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIALISM.

THE men who have declared Christianity and Socialism inconsistent with each other grow less numerous. They were to be found in each camp and each undertook to build up a wall against the other.

Strictly speaking, Christianity is not concerned with an economic order. Socialism, strictly defined, has nothing to do with religion. Yet, as a matter of fact, human movements cannot be defined logically. There has always been a plus to Christianity that has touched upon economic questions, as the story of Ananias and Sapphira might help to illustrate. In socialism there was at first a plus of an anti-religious bias. Karl Marx was a Jewish materialist and not friendly to the Church.

It becomes increasingly clear, however, that a man may be a Christian and hold even mistaken notions in economics—no matter which kind you may regard as mistaken. We have not even demanded of a man perfection in theological thinking in order to be called a Christian and much less may we demand soundness of economic attitude.

Meanwhile there is coming into socialism a less cantankerous and critical attitude toward the forces of good in the world that do not travel with the Socialists. A Socialist newspaper of New York has lately developed a department giving the news of social service and has actually spoken a good word for Rockefeller! In the same paper is a frank acknowledgment of the good religious organizations are doing.

Meanwhile, it will not hurt economic conservatives in the Church to admit the good that Socialism has done. The child labor movement was first agitated by them and the text book of the movement, "The Bitter Cry of the Children," was written by Spargo, a Socialist. The Socialist protest has directed our attention to many a hoary evil with which we were willing to live altogether too complacently.

THE COLLEGE OF MISSIONS

THE College of Missions is one of the distinct contributions the Christian Woman's Board of Missions has made to the mission world. Here for six years men and women have been given the special training which, in addition to thorough college training, is necessary for success in such countries as China, India, Turkey, Japan, Africa, Latin America and other awaking mission fields.

So far, the actual teaching at the College has had to do largely with preparation for foreign service; but the work of home missions is just as much a part of its program. It is believed that within a short time the home mission boards will decide that no lower standard shall be held up for home missionaries than that now maintained for foreign workers. This means that hundreds of home mission stations will be manned with men and women who to a college education add special training in work among foreigners, colored people and children, who are familiar with charity organization and vocational guidance. This will mean that new chairs of social service, languages of foreigners and educational methods must soon be established.

Large numbers of men and women are willing to offer for missionary service, themselves and their education, which has cost them years of study and great expense; but they are not able to meet the extra expense involved in this further special preparation, which is not demanded for the regular ministry. Their salaries, as home and foreign missionaries, will be fixed on a living basis and are not intended to provide for gradually paying off college debts. It is only fair that the Church should help give this special training by providing scholarships which will carry these people through the one or two years required. Many of these students have left positions paying them from three to five times the amount of a scholarship. Some of these could command today anywhere up to $2,000 a year. They take up this important work at a dead level of $600 a year, and it ought to be made possible for them to give all their time to study during their brief stay at the College of Missions. The College of Missions' management is hoping that friends will come forward to found scholarships, endow chairs or perhaps to fill a case in the library.

JACK LONDON AND THE GOSPEL

JACK LONDON passed away the other day. We are not sure that he would be pleased to see his name linked up as in the above caption. He was a stout socialist, a rover and a man of the world. Yet few of the contemporaneous novelists have been more often quoted by the preachers than he.

He has been a greater hero than any of his characters. By his own might he has risen from the ranks and carved a place for himself in the halls of fame. By brutal labor he reached the degree of master of arts in a university. His literary productions came back to him at first. He has been a wanderer on the face of the earth, getting first-handed the material for many of his most thrilling adventure stories. Only persistent efforts brought success.

Preachers have used his two books, "The Call of the Wild" and "White Fang," as good illustrations of two orthodox Christian doctrines. The first of these books is the story of a high-bred dog which through abuse left the habitation of man and joined a pack of wolves when he heard "the call of the wild." He became the most dangerous wolf of them all. This illustrates the doctrine of original sin. Every man has the wolf in him, but he hears its call loudest when most abused by those who hold his destiny in their hands.

"White Fang" is the story of a wolf which under kindly treatment came to have the character of a dog. He never learned the dog language, but he came to know the civilized emotions of a dog. Spiritually speaking, he was elevated to the position of a dog. This story has been used to illustrate the doctrine of redemption.

Perhaps the ministers have most frequently quoted from "John Barleycorn." The title has passed into colloquial use. This autobiography put on no airs. It was a rather humble confession. The conclusions of the book were in the main sound and helpful.

Jack London may have thought that a great gulf yawned between him and the church. He was nearer the kingdom than he thought.

BRYAN'S RELIGIOUS AFFILIATIONS

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN always arouses interest with the story of the religious affiliations of his family. His father was a Baptist and his mother a Methodist. He was converted at the age of fourteen in a Cumberland Presbyterian church and joined the Presbyterian church later. His son is a Methodist; one daughter is a Methodist, while the other is an Episcopalian. Mr. Bryan himself now lives nearest to a country Methodist church and often worships there.

What will be the ultimate result on the Bryan family from this strangely diversified religious experience? It may, of course, be argued that this experience is broadening. All of the enthusiasms, all the loyalties of five great religious denominations have been incorporated into the family tradition.

It is fair, however, to inquire whether there may not be another result. The family will lack the loyalty which goes with a devoted attachment to a single group of Christians. There are many families like the Bryan families. We hold to the opinion that their religious loyalty has been shaken by this kind of interdenominationalism in family practice.

The remedy offered by some would be that a family should never encourage its members to leave the ancestral faith. This would mean for thousands a non-participation in the religious life of the community where they are compelled to live.

The better remedy is that of a united church. There would be but one loyalty and that to Jesus Christ and his undivided followers. In a church like this, found everywhere, there might be built up a family attachment to religion that would weather all the storms of life.

A real family represents a group of ideals and not mere blood kinship. When a family must confess itself hopelessly divided in things of the spirit, it lacks the greatest bond of unity. Much as we admire the Bryan family and their attachment to religion, we think they would have a richer life if they all had memberships in one united church.

GETTING BOYS TO JOIN THE CHURCH

AN official board was in session the other day and the pessimist came also. He made a speech in which he asserted that there would be no church in another generation, for no boys had joined the church in years. "Where are the boys whom we have taught religion?" he asked. He was not quite right, for a few boys had joined the church that he did not know about, but the good spirits of that board were spoiled for one day. There was all too much truth in the speech. Then those business men began asking why boys did not join the church.

In that church a Sunday school teacher had led a boy out by the ear. In doing it he confessed his pedagogical inefficiency, and he lost his chance with a whole class.

In that church there was work given to everybody except the boys. They were given a feed once in awhile, but never a chance to be "in the game" as they would say. There really was work for them to do, a lot of it, but no one ever thought of them in laying out the schedule of church activities.

Then they had been trying to reach those boys with emotional appeals, either on Children's Day or on some other day. The boys were already too masculine for the method.

There were just two or three things to do in that church to get the boys to join, in addition to correcting the abuses we have mentioned. Boys have a right to high grade business and professional men for teachers. Boys are hero worshippers. They will have only the best.

In the second place these men must be spiritually minded and aware of the opportunities inherent in their task. In unobtrusive ways the Sunday school class itself can be made a real evangelistic agency. The boys can be led to Christ and will confess their faith in a regular church service some day. Then they will truly feel a loyalty to the church they would never feel when they are led to make confession of faith in a Sunday school.

The boys must have a manly Christ presented. They must hear the call of a virile and heroic church. Then they will come.

CHRIST AND THE FICTION WRITERS

ONE of the most widely circulated novels in the English language is Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur." While the literary critics have never given it a high place as a work of art, its theme in presenting the human environment of Jesus Christ has given it great vogue. There have been other attempts by fiction writers to treat religious subjects, and in every case these efforts have been rewarded by an appreciative public with a larger circulation than the books could possibly have secured if they had dealt with another theme.

Just now, however, we are having a succession of volumes which undertake to explain Jesus Christ in some other way than the orthodox way. These books are being roundly condemned by the preachers and are being defended by many others.

Bouck White wrote "The Call of the Carpenter" a few years ago, and it ran at once into new editions. He makes Jesus Christ a historical figure, but relates Him to a rather mythical uprising of the slave class of the Roman empire. The author declares in so many words that Jesus Christ was more interested in social revolution than he was in religious problems. The writer is very virile and there are spots where his book greatly enriches our appreciation of Jesus, although the fundamental principle of interpretation would never be received by orthodox Christians.

The latest effort to interpret Jesus in fiction is, however, the most outlandish of all. George Moore, an apostate Catholic, in "The Brook Kerith" presents a Jesus Christ who is a kind of harmless religious fanatic. He joins a company of Essenes and there conceives the idea that he is the Christ. After his crucifixion, Joseph finds in him some signs of life and nurses him back to health, while the erstwhile Messiah prattles various kinds of absurdities. Then Jesus is represented as going back to the Essene community, and there he renounces his claim to be the Messiah. Paul meets him some years later and hears his denial of Messianic claims. Then comes an interesting conflict for Paul as he faces the necessity of receiving the testimony of a living man as over against his mystical experience of a Christ revealed within him.

It is not to be wondered that Christian souls shrink from the profane touch of George Moore. There was at least a wholesome hero worship in Bouck White's portraiture. In this latest effort is a passing literary sensation, presenting nothing new to the portrait of the Christ, save a very much out-of-date skepticism in the dress of fiction.

If, as George Moore represents, the Christian faith grew out of a lie, then we have the miracle of the leading moral force of our modern world growing out of deception. Some people may find it possible to live in that kind of a world, but frankly we cannot.

Down on the Rio Grande

Narrating a Chaplain's Experiences With Uncle Sam's Boys on the Mexican Border

By FRED S. NICHOLS

AN old neighbor Civil War veteran trying to describe a chaplain's work, upon my appointment several years ago, said, "A chaplain preaches and then the men go out and cuss." All are not guilty, although a sermon is to some of the men what a particular one was to an appreciative old lady who in complimenting her minister said, "Your sermon this morning was to me what water is to a drowning man." A "rooky" chaplain must learn that a camp is not a "camp meetin'," notwithstanding the fact that comrades may be dispatched to the place of torment with rapidity commensurate with modern military efficiency. Military conservatism is proverbial. Chaplains are not permitted to forget the old theology. In a nearby camp an old chaplain was much grieved at certain camp proceedings the night before, whereupon in his sermon that Sunday he gave the boys some straight talk. He shouted: "Now these modern scientists are trying to do away with hell by saying there is none. If there is none where are some of you fellows going?" At once came the reply from a homesick boy: "Back to Iowa."

The Chaplain on the Water Wagon

THE BUGLE CALLS.

The bugle called the whole town to the station on that June morning to see the boys off to a probable war. Of course, the "old vet" was there with fife and drum to inspire with the spirit of other days. Mother, you would expect to follow to any cross. Old "dad" was on hand with his angular display of affection and pretended bravery. He evidently thought he had made a cheerful discovery, for he led mother over to meet "son's chaplain." His heart was right when he asked me to look after the boy a little. Well, the boy did write and sent some money home, too.

That big, rough looking young drayman had a patriotic heart, for when I went to pay him for transferring my trunk, tears came and with trembling voice he said, "If I can't do that much for the boys who are going down to fight for us." That was all he said and it was enough. It is possible to hear the voice of God out of a war cloud. Human nature showed itself loyal and kind to us all the way to the border. Old and young, black and white, everywhere honored us. We were heroes. A uniform has a wonderful way of hiding cowardice and ignorance. One has never really traveled unless he has been on a troop train. The humorous and the pathetic meet one all the way. Then to jump off the train wherever it happens to stop and swallow the coffee of a different kind than mother used to make and eat soupie, soupie, soupie without a single bean, beats a diner any day. All is semi-sanitary, for mascots such as dogs, rabbits, goats, etc., were expelled from the cooking cars.

WHY A CHAPLAIN?

I am not a "bellumist," nor a worshiper of Mars, nor a disciple of Napoleon. Sometimes people refuse to be roughly classified. We all shared the latter part of the sentiment of the old colored preacher down in Arkansas who came to our train—"I 'spec' this is the providence of God, but I hope you all don't have to fight." The chaplain ought to be a man of peace. But the extreme pacifism of the crow-picked parrot availed little because the crows had a different viewpoint and philosophy of life. It is a little inconvenient for a peaceful muley to get mixed up with Texas horns. There is much inconsistency in the way we juggle that doctrine of non-resistance. Because I believe in adequate preparedness and because I feel that those who respond to their country's call should have religious privileges and friendly counsel, I went as a chaplain. That all the men who go are enthusiastically for preparedness is evidenced by the fact that the sentiment most vigorously applauded by the boys was the one by a brother chaplain when he expressed disgust with that song, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." (Their favorite is Onward, Christian Soldiers).

THE CHAPLAIN ACCEPTED

The federalizing of the National Guard whereby the state troops became the soldiers of Uncle Sam, included all chaplains. The soldiers who refused to take the oath without good reason were dubbed "slackers." This was the unpardonable sin, the real military heresy. The physical examination was required of all. No mental test was made, nor were theological questions asked. I got by with a good record. A chaplain may take smallpox or typhoid fever, since modern science declares they are not the result of direct sin, and so he must submit to the treatments. All this causes a feeling of pride, for he gradually becames conscious that he is an ordinary citizen and not an excluded saint.

"FALLING IN"

A chaplain should fall in for some things but not all. If he does not care for "high balls" and steel-spurred cock fights he had better stay away from barbecues. But it is a pleasure to fall in for the hikes to the battle fields of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma and to respond to the midnight call to arms with the other boys. This makes one kin to all. An officer had a sense of loyalty when he told some of the other men that they should take an interest in my service since I had been interested in their military work. It tones one up to enter into the spirit of the boy as he grubs the mesquite stump and lustily sings of his fifty cents a day, or as he beats the hard roadway and sings of "Uncle Sammy," or as he measures his will power against the army mule's won't power. The army mule could easily make a preacher fall from grace. No mule was assigned to me and so I am still intact physically and morally.

GOING TO CHURCH

Instead of a church bell the bugle call reminds the soldier boys of church service. The attendance is not compulsory, though it probably should be. The response and interest depend largely upon the commanding officer. He may be a man of large interests and sympathetic attitude, with a sincere desire to do anything for the moral or religious interests of his men, or he may be a small man with no attitude. Some officers are in this matter the salt of the earth. I knew of one regiment with a Catholic officer who made all his men attend the regimental service whether they were Catholics or not. The attendance at their own service in town afterward was their own affair. The hospital call, by the way, is the lightest on Sunday morning for there are no long hikes that day and church attendance is not compulsory.

The church hour arrives; several pieces by the band substitute for the organ voluntary as some of the companies come in military order. The good old earth is able to seat them all, though some prefer to stand. There are no clothes to spoil and no linen to wilt. No one stays away because of poor clothes. The chaplain need not have a necktie, either white or black. There is no pulpit to pound or lean upon. Once, because of the harassing moving picture man, it was necessary to hold church in a different place, where, on a high platform, used on other occasions for boxing, wrestling and vaudeville, under the awful scorching sun I talked as one who came to torment the men before their time. The soldiers who attend church are generally very courteous, and fewer left on that terrible day than leave during a session of our church conventions. The explanation is partly in the brevity of the service. The usher did not seem to mind the heat, for he was right on the job and I think the tag flying from his hip pocket advertised a good brand of tobacco. The audience can easily be seen by the speaker as he stands upon the ground for a platform, for there are no hats to project—the audience is masculine.

AN UNORTHODOX SERVICE

At Brownsville our service was held at eight o'clock on Sunday morning in front of my tent under the miserly shade of a few mesquite trees. With a true spirit of patriotism I wandered a little from the orthodox military service, which consists of a few harmless patriotic platitudes, the singing of America and a prayer for the president, our commander-in-chief, to demonstrate that we rise above all narrow partisanship. As an interpreter it is possible to do some good in clearing up a few strange ideas of religion and the church. The kingdom of brotherhood for which we work and the heroic element necessary to bring it about makes a strong appeal to the men when spoken in understandable language. A soldier can understand and appreciate dignified language and he may not like being spoken to in a patronizing way,

Making Friends With the Natives

as was true of one officer who reported a case to me. He was much incensed as he told of a religious worker who had been in camp and at the close of the service said, "Now we'll bust up the meeting with a prayer."

It was a pleasure, in addition to the regimental services, to preach in a number of the Brownsville churches. In this city of about fourteen thousand people, eleven thousand of whom are Mexican, there is a combined Protestant membership of three hundred and fifty or four hundred. Disciple, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopalian congregations graciously welcomed me to their pulpits. The chaplains enable the town ministers to enjoy a good vacation. The Disciples' mission is struggling industriously and promising. H. K. Hallam, a graduate of the early sixties from Eureka, now in business in Brownsville, looks faithfully after the work there. It was a pleasure to speak to the Mexican Presbyterian congregation. As they rose to sing in Spanish, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow" the deep springs of the soul were reached. They were not "Greasers" to me and my hope is that I was not a "Gringo" to them. My prayer that day was that they might feel that a soldier's uniform represented love and peace and hope and not plunder, suspicion, and cruelty. Mr. Ross, the minister, interpreted the sermon. It was my first sermon under such conditions.

FEW GESTURES USABLE

When it is necessary to give short sentences and be denied the privilege of an overflowing measure of gestures, it is a good thing to have something to say. Some days before, I had said a few words at a meeting of the Mexican Presbytery. Then my talk was interpreted by an old Mexican who had been in the ministry for over forty years. His mother was one of the first Protestant converts in that section. An officer in the United States army had left a copy of the New Testament in the home while passing through the country, during the Mexican war in '46. The good seed was sown and when the early Presbyterian missionaries entered that country she gladly came to obey the Gospel. Last June, in view of the immediate impending conflict, the old man had made all arrangements to go back to some obscure place to preach and teach while his beloved sons entered the Mexican army. When I saw the old man, how glad he was to feel that the trouble had subsided! I hope his heart will not be broken again.

OTHER RELIGIOUS WORK

But preaching is not the only religious work of a chaplain. In the severity of their temptations, example means a good deal to the soldier boys. The general said, "Nothing will mean more to the men than a good example." A colonel in looking for a chaplain said he wanted a man who stood for something. To be bitten or stung by a scorpion and not "cuss" is a stupendous achievement with some people, and to be intensely human and at the same time decent, commands respect.

This being a friend is religious work; not statistical, of course. To be a friend to the homesick, to those worrying about the support of their families, to those concerned about getting back to school—all this has a joyous satisfaction. To lend money until payday comes gives the feeling of a friendly banker. The amounts were small and paid back promptly. Because of the religion of friendship, pictures of children, parents and sweethearts were seen, letters from pastors and loved ones read, and New Testaments, the gifts of thoughtful organizations and mothers, pulled from pockets for me to look over. In that hurricane the young Brazilian did not forget the chaplain. How he worked in the fury of the storm, in spite of all protest, to save my old tent. That officer meant the finest good will in constantly calling me "padre." The cavalry boy who declared a certain speech of mine was worth ten dollars to him gave a material demonstration when he gave me a fine Sunday dinner in a restaurant and this on a salary of fifteen dollars a month. Yes, there were many joys, even to weddings in the chaplain's tent. But there were sorrows, sorrows of sickness, death and disease.

THE SAD STORY

Moral wreckage is an awful price to pay for protection and preparedness. Backward Russia abolishes liquor while the poisonous joints along the border spring up like toadstools in the night. A few boards nailed together and another hole is ready to sell booze. The "red light" district has the strategic location right next to Fort Brown. The long lines of boys there especially after pay days would make the devil weep. Special houses for officers was a matter of jest among the boys. Boys who are good at home may turn out bad under the abnormal conditions and the monotony of a military camp.

The uniform met daylight solicitation on the streets of Des Moines. The prophylactic treatment, over which there is so much sincere difference of opinion, may save from physical consequences and protect in its far-reaching social aspect, but there seems little question that the treatment encourages immorality. Much, however, depends upon the regimental physicians. If their presentation deals only with the military penalty of not reporting, and fails utterly to emphasize the moral and ethical aspects, serious results will follow. There is still much of false and outgrown theory among military authorities in regard to human passions. It is my opinion that military training in colleges and well conducted summer camps will result in greater efficiency and a higher moral standard than the present system.

The many Y. M. C. A. buildings along the border have done a great service, with stationery, writing tables, games, amusements and varied services. Chaplains are doing their feeble part, but the tide is strong. The government should use strong repressive measures and should also be wise enough to appropriate considerable funds for the direction and conservation of the moral and intellectual life of its soldiers.

HOME AGAIN

The summer's work of joys and sorrows is over and the days of reflection have come. It was a good thing, after all, to do religious work for a while with no thought of building up an organization, for while the ideals of the church may be divine, its machinery is sometimes painfully prosiac. It may try an ecclesiastical mechanist's ingenuity and drain his spiritual resources to keep all the pieces buzzing when buzz they must. It is a spiritual exhilaration for once to minister to Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, saint and sinner, without the statistical push of getting them into my organization. But it all has enabled me to see that even a minister may feed upon husks.

Iowa City, Iowa.

Miss Jeannette Rankin, Congresswoman

FOR the first time in the nation's history women will be represented in Congress by one of their sex when Miss Jeannette Rankin takes her seat next March as a member of the House of Representatives.

After sweeping the State in the primaries last August, Miss Rankin was elected on the Republican ticket as one of the two Congressmen at large.

Her platform was national woman suffrage, child welfare, tariff revision, prohibition for State and nation, and greater publicity in Congressional records.

Says the New York Times, "Miss Rankin's triumph is all the more notable from the fact that Representative John M. Evans, Democrat, was also elected."

The Boston Globe says: "Her presence in the House of Representatives will change Congressional manners and customs for two years at least. Very likely no succeeding National Legislature will deliberate without at least one woman in its membership."

A PIONEER SUFFRAGIST

Miss Rankin, the Hon. Jeannette Rankin of Missoula, Montana, is an ardent suffragist. For a number of years she was one of the most valued organizers of the National Suffrage Association. She was chairman of the Montana State Suffrage Committee, which carried equal suffrage in Montana to victory in 1914.

Miss Rankin is a graduate of the University of Montana and the School of Philanthropy of New York City. She is of medium height, slight, with brown hair. She makes her own clothes and hats and is an excellent cook.

Congressman-elect Rankin has great oratorical power and a striking personal appearance. She has tact, singleness of purpose and an unusual combination of humor and earnestness.

She won the nomination for Congressman-at-large against seven men opponents by a 7,000 plurality. In her campaign speeches she said:

HER PLATFORM

"Let the people know what's going on. That's the keynote of my platform. I'm going to win. I stand for national equal suffrage, and I'll bring it before Congress as soon as I arrive in the capital.

"This is not my campaign. The splendid vote I received in the primaries as well as the hearty reception I am getting throughout the State now, in my campaigning, is simply a demonstration of the determination of Montana women to have a woman to represent their interests in Congress.

"These women are fighting for a principle—a new idea in representation—and they are standing behind me because they believe my candidacy means something bigger than sending Jeannette Rankin to Congress. I am surely grateful to the women for their loyal support and I deeply appreciate the honor and the responsibility of their having chosen me as their candidate."

Although Miss Rankin ran on the Republican ticket, a great many women of other parties worked for her election.

Presbyterians Evangelize Chicago

When the Presbyterians get together to plan things for the development of religion in Chicago, they see nothing small. They have been in the midst of a city mission week which was to culminate in the Strand Theater on Nov. 26. The Presbyterians raise and spend $100,000 per year and more for their regular city mission enterprises and now they have a special enterprise of trying to pay off the church mortgages of their weaker churches in the coming three years. With all the smaller congregations out of debt, the Presbyterians of Chicago will be ready for a big advance.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

The Sweep of the Temperance Cause

The presidential election was not a landslide, but the vote on temperance came very near being such. Michigan went dry by 75,000, Nebraska and South Dakota by upwards of 25,000 each, and Montana by a good safe majority, with Alaska also landed on the dry side. In Idaho, legislative prohibition was definitely clinched by a popular vote, while in Oregon an attempt to modify statewide prohibition by permitting the sale of beer was defeated by 90,000 and a like proposition in Arkansas by two votes to one. Besides all this, Utah, after having legislative prohibition vetoed by the late governor, retired that gentleman and elected a legislature that is almost unanimously dry together with a governor who is wholly so. Florida did something of the same kind through a prohibition split in the Democratic party wherein for the first time in many a year the "alligators" had two candidates presented to them on election day and defeated the Democratic machine. Texas has moved up into the front line through definite orders from the people for a statewide referendum, and both Louisiana and Kentucky are about ready for the same procedure, with excellent chances for making all three states dry. And then for good measure the election in Indiana, while not revolving directly upon this question, gave the state a dry governor and two senators definitely committed to national prohibition. The sweep of temperance conviction on November 7 will put 7,000 saloons out of business.

The most surprising element in it was the way the cities voted. Detroit with 800,000 population broke about even. Seattle, which went wet by 15,000 two years ago, rolled up a dry majority of 20,000 this year. Grand Rapids and many other second-class cities in all the states voted dry. Every city in Montana went against the saloons with the exception of Butte; and even in Missouri, where the state outside of St. Louis gave a goodly dry majority, Kansas City joined hands with the rural folks by giving a majority against the saloon. California and Missouri only were saved to the booze interests, and in the latter state the city of St. Louis alone prevented their defeat. It now requires only eleven more states to give the necessary two-thirds that will insure nation-wide prohibition. With New Mexico and Wyoming active and promising candidates for joining the great majority west of the Mississippi River and with Texas, Kentucky and Louisiana almost on the water wagon, and with Vermont and New Hampshire dry with the exception of a few cities, more than one-half of the eleven are already in a fair way to give assurance of success. To these seven the dries may pin their hope, to Maryland, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri for rapid conquest, and thus enlist the thirty-six necessary to compel the states having large foreign populations to climb on the American water wagon.

William J. Bryan has already begun his great four-year drive for national prohibition. His initial reception in the city of Chicago a few evenings ago was like unto that of his palmy campaign days, for not only was the auditorium where he spoke crowded to suffocation but more than 10,000 people clamored on the streets for admission. Out of 2,543 counties in the United States, only 355 will remain wet when the results of the present election are made operative.

* * *

An Inconsistent Criticism of Church by Labor

Certain labor leaders are criticizing the church for its awakened interest in the anti-saloon crusade. These same gentlemen would doubtless join in labor's criticism of the church for its failure to arouse interest in social questions. This is a striking inconsistency. The worst anti-social institution in existence from the standpoint of labor is the saloon. It steals from his thrift, takes the bread from his children's mouths, debilitates him as an efficient workingman, lowers his wage, increases his liability to disease and accident, and shortens his life. If all the laboring men of the nation were to suddenly quit the saloon and cast their vote against it, national prohibition would be effected in just the time it would take to go through the form. A majority of the laborers of the nation are men of foreign inheritance if not men who themselves came from foreign lands. Their advocacy of the saloon is not altogether because of their interest in drink, but is often a defense of their Old World ideas of personal liberty. This was well illustrated in the late election, where precincts made up largely of naturalized citizens and their sons voted overwhelmingly against prohibition. Labor is not yet entirely awake to the pleas of thrift and economy and self-protection against anti-social institutions, nor is the foreign born citizen, with all his gratitude for American liberty, committed to that new Americanism which is steadily putting the booze business out of the running.

There is hope in the attitude of many of the greater labor leaders, who are pointing out to the unions the consistency of personal liberty and true-blue American freedom with a vote against the liquor traffic. Charles Stelzle, through his little paper, The Worker, is striking thundering blows on behalf of the larger freedom of the laboring man through his freedom from the brewer and the distiller and the use of their products as a means of pleasure. The whole program of scientific management and efficiency in workmanship is beginning to seize upon the mind of the working classes, as is instanced in the fact that so many of the large cities and industrial centers and mining counties are now going dry. The working man does not read much beyond his daily paper, and with 840 dailies in the country now refusing liquor advertisements and with many that do still accept them writing warning editorials, another powerful influence is at work among them. It is interesting to note that among the dailies which have recently joined the new crusade are the New York Tribune, the New Orleans Picayune and the Indianapolis News.

* * *

"Billy" Sunday Meets Unitarians

It was a dramatic hour when Billy Sunday, the foremost preacher of "hell-fire" in this country met the Unitarians of Boston. There were 200 ministers present. It is said the Evangelist did not mince matters in presenting his theological position. The Unitarian organization has circularzed its churches, urging that they abstain from public criticism of the evangelistic campaign, but that they take advantage of this time of special interest to preach their own faith with greater zeal. A big steel and concrete tabernacle is being used in Boston and will hold more people than any tabernacle yet erected. On one night a record offering was received of $9,237.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

Two Successful Eastern Federations

ABOUT five years ago a successful federation of Congregationalists and Baptists was consummated at Mannsville, N. Y., by Rev. R. C. Penney. Last month Mr. Penney was invited to study the situation at Montour Falls, N. Y., with a view to forming a similar federation between the Presbyterians and Congregationalists at that place. On Thursday evening, October 26th, the following agreement was adopted by a Joint Committee on Federation:

This association shall be known as the Federation of the Baptist and Presbyterian churches of Montour Falls, New York. The organization, membership, property and officials of the federating churches shall remain separate and distinct as now. The federation shall act as one body in moral and religious support of the ministry, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor Society and all religious services. The woman's work of the federation shall be left to the women of the churches for adjustment.

Religious services shall be equally divided between the churches, or otherwise as may be arranged by the official boards of the churches, all such matters being left in their hands for adjustment.

The financial support of the church shall be borne equally by the federating bodies. Contributors to benevolences may designate to which denomination their contributions shall go, all gifts not so designated being divided equally between the denominational agencies.

A pulpit committee of six, three from each church, chosen as the respective churches shall determine, shall present a candidate for the pastorate for the choice of the federated body.

Converts and other new members shall be free to join either of the federating churches.

The Lord's Supper shall be administered without bias or limitation of any sectarian nature.

This plan of Federation is a copy of the one which has been in operation at Mannsville for five years, and which the members of that church report to be gaining in popularity and effectiveness with every year.

The present acceleration of the movement toward federated and other kinds of community churches is due to contacts such as noted above. "Nothing succeeds like success." The most convincing argument in favor of any plan is always to be found in its successful operation. However attractive a program may look on paper, or however logically it may be defended, we give it at best only our grudging approval until its success is demonstrated, not by argument, but by accomplishment. Every such successful experiment in Christian union gives momentum to the movement and quickens social awareness on the part of leaders in religious work.

* * *

Rev. H. H. Peters, Secretary of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society, spoke a prophetic word with respect to the rural churches in his address at the Des Moines Convention. Mr. Peters said:

The rural church must become a community institution and not a denominational enterprise or a sectarian club. This is, finally, the only hope of the rural church. Things may go on as they are for a long time. But in the end the rural church will become a community institution, uniting the people in Christ for worship and service, or it will die. In some communities the church is becoming the community center for worship; in others, death has claimed its own.

But we must deal with facts. Great growth in grace will have to come to many of us before this community ideal becomes anything like a general conviction among the people. Until that time we shall be compelled to meet the issue as we find it. I see no way out of the difficulty except to group our churches in pastoral unities, and thus enable them to have pastoral oversight and gospel ministry without making such a large investment in railroad travel. If we can group our one-fourth and half-time churches in such a way that ministers may be located in the midst of them, it will help very materially in meeting the present crisis. If it takes six churches or even eight to make a pastoral unity, let us combine them.

SUPPLEMENTAL WORK

For Use in the Religious Instruction of Primary, Junior and Intermediate Children

Advice is often asked as to the choice of supplemental material to be used by Sunday School graded teachers in the Junior and Intermediate departments. A series of books is just from the press of the Macmillan Company, New York, which meets precisely this demand. It is called "The King's Highway Series." There are eight books already published. While these books are intended primarily for use in the home and the private school, a more useful series for the Sunday School can hardly be imagined. The method used is that of the story. Stories are given from the Bible and from the choicest literature of the world, and these stories are directed at particular vices to which children at these several ages are susceptible. Nor is the instruction aimed simply to warn against vices; there is plenty of excellent instruction material which would have as its result the inspiring of young life toward embodying the positive virtues in the building of character. The editors of the series are E. Hershey Sneath, George Hodges and Henry H. Tweedy. The following are the titles of the books:

THE WAY OF THE GATE. For children six years of age. 50 cents.

THE WAY OF THE GREEN PASTURES. For children of seven. 50 cents.

THE WAY OF THE RIVERS. For children of eight. 55 cents.

THE WAY OF THE HILLS. For children of nine. 55 cents.

THE WAY OF THE MOUNTAINS. For children of ten. 65 cents.

THE WAY OF THE STARS. For children of eleven. 65 cents.

THE WAY OF THE KING'S GARDENS. For children of thirteen or fourteen. 75 cents.

THE WAY OF THE KING'S PALACE. For children of fourteen or fifteen. 75 cents.

* * *

A Series of Biographical Stories

Another very valuable series of books that may be used as supplemental texts in connection with graded work, in the Junior and Intermediate department especially, is one of three volumes prepared by Mary H. Wade and published by Little, Brown & Company, Boston. These books are entitled, "The Light Bringers," "The Wonder Workers" and "Pilgrims of Today." They present in most attractive form the life-stories of great Americans. Under "Light Bringers" are given the stories of Robert E. Peary, Clara Barton, the Wright Brothers, Julia Ward Howe, Marconi and Amundson. Under "The Wonder Workers" are considered Luther Burbank, Helen Keller, William R. George, Jane Addams, Wilfred T. Grenfell, Judge Lindsey and Edison. The third volume presents sketches of John Muir, Jacob Riis, Mary Antin, E. A. Steiner, Carl Schurz, Nathan Strauss and Joseph Pulitzer. $1.00 per volume net.

(Any of these books may be secured from the Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th street, Chicago.)

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE

BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Exiled Russian Baptist to Return Home

Rev. Wilhelm Fether, Baptist leader of Russia, was exiled from Russia at the beginning of the war, but it is stated in the Lendbote, the German Baptist organ, that he will now be allowed to return and is going back immediately to resume charge of his big church in St. Petersburgh, the Dom Evangelica.

Noted Evangelist Undergoes Operation

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the well-known Evangelist, is now in the Polyclinic Hospital, Chicago, where he has undergone an operation for gall-stones. He is reported as making a good recovery. During his last Evangelistic meeting he was in very bad health.

American Preacher Goes to London

The City Temple of London was not daunted by the refusal of Rev. Joseph Fort Newton to go to London, but continued negotiations by both mail and cable until at last the well-known pastor of the Liberal church of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has decided to go. It is stated that he will begin his work in London in January. His present position in theology may be described for the most part as being that of a progressive Evangelical. His sermons have fine literary quality and show deep spiritual insight.

Robert E. Speer Celebrates Anniversary

Though he is still a young man Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, is now the senior secretary. On November 6, the Board met to recognize twenty-five years of service on the part of this tireless leader in the world's evangelization. While acting as missionary secretary, he has kept up his scholarly life and has written books which show careful and painstaking work. At the anniversary dinner, Secretary Arthur J. Brown presented him with a book containing 250 congratulatory letters from all parts of the world.

Bishop Gives Up His Palace

The Bishops of England have been under severe criticism lately for their luxurious living. Whether on this account or not, the Bishop of Chichester, Dr. C. J. Ridgway, has closed his palace and has gone to live in a small house near the cathedral. It is said that the palace required sixty tons of coal each winter to heat it and a large retinue of servants to care for it.

Abyssinia Remains Christian

Reports of a revolt in Abyssinia have attracted wide attention. It is discovered that the recently crowned king was a Mohammedan. He tried to make this the state religion but his mother has become the regent. The Abyssinian kingdom is supposed to be the oldest Christian Kingdom in the world. It will remain Christian.

All Denominations Plan Bible Study

The illustrated Bible selections committee met in Washington recently with Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts as chairman. Twenty-six communions are cooperating in the enterprise of securing a list of scriptures which would be received by all kinds of Christians and even the Jews. Unitarians and Universalists are represented on the commission. Cardinal Gibbons, Roman Catholic, and Professor Max Margolis, Hebrew, each sent a letter to the commission. It is the point of view of the commission that there should be far more memorizing of the Bible itself and efforts will be made to secure this result. It is hoped that the Bible selections shall be so impartially made that they may find entrance at last into the readers of the public schools.

Upsets Theories About Rural Church

As long as the rural church was studied a priori, certain theories obtained with regard to the cause of the decline of church attendance in the open country. In the September number of the American Journal of Theology a significant article by Anton T. Boisen of Maine has published the results of definite investigations in a number of states. It was shown that church attendance was best where people were most ignorant. The growth of fraternal orders in a community interfered with a decline in church interest. The scarcity of labor in the rural districts was shown to be a most potent cause for the farmers remaining away from church. The author shows that the theological changes of the age have brought a decline to the church. When a belief in hell goes, church interest often goes with it. The document will be a wholesome counter to other theories now circulating.

The Division of Islam

Most significant for the future of Christian missions is the division of the Mohammedan world. For a long time the lordship of the Sultan of Turkey over Mohammedan hosts has been recognized. The imminence of a pan-Islamic war has been feared. Now that the whole of Arabia is declaring its independence of the rule of the Turk and have seized many cities, it is seen that even in religion the leadership of the Turk is at an end. The Arabians indict the Turk for cruelty in terms stronger even than those used by the missionaries.

Episcopal Seminary Has New Dean

The General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal church, located in New York, has called to the deanship of the institution the Rev. Dr. Hughell E. W. Fosbroke, who has been a professor in the Theological school at Cambridge, Mass. He will begin his new duties about January 1.

Press Bureau for Episcopalians

During the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in St. Louis there was a Committee on Press and Publicity which did very effective service in making known to the world the news of the great gathering. So effective was this work that it is now proposed that the committee be made a standing one and that it function continuously between the sessions of the General Convention.

Quakers Not Friendly to Preparedness

The Quaker leaders in this country have taken alarm at the talk of universal military service for the United States. The leaders of the denomination will come together shortly to discuss what their attitude should be in the event that such legislation is enacted. Both branches of the Quaker movement agree in being strongly anti-militaristic.

The Sunday School Lesson

Going to Heaven—Now!

The Lesson in Today's Life*

By John R. Ewers

SOME of us are not willing to wait until we get to Heaven to see the holy city. We want it now. It is an easy thing to sit and sing, "The Sweet Bye and Bye" but more men every day are demanding the "Sweet Here and Now," even if they have to fight to get it.

Dealey, in his book on the "History of the Family," shows the marvelous development of that institution. He shows us the primitive family, hardly better than beasts, and leads us up to the present time when family life is higher by far than ever before. Even the divorce is a protest against conditions that ought not and that must not exist. The family is not fading out. The wild theories of many visionaries are not going to win. Monogamy is going to prevail in a higher and purer form than we have ever witnessed yet. The world is growing better. Sometimes as we read history we feel that perhaps the world is not improving, and yet a wide sweep of the pages convinces us that society is evolving into ever better forms.

What is true of the family is also true of nearly every other social institution. Sanitation, education, foods, houses, recreations, business, government, penology, institutions for the poor sick and helpless and a hundred other things indicate progress toward perfection.

* * *

Dr. Gulick dares to dream of the time when disease shall have been banished. The vision of justice and mercy is possessing capitalists and labor alike. Education is made wonderfully attractive in the Gary schools. Only clean athletics is interesting. Higher ethical standards reign everywhere. The world is growing better.

New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh will some day be holy cities. We are familiar with vice crusades. We have been nauseated by talk of evil conditions. Things called surveys have been taken which have succeeded in pointing out all of the evils of the town. Such is the Pittsburgh Survey—a miserable one-sided statement which has made this city blacker than its smoke. As a matter of fact Pittsburgh is one of the cleanest cities morally on the map and one of the most generous cities in the world. Nor is its philanthropy shallow. It seeks to eliminate evil at its source. Let us have done with a lot of this rotten talk about cities. Let us have a rest from the vile-minded muckraker.

Let us have a virtue crusade! Let us talk about churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, libraries, art galleries, hospitals, missions, fresh air homes, visiting nurses, milk and ice associations, housing commissions, health departments, playgrounds, happy homes, good people, sweet children and all the other good and beautiful and true things cities afford. Yes, I am in favor of a committee of fifty to tabulate the virtue of our city.

* * *

We pray "Thy Kingdom Come," with more or less faith! When it comes the church will have made it! Let us have done also with the heckling of the church. Long enough yellow dogs have barked at this swift express train. Every miserable cynic whose own life is stained thinks he has a right to say vicious things about the bride of Christ. The church has been here for two thousand years and is keeping well ahead of the growth of population even yet.

The church is the mother of every beneficent social reform. The social workers came out of the church, eighty-five per cent of them, and were it not for the money given by church members they would close up their little shops tomorrow! The church is a million times bigger than any other institution. The church will produce the holy city. God will have his way in the earth.

*The above article is based upon the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for December 17. Scripture, Revelations 21:1-4, 22-27.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY desires to use in this space each week a story of the work of some men's class or women's class, or men's brotherhood, which is getting results in community upbuilding or in the promotion of missionary or temperance or benevolent work. Each story should contain about six hundred words. If you have a good story, tell it. Address, The Christian Century.

Disciples Table Talk

Dr. Ainslie Lectures at Episcopalian Theological Seminary

Dr. Peter Ainslie is rightly known as a prophet of reconciliation among all the churches of the divided body of Christ. Last week Dr. Ainslie delivered the Reinicker lectures at the Protestant Episcopal Theological seminary, Alexandria, Va. The general subject discussed was "Church Unity," and lectures were given on three particular themes: "Church Unity: Its Necessity;" "Church Unity. Its Growth;" and "Church Unity: Its Outlook."

New Officers Elected at Georgia State Convention

Georgia Disciples met in annual convention this year at Athens. The meetings closed on Nov. 16. For the new year the following officers were elected: President, L. M. Omar, West Point; vice-president, Allen Wilson, Valdosta; recording secretary, O. E. Fox, Conyers; corresponding secretary, Claude C. Jones, Rome; treasurer, B. F. Archer, Rome; Bible school superintendent, Claude Mayne, Windsor; Christian Endeavor superintendent, Mrs. W. F. Mott, Dublin; members of state board to fill places open by expiration of terms of office: A. R. Moore, Savannah; Judge T. C. Hathcock, Atlanta, and B. F. Archer, Rome.

Toledo Church Has Employment Department

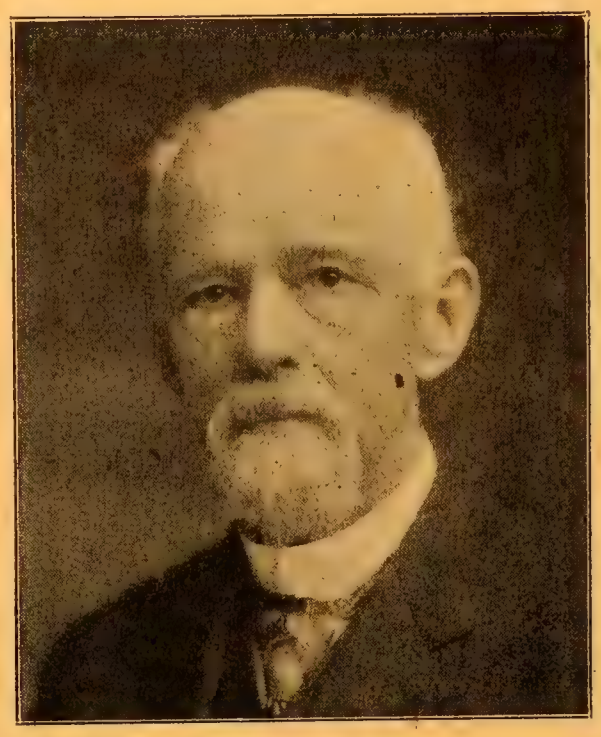
Five years ago the men's brotherhood of Central church, Toledo, Ohio, organized an employment bureau. Since then several hundred positions and promotions have been secured for members of this church. The department has now become a church institution, and Ira E. Merrill, traffic manager for a large business concern, has charge of the bureau.

President Waits Inaugurated at Texas Christian University

The reports that come from Texas of the service of inauguration of E. M. Waits, the new president of Texas Christian University, bring the message that President Waits' administration has opened most auspiciously. T. E. Tomlinson, president of the board of trustees, said at the close of the service: "I have been present at every important occasion in Texas Christian University for some fourteen years, and can truly say that I have never seen one so promising as this, nor have I ever felt so surely that any occasion was so auspicious as this." Messages were brought to the service by a number of men of prominence, among them being several leading pastors of Dallas. Dr. Frank L. Jewett, of the Bible chair at Austin, represented the Disciple churches of Texas. The Christian Courier speaks in the highest terms of the address of the new president, which is reported to have been "dignified in expression, profound in thought, sparkling with epigram, lofty in its idealism and inspiring in its appeal." President Waits stressed the mission of the school in developing the idealism of life in young people, as opposed to the pressing materialism of the day. A message was sent for the occasion by Ex-President Kershner, whom Mr. Waits succeeds at the Texas school.

Edúcational Rally at Beatrice, Neb.

"A national convention in miniature" is the way the recent educational rally held at the Beatrice, Neb., church is described by the Christian Messenger of Beatrice. Nov. 19-16 was the date of the meetings. Among those who had place on the program of the week are: W. F. Aylsworth, Bethany; J. K. Shellenberger, Fairbury; Secretary Wm. Oeschger, Bethany; C. E. Lemmon, Hastings; Secretary Bert Wilson, Drs. Osgood and Hanna, all of the Foreign Society, and the pastor, Chas. F. Stevens.



Disciples in Yale University

Robert Hueston, of Yale University, writes that the Campbell Club of Yale held the first meeting of the year on Oct. 26, at the home of Prof. J. C. Archer, and elected the following officers: E. N. Guggs, president; F. E. Livengood, secretary and treasurer; Robert Hueston, corresponding secretary. The purpose of the club is to promote a spirit of fellowship among the Disciples students and to keep the men in touch with the brotherhood at large. Some of the Yale Disciples have made unusual records during the past year. Clarence Reidenbach, Butler '12, was awarded the Day Fellowship in 1915, and is now doing advanced work in the graduate school. R. L. McQuary, Cotner '13 and F. A. Poffenberger, Bethany '12, won the Fogg scholarships in 1916. E. H. Longman, Cotner '08, and F. E. Livengood, University of Kansas '09, won Allis scholarships in 1916. These scholarships are awarded for high scholastic standing. The Disciples are well represented in Yale this year. J. C. Archer, of Hiram College, is assistant professor of missions. There are thirty-two Disciples in the school of religion, representing nine of our colleges; and there are representatives also in the law, scientific and graduate schools. The Disciples have the record representation in both the school of religion and the volunteer band. Mr. Hueston writes that all the members who were in Yale last year are preaching regularly, and many of the new men are being sent out every week to do supply work. The officers of the club, or Dean Charles R. Brown, of the school of religion, will be glad to hear of any one who is thinking of doing advanced work in this school.

Lectures on Social Problems at First Church, Springfield, Ill.

The Fellowship Class at First church, Springfield, Ill., has arranged for a series of illustrated lectures on social problems, to be delivered by the pastor, Frank W. Allen, in the Church school auditorium, beginning Sunday evening, December 3, at 6:30 o'clock. The series will be illustrated by lantern slides made from photographs representing social conditions bearing on the themes of the lectures. The subjects follow: "How the Other Half Lives," Dec. 3; "Where the Other Half Lives," Dec. 10; "Women and Children in Toil," Dec. 17; "The Amusement Problem," Dec. 24; "The Battle for Health," Dec. 31; "The Coming City," Jan. 7.

A Remarkable Man Passes

The Late John W. Mounce

About two years ago St. Louis papers and others were full of the story of John W. Mounce, of Hannibal, Mo., who, it was revealed, had made a very remarkable record as a church and Sunday school attendant. George A. Campbell, of First church, Hannibal, of which organization Mr. Mounce was a member, sends word that Mr. Mounce passed away recently, his funeral being held on November 19. Mr. Campbell was assisted in the service by Levi Marshall, for many years pastor at Hannibal. Mr. Campbell pays high tribute to his friend's usefulness in the church and community, but writes that most of all will be missed his "indefinable personality." Here are some features of Mr. Mounce's record, as summed up by his pastor:

He was a member of the church sixty-six years.

He was a deacon forty-nine years.

He was treasurer of our Sunday school thirty-nine years.

He was treasurer of the church thirty-eight years.

In twenty-eight years, the period the church has had the weekly envelopes, he did not miss a Sunday in depositing his envelope with its offering enclosed.

He probably was never late to a service.

He had the best record for Sunday School attendance of anyone in the State of Missouri.

He was a teacher for a half century.

He read assiduously our three church papers, and was unusually informed as to the movements and personalities of the brotherhood.

His indeed was a marvelous record.

But where the record? It sprang from the secret of his soul. His record was the expression of inner fires. He possessed a soul of conviction, a soul of spiritual discernment, a soul of Christ love and vision.

As a man he was honest, honorable, humble.

As a teacher he was concise, pungent, studious, inspiring.

As a treasurer he was faithful, untiring, liberal.

As a leader he was wise, tactful, missionary.

As a Christian he was true.

Appreciation for W. S. Lockhart, of Houston, Tex.

Friends from all parts of Houston, Texas, assembled at South End church, of which Mr. Lockhart is pastor, to participate in the celebration of the sixth anniversary of Mr. Lockhart's coming to the Texas city; the date was November 5. Many of the city's prominent men were present to offer their tributes to Mr. Lockhart as a leader in the community; among these were H. A. Halverton, city commissioner; J. C. Harris, leading lawyer and social worker and Judd Mortimer Lewis, poet and humorist of the Houston Post. High praise was given also by several speakers to Mrs. Lockhart, not only for her work in the church, but especially for her service in organizing the Women's Federation of Missionary Societies in Houston. For about five years Mr. Lockhart was pastor of Central church and it was during his pastorate there that the Christian church started on its great period of expansion in Houston. Under his administration, the church in Houston Heights was established and Second church was made self-sustaining. The new Magnolia Park church is a mission of South End church, which itself was organized by Mr. Lockhart a little more than a year ago in the populous residence district of the South End. It began with 75 members and during the year has increased to 200 members. So that Mr. Lockhart has been directing the force of five Christian churches in the city during his pastorate of six years. Members of these churches sent representatives to pay tribute to the leader for what he has done. Since he came to the city he has received over 1,000 new members into the Christian church. Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart, while their leadership in the church has been conspicuous, have made a powerful appeal to the people of the city at large through the conduct of the municipal entertainment, and in the inauguration and conduct of the municipal Christmas tree every Christmas at the municipal entertainment, where thousands of presents are given away to the children of the city. In starting this institution it was Mrs. Lockhart's desire that no child in the city miss getting a Christmas present, and the people of Houston have given their hearty support to the tree every year.

School of Methods at Denison, Tex., December 4-8

A school of methods will be held at Denison, Tex., Dec. 4-8, in which several Disciples leaders will have prominent part. Among these are: Mrs. Rose Goslee, of Hot Springs, Ark., a graduate of Lake Geneva Training School, who will have charge of the pedagogical courses and secondary division work. Mrs. Terry King, of Fort Worth, state C. W. B. M. secretary, will speak on missions. S. W. Hutton, Southwestern Bible School superintendent, will lead in discussions of administration, and E. F. Walters, of the Wichita, Tex., church, will consider the subject of Bible study and the work of the adult division.

The Latest Word from Alaska

Bible schools taking their home missionary offerings will be interested in the latest letter from Harry Munro. It comes from Seward under date of November 8. Mr. Munro says: "Zero weather has set in with an icy gale off the glaciers to the north. Just the right kind of weather for me. Our little building is complete just in time. We dedicate November 12. Lively interest is being shown in our plans. We have started a kindergarten with a very competent young lady who is a trained nurse in charge. I have two manual training classes and a large gymnasium class semi-weekly in the public school. We will meet the general demand for a public reading room by opening one in the new building next week. We think Alaska went dry yesterday which will help Seward as we have one saloon here for every one hundred population. Mrs. Munro leaves Seattle November 12. Soon after her arrival I will make that first trip to Hope. She will conduct the services here. I have prospects of getting the use of one of the best dog teams in this section for my itinerating work this winter. Every phase of the work is most promising." Secretary Hopkins writes that if Mrs. Munro had a safe voyage, she and the two little girls were to arrive at Seward about Nov. 22.

Study Food Values

Food provided for the family table deserves the careful thought of every housewife. Do you use thought when buying baking powder?

The quality of cake, biscuits and all quickly raised flour foods depends largely upon the kind of baking powder used.

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar derived from grapes. It is absolutely pure and has proved its excellence for making food of finest quality and wholesomeness for generations.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO.
New York

Notes of Chicago Churches

Chicago Disciple Schools in Forward Move

At a recent meeting of the superintendents' organization of the Chicago Disciples Sunday Schools, a reorganization was made. The following are the new officers Chairman, O. A. Rosboro; vice-chairman, C. F. Fowler; treasurer, A. C. Munson; secretary, O. G. Harris. An executive committee has been named of the above officers and three others, viz., P. L. Prentis, H. B. Holloway and F. G. Dillard. The executive committee is now outlining an organization plan with definite aims for the work. The suggestions of Chicago Disciples are earnestly solicited by the secretary of the new organization, O. G. Harris. Especially are suggestions desired as to a name suitable for the organization. The secretary wishes every school in Chicago to send to him reports of attendance and offerings at the school sessions. These reports should come through the superintendents. The superintendents met on last Monday evening at the Jackson cafeteria. These monthly meetings close at 8 o'clock.

The Quarterly Rally

The attendance at the Quarterly Rally of the Disciples of Christ of Chicago on last Sunday was a little light, owing to the fact that several other things were on the docket in some of the churches. The largest attendance was probably that of Jackson Boulevard, which had about twenty-five representatives at the meeting. The Russian Mission had about the same number. F. D. Butchart, the chief speaker of the afternoon, gave a strong address on the possibilities of mission work among foreigners.

* * *

The new superintendent of the Englewood school is Harry B. Holloway, who was for several years superintendent at Central Church, Peoria, Ill. Mr. Holloway began his new task at Englewood last month. Some large plans have already been made for the winter's work.

Englewood Church put on the every member canvass last Sunday. Evanston has planned a canvass for next Sunday.

What Will We Do About This?

A certain minister led church after church to strength and success in 52 years of heroic service, and then—was cast adrift.

A certain R. R. conductor served 23 years at a higher wage and at less expense, and then—was retired on a pension of $75 per month.

BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF 120 E. Market St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Kansas Church Takes on New Life

R. Sheeler Campbell and company closed a month's meeting at Sharon, Kansas, with 84 additions to the church. Frank William Lynch is the minister of this congregation and during his pastorate of seven months every department of the church has taken on new life. The Sunday school has increased 75 per cent in average attendance and the church is filled at all services. A new Endeavor society has been organized, all the adult Bible classes have been organized and an every member canvass campaign is now under way.

Champion Football Team at Eureka

The Eureka College football team is in the championship class this year. It was undefeated in the first five games which it played. Comparative scores show that Eureka College has one of the very strongest teams in the state and its victories have been no accidents, as some critics have claimed. Eureka closes its season with the Thanksgiving game on its home field, at which time it plays Christian University, of Canton, Mo.

Old Soldier Makes Gift to Church Extension

A few weeks ago one of the members of the Danville, Ind., congregation sent to the Board of Church Extension an annuity gift of one thousand dollars. The man that sent this gift is an old soldier and the thousand dollars was saved from the pension he received from the government. He felt that since this money came from the government he would like to return it to the public in a way where it would do the largest amount of good.

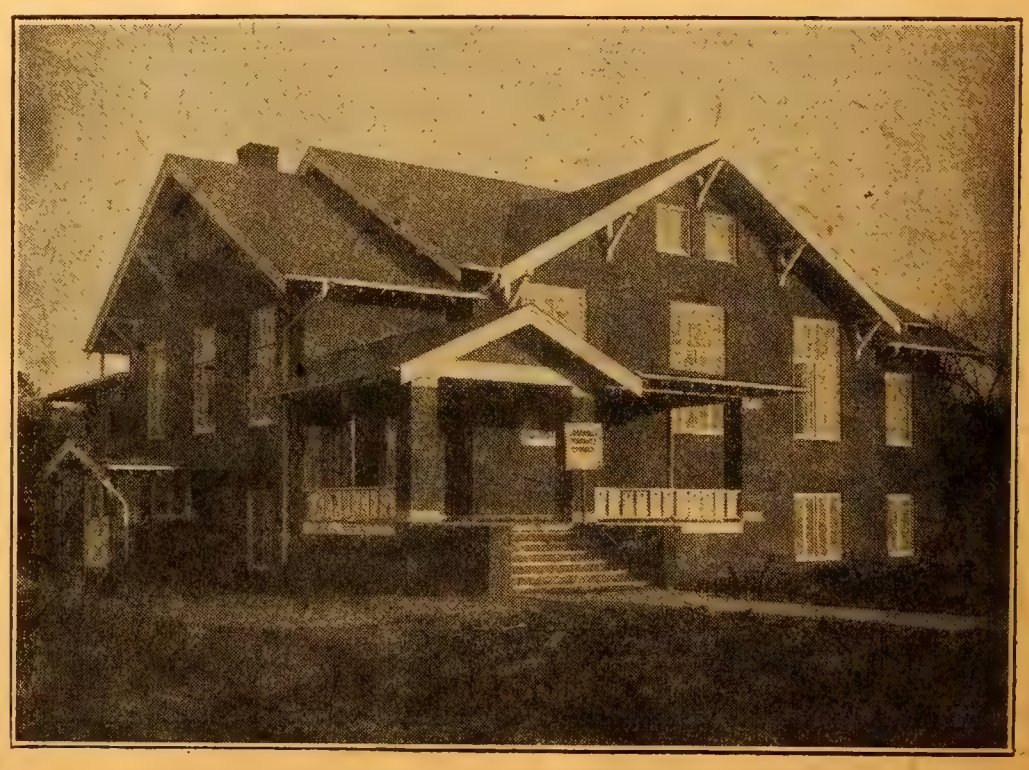
Good Service in Colorado Field

For over three years Claude J. Miller has served the church at Greeley, Colo. During these years there have been 353 accessions to the church membership. About $5,000 has been raised on the church debt, in addition to many improvements on the property that have been made and paid for. Mr. Miller has held two revival meetings for the local congregation, three for neighboring congregations. Last year brought 77 new members into the church. Best of all in the way of reports Mr. Miller counts the fact that three young women of the congregation have decided to enter the foreign mission field. More money has been raised the past year for missions and benevolences than during any other year of the church's history. Mr. Miller has served as secretary of the Western Colorado Protestant Ministers' Association and as chairman of the Northern District on the State Board of the Christian Church. The church at Windsor, Colo., fourteen miles from Greeley, has recently given Mr. Miller a call, and he will accept, although there are only one-third as many members in the Windsor congregation as at Greeley. He will be given opportunity in the new field to do some literary work upon which he has been engaged for some time.

Urbandale Federated Church Dedicates

On Sunday, Nov. 12, the novel new building of the Urbandale (Des Moines) Federated church was dedicated to its useful work. This day crowned with success the efforts of William J. Lockhart and the people of Urbandale, Ia., who have within two years made real their dream of uniting all the Christian people of the town into one church. Beginning with nothing but a vision, they now have a congregation of almost 400 members, representing fifteen denominations. The present building has been constructed in the form of a big home; and later, after a large auditorium is built in front of it, this will serve for church parlors and Sunday school rooms.

* * *



Mr. Lockhart writes that the dedication service was one of the most remarkable he has ever witnessed. A total of $8,000 had been raised at the inauguration of the movement over two years ago; then a like amount was secured a year ago. At the late service $4,000 more was asked for from practically the same people, and this amount was subscribed in about twenty-five minutes. During preliminary meetings leading up to the dedication more than seventy new members enlisted with the church. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart had charge of the music during this series. At the dedicatory service the pastor was assisted by Mr. Stewart and greetings were brought from various other pastors, among them being Charles S. Medbury.

The Urbandale church, while emphasizing the community life, does not do so at the expense of the religious life, for the church is pre-eminently evangelistic and converts are continually being made. More than one-third of the present membership are new recruits. These converts are baptized in the various churches of the city according to their choice and are then received into the Federated church.

* * *

The following denominations are represented in the federated body: Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant, Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Disciples, Baptist, United Brethren, Friends, Congregational, Lutheran, Dutch Reformed, Christian, Church of Brethren, Episcopalian and German Lutheran.

The federated idea has been so carefully guarded as to make impossible the taking over of the property by any denomination. The articles of incorporation have been carefully worked out and the church is and must ever be a federated church. "The denominational problem," said Mr. Lockhart, "is really no problem at all. We never have had the faintest suspicion of differences along this line, and we do not know a Methodist from a Presbyterian, or a Baptist from a Lutheran. Our big problem is not a denominational problem, but the problem common to every group of Christians—the problem of holding men and women true to Jesus Christ against the pull of the world of sin and the frivolities of society. The devil is the fellow we have to put up our fight against. We have no denomination differences."

The New Urbandale (Des Moines) Federated Church

Evangelism in the Country of the Mormons

The Disciples have but one church in Sale Lake City, Utah, and this field is considered a difficult one for all denominations. But a union meeting recently promoted by twenty of the Protestant churches of the city has been successful. The meetings were held in a great tabernacle. The Biederwolf party had charge. For the past twenty years no similar effort has been made in Salt Lake City. Only 3,500 members were represented in the co-operating churches. People from twenty countries and from thirty-eight states of the Union were present in the meetings.

Fort Collins, Colo., Citizens Talk at First Christian Church

A "Ten-Minute Forum" is what Lin D. Cartwright, pastor at Ft. Collins, Colo., calls his plan for ten-minute talks by the town's leading citizens, just before the Sunday evening sermons by the pastor. The following topics were discussed by leaders in the community's life: "The Child and the Library," by the City Librarian. "The Child and the School," by one of the public school principals. "The Child and the Moving Pictures," by another public school leader. "The Child and the Beet Sugar Industry," by the deputy district attorney. Other topics were "The Child and the Home," and "The Child and the Church." These talks were followed by straightforward evangelistic appeals by Mr. Cartwright.

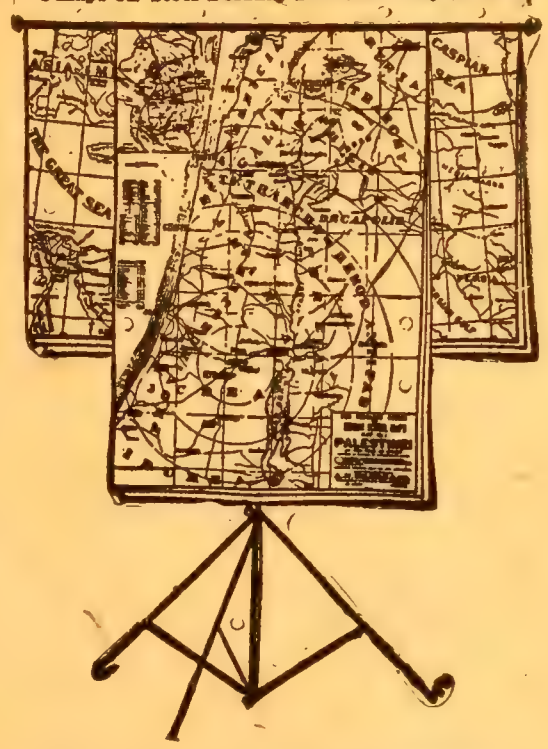
Cincinnati Has School of Methods

This week, Nov. 27-Dec. 1, is being held at Madison Avenue church, Cincinnati, O., the annual school of methods, under the joint auspices of the Greater Cincinnati Bible School Association, the Ohio Christian Society and the Kentucky Bible School Association. The following are the members of the faculty: W. E. Frazee, of the state work in Kentucky; Garry L. Cook, of the Indiana state work; W. H. McLain, of the Ohio state association; W. C. Bower, of Lexington, Ky.; and R. M. Hopkins, Lucy K. DeMoss, W. J. Clarke, Hazel A. Lewis, and E. W. Thornton, all of Cincinnati.

Church and Community Week at Central Church, New Albany, Ind.

The week of November 12 to 19 was observed at Central church, New Albany, Ind., as Church and Community Week. H. G. Connelly leads at New Albany. Sunday, November 12, was "Go to Church Sunday," with a special men's meeting in the afternoon in addition to regular services, which were all largely attended. A young people's rally was held on Monday evening, with an address by T. J. Wilson, of Park Christian church. Tuesday evening was Bible School night; all classes of the school attended in a body, and an address was given by State Secretary W. E. Frazee, of Kentucky. An old-fashioned prayer service was held on Wednesday evening, an address being given on this occasion by the pastor of the local United Brethren church. A most interesting occasion was "Church and Community Night," on Thursday evening; Dr. Powell, of Louisville, delivered a striking address as the chief feature of the evening. Social evening came on Friday night with an old folks' entertainment and an address by C. W. Cauble, of Indianapolis. Sunday, Nov. 19, was observed as Home Coming day. At the Bible school rally a special children's trained chorus added to the interest. At the "Children's church" the pastor gave a talk to the children. At 10:30 came the great home coming service, and an evangelistic and praise service at night closed the week of special community effort.

R. A. Doan Conducts Missionary Rallies in California



With December 1, R. A. Doan, of the Foreign Society, begins a series of missionary rallies in California. He is accompanied by Dr. L. F. Jaggard, of Africa, and David Rioch, of India. The following are the dates and places where rallies are to be held: Dec. 1, Stockton; Dec. 4, Oakland; Dec. 5, San Jose; Dec. 6, Santa Rosa; Dec. 7, Fresno; Dec. 8, Bakersfield; Dec. 11, Los Angeles, First church; Dec. 12, San Diego, Central church; Dec. 13, Pomona, First church; Dec. 14, Long Beach, First church; Dec. 15, Redlands, First church.

Danville, Ind., Pastor Conducts Questionnaire

Charles O. Lee, pastor at Danville, Ind., is known as a community pastor, and his church as a community church. Mr. Lee has recently sent out to a hundred representative persons of Danville a series of questions concerning religion, and upon the answers to these questions he will formulate a number of Sunday evening sermons to be delivered during the winter. Here are the leading questions put to the Danville citizens:

The Peerless Series of Sunday School Maps

6 Maps on Steel Folding Stand for only $5.50.

The special feature of this excellent set of maps, are, their clearness. The names of places in large print, feint mountains, various styles of lettering so as to be pleasing to the eye and the tone of the colors, which are both attraactive and harmonious. From the latest explorations and discoveries

This grand set of six Maps consists of the following:

New Testament Palestine — Old Testament Palestine — Roman Empire showing Pauls Travels — Bible Lands of the Old Testament — The Exodus, Egypt to Canaan — Ancient Jerusalem.

Printed on linen finish cloth in 6 colors size 19x27. Mounted on folding steel stand, can be raised, lowered or turned in any direction on the revolving frame so the largest classes can see them, being on a line with the faces of Scholars when seated. Making them the most practical Helps in Student and Class Work. When not in use can be easily folded up Price $3.50 net and for 30c extra will be sent prepaid to any Express office. Single maps of the above sent prepaid on receipt of 60 cents.

Similar to abov on a larger Scale are 5 Eilers Sunday School Maps on a very strong Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand about 6½ feet high, 36x48 to 36x57 on linen finished cloth. These Five thoroughly up to date Maps Consist of the following

New Testament Palestine,—Old Testament Palestine,—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf.—The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Isrealites. Price of any single Maps $1.00

On account of its portability, this Stand and Maps are the most helpful aids in teaching Bible History. To avoid errors in ordering specify Eilers Maps on Revolving Steel Stand Price $6.50 will be sent prepaid to anv Express office for 60 cents additional.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 E. 40th St., : Chicago, Ill.

Kent and Madsen Maps

A New Series of Historical Maps

For Sunday Schools, Bible Classes and Individual Students

Because of the combined attractiveness, accuracy, adaptability, compactness and cheapness of these maps, the series should find a place promptly in the classrooms of every progressive Sunday School.

The maps, both in detail of drawing and coloring, are superb, Size, about 17x25 inches. Not sold separately. Complete set mounted on wooden roller, to fit on music stand tripod. The low price of $5.00 includes maps, tripod, boxing and delivery charges in continental United States.

★ ★

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.

Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.

Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.

Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6 50 Net.

By Express or Freight at Purchaser's Expense.

Are you a church member? In your opinion, what is the chief business of the church? What do you consider the program of Jesus, relative to the church, to be? What sort of a man ought the minister of today to be? Are the sermons you hear today vital? What is your opinion of the way the financial side of the average church is run? What is your opinion of the church members of our own vicinity? What attitude should the church take toward amusements? How can the church become a more efficient force in its own community? The Christian Century hopes that after full returns have come in, Mr. Lee will present for its readers a resumé of information secured from the questionnaire.

Dr. Philputt Accepts Virginia Pulpit

James M. Philputt, formerly of New York and St. Louis, has accepted a call to the work at Charlottesville, Va., at least for the period of the winter months. The local papers have been enthusiastic in their praise of Dr. Philputt's sermons.

Nebraska Disciple Elected to State Senate

L. C. Oberlies, well known for his Bible school leadership in Nebraska, was elected to the state senate at the recent elections. By daily occupation Mr. Oberlies is a lumberman.

Transylvania College Aids Rural Churches

The ministerial students of Transylvania and the College of the Bible are making notable advances in rural church development. Sixty-one students from the institution are serving 106 rural churches. These young men are being trained, through a special course in the institution, to meet and solve the rural church problem. As a result many churches are being aroused to their possibilities, and are advancing from quarter time to half time work and from half time work to all time work.

Transylvania Christian Associations Promote Church Attendance

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. of Transylvania College have begun a campaign for church attendance. In this way the associations feel that they can be some real help to the churches of Lexington, and at the same time accomplish something for the college.

"Church Night" at Wellington, Kan.

The church at Wellington, Kan., where Henry W. Hunter ministers, is going to try a new plan to conserve the time of the workers in the church and its various departments. They have set apart one night of the week and call that "Church Night." On this night they propose to have all business sessions and committee meetings hold their gatherings in the various rooms of the church. The plan just now will be to have this "Church Night" on prayer meeting evening, the first fifty minutes being used for the regular prayer service and lectures on Old Testament heroes that the pastor is giving through this winter. The second period will be divided into the various business sessions. The pastor has been preaching some sermons on the necessity of parents staying at home evenings with their children in order that they may have the proper care and oversight. This plan is an outcome of those sermons. Mr. Hunter is successful in being able to attract a large number to his weekly prayer meetings. The largest crowds in the history of the church are now in evidence week after week. The studies in Old Testament heroes are attracting much attention and the manner in which the services are conducted pleases. A good many people are enlisted to perform some particular duty for each night, if it's only to see that each one that enters the room has a Bible. The attendance is the largest in the city, even though one other church has almost twice the membership. During the last month the church at Wellington has had sixteen additions. Most of these were the results of a meeting that was held at the mission church on the east side of the city, with Mr. Hunter leading the home forces.

* * *

—The Christian Courier of Dallas, Tex.—which, by the way, is coming to be one of the best papers in the brotherhood under the editorship of W. M. Williams—reports that A. H. Utterback of Ozona, Tex., often goes 85 miles to church. There is no Disciples organization at Ozona, and Mr. Utterback sometimes goes to San Angelo, where he hears C. M. Schoonover preach.

—A graduating class of eleven received certificates at the close of the University (Tex.) District School of Methods, held in Austin, Tex. Among the graduates was the pastor of the Austin Church, T. H. Mathieson. S. W. Hutton is doing fine work as the Texas state superintendent of Bible Schools.

—F. K. Hargrove, of Weston, Mo., recently closed a short meeting at Camden Point, Mo., which resulted in adding 30 persons to the church membership, 19 by confession of faith. C. A. Lowe, minister at Camden Point.

—Some new buildings will be erected for the mission at Wuhu, China. These have long been needed. Wuhu was the scene of much of the labors of the late C. E. Molland.

—The Wilkinsburg, Pa., church has just closed a short, but helpful meeting, led by W. H. Boden and wife. Including some persons coming just before the meeting, the church membership was increased by 26.

—The Foreign Christian Missionary Society has two sets of stereopticon slides on the Damoh Orphanage work that are being sent out free to the Endeavor Societies paying expressage.

—Ira L. Parvin of the Niagara Falls Church is preaching during this winter a series of evening sermons on "The Position and Plea of the Disciples of Christ." Eighteen sermons are included in the series.

—Guy W. Sarvis reports the baptism of seven men at the Drum Tower, Nanking, China. One of these is the physical director of the university. He is a fine young man. Mr. Sarvis spent the summer months in Japan with great profit and pleasure, not only to himself, but to the missionaries in the Mikado's kingdom.

—D. A. Doan will lead in a missionary rally of all the churches of the Bay District, in California, on December 4th.

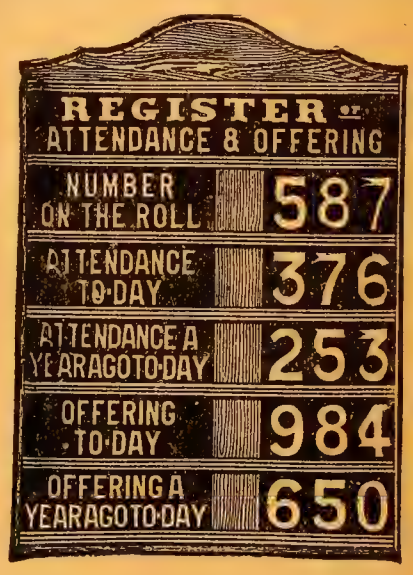
Collection Plates

WOODEN COLLECTION PLATES IMITATION BLACK WALNUT.

Imitation walnut, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, Price, $1.25 each. 12 inches in diameter, $1.50 each. Expressage extra.

OAK, HOLLOW RIM, COLLECTION PLATES.

Oak, hollow rim, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, a handsome plate. Price, $2.00 each. 12 inches in diameter, $2.50 each. Expressage extra.



QUARTERED OAK AND BLACK WALNUT HOLLOW RIM COLLECTION PLATES.

A finer grade plate, made of light, quartered oak, or solid black walnut, plush lined. The rim is hollow, giving a rich appearance. Two sizes, 10 inches in diameter, $2.50 each; expressage extra. 12 inches in diameter, $3.00 each; expressage extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 East 40th St. : Chicago

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

THE INTERNATIONAL CHRISTIAN WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS ENTERS FIVE YEAR CAMPAIGN

WORLD CONDITIONS DEMAND UNPRECEDENTED ADVANCE

Slogan and Aims:

INFORMATION, INSPIRATION, REALIZATION

"Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts"

1917-1921

Aims for 1921 — 6,000 Societies, 200,000 Women, 100,000 Missionary Tidings, $800,000 Gifts.

Aims for 1917 — 3,800 Societies, 110,000 Members, 55,000 Missionary Tidings, $450,000 Gifts.

NEW WORK TO BE UNDERTAKEN WITHIN THE FIVE YEARS

(1) The Endowment of the College of Missions, $500,000.

(2) City Mission and Settlement Work in Chicago.

(3) The Securing of 30 New Missionaries for India as physicians, nurses, zenana workers, teachers, industrial superintendents and orphanage mothers; and the Opening of a New Station.

(4) The Development of a Girls' School at Luchofu, China. Taking full co-operation in Ginling, the first College for Women in China, the Sending of 8 Women as Teachers.

(5) Building Industrial School in Jamaica. $20,000 needed. Sending of 5 New Workers.

(6) Enlargement of Work in Africa. Equipment of Stations. Adding 10 New Missionaries.

(7) The Re-occupation of Mexico. Returning Former Force with 21 Additional Workers.

(8) Increasing Force in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Extending efforts to Include Three Northern Provinces of Argentina and the Republic of Paraguay. 20 Missionaries and $50,000 asked for the Initial Work.

(9) Reinforcing the Porto Rico Stations with 6 Missionaries.

(10) The Placing of 100 New Workers in the Enterprises of the Board in the United States.

To accomplish this Work for the Church of Christ the Christian Woman's Board of Missions asks for the Fellowship in Prayers and Gifts of all Members of the Church.

The First Sunday in December is C. W. B. M. Day in the Churches.

For Information and Literature address the

CHRISTIAN WOMAN'S BOARD OF MISSIONS

College of Missions Building

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

The rally will be held at Oakland Church. The Oakland congregation, under the leadership of H. A. Van Winkle, recently entertained three other of the district's Disciple churches in a union meeting. The next union meeting will come in February, probably to be held at Alameda.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—Garry L. Cook, Indiana's state Sunday School superintendent, has arranged for a training school to be held in Brazil, Ind., for Clay county workers. Mr. Cook will be assisted in instruction by the national secretaries, by C. W. Cauble and by a Baptist pastor of Brazil. The date of the school is Dec. 11-16.

—During November H. A. Van Winkle, pastor at Oakland, Cal., preached a series of sermons on "The New Testament Church."

—George A. Campbell and First Church, Hannibal, Mo., will hold a home force meeting just after the holidays. Levi Marshall, of Nevada, Mo., recently occupied the pulpit at Hannibal.

—The Life-Line plan of the Foreign Society has recently been adopted by the following Christian Endeavor societies: Reserve, Kan.; Dowagiac, Mich.; Cedar Rapids (First), Iowa, and Liberal, Kan. Evangelists have been assigned them and they are happy in this new relationship.

—W. H. Erskine, Osaka, Japan, says that the night school there has increased in its attendance until sessions are so crowded that many of the students get discouraged and do not come regularly. The kindergartens are doing good work, but owing to the cholera scare many of the children have not yet started. The workers are encouraged over their preaching in the street market.

—Prof. W. R. Walker of Bethany College will give the C. W. B. M. Day address at Wilkinsburg, Pa., on the first Sunday of December and will preach on education at the morning service.

—Upon the recommendation of the official board of the church at Niagara Falls, N. Y., the congregation there voted an increase of $200 on the salary of the pastor, Ira L. Parvin. Mr. Parvin has served this church for three years and is held in high esteem by the people there.

—Dr. Paul Wakefield will begin his furlough in June, 1917. It will be remembered that he has been stationed at Luchowfu, China.

—The churches of Wilkinsburg, Pa., will begin a union evangelistic campaign with the Beiderwolf party on Jan. 1. The pastor of the Christian Church, W. Scott Cook, will act as chairman of the personal work committee.

—Howett Street Church, Peoria, Ill., will observe a "White Gift" Christmas this year. Churches interested in this ideal plan of making Christmas count for good should send to this office for the exercise.

—As a result of the Lockett-Adair union meetings recently held at Seymour, Tex., the Disciples church there, under the leadership of B. F. Stallings, received into its membership a large number of additions.

—Through the state missionary organization of Texas, in the last two years, nearly 4,000 persons have been added to the membership of the churches, 31 churches have been organized and many churches reorganized and aided. The state society is reported out of debt. "The best work done in thirty years by the Texas organization" is reported being done by J. B. Homes and the congregation at Galveston.

—The Haskell, Tex., church has given its pastor, W. A. Lyle, two months' vacation to regain his health.

—The Brotherhood Bible Class at Alliance, O., chartered a car and took over a carload of people to the Canton Church to attend the evangelistic services being held there.

—D. R. Dungan, of Glendale, Cal., will spend the winter in Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands. Better health is his goal. Mrs. Dungan accompanied him.

—C. C. Crawford, of Indiana, is successor to C. V. Pearce at Albia, Ia.

—C. S. Medbury preached a sermon at University Place, Des Moines, two weeks ago on "The Present Day Prophet, or The Man of the Now."

—Claude J. Miller, until recently pastor at Greeley, Colo., has accepted the work at Windsor, Colo.

—C. R. Scoville is holding a meeting at Ottumwa, Ia.

—George L. Peters of North Side Church, Omaha, Neb., writes that a good meeting led by J. A. Barnett has just been closed at this church with fifty additions to the membership. Mr. Peters speaks highly of Mr. Barnett as evangelist and man.

—W. M. Williams, editor of the Christian Courier, Dallas, Tex., with his wife, has been taking a thousand-mile auto tour over West Texas.

—Homeville Church, Pittsburgh, will dedicate a new building on Nov. 26. The Homeville Church is a child of the "mother church" at Homestead.

—C. W. B. M. Day comes the first Sunday in December. Churches all over the country are preparing to make this a red letter day.

—First Church, Lincoln, Neb., began an educational rally on last Sunday, which is to continue over until next Sunday. One evening is being given over to each of the missionary and benevolent causes. Among the speakers are Secretary Bert Wilson, Dr. Osgood of Africa and Mr. Hanna of the Philippines. An every member canvass will be promoted on next Sunday afternoon.

Baptismal Suits

We can make prompt shipments. Order Now. Finest quality and most satisfactory in every way. Order by size of boot.

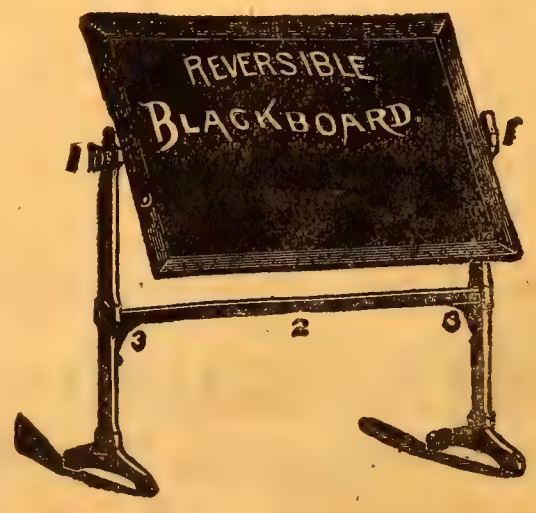
Disciples Publication Society
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

—At his request J. W. Perry of Kansas City, who has been president of the National Benevolent Association for the last seven years, was not re-elected at the Des Moines convention. W. Palmer Clarkson of St. Louis was elected as his successor. Mr. Clarkson has for years been vice-president and acting chairman of the board. He is deeply interested and thoroughly familiar with the work. No better choice could have been made.

★ ★

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES

The church at Rutland is doing things under the leadership of J. Ray Fife. Sunday, November 19th, they doubled their regular attendance at Sunday school, and had five additions to the church.



The Charleston and Mattoon churches are engaged in an exchange meeting. The meeting began in Mattoon November 5th, and at Charleston, November 26th. A special women's meeting was conducted by the women of the Charleston church on November 12th; and the men had charge of the service on November 19th.

The Christian churches of Bloomington are organizing their forces for the most effective co-operation in the coming union evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Bob Jones.

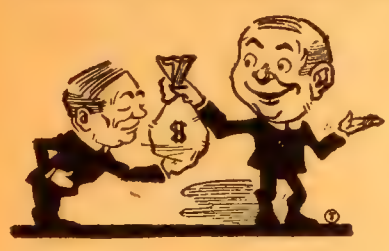
W. W. Weedon is happy in his new work at Allendale and Barney's Prairie.

The church building at Princeton is being rushed to completion. Cecil C. Carpenter and the congregation expect to hold a union campaign commencing January 14, 1917.

"Kraoplate" Blackboards and Material

REVERSIBLE STYLE "D" BLACKBOARDS

"Kraoplate" Blackboards are made of 4-ply wood pulp, cemented under a heavy pressure and are uniform in thickness, solid throughout. The surface can be easily cleaned and will not warp or crack if washed. It is the most complete and perfectly portable Blackboard made, and has an oak frame, finished both sides. Can be taken apart in a moment and conveniently transported or set aside.



PRICES:

No. 1	2½x3½ ft.	each	$ 7.50
No. 1½	3 x4 ft.	"	8.00
No. 2	3 x4½ ft.	"	8.25
No. 3	3½x5 ft.	"	9.00
No. 4	4 x6 ft.	"	10.00

FOR SALE BY

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago

THERE ARE 1000 MEN

BETTER THAN GOLD

is the good fellowship to be found in our_____Bible Class. We meet every Sunday at_____o'clock at THE_____CHURCH

_____

_____

COME AND SEE US NEXT SUNDAY

In your town who do not attend the Sunday School because they do not consider Sunday School work a MAN'S JOB.

Get Your Men

By Using Our ATTENDANCE BUILDERS

President Wilson

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HERE'S WHAT HE SAYS ABOUT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

"No study is more important than the study of the Bible and the truths which it teaches, and there is no more effective agency for such study than the Sunday School. It is certainly one of the greatest factors in our lives in the building of character and the development of moral fiber. The Sunday School lesson of to-day is the code of morals of to-morrow."

WHY NOT LINE UP WITH WOODROW WILSON AND OTHER GREAT AMERICANS IN THIS SPLENDID WORK?

Come join one of our classes, which meet at the_____church, at_____o'clock Sunday.

PHOTO COPYRIGHTED BY HARRIS & EWING

Now Is The Time!

SEND 75 CENTS FOR 100 ASSORTED CARDS AND TRY THEM.

(Or send 10 cents for set of samples of the cards.)

IF YOU WOULD BE A SUCCESS AS A BUSINESS MAN--

--there is nothing better you can do than to get to work at The King's Business.

Many of this country's greatest business men are followers of the Man of Nazareth. Come join the_____ Bible Class.

We meet at_____o'clock every Sunday.

_____

_____

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 East Fortieth Street Chicago, Ill.

The DuQuoin and Carbondale churches are in an efficiency contest. DuQuoin is in the lead at this time. Adam K. Adcock is preaching along a definite line. He is now making a study of Ephesians, having finished Romans, I and II Corinthians and Galatians. On Sunday evenings he is preaching a series of sermons on "Men and Women of the Bible."

Second Church, Danville, has thrown its strength into the union evangelistic meeting in progress there.

Sunday, November 26th, was a big day in the calendar of the church at Petersburg. Samuel E. Fisher, the pastor, urged a large attendance and each of the three services were featured. The Bible school observed the day for American missions, and at the morning and evening worship Thanksgiving was given prominence.

W. H. Fonger, of Cooksville, is conducting a mission study class on Wednesday evenings for the young people of his church and those of the Presbyterian church.

The Palestine Church, J. A. Parker, pastor, has had thirty-four additions at regular services during the past four Sunday nights.

Fred Wilson recently took charge of the work at Vermont and will conduct a meeting in January. Substantial repairs are being made on the church building, and an every member canvass was made for all expenses on November 26th.

By effective organization and without spectacular methods the Bible School of the Taylorville church is having the largest fall attendance in its history. Walter S. Rounds is especially happy over this condition.

The new building for the Howett Street Christian Church in Peoria is nearing completion. They hope to dedicate it December 24th. It is a large building containing thirty-three rooms equipped for modern social work. The members of the church are planning to give all the money they usually spend for Christmas presents to the building fund. They will continue to meet their missionary apportionment as heretofore.

Charles S. Early will begin a meeting with the Clinton Church next Sunday. They expect to hold a three weeks' meeting. James L. Scofield was here October 31st to November 5th, conducting an institute in the interest of the men and older boys of our church. His lectures helped all who heard him.

At the suggestion of B. H. Sealock the Illiopolis Church this year has inaugurated a new financial policy. They applied the every member canvass to the Sunday School children, as well as to church members. They put "collection boxes" away and put offering boxes on the wall, just inside every entrance. No offering is taken in church or Sunday School at any time, special or regular. The church pays for all supplies.

The state office can put some church or churches in touch with a first class evangelist, who would like to spend January and February in Illinois. Let us hear from you.

Three Better Community Conferences will be held this year under the direction of Dr. R. E. Hieronymus, community advisor of the University of Illinois. For Northern Illinois the conference will be held at the Art Institute, Chicago, December 5th; for Central Illinois, at Galesburg, November 21st; for Southern Illinois, at Centralia, November 27-28th. The conference at the University of Illinois last year was such a success that the matter is to be made a regular affair. All our preachers and as many of the brethren as possible should attend.

H. H. PETERS,
State Secretary.

Chairs, Tables, etc. for Sunday School Departments

Send for Our Catalog.
DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY.
700 E. 40th Street, Chicago.

"THE MEANING OF BAPTISM"

By CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, Editor of "The Christian Century"

"This is probably the most important book in English on the place of baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856"

That is what the New York Christian Advocate says of this remarkable volume

Herald of Gospel Liberty (Christian Denomination): "Mr. Morrison is leading a movement for larger liberty in matters of opinion among the people of God."

The Advance (Congregationalist): "We believe the position herein advocated is one that the Disciples will be driven ultimately to adopt."

The Christian Union Quarterly (Disciple): "The author has a brilliant style and thinks along ingenious and fascinating lines."

The Religious Telescope (United Brethren): "The significance of this work is new and remarkable. It may help the immersionists and affusionists to get together, which would be a great achievement."

Central Christian Advocate (Methodist): "A profound scholar, a deeply spiritual follower of the Master, a man among men, something of a mystic, we could well believe that if any person could show the way to Christian unity, Charles Clayton Morrison belongs to the select few."

The Presbyterian Advance: "The editor of this paper welcomes the appearance of this volume, for it enables him for the first time in his life to answer a question which has often been asked of him by correspondents and readers—'What is the best book on baptism?'"

The Christian Intelligencer (Reformed): "The argument seems logical and the spirit of the writer is certainly as gentle in statement as it is urgent in appeal."

The Continent (Presbyterian): "It required courage to publish this book. It is by a minister of the Disciples church, which has been peculiarly strenuous in behalf of the scriptural necessity of immersion, and he writes that 'the effect of our study is absolutely to break down the notion that any divine authority whatsoever stands behind the practice of immersion.'"

The Congregationalist: A daring and splendidly Christian piece of work."

The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed possible."

The Churchman (Episcopal): "An interesting summary of the topic, especially as it is related to the history of modern sectarianism."

Baptist Standard (Dallas, Tex.): "This is a very interesting work; as much so as any volume of fiction we have read this year!"

The Christian Endeavor World: "A thorough treatise from the immersion point of view, but building a bridge toward the affusionist view."

Every member of the Disciples' fellowship should own this book which is stirring the denominations. Price, $1.35 per copy, postpaid

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY - - 700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO, ILL.

TRANSYLVANIA AND THE COLLEGE OF THE BIBLE

One of the prophetic organizations in the college community is the College Ministerial Association. Twice a month in the evening this group meets for an hour of helpful discussion of the great practical problems confronting the church. The theme under discussion last week was "The Minister and His Relation to the Political Community."

A Student Volunteer Band has been organized in Transylvania and the College of the Bible. It is made up of a number of students who are volunteers for the foreign field. The organization seeks to enlist other students for the mission field and to further prepare its members for their own special task. Every other week they are meeting for a study of "Epoch Makers in Modern Missions."

The football season is developing satisfactorily. The first part of the schedule has included a number of the strongest colleges in the South, and the team has been making a fine showing this season. The last game, in which Transylvania tied Marshall College, was the most sensational game ever seen on a local field. Georgetown College, Center College, Mississippi University and Louisville University are yet on the schedule and will offer some excellent sport for the Transylvania team.

Professor C. C. Freeman made an address recently to the Y. M. C. A. and student body of Center College. Professor W. C. Bower's chapel address, in which he gave an interpretation of the Des Moines Convention, was received with a great deal of enthusiasm by students and faculty. H. W. C.

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company

MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

Grow With Us!

The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY is distinctive in that it stands for IDEALS in religious education. Our purpose is not to make money—no private individuals can make money out of the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY. The Society is not a commercial enterprise. It belongs to the churches and Sunday-schools that patronize it. It is a

Brotherhood Publication Society

It exists for no other purpose than to provide the finest quality of religious literature—newspapers, books and Sunday-school literature—that can be produced. Its motto is "NOT FOR PROFITS, BUT FOR CHARACTER BUILDING." The principle upon which its business is built is not the ordinary business principle of CATERING to its patronage, but the principle of EDUCATING its patronage toward the adoption of higher and higher ideals and standards.

Grow With Us

Every Sunday-school, therefore, that gives its patronage to this brotherhood house puts itself in the line of its own growth. The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY offers every Sunday-school an opportunity for fellowship in GROWTH!

We are a growing enterprise—steadily, healthily and substantially growing. The past year has shown a fine increase in the volume of our patronage. The tokens indicate that the new graded Sunday-school year upon which we are now entering will bring us another encouraging increase in patronage.

Grow With Us

The officers and workers in the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY take much greater satisfaction in building up a BROTHERHOOD publishing enterprise than in building up an institution for private gain out of the patronage of the churches and Sunday-schools. The Society is steadily becoming a potent and helpful agency in the religious world, not alone in supplying literature to Disciples' schools and churches, but in proclaiming the message of the Disciples to American Protestantism. There is no greater privilege before the Sunday-schools of the Disciples of Christ than to in the increasingly larger service that so surely is awaiting both them and us.

Grow With Us

Disciples Publication Society

700 East Fortieth Street :: :: CHICAGO

HIRAM COLLEGE NOTES

Our general secretary, Mr. C. O. Reynard, has been supplying pulpits recently, speaking on the theme of "Christian Educiation." On October 29 he spoke at Wabash Avenue, Akron, Ohio. He is available for such service always.

An Ohio woman, in writing her will last week, gave one-half of her modest estate to Hiram College for the endowment fund. Such gifts yield permanent income for the education of Christian young people. Many other Christian people would do well to follow the example of this good woman.

Our football team has now won its fifth consecutive victory for this season with no defeats. On October 28 Muskingum was defeated by the score of 19 to 14. This is the first time for this season that Hiram has been scored upon.

A faculty committee on Pulpit Supply has recently been appointed, with Prof. G. S. Bennett as chairman. The object of this committee is not only to help the students secure preaching appointments, but also to render a helpful service to the weak churches within reach of Hiram. Professor Bennett will be glad to visit any church at present without preaching, and whenever a student preacher is desired he will do his best to secure the best available man for the place. Write him at once.

G. S. Bennett, Hiram, Ohio.

★ ★

—After a minister has reached the age of seventy and has served in the pastorate for forty-five years, he should be justified, certainly, in dipping into his "barrel." But T. J. Clark, who is now over three-score and ten, being now pastor at Albion, Ill., has just completed the preparation of a series of new sermons on practical topics. The following are some of the subjects treated: "The Function of the Bible," "The Portions of the Bible of Universal Application," "The Distinctive Features of the Two Testaments," "The Scriptural Idea of a True Christian Life," "What Is a Spiritual Life in Contrast to a Carnal Life?"

—The minutes of the general convention held in Des Moines, Iowa, October 9 to 15, are printed and ready for distribution. The address of President W. F. Richardson on "The General Convention, Its Purpose and Promise" has by order of the convention been published in tract form. Anyone desiring copies of the same, or copies of the minutes, can secure them by writing to Graham Frank, at Liberty, Mo.

50c Postpaid

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Fits Any Pocket

For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Iron-strong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.

U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55 B—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders:

Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Here is the only book that tells the story of the Disciples movement from first-hand observation. Dr. W. T. Moore is the only man now living who could perform this task, and Dr. Moore has told his story in his

"Comprehensive History of The Disciples of Christ"

You cannot afford to let this opportunity slip to secure this book for your library at practically half price!

This is a sumptuous volume of 700 pages, beautifully printed and bound. The pictures themselves are more than worth the price of the book. Here is a real portrait gallery of the men who have made the Disciples movement, from the earliest days to the present living minute.

Here is the Extraordinary Proposition We are Making on the Few Copies of the Book Now Remaining

Send us only $2.50 and we will mail you, postpaid, a copy of the $4.00 Cloth Edition. If you wish the half morocco (originally sold at $5.00) send us $3.50. The full morocco (originally selling at $6.00) will be sent you for $4.00.

This Book Takes Its Place Among the Historical Treasures of the Disciples

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

LIVING LINK HONOR ROLL

The following are the persons and churches that gave $100 or more each to ministerial relief in the year that ended Sept. 30. Four of the individuals and fourteen of the churches came on this honor roll this year. How many will join them in 1916-17?

Individuals

Linsell, Frederick	$250.00
A Friend	100.00
Allen, Miss Cynthia A	100.00
Allen, Mrs. M. J	100.00
Bowman, E. M	100.00
Chapman, C. C	100.00
Chiles, Miss Mary J	100.00
Davis, John H	100.00
Errett, Mr. and Mrs. Russell	100.00
Rand, George F	100.00
Teachout, A. R	100.00
Warren, J. G	100.00
Waters, G. H	100.00

Churches

Columbus, Ind., Tabernacle	$503.36
Akron, O., High St., and B. S.	298.80
Indianapolis, Ind., Central, and B. S.	249.62
Cleveland, O., Euclid Ave	206.25
Kansas City, Mo., Linwood Blvd.	200.00
St. Louis, Mo., Hamilton Ave	200.00
Long Beach, Cal., First, and B. S	199.65
Pittsburgh, Pa., East End	185.00
Lexington, Ky., Central, and Worker's Class	160.00
Winchester, Ky., First, J. H. MacNeill	150.00
St. Louis, Mo., Union Ave	142.00
Des Moines, Iowa, University Pl., and B. S	125.00
Richmond, Va., Seventh St., and B. S. N	118.00
New Castle, Pa., First	113.00
Youngstown, O., Central	110.00
Cincinnati, O., Walnut Hills	108.36
Vincennes, Ind., First, and B. S.	105.82
Cincinnati, O., Central	104.20
St. Louis, Mo., Compton Heights, and B. S	103.65
Bloomington, Ill., First	100.00
Carrollton, Mo.	100.00
Chicago, Ill., Englewod	100.00
Cleveland, O., Franklin Circle	100.00
Columbia, Mo., First	100.00
Cynthiana, Ky.	100.00
Dallas, Texas, East Dallas	100.00
Des Moines, Iowa, Central	100.00
Detroit, Mich., Central	100.00
Eureka, Ill.	100.00
Frankfort, Ky.	100.00
Fulton, Mo., Central	100.00
Hannibal, Mo., First	100.00
Indianapolis, Ind., Third	100.00
Kansas City, Mo., Independence Blvd.	100.00
Lexington, Ky., Broadway	100.00
Louisville, Ky., Broadway	100.00
Louisville, Ky., First	100.00
Maryville, Mo.	100.00
Mayfield, Ky.	100.00
Muncie, Ind., Jackson St	100.00
Portland, Ore., First	100.00
Wichita, Kan., Central	100.00

BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF,
W. R. Warren, Secretary,
120 E. Market St.,
Indianapolis, Ind.

A man deeply interested in Home and Foreign Missions, whose organizing gifts and powers and whose ability as a speaker fit him for field work in America, should write to "Missionary," this office, asking for a conference.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

Do Your Friends This Favor

Would you like to do a service to your friends, at no cost to yourself? We want to send several complimentary copies of The Christian Century to four friends of yours who you think might like the same sort of religious weekly that pleases you. Give us names and addresses of the four friends to whom you would like several copies sent.

Please fill in all the blanks and mail to us today. You place yourself and your friends under absolutely no obligation by doing them and us this favor. We wish to advise your friends that the paper is being sent at your request, but your name will not be used at all if you so request. Thank you!

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

My Own Name and Address is.....

.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Chicago:

Please send a free specimen number of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY to

Full name (Mr., Mrs., Miss, Dr., Rev.).....

Address.....

Profession or Business.....

Disciples Publication Society, 700 East 40th Street CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Build Up Your Attendance--Use a Bulletin Board

A church today without a Bulletin Board to announce effectively its weekly programs cannot do its best work. The way to larger congregations is via the Bulletin Board—rightly used.

The Best Improved Changeable Letter BULLETIN BOARD

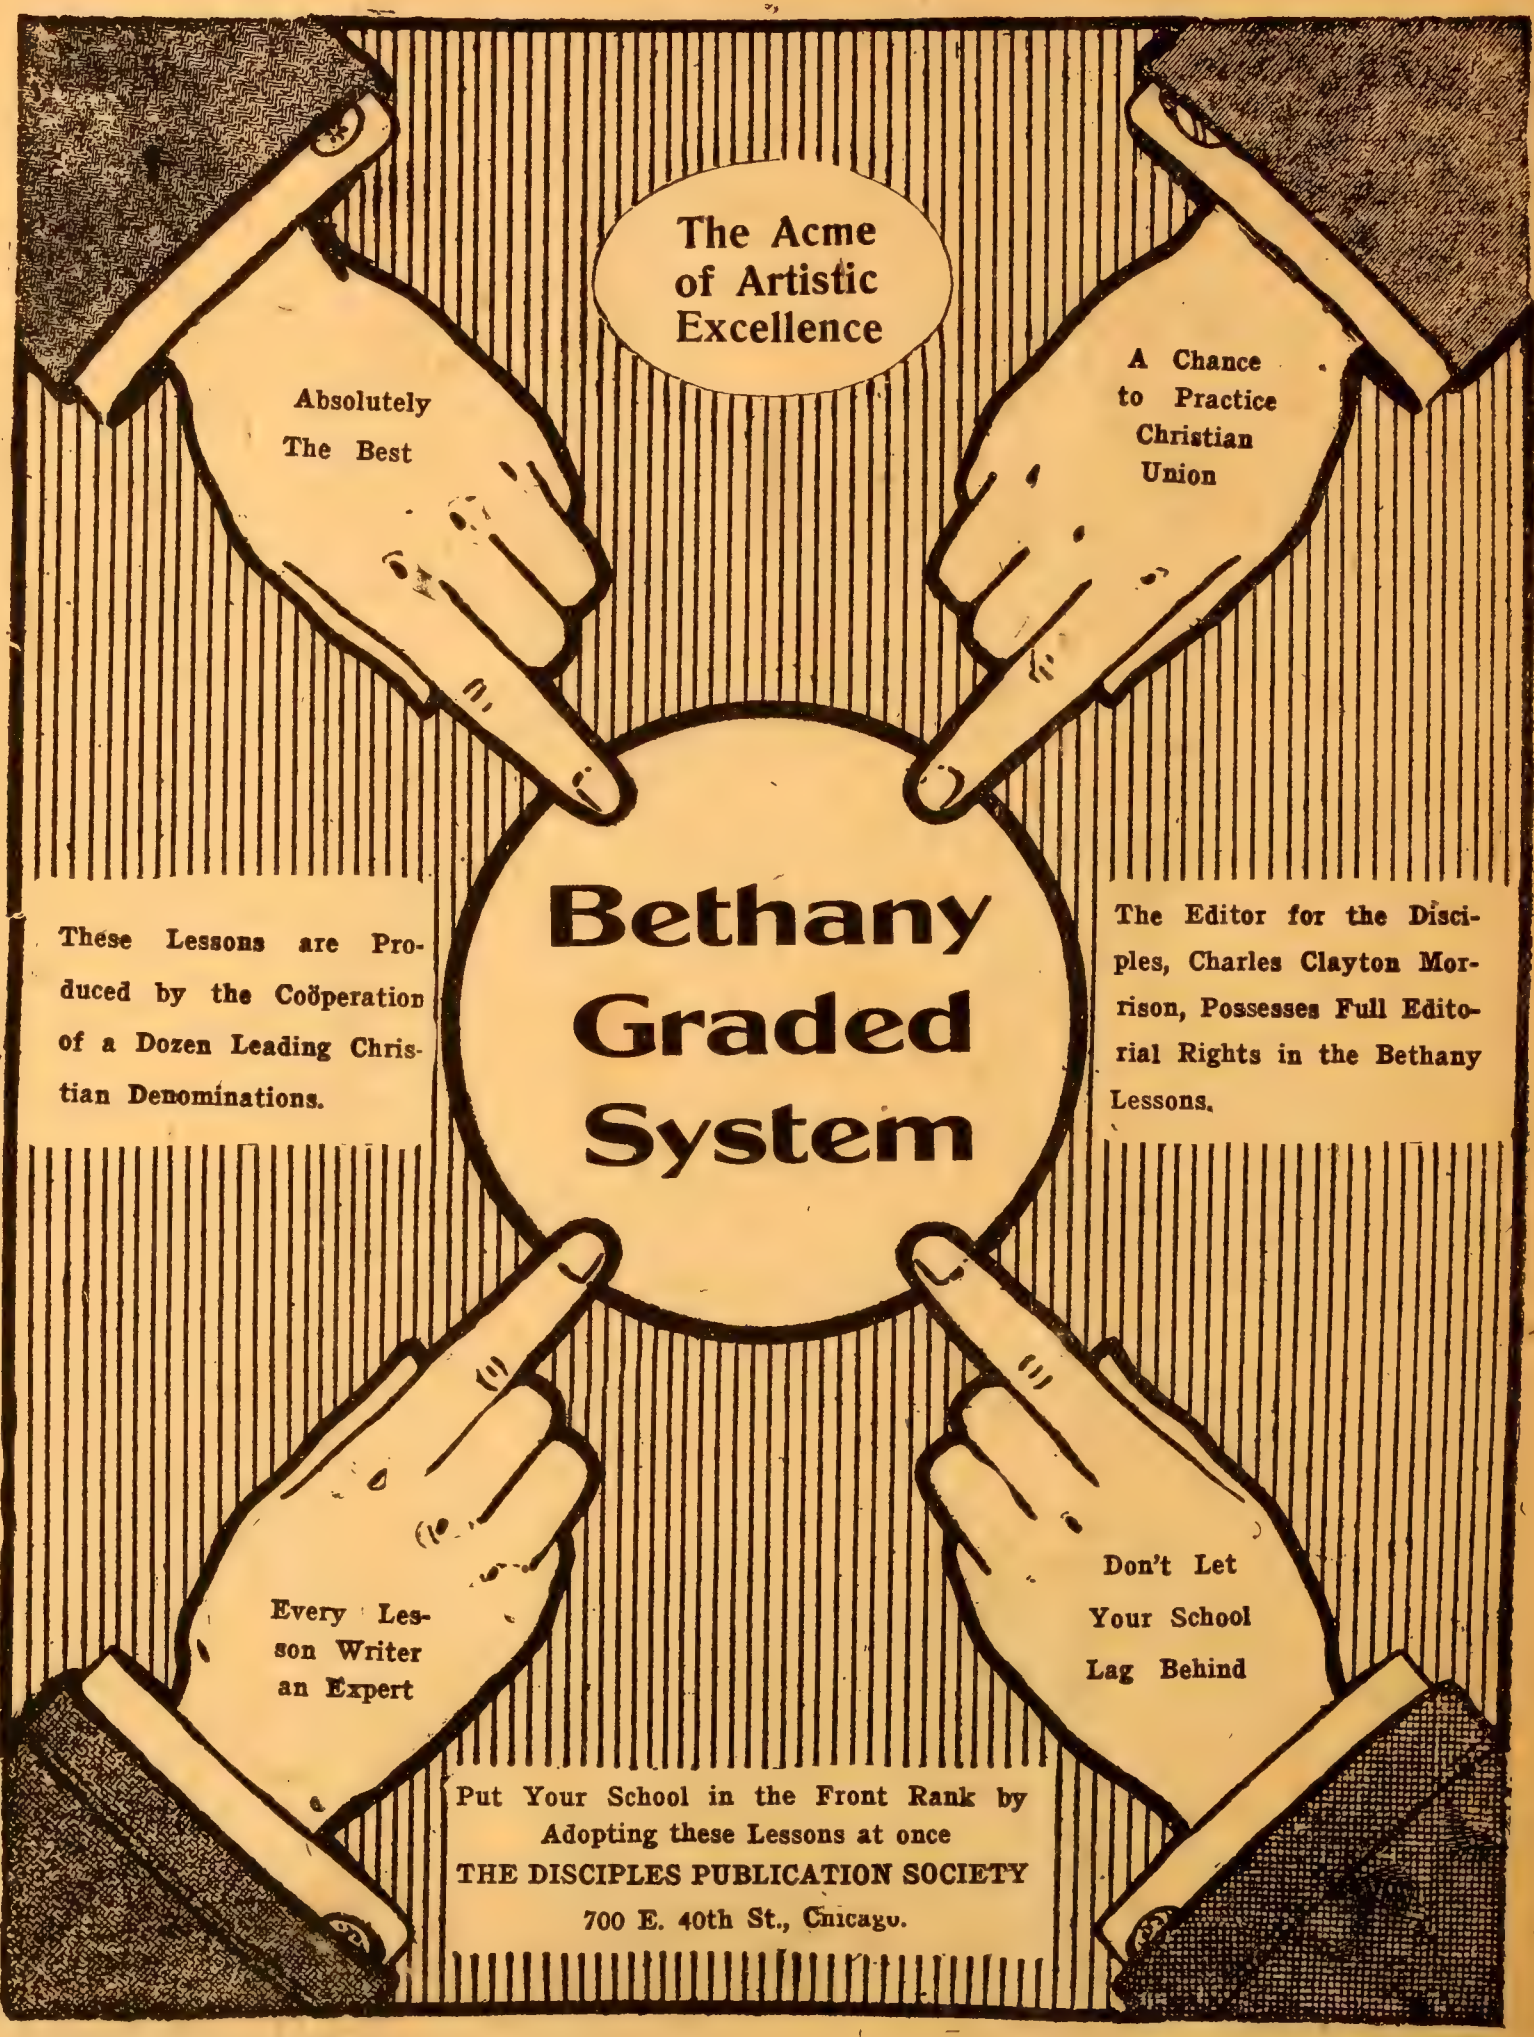
Can be Attached to Stone, Brick or Frame Wall, or hung on Posts or Set on Easel.

This Outfit furnishes the best method for Announcing All Church Services, Topics, Open Air Meetings, Special Music, etc.

This Improved Board Makes it Possible to Change in Five Minutes any Four or Five Lines by Lifting Out that Number of Unit or Type Panels and Inserting the Same Number of Extra Panels which Have Previously Been Set Up.

Is composed of a Heavy Oxidized Copper Frame, of beautiful ornamental design with metal sides and back, and a Double-strength glass cover. The frame holding the glass is hinged at the top and secured by a Padlock at the bottom, facilitating the removal of the Type-panels.

Metal Hangers for fastening the Board to either brick or stone wall are furnished. These are adjustable and easily attached where wanted. They hold the Board one inch away from the wall so that rain or snow may pass back of the board which is Entirely Water-proof.



The Outfit Complete Contains More than 860 Four-inch Cards of Letters, Figures, and Punctuations.

PRICES: DELIVERY EXTRA

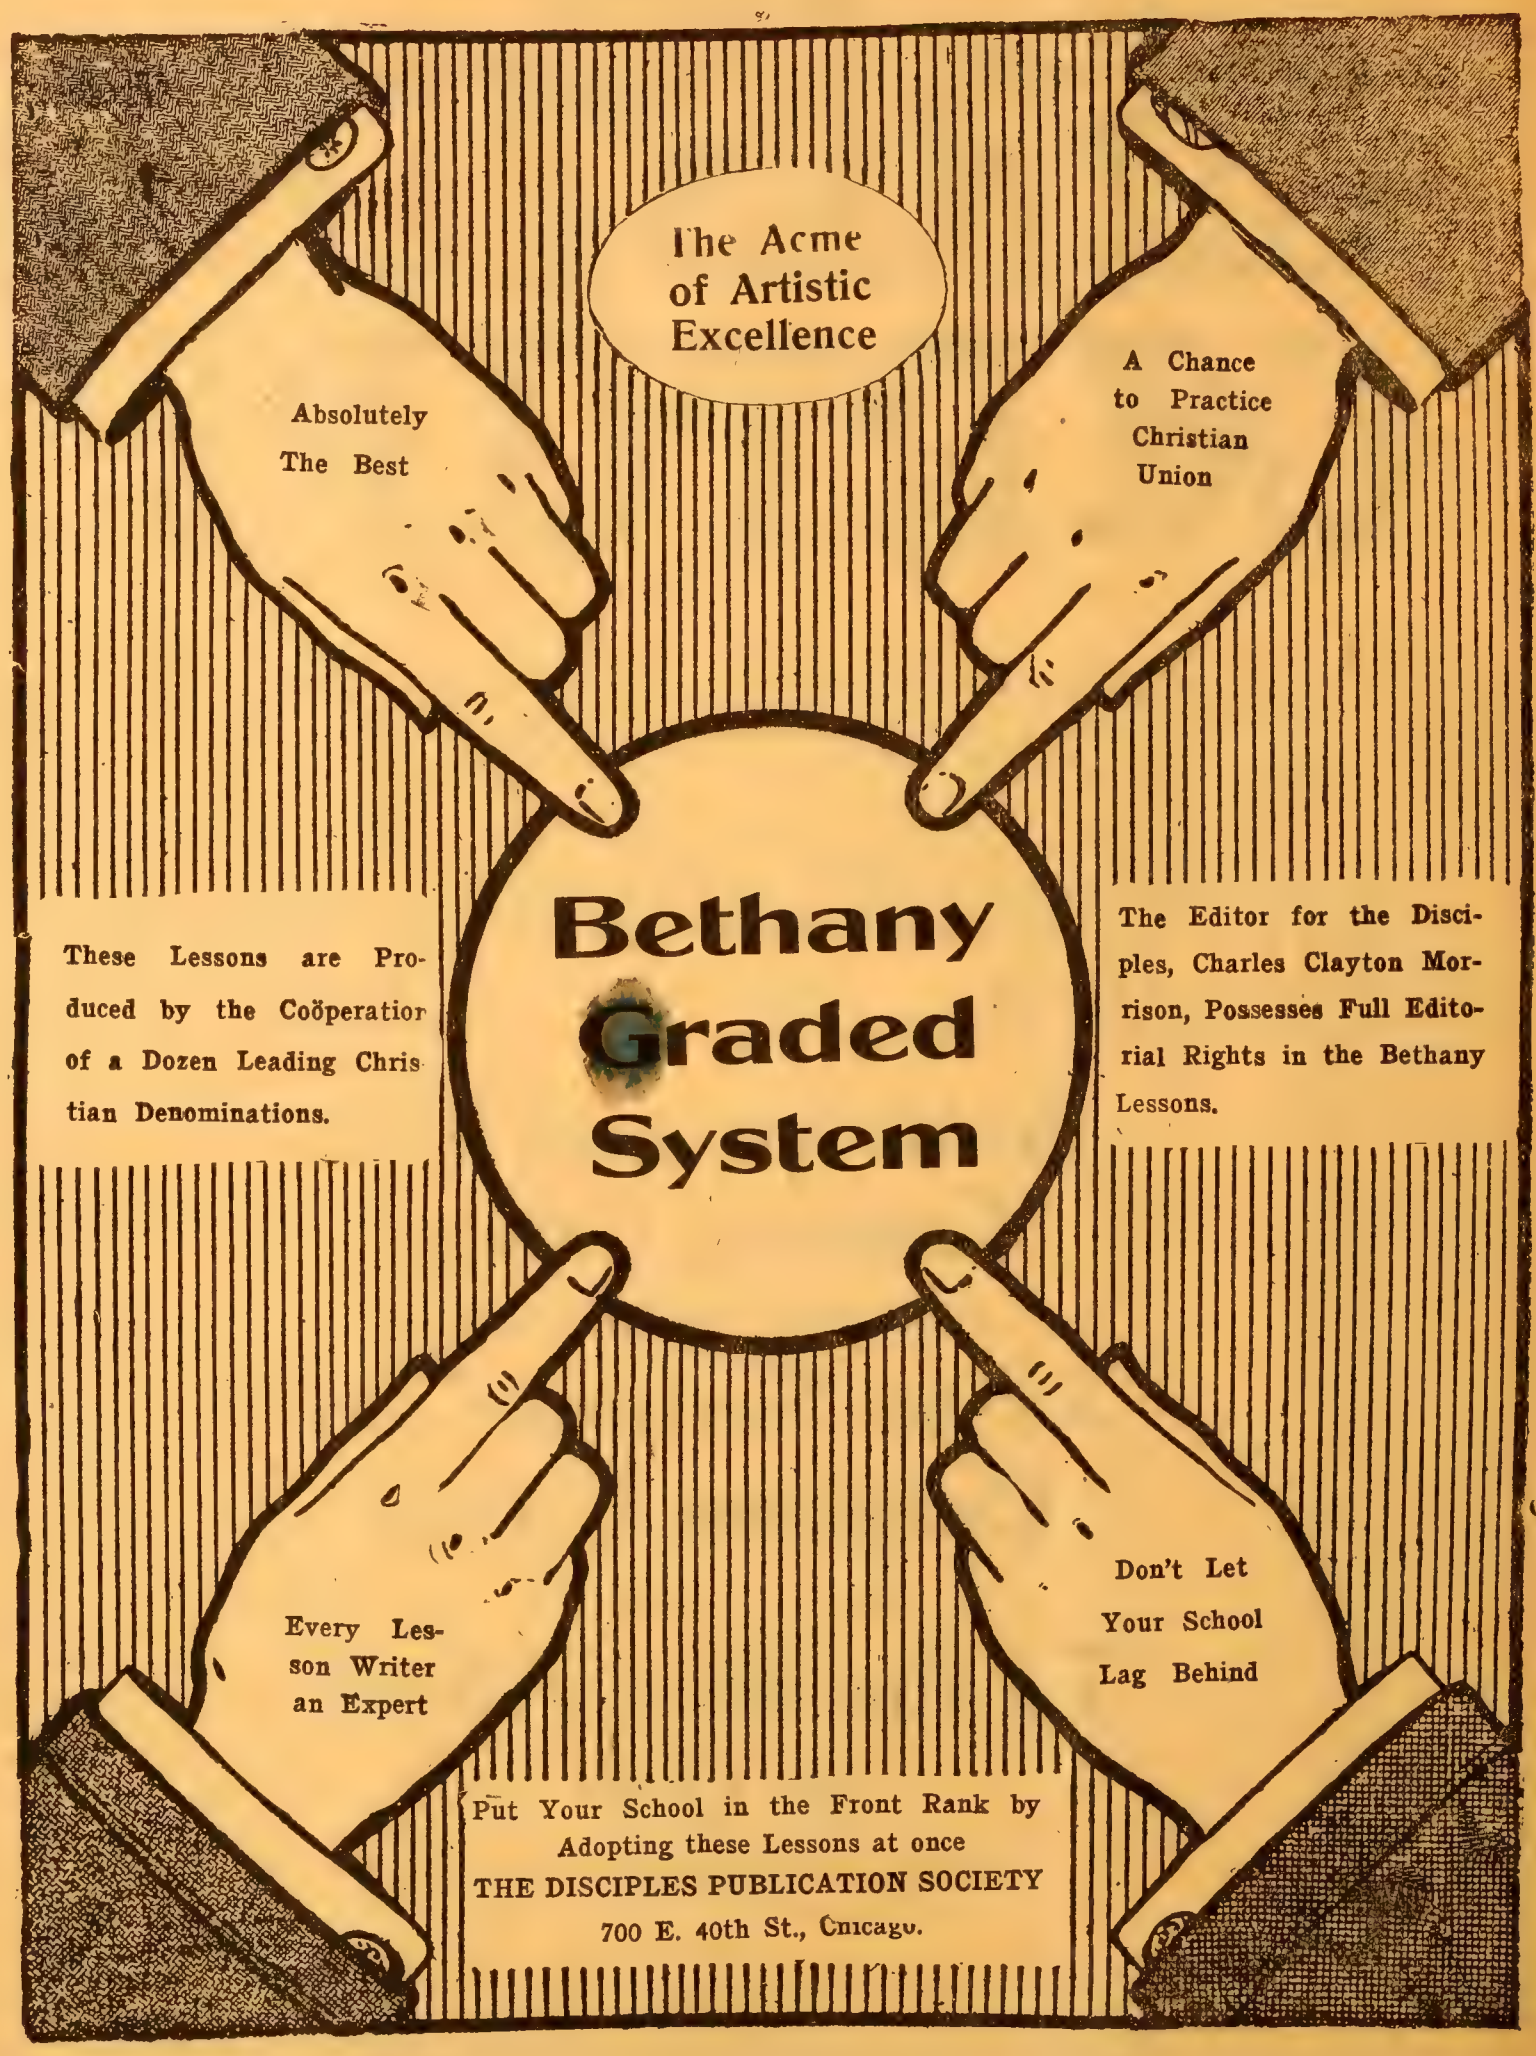
No. 21 Board; Size 41x31 in. outside, has 8 lines and 4 extra type panels, price complete $23.00
No. 22 " " 49x35 " " " 10 " " 5 " " " " " 27.00

Send for Booklet Explaining this Board More Fully

Disciples Publication Society 700 E. 40th Street Chicago

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY



Vol. XXXIII December 7, 1916 Number 49

America and the Coming Crisis
By Newell Dwight Hillis

As to Sermons on Christian Union
By E. B. Barnes

To the Man About to Quit
Editorial

CHICAGO

The Acme of Artistic Excellence
Absolutely The Best
A Chance to Practice Christian Union
Bethany Graded System
These Lessons are Produced by the Coöperation of a Dozen Leading Christian Denominations.
The Editor for the Disciples, Charles Clayton Morrison, Possesses Full Editorial Rights in the Bethany Lessons.
Every Lesson Writer an Expert
Don't Let Your School Lag Behind
Put Your School in the Front Rank by Adopting these Lessons at once
THE DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., Chicago.

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... Address.....

GOOD MORNING!

Have you secured your three new subscribers to The Christian Century yet? The best compliment we have received came the past week:

"The 'Century' is the kind of paper its present readers delight to get new subscriptions for."

Pick three thoughtful friends and go straight after their two dollars!

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII DECEMBER 7, 1916 Number 49

To the Man About to Quit

"I'M TIRED OF IT ALL!"

The business man was telling his pastor just why he had decided to resign all his offices and lead an easier church life henceforth. He remembered the busy years in which he had been a Sunday School teacher, and Men's Club president and financial leader of the church. In more than one emergency he had stepped into the breach and turned defeat into victory. And now, after it all, he wanted to quit.

There had been annoyances along the way. Some old-time leaders had looked with envy on the young upstart who had come into the church and gone to work with his coat off. His activity reflected on their sloth and they resented it. They found little ways through the years to annoy the man who wanted to work. They failed him after they had made good promises. They sometimes spoke slightingly of his dreams, especially if there was one which did not come true.

And then the church had not grown as the young business man had hoped it would. While he had seen a bank start in a humble way and leap to a foremost place in his city's life, by skillful combinations of capital and influence, the growth of the church had been very moderate. Five years of nerve-racking labor on the part of a few men had brought but a fifty per cent gain. It did not look like a profitable concern, as he reflected upon what he had seen as possibilities and as he considered how poorly the church had met its opportunities.

★ ★

"Why should I forever work like I have been doing without a salary and without even being appreciated?" inquired the business man of his pastor when the latter remonstrated with him. That is the question that the active Christian is sure to face sooner or later. "Why should I sacrifice myself for religion?"

The pastor who faced this situation realized that he was playing for the soul of a big man. This man had had no vacation in three years. Without knowing it, the business man was tired. Deliberately the man of God set to work to entice his parishioner off to a fishing trip, evading the bigger questions. Some days later, while they faced each other in a boat, after casting some hours for bass, they came back again to the question they had left unsettled in the city a few days before.

"You asked me to tell you why I thought you should not quit," said the preacher. "I am ready now." Then the preacher started in to set forth the point of view of the Man who takes up his Cross.

In the first place, civilization really rests upon the people who do things that do not pay. It does not pay a mother, in most instances, to rear a child. She misses many things that can never be made up to her. It does not pay a teacher to teach the truth. Most teachers might change their work and secure far larger remuneration. A teacher that teaches for the money is not worth it. Were everybody to quit doing the things that didn't pay, we should lose all our voluntary associations for human betterment. Civilization itself would totter at last in the great debacle that would follow. Clearly, then, everybody cannot quit doing the good things that do not pay. The church, least of all, can afford to lose her voluntary workers. She would be left with a venal priesthood mumbling a ritual, if the good church workers should all quit.

★ ★

The minister and the business man lived in a great city. They believed in its future. A club to which they both belonged had shown them conclusively that in planning for the great ideal city of the future, there must be more than banks and brokerage houses. There must be character-producing institutions that will furnish honest and noble men to lead the affairs of a great city. These men are not commonly produced outside the churches. They cannot be produced by preachers alone, but are the result of the sacrifices of Sunday School teachers and personal workers. The fair city of their dreams waits upon the work of the meeting house.

And then our religion has taught us a sense of personal obligation to Jesus Christ. "You spoke of coming right on to church just the same, even though you resigned your offices," said the preacher. And then that preacher told the young business man that it was not thus that the original disciples followed their Lord. It was not enough to listen to Him on pleasant mornings as he explained the scriptures in the synagogue worship. Following Him involved dreary marches. It meant facing contemptuous crowds of people who felt superior to these enthusiasts. Following Jesus led to a judgment hall, and to Calvary. It brought men to violent death in the long ago, but no man followed long in this Way and ever wished to turn back. These disciples before they died became men in a glorious and heroic and history-making sense.

"You have not gotten your second wind in religious work yet," declared the minister. Our first bursts of activity sometimes exhaust us. We would never be runners if we sat down by the roadside when first we gasped for breath. The Indian could run the trail all day long, for he had his second wind. In religious work we learn after a while that neither the jeers of the idle, nor the sloth of the slothful, nor the indifference of the unconverted can turn us aside from our mighty purpose for God when once we have found our second wind.

"You have no way to take your money with you, but your religious riches will pile up to all eternity," triumphantly concluded the man who had spoken for God. After all, our humble tasks about the church may be the only real work we will ever do. The man who would quit there would have the curse upon him that rested upon the man who put his hand to the plow and looked back.

EDITORIAL

A GREAT GATHERING OF EVANGELICAL CHRISTIANS

A GREAT company of Christians are gathering in St. Louis this week in connection with the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. This is the third quadrennial meeting and the first one which has ever been held in the middle west. Thirty religious denominations and eighteen millions of Christians will be represented. The purpose of the organization is to secure cooperative action on matters which are of common interest to these various bodies.

Though a small contingent among the Disciples of Christ has professed opposition to the Federal Council, and though the Disciples have not been noteworthy for the promptness with which they have paid their part of the expenses of this organization, there is nevertheless much interest among our people in the Federal Council. It is not the last word in Christian union. But it is believed by many of us that it is Christian union's next step. Under the leadership of Dean Shailer Mathews, a very conservative statement of its mission in the world has been formulated; so conservative, indeed, that the Continent, a prominent Presbyterian newspaper, has expressed grave doubts whether the organization is going to prove useful in days to come. The Disciples can wield an influence in this organization that it may not prove a counter to be thrown against the Christian union movement, but rather a half-way house toward a united church.

The various commissions of the Federal Council will hold meetings and these commissions will show just how virile the organization is. The Social Service Commission under the leadership of Charles Stelzle has been much in the public eye. The Commission on Relations with Japan is also one with an honorable record, under the leadership of Dr. Gulick. The Commission on Family Life deals with a subject of absorbing interest. The reports of these commissions will make all the sessions live with interest.

The fellowship of Christ's followers will surely draw them closer together. There should be prayers in all our churches this week for the Federal Council.

THE FREEDOM OF THE DISCIPLES

OCCASIONALLY we hear of a young man who has finished a course of study in a high grade Eastern university and then straightway has sought a pulpit in some other communion. Misled by the theological controversy among the Disciples, he has sought "more freedom." At this the fathers must turn uneasily in their graves, for they were supposed to be "long" on freedom. Each of them in his own way had broken with authority and the motto, "In matters of opinion, liberty," was very dear to them.

What these young men need to learn is that a man has just as much freedom in this world as he will claim. That was the kind of freedom Alexander Campbell had. It was a freedom that he achieved. It was a better freedom than a kind he might not have worked for.

We think we could imagine our young Disciple student leaving the university and going to preach in some communion where he would not be disturbed. There are denominations so dead, and in which men are so little interested in each other, that there is freedom of a certain kind. But it is a sort of freedom which leads to stagnation and death.

To this same young man we point to all the strong free men of the Disciples. Among us there are intense convictions. This is a sign of our religious vitality. Where men are deeply in earnest they will differ strenuously. The free men of the Disciples of Christ are men who prize their freedom for what it will do in leading a million people, and more, nearer the truth we all seek.

The young man, hungry for freedom, needs to learn that even freedom has its limitations in the social good. Paul was a man who claimed an astonishing freedom. After he had ripened, he said, "All things are lawful, but not all things are expedient."

SEEKING OR AVOIDING THE TRUTH

SEEKERS after larger truth often become impatient with those who are content to hold fast to the truth that has almost become obsolete. There is a type of mind that loves to dwell in the days that are gone. Such a mind crowns those days with a halo that is never allowed to become dim. The brightness becomes brighter with the years.

There is another class, perhaps the largest of all classes. They sit in the pews week after week. They would not know themselves as seekers after truth. Yet they would do mankind a great service if they would only let the truth seek them. The whole story is summed up in the proverb, "If the shoe fits, wear it."

But when the shoe fits we don't want to wear it. We seem to be content in the world of truth to pass to others the shoes that exactly fit us, though they fit no one else. We will wear the shoes of anyone, no matter how much too large or too small. They are comfortable if it is understood that they are not for us.

Consequently, the world is sore with corns and bunions as a result of our not having enough courage to wear our own shoes, or to accept the truth that is meant for us and for us only. We say the Bible is inspired because it finds us. In as true a sense whatever finds us will inspire, and what is more inspiring to devout souls than the knowledge that the truth possesses them? So while thousands are not in a position to seek for truth, the truth is in a position to seek them—if they do not hide or dodge.

WHAT WE BELIEVE ABOUT JESUS

BELIEVING in Jesus is not a difficult matter. Almost everybody that knows about Him believes in Him in one way or another. We find socialists and anarchists, pacifists and their opponents, labor unionists and capitalists, each believing in his own fashion. The character of Jesus is so rich and composite that each man goes to Jesus and finds there the mirror of his better self.

But does it matter nothing what we believe about Jesus? Are we to let the matter rest there and say that faith in Jesus is enough? Certainly the definitions we attach to men make all the difference in the world in our relations to them. Our dentist may have a medical training and be licensed to practice medicine, but in case of an accident we rush by his office to hunt up a man who hangs out a different sign than that of dentist. So long as we define him only as dentist, he has only a certain range of helpfulness to us.

In Jesus' day some men defined him as prophet. They got from him a prophet's reward. Some saw in him John the Baptist risen from the dead. This produced terror in the soul of a guilty king. Some saw in Jesus a Messiah of the Zealot order. They wanted to take him by force and make him king. A few saw in Jesus the transcendental Messiah. These looked upon Jesus as their Saviour.

In our own day, also, it makes a difference what definition we attach to Jesus Christ. If we look on Him as a revolutionist, as does Bouck White, we get inspiration for social change. If we see Jesus through the eyes of a Tolstoi, we are made into pacifists.

The New Testament insists that Jesus is to be defined as Christ and as Son of God. As Christ He is in the kingly line nobler than was David, and revealing the royal possibilities of all manhood. As the Son of God, He reveals God. More than this, he takes on all the religious values of God Himself, so that many Christians have been able to confess that Jesus was and is God. The higher view of Jesus Christ has prevailed, throughout the ages, over the lower ones, for it has proved itself in religious experience.

PROCRUSTES AND THEOLOGY

PROCRUSTES was the gentleman, a highwayman by profession, who had a bed for travelers. A man who was too long was cut off to fit. The short men were stretched until they also would fit the bed. It is thus that many people have operated in the field of theological opinion.

The creed has been drawn up and once it has come into definite formulation, it is then used in two ways. It condemns men who believe too much and also the men who believe too little. Thus it has been possible to burn men for the sake of Jesus Christ, though few of us can doubt the attitude our Lord would take toward such misplaced zeal.

Though the Disciples have protested against creeds, they themselves stand in some jeopardy of just this process. The history of creed-making is that it usually begins with some kind of settlement of a problem of biblical interpretation. The interpretation begins to take on all the authority once possessed by the Scriptures themselves.

In the Greek legend, Theseus put an end to the activities of Procrustes. Theological gentlemen of like mind in all denominations are on the way to be put out of employment.

THE RELIGIOUS QUESTION IN MEXICO

THE Mexican question is no nearer solution than it was four years ago. It is complex, as the problem of a whole nation is bound to be. It becomes clearer to all observers, however, that the religious question in Mexico is one of the leading points of divergence between the various parties.

Just previous to our civil war, the church party in Mexico had been stripped of its power. The laws that were put into effect with regard to the church were the most stringent in the world. The church could own no real estate. The church buildings were owned by the government and given free to the church for its ordinary use. Convents were forbidden. It is said that a priest might not wear a professional garb on the streets. These laws came into being after the church had become the leading land owner of Mexico and possessed of enormous power.

Ninety-nine per cent of the Mexicans are nominally Catholics. It is not a question just now of their quitting the Catholic church. It is a question of temporal power for the church. The church still mixes in the political affairs of the land and as a result there are pro-Catholic and anti-Catholic candidates for the position of chief magistrate in the country. Madero and Carranza have been known as anti-clerical leaders.

The late Dr. Charles A. Briggs of the Union Theological Seminary held that Protestants might hope to be re-united with the Roman Catholic church if the latter would only give up its pretensions to political power. Perhaps Dr. Briggs was over-sanguine in that hope, but there is little hope of seeing his theory tried. The powers that control the Roman Catholic church seem determined to continue the anti-spiritual course of claiming for the church two swords, a temporal and a spiritual. There was once a time when the church had to save Europe from anarchy by the exercise of the temporal power. Now the church becomes the occasion of anarchy in a great nation because of its persistent intrigue in matters which are of no direct concern to the church.

DEGRADING A GREAT LITERATURE

THE interpretation of apocalyptic literature on the part of religious faddists continues without diminution. The great war furnishes new footing for this kind of thing. The books of Daniel and Revelation have been made conjurers' hats out of which may be drawn whatever a biblical magician may wish.

The Disciples faced this kind of interest in the long ago and were saved from its worst extravagances. A man by the name of Thomas began preaching an extravagant millennialism and finally withdrew from the movement and formed what he called the "Ecclesia." Although Alexander Campbell called his paper "The Millennial Harbinger," he had too much good sense to allow his paper to become a medium for foolish prognostication based upon speculation upon holy scripture.

The books of Daniel and Revelation meanwhile miss their right influence upon the minds of Christian people. Because Christians today cannot accept the kind of interpretation that is current, the books are set to one side. Each of these books was born out of a heroic age in the world's life.

Daniel was probably written in the period of the Maccabean persecutions. It was a time when the very priests of the altar were apostatising to the Hellenizing influences that had swept over the world. The book circulated among the faithful to revive their drooping spirits. It bore witness to the faith of the faithful that the empire which was persecuting the true religion would soon come to an end.

The book of Revelations also was born out of a time of great trouble for the early church. The Roman emperor and the Roman empire were attacked in figures of speech which were intelligible only to the faithful. It cannot be doubted that the book served to strengthen the church against its enemies.

There is an unquenchable optimism in the apocalyptic books. The authors believe in the victory of God and this victory is always represented as coming very quickly.

WHAT A CHRISTIAN EMPLOYER SHOULD DO

IT IS stated on good authority that this country made more money last year than all of Europe did in 1913. We are growing wealthy at a rate that is astonishing to us all. Yet it is apparent that this wealth is but poorly distributed. While the poor people suffer less now from unemployment than formerly, the high cost of living leaves but little margin for the majority of the population to live upon. Judged by standards of living, it has been astonishingly true that the rich have grown richer and the poor, poorer. Sooner or later this will be realized, and there will be a wave of social discontent spreading over the country.

A Christian employer of labor at this time has a great opportunity to make the increased wealth of the country a blessing to the people instead of a curse. By increase of wages, he is able to bring to his men a share of the prosperity which has come to this nation. Several splendid results would come from a voluntary decision of this sort among the employers of labor the country over.

In the first place, the effect of advancing wages voluntarily would be very different from advancing them on the threat of strike. The increase of wage would be a bond between employer and employe which would tie them up together. An increase won by a strike has an opposite effect.

An increase given the working people just now furnishes them with their own opportunities of improvement. It is always better to give people what they earn in the form of wages than as charity. Even educational charity in libraries is less valuable than affording people the money with which to buy their own books.

The Christian employer who shows that he has fellow-feeling can do a great deal in commending religion to the working people. If people become convinced that religion is a motive powerful in fostering the sense of justice in social relations, they will have respect for such religion.

A POET OF THE PEOPLE

THE mother of poetry was religion. In the early days of the race, the religious legend must be told in beautiful language. It was not seeming that the sacred things of the cultus should be transmitted in ordinary speech. So we find the poems of Homer and Hesiod setting forth the religious traditions of Greece. The earliest literary remains of Israel's life are poems which celebrate the victory of Jehovah over the enemies of Israel.

Though a poet may not always work consciously in co-operation with religion, he is still one of religion's strong allies. He finds the beautiful and the true in the commonplaces of life. When he has expressed our deeper emotions in the language of taste and beauty, we all find it easier to live on amid the conditions of our daily toil, the charm of which we had never realized before.

The recent death of James Whitcomb Riley removes one of America's foremost poets. He was trained where the true poet must always be educated, in the homes of the people. Itinerant sign painter, chance writer of verse, he came to know Indiana life better than most men. And where is there a state so typically American as Indiana? Here is the smallest proportion of immigrant population, and the native American stock has developed into its best in Indiana. It is no accident that the Hoosier state has in recent years come to be the home of many of the leading writers of the country.

Thousands of rugged Hoosiers go into the fields at this season, repeating the lines, "The frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock." The old farm place which had grown commonplace with the years is invested with a new beauty as the poet shows us the color of its landscape.

It is as an interpreter of the child mind that Riley is strong. Happy is the man who never loses the divine heritage of childhood. Riley was such a man. He will speak for a long time to come and bring smiles and tears to the faces of children yet unborn.

Poets and preachers help men to idealize life. Riley spoke continually for the good, the true and beautiful.

A MAN AT THE MISSIONARY MEETING

A MERE man once wandered into a woman's missionary meeting. We do not remember just how he came to be there. He may have called to take his wife home in the car and found that the meeting had begun late and was closing late. Anyway, he was there.

As he looked around the room he noticed that the women who were there were the steady and consecrated women of the parish. The attendance was not large. It never was in that church. But nothing around this church seemed to move forward with such certain step as did this missionary meeting.

The visitor was invited to sit down and enjoy the meeting while he waited. The program continued. One woman read a rather lengthy extract from the journal of the organization, to which all the members were supposed to subscribe. When this was finished, there was a lengthy discussion of how the society would raise seventy-five dollars for the "Anniversary Fund." To the positive remembrance of the visitor, this was the sixteenth special fund in twelve years that had to be promoted in that missionary society. The money sometimes came hard, for there were so many ways that one had to give in connection with that missionary society.

And then the mere man was asked at the close of the meeting to make a speech. He showed all the obtuseness of his sex by undertaking to improve a woman's meeting. "This progam isn't as big as you women are. I see before me college-trained women, but you haven't talked about anything the size of a college person's mind. Why don't you learn something about missions outside the work of your society? Why don't you get acquainted with the wonderful new books on missions?" So he went on with that speech. The women listened patiently, for patience is a virtue of their sex. They even applauded.

Of course that mere man hasn't promoted a big missionary meeting of men even to this day. He hasn't shown that he could really improve on the methods of that missionary society. But honestly, wasn't there something in his suggestions?

America's Coming Crisis

And the Physical and Moral Preparedness Made Necessary Thereby

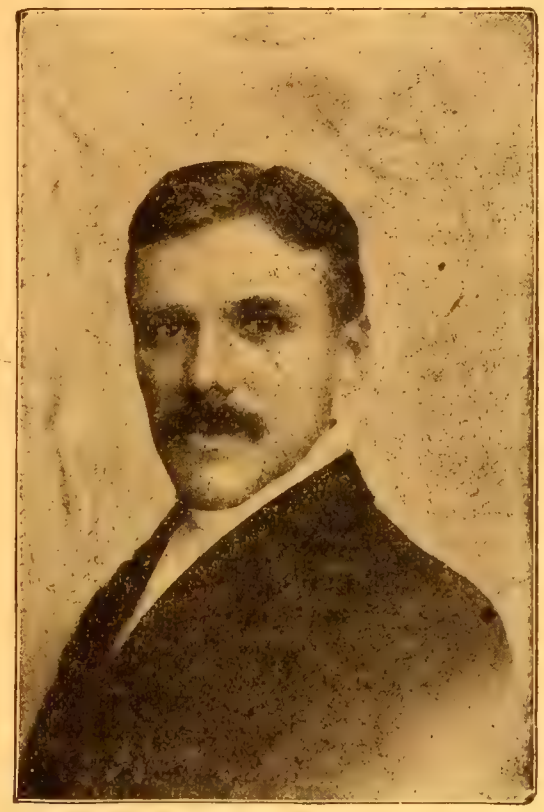
BY NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS

WHEN a merchant ship is starting on a long voyage into dangerous seas and under an unfriendly sky, it needs a well-proved chart quite as much as a prudent captain.

For the American Ship of State, it seems a matter of grievous misfortune, that we are now sailing into an unknown sea, and that the ship's officers must make their own chart, discover for themselves the hidden rocks, and at great peril find a safe channel for succeeding pilots. That our country is now approaching a great crisis, no serious man doubts. Our President and both our ex-Presidents, our jurists and statesmen, our bankers, generals and admirals have all manifested an anxiety for the future that is calculated to stir the note of alarm in us all.

INTERNATIONAL LANDMARKS GONE

The simple fact is that the great war has destroyed all the landmarks of international life. Gone the old treaties, the old State conventions, the old agreements as to methods of warfare, and no one knows what the new conditions may compel.



The Chicago fire burned up the houses, factories and banks, but it also destroyed the title deeds so that no man knew where his property stopped and his neighbor's began. The end of that was confusion and endless litigation. The disputes that were involved are prophetic of the coming troubles growing out of the destruction of old frontiers, old laws and old traditions for the nations of the earth.

UNEXPECTED EMERGENCIES

No statesman of 1910 could possibly have foreseen the new methods of warfare. The Hague Convention contains rules for battles on land, but suddenly the contest was transferred to the air, and there were no agreements as to Zeppelins and aeroplanes. International law prescribed certain principles concerning battles between ships, but suddenly the contest goes down under the sea, and there are no conventions as to submarines and sea wasps.

Wireless telegraphy, also, has made each aerial car and U-boat a wireless telegraph station.

In Washington's day our people were safeguarded by 3,000 miles of ocean, but when a submarine silently rose out of the Gulf Stream and sank six merchant ships, the ocean was narrowed to a river, and Europe ceased to be a foreign country. The very thought of a sea-wasp quietly rising out of the depths of the ocean, at the foot of Broadway, and dropping two or three bombs in Wall street, has had all the effect of a blow with a hickory stick on the forehead of Rip Van Winkle, waking him out of his slumber to the realities of a new world.

Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis

AMERICA'S UNPREPAREDNESS FRIGHTFUL

We all know that the navy of England alone has safeguarded London from invasion. We realize also that the French army, under her northern forts, kept France in peace through forty years. The discovery of our unpreparedness in the event of attack by some country with a vast standing army and strong navy has startled many an American. The other day one man with a pistol held up an entire train of Pullman palace sleeping cars, and carried away the treasure of a hundred unprepared people. When the burglar arrives the frightened rich man is amazed that there was no lock on his door and no watchman in his house.

WHAT THE FUTURE HOLDS

More than one hundred years have passed since this country was involved in a war with Europe. This fact seems to justify the confidence of the people in the protective power of the Atlantic and the Pacific, as fortresses against invasion, beyond all forts or mountain barriers, like the mountains between France and Spain. But does it follow that what has been must always be? The Zeppelin, the submarine, the electric battleships, have made all things new.

The discussions that have gone on in foreign newspapers do not make pleasant reading. One of our admirals, returning from Tokio, speaks of an article that points out the ease with which our capitals could be attacked. "England had the foresight to put London fifty miles up the Thames; France kept her Paris far away from the sea, as Germany did her Berlin and Italy Rome. But the richest of the nations built New York on the edge of the sea, and San Francisco is an apple that a child's hand could pluck from the bough. Moreover, one submarine could plant a few mines at the entrance of the Golden Gate at San Francisco, and another mine at the entrance of New York Harbor, while another ship, scuttled in the Panama Canal, would separate the two ports and their little navy."

DISQUIETING WORDS

Within a month, also, a foreign financier whose country is now quite friendly toward us, ended his analysis of the debt of the nations of Europe with the statement that another year of war would reduce the wealth of the five great nations of Europe by one-third, and witness the increase of the wealth of the United States into $200,000,000,000, leaving her also the trade of the world. This banker, therefore, was moved to ask this question, "Since we have fought the battles of the United States as well as our own, why should she go scot free, and the crippled peoples of Europe pay tribute to a young giant, who has fed upon our misfortune?"

These two statements derive their importance from the fact that they are one of many similar incidents telling us that there is a rising tide of jealousy. One of the best informed Americans now living said the other day with the utmost seriousness that with perhaps "one exception, every great and small nation in the world would like to see the republic humbled." We have 3,000 miles of frontier on the north but not a fort or soldier. We have 1,500 miles of frontier upon the Rio Grande, a river that in dry weather can be forded. We have a coast line essentially unguarded in the United States, Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines.

LOFTY IDEALS GOOD

All thoughtful men are striving toward the Federation of Mankind, a League of Nations, a little international navy, policing the seas, a little international army, policing the land, and a great International Supreme Court, deciding on disputes between nations and voicing a decision that is backed up by international forces. But until that golden day comes, it is folly to talk of pacifism, so long as any nation is drunk with militarism and forges thunderbolts for purposes of attack. In an era of fires and burglaries, a man's money may not be any safer in a vault than it is in his trunk—but the citizen sleeps better at night.

A MIDDLE GROUND

Just now our leaders are divided into two classes—pacifists and militarists. Men of the highest character and patriotism are found on each side of the controversy. One group urges the economic wastes of war, the reflex influence of war upon the blood of the people, the crimes of war, and from the viewpoint of non-resistance, makes out a strong case against the military program under which our Government will next year spend more money in preparation for war than did Germany and France together during the year 1913 on their standing armies and their battleships.

Over against the anti-militarists stand some who are out and out advocates of the present military program. On grounds of prudence, they hold that preparation for war is the best possible safeguard for peace. They do not hold with Bernhardi that war is the natural state of man, that the sin of military feebleness is the political sin against the Holy Ghost; that war is as wholesome as the lightning storm, or that the torch of war is the true guide of progress.

CAVEMAN PHILOSOPHY

Bernhardi's view seems to the American to be the philosophy of the caveman, the method of the nature man who takes anything that he wants, believing that he has the right to kill the possessor, and grab it for himself. It is the philosophy of King Ahab, coveting Naboth's rich vineyard, killing the peasant, and annexing the field, exalted into a national cult. So long, therefore, as certain peoples hold these views, and work their munition factories day and night, and not only believe and teach, but do these things, it seems sheer folly not to prepare for the day when nations that are forging weapons of attack, and believe it is their duty to use these weapons, may strike.

These and similar considerations make it the duty of every citizen, patriot and parent, to think his way through these problems, and have a working philosophy that he can teach to his own children, his clerks, and the youth that look toward him.

GERMANY'S DRILL OF HER YOUTH

In the revulsion from militarism some Americans have failed to consider the influence of Germany's military drill upon her people. We must all confess that had Germany, like Switzerland, kept her drill, but held back from war, her military training would have wrought great good.

The method adopted by Von Moltke made Germany first of all an army, and then set these efficient soldiers to work turning the whole country into a factory and a harvest field. Taking the boys when they were young out of the farm and the shop and the home, the German officer teaches them how to carry the body, builds each muscle in arm and leg, holds the head up, throws the shoulders back, teaches them the laws of food and exercise, sleep and rest, how to ride, walk and swim; how to dig and shoot, and shortly transforms the peasant from a field into a citizen of a great state.

BODY BUILDING

Viewed as a method of body building, Germany's military drill has never been surpassed. That two years spent in this physical drill makes the man a better producer, in factory and field, for the rest of his life, thus fully compensating the State for the loss of two years at the beginning of the boy's career. Not less striking, the gain incident to the fact that the German youth henceforth knows how to do team work. Months in the camp have taught him how to keep step not only with his legs, but also with his intellect and will. A third benefit is incident to his training in instant obedience, so that he can march as a member of a regiment, and not as a mob, thus unifying the forces of the nation.

Professor Barker of London University tells us, in his "Modern Germany," that Germany leads England in the production of pig iron, steel, chemicals, electrical devices and the average harvest from her fields. He traces this efficiency in the production of wealth to the physical and mental efficiency incident to the body building and the training in obedience and patriotism of the German army, as a school of technology. As Americans, we abhor militarism and autocracy, but it is evident that a middle ground must be found between the extreme pacifist on the one hand and Bernhardi on the other.

To Americans the whole subject is new, the territory unexplored, and the work that of the pioneer, and yet a plan can easily be worked out that fits the American temperament and our needs, as the glove fits the hand. Take the typical small town of 5,000 people, with 20,000 in the county, whether of New York, Massachusetts or Illinois. Suppose that county condemns for public use a square mile of land that includes a good stream and some forest land, just as the old Athenians sought abundant water and shade for the training grounds where they built the finest type of physical manhood known in history.

A PRACTICAL METHOD FOR THE REPUBLIC

Then this land, owned by the 5,000 families of the county, must be fitted up for the physical training of their sons. First, open spots under the trees for the tents, and the shelter houses during the summer days; the river banks made wholesome and clean, for the swimming and boating in the summer and skating in the winter; a rude open-air assembly hall, with wooden roof, on the basis of the Chautauqua shelters already built in this country; a simple assembly room, where masters can drill the boys in patriotism, where physicians can drill them in the laws of health and body-building, where the great political meetings can be held with the reform and religious meetings, where the choral unions can present their music. One-third of the ground also can always be used for drill in husbandry, so that the boy from the city can learn something about the simple principles of intensive gardening, and the care of the horse that he rides, and the cow that he milks; for in such a plan the boys in the summer time must be made to be largely self-supporting.

SOME DESIRED RESULTS

The drill should begin under the care of the public school teacher, when the boys are 10 or 12 years of age. At the end of the school year, in June, and every summer should bring at least one month for physical training, until at 20 both the boy from the tenement region in the city and the boy from the backwoods settlement in the country, know everything that can be taught about the rules of marching and countermarching, have arms of iron and legs of steel, can dig trenches, bridge streams, care for horses, understand their own country's strength, its weakness, the resources of other lands.

Such a method would end the present-day dangers to the American physique. Every physician knows what these dangers are. Our climate, rich in oxygen, consumes blood and nerve rapidly. Our people go down with nervous exhaustion. The most notable buildings in our States are not Parthenons, cathedrals and libraries. For the traveler the most noticeable buildings and grounds are the lunatic asylums, the homes for feeble-minded children, hospitals and shelters. The best way to safeguard this nation against foreign enemies is to build the national physique. The Greek mother was right—as her son's sword was too short, she bade him lengthen it by adding a step forward. The man behind the gun is the real fortress for defense.

THE COUNTY CAMP

Having built the body as an instrument of work and happiness, this plan, wisely administered, would supplement the drill of the family. Everyone knows that the dangerous period for the growing boy comes at about 16, when he wishes to throw off all family restraint and become his own master. This period of effervescence is the critical period. This is the age when boys organize themselves into gangs. At this era they make their first entrance into lawlessness and crime. Witness the inmates in our city jail; chiefly young boys. Witness four boys from the Bowery electrocuted on a single morning at Sing Sing. Some natures are so self-willed that the boys break over all parental restraint. It then becomes necessary for the State to step in.

Suppose these boys that died as criminals had been taken for two months during the years when they were 12 to 16 and made to obey. Suppose that the sentiment of the 100 boys who were clean and decent had turned against the unclean boy, to warn him that he must desist or become a pariah and an outcast, then our children's courts today would be empty, while boys that have been electrocuted or are now in prison cells would have been decent citizens.

WORK FOR PREACHERS AND TEACHERS

The preachers and public school teachers in the great farming States, whose work is in the town of 3,000 or 4,000 people, and who are disturbed by the moral illiteracy of the county, should unite to secure such a square mile of land, that could be set apart for the bringing together of all the boys of the county. What an opportunity it offers for the teacher and lecturer! What transformations might be wrought! What evils stayed! What noble impulses could be stirred and developed!

Poetry Out of "Porktown"

By Edgar DeWitt Jones

THERE is a literary Chicago as distinct and outstanding as there is a packing-house Chicago, or a peculiarly devious political Chicago. In fact, the number of writers, poets, journalists, novelists, and dramatists who reside in the big city on the lake is almost as considerable and fully as notable as the celebrities who make their homes in Greater New York. If you do not believe this statement consult your "Who's Who in America."

* * *

Recently a significant little volume has come from The Roadside Press entitled, "The Chicago Anthology," a collection of verse from the work of Chicago poets, selected and arranged by Charles G. Blanden and Miss Minna Mathison, with an introduction by Llewellyn Jones. It contains the poems of one hundred and thirteen contributors, seventy-seven of whom are men and thirty-six women. The total number of selections is one hundred and seventy-two. It is a modest but meaningful collection of verse, and there are some illustrious names upon its pages. It is as free from the spirit of the Chicago of commerce, the din of traffic, the aroma of the stockyards, as an October day in the Golden West is free from the commonplace and unromantic.

The collection opens with a poem by William Vaughn Moody on "Gloucester Moors."

Frank W. Gunsaulus is represented by a single poem, entitled "At Beach St. Mary." Ben King's "The River St. Joe" is there. Brand Whitlock's "On Little Traverse Bay"; Eugene Field's famous "Little Boy Blue"; Charles Edward Russell's "The Dead Leader"—lines written in tribute to Theodore Thomas; William Cleaver Wilkinson's "Daniel Webster"; Bert Leston Taylor's "The White Throat"; Stanley Waterloo's "The Bobolink's Song"; Hamlin Garland's "From Plain to Peak"; William Lightfoot Visscher's "Chiquita, La Bonita"; Harriet Monroe's "The Inner Silence";—these are a few of the sweetly strong and readable poems in this little book.

The presence of Myrtle Reed's sonnet entitled "Choice," is of melancholy significance, since not so long ago that gifted writer went out upon the Great Adventure deliberately choosing to set adrift with her own hand the ship o' death. Here is the sonnet, the one selection from the pen of the author of "Lavender and Old Lace," included in the volume:

The eyes of one shall open on the morn
  Where sunrise fires stain white peaks afar,
Another in the valley, where no star
  Breaks on the gloom of sea and midnight born;
And where the poppies riot through the corn
  The one, unshod, may pass with wound nor scar—
The other's straggling hands no gates unbar;
  Thus one shall have the rose and one the thorn.
If I could choose and could not be denied,
  Thy way would lie in many a sunny field,
While through the night my thorny path would be;
  Forever in the dark would I abide
And I would be thy solace and thy shield,
  If I could choose—if I could choose for thee!

Our own Thomas Curtis Clark is represented by two poems, one entitled "Wayside Flowers," the other "Wealth." The latter is too good to leave unquoted here:

I have a friend of wealth untold;
Her window views a field of gold.
And right before her open door
A rosebush thrives—though little more.

A robin comes each shining day,
And helps her while the hours away;
But more—within her four walls pent,
She holds the jewel of content.

Mr. Clark's poems are appearing with pleasing regularity in various journals and magazines of high tone and good taste, much to the delight of his friends and admirers. Mr. Clark writes select verse of a distinctly spiritual tone. If I mistake not, there is a growing demand for poetry which glorifies the spiritual. Verse in tune with the infinite is not over plentiful. Mr. Edgar Lee Masters, in his Spoon River Anthology, discovered a rich vein of gold, literarily—and literally—speaking; but the reader does not rise from a perusal of his pages longing for a closer walk with God. The same can truthfully be said of modern verse other than Mr. Masters'. It is good to believe that appreciation of spiritual poetry after years of waning in popular approval is waxing strong again.

* * *

The war is represented in this collection by several strong poems. Such a one is "Mothers of Men at War," by Ethel M. Colson. Another terribly vivid selection is the one entitled "Sing, Ye Trenches!" by Helen Coale Crew.

Taken as a whole, this Chicago Anthology is a valuable collection of readable verse. Lovers of poetry may profitably possess a copy. It contains some favorites of years long past; others whose place in modern literature is ample; and it introduces a company of new singers whose voices are clear, high, and full of promise.

Preachers' Problems

By Ellis B. Barnes

On Hearing a Sermon on Christian Union

RECENTLY I heard a sermon by a minister of a denomination known as a late arrival on the field of Christian union. The sermon was an appeal to all God's children to unite with a particular denomination—the easiest solution of the problem on paper and the one impossible way in fact. We may write it in red that there will never be union by absorption. This sermon dealt with the fundamentals on which all evangelical bodies are in substantial agreement. It had a bold touch of the universal in it, though a bolder touch of the denominational, so that all concerned were pleased. Nobody was uneasy through fear of a compromising statement, once the sermon was well under way; the party leaders could have heard and been glad. It said a good deal without saying anything. It merited the compliment that if it did no good, it could do no harm. The spirit was genuine and fraternal, free from any small sectarianisms on the one hand and from philosophical indifference on the other. Still, it was an out-and-out denominational propaganda, one of the many efforts to persuade the hearer to become the lamb for the lion in the day when both lie down together.

I have heard many sermons like it from brethren much closer to me in church relationship than the speaker in question. As on other occasions, I wondered what effect such sermons have on the trained layman. This particular sermon must have seemed to him so much fuss and feathers, if unity be such a simple matter. The intelligent layman must set us preachers down as a set of foolish men who are divided simply because we have not sense enough to get together.

To the homiletical mind the faults of the sermon were the faults of many of our sermons—too good to be true. This one was so reasonable that it made no appeal to reason; it was so conciliating that it had no force, like a stream lost in desert sands; it was so pacific that we hungered for a sword; it promised so much that it made us suspicious; it brought us so near to union that we felt that the enchanted land was the home of dragons, and we were loath to enter in. The effort was a sword with a beautifully chased hilt, a thing to be admired, lacking only edge and point.

We have heard many sermons of this character, sermons that brought us face to face and left us miles apart. We wonder often how so many denominations can touch elbows today while the great gulf separates them tomorrow. These sermons are helpful, but they do not solve our problem. They are a decided gain viewed across the years since the announcement by a few that Christian union was desirable and possible. A sermon such as I heard would have been heretical and revolutionary a hundred years ago. Today it is commonplace, almost stale. Such sermons serve a useful purpose as reminders of the long, toilsome way over which we have come, but they can effect little more than that now. The time has come for a different statement of the problem.

For myself, I felt that the discussion of a single fundamental difference would have been more satisfying than an hour's affirmations of those beliefs wherein we are at one. We have all been well indoctrinated in the fundamentals of agreement. We must now take time to become acquainted with the causes which once compelled us to separate and those forces which hold us firm in our separations at this hour. Of course, this assumes that the discussion of our differences must be as fraternal as the statements of our concords; we must never lose our heads or our charity. Sane people can never object to such discussions, for it is only by knowing how far apart we are that we can ever hope to find our way back to the family roof. Every honest exchange of views will do good, even if we shall be forced to the conclusion that it is inevitable that we continue to remain as we are. It is useless to hope that by speaking smooth things the differences will disappear. Nothing in the whole world of thought is more deeply rooted than doctrinal distinctions among people whose prayer is that these may disappear.

* * *

ON TRIAL

Now this sermon led me to a new examination of the whole subject. For the first time in my life I was the subject of a sermon which, in substance, I had preached many times. I was on trial; I was being asked to give up my sectarianism and come to a platform on which all God's people could stand. Heretofore I had been the ointment, now I was the fly. Once I had urged my hearers to come out and be separate; now the same appeal was made to me. With the tables turned I began to wonder where I was "at." The difference was between the preacher preaching and the preacher preached to. I saw a man through whose mind was passing the very arguments I had used, a man whose feelings on the subject were very much like my own. I said to myself as the sermon drew to a close, suppose I rise and propose that we unite this day, what would be the effect? I had not the courage to do so when the time came, fearing another riot like that at Ephesus in the long ago. I might have been arrested for disturbing a religious service, so I held my peace pro tem. The preacher's fine appeal had no place in it for immediate action. The time for uniting was not just then.

I discovered during the course of that sermon that the preacher was uttering catholicities, while in his mind could be seen the restraining hand of his denomination. Here is a problem which all peoples interested in union must face fearlessly. How can we co-ordinate denominational with interdenominational interests? If we speak of union from the denominational angle only we lose the larger hearing; if we speak of it without respect to the denomination we become detached ere long and can interest no one in our cause. If one would lead the people with whom he is identified he must assume that their interests are identical with his own, and he must speak with those interests ever in his mind. Whether the phrase grates upon our ears or not, every man must fit into the organization of which he is a part; if he does not fit, the organization must dispose of him in order to save itself. Now, my friend of the sermon fitted his denomination perfectly, but in so far as he did his overtures for union were misfits to me. Had he been less of a denominationalist his plea would have rung with sincerity; but in that case the wrath of his brethren would have fallen upon his head, and they would likely have said, "We want no union at the sacrifice of the beliefs so dear to us."

Who can give us the fine word that is so much needed at this point? For these beliefs of different denominations are very dear; some of them have been purchased with a great price; some of them have filled a place in the life of thousands which any modification would destroy, and abandonment would be regarded as anathema. Our friend told us that such and such beliefs and practices must be given up before we can unite, but we felt that we could never unite while his denomination held to certain interpretations. It is easy to say what the other man should give up—just as easy as it is to confess the other man's sins.

The more I heard of giving up certain beliefs the more determined I was to hold to them. I was sure of my ground here, and wondered how my friend who was of average intelligence could believe some of the doctrines he did. Thus we find ourselves firmly united in the conviction that we are right and that someone else is wrong. And as he identified his denomination with the primitive church, all of us of many names do the same thing, and it comes to pass that to abandon any of our beliefs or practices seems to us all like nothing more nor less than disloyalty to the Word of God. No surprise can it be that men launch out into the deep of Christian unity but with a denominational mooring that insures the certainty of always getting back to terra firma with applause.

* * *

RECOGNIZE THE DIFFICULTIES

When we write sermons or addresses on the subject of Christian unity we are likely to minimize the difficulties of the subject—that is, the other fellow's difficulties. We speak lightly of our miserable sectarianisms, our dogmas, our trivial doctrinal distinctions, all of which terms have their justification—for the other fellow. We, of course, have no sectarianisms, no dogmas, no trivial distinctions. It is easy for us to see that the Dunkard's foot-washing is no part of Christianity to us, but he views that ordinance in a wholly different light.

Emerson did not believe that the Lord's Supper should be observed by any who did not want to observe it, that there was any compulsion about it whatever. He was willing for all to get whatever good out of it they could; but it was not for him. Beecher looked indifferently upon baptism in an ocean of water or by a drop of dew, but Baptists view the matter differently, as nearly every evangelical body views the Lord's Supper very differently from Emerson. The Quakers see nothing in either baptism or the Lord's Supper. The Romanists see something in both that looks to Protestants like magic. Yet here are the viewpoints that are keeping alive the differences among Christians.

If the Baptist could see with pedobaptist eyes, and the Evangelical with Prelatical eyes, and the Lutheran with Romanist eyes, and the Romanist with Protestant eyes Christian union would not be delayed longer than it took committees to get together and arrange the final particulars. It is very easy for us all to identify our beliefs with the essence of Christianity, and the other man's beliefs with the accidents. It is sure that the barriers between us all are not nearly so numerous as they used to be, but such as remain are frowning and formidable. What are we going to do about it? O for the arm to bend that bow!

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

AN ENGLISH JOHN WANAMAKER

When Mr. Wanamaker was Postmaster-General, and his official duties called him to Washington, he made a practice of returning each Saturday to his home in Philadelphia so that he might superintend the great Bethany Sunday school. In the Rt. Hon. T. R. Ferens of Hull, England, who has just been chosen President of the World's Sunday School Association to succeed the late Sir Robert Laidlaw, we find another instance where official duties are not allowed to interfere with the Sunday school. Mr. Ferens was nominated by the British Section of the World's Sunday School Association several months ago, and his nomination was unanimously confirmed by the American Section at the meeting of its Executive Committee in New York City on October 26th.

Mr. Ferens has been a Member of Parliament since 1906, but during that time he has continued to act as Superintendent of the Brunswick Wesleyan Methodist Sunday School, of which he has been in charge for forty-two years, and which now has a membership of 2,500. During parliamentary sessions, Mr. Ferens travels back from London to Hull each Friday, returning Monday morning—about two hundred miles each way—in order to superintend his school on Sunday and conduct the young people's service on Sunday evening. He has been Treasurer of the British Section of the World's Sunday School Association since 1913, and in 1908 was President of the London Sunday School Union.

In addition to his Parliamentary duties, Mr. Ferens is Privy Councillor of London, and also High Steward of Hull—an office generally held by a Peer of the Realm. Political opponents admire him and many vote for him because of his high personal character.

Mr. Ferens is chief director of an industrial firm with a capital of £2,000,000. He entered the firm nearly fifty years ago with empty pockets, and sterling worth has brought him to the front. He believes in systematic giving: When a man is only moderately well off, one-tenth of his income may suffice, but as he becomes rich his proportion should be raised. He has presented a public park to the city of Hull; given £10,000 to purchase pictures for the Hull Art Gallery; built and endowed a Haven of Rest for old people, and provided two recreation grounds for tennis, cricket, etc., in different parts of the city.

To such a national and international leader as Sir Robert Laidlaw, Mr. Ferens is a worthy successor; and the World's Association may well feel honored in his selection as the official leader of the Sunday school hosts of 31,000,000.

* * *

Labor Unions and the Japanese Question

The Federal Council of Churches, through its general committee, has petitioned the president to arrange for an international commission with five representatives each from the United States, Japan and China, whose function it will be to study deeply the whole of the international relations between these countries and to promote mutual understanding and a plan for future action. This is eminently a Christian undertaking if the founder of Christianity is to be called the Prince of Peace, for most wars are nurtured and cultured in suspicion.

The American Federation of Labor has made a striking move toward better labor relations in California. At its coming meeting it will receive two delegates from the Laborers' Friendly Society of Japan. These delegates have already presented to Samuel Gompers an invitation to visit Japan next year for the double purpose of studying their labor conditions and helping them to organize a modern type of union. More striking even was the reception of these delegates by the California Federation of Labor convention, and now Japanese and Chinese have even been admitted to membership in San Francisco unions. With its common problem, the labor world, furnishing as it does the foundation of all modern society, can, by cultivating a sympathetic relationship, furnish a means of common action that will profoundly influence international affairs on behalf of peace. The California imbroglio was very largely fomented by labor in its jealousy for the job and for an American standard of living. If the wiser leadership prevails a solution of the Japanese difficulty in California may be offered by this same world of labor.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Death of Famous Polish Novelist

What "Ben Hur" has meant for the period covered by the life of Christ, "Quo Vadis" meant for the life and times of the Apostle Paul. In the lifetime of the great novelist, Henri Sienkiewicz, this book has been translated into many languages, and is perhaps as widely known in America as the works of most of our own authors. Henri Sienkiewicz was an ardent Polish patriot, and gave many months of service to relieving the sufferings of war victims. Mr. Sienkiewicz was born in 1846. He traveled widely and published his observations. Early in his life he visited America and published the story of his travels. In more recent years he has been the editor of the newspaper called "Slowo." Although he received a Nobel prize for literature, the newspapers have given but scant notice of his passing.

Federal Council Achievement

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has proved its usefulness in service. At its meetings this week and next in St. Louis there will be some fine reports. The following story is characteristic of the results it secures. In North Dakota the Congregational and Methodist superintendents made a list of twelve towns having both churches, each receiving missionary money. By agreement, each denomination withdrew from half the fields, leaving the other in charge, to the advantage of the community and of the churches. In several states these secretaries agreed that when two churches were thus adjusted, the one new church generally had more members than the two old ones and the church was more respected.

Dr. George A. Gordon Gives Special Lectures

Dr. George A. Gordon, pastor of Old South church, Congregational, of Boston, is in a position of commanding importance so far as the thought movements of religion in this country are concerned. He has been giving a series of sermons on the characteristics of the ministry of Jesus. On Friday evenings Dr. Gordon has been lecturing to people of various churches in his church on great leaders of thought. This series had the general title "Prophetic Voices Far and Near," and the studies included such names as Socrates, Plato, Marcus Aurelius, Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Tennyson, Kipling and Poe.

Present Status of Modernism

The Modernist movement has been lost sight of for a time through the interest in the present European war. Two Italian writers contribute articles for the current Harvard Theological Review in which they give the history of the Modernist movement and something with regard to its future. As to the influence of the war on the future of religion in Italy, Signor Murri finds little hope for the sympathizers of Modernism. There has been in Italy a Catholic revival, not as noticeable as that which has taken place in France, but sufficiently significant to show that Italian Roman Catholics are not moving in the direction of Modernism. There may be a chance for a national religious revival after the war is over, but it will have to be very carefully led if it is to have any permanent influence. In two directions Signor Murri sees a possibility of change. On the one side there might be a catholicism allied with a freer type of political life. On the other side there might be a religious movement adapted for cultured minds. If the Italians take part in such a movement at all preparation should be made for an effective campaign. Individual initiative is weak in Italy, and it hardly exists where religious subjects are concerned. "We ought to provide ourselves," says Signor Murri, "with all that is necessary to make war on medieval ecclesiasticalism in Rome, the center of this religious thought." Extension lectures, literature and clubs for religious culture are the means he suggests. Italians also should be urged to get into touch with the more living centers of religious activity, especially in England and America. Mere national effort can do little; the future hope of Modernism, as its former Italian leader sees it, is in international cooperation.

Chicago Ministers Pass Resolutions

The following very important resolutions were passed last week by the United Protestant Ministers of Chicago and vicinity:

Whereas, There is pending in Congress a bill known as the Sims-Kenyon Bill to prohibit interstate transmission by telegraph, telephone, or otherwise of information regarding race track gambling, odds and bets, be it

Resolved, That we, the United Protestant Ministers of Chicago and vicinity, do most heartily endorse this proposed legislation and urge its immediate enactment into law.

* * *

Whereas, We believe that the only relation of the government toward the church should be that of protector, guaranteeing freedom of conscience and the right to each man to worship God according to his own convictions, and

Whereas, We believe in separation between the Church and State, and

Whereas, There is a bill pending in Congress known as the Sisson Amendment to prohibit the appropriation by National or State Government of any funds for sectarian purposes, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the United Protestant Ministers of Chicago and vicinity, heartily endorse this proposed bill and urge its immediate enactment into law.

* * *

Whereas, Various bills are introduced into Congress whose aim is to vest the Postmaster General with authority to exclude from the mails all publications which, in his judgment, expose any race, creed, or religion to either hatred, contempt, ridicule or obliquy. Be it

Resolved, That we, the United Protestant Ministers of Chicago and vicinity, express ourselves as unalterably opposed to all such legislation on the ground that:

(1) It clothes an executive officer with discretionary power to such an extent as to be both paternalistic and arbitrary, and

(2) Civil Courts are the competent and regularly established authorities to punish abuse of the press, and

(3) The Federated Churches stand squarely for freedom of speech and press, believing that institutions which cannot survive public criticism justly deserve the same and that a religion that is afraid of the daylight is a menace to America.

The Sunday School Lesson

The Life That Is Life

The Lesson in Today's Life*

BY JOHN R. EWERS

Lyman Abbot once preached a wonderful sermon "The Life That Is Life Indeed." It has been years since I read it, and I cannot lay my hand on it now, but I recall how it impressed me with the unspeakable riches of the life of Jesus.

Every young man wants to get the most out of his life. Like Augustine and Paul he will have hours when he seems to be possessed of a dual nature—one which inspires and reaches up for the highest, and another which tugs downward and seems to grovel. But he wants to live; he wants thrills; he demands experiential knowledge of the big things in the world. Mountains, cities, oceans, dangers, battles, heroes challenge him. He hates the narrow, provincial, soft, easy, common things. Therein lies his hope.

* * *

When I was a boy some of the preachers, fortunately not all, whom I heard failed to picture Jesus in alluring ways. He seemed feminine; his meekness was too exclusively portrayed; his other-worldliness was too much emphasized. He seemed unreal —a kind of Byzantine ghost drifting more or less aimlessly about over a very foreign land. The very art sketched him in unfavorable lines. No lion of Judah; no superman, no good-man, no hero, no attractive, conquering personality was upheld. But here was one man who built Jesus like a Grecian temple—graceful but strong.

Christmas—the gift of a life. "Unto us a son is born." He is the son of the morning—heralding a new day. He is the son of truth, driving out all false philosophies. He is the son of tenderness, revealing the strongest man as the most gentle—the first gentleman. He is the attractive Christ. Beholding the king in his beauty we enlist in his armies. If lifted up he will draw all men. All we need is to see him as he is.

I wonder if we feel it to be true that Jesus lived the only really successful life this planet knows? That is the truth. His name is the chiefest among ten thousand. Only as men imitate him like Paul and Livingstone do their names persist. Study the monuments and tombs in Westminster —bravery, sacrifice, service, mark them all. Here is the cenotaph of Wesley: "God buries his workers but carries on his work." Here is Gladstone, who had written upon his bedroom wall these words, where first his eye would greet them upon awaking, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." Here is Ruskin, who said, "A man must have something to live for, and, if the occasion arise, to die for." Selfish men die and are forgotten; it is the innate punishment for selfishness. Somehow in God's great providence only the unselfish are not forgotten. Judas—his name only lives as a fearful contrast.

* * *

Christmas—season of holy memories—time when the clouds are full of singing angels—hours when the soul expands in love. It is the old college chapel; the young men have met to pray and sing; hear them sing about the "Gift of Life." Listen:

"I've found a friend, O such a friend!
He bled, he died to save me;
And not alone the gift of life,
But His own self he gave me.
Naught that I have mine own I call,
I hold it for the giver;
My heart, my strength, my life, my all,
Are his, and his forever."

---

*The above article is based upon the International Uniform Lesson for December 24, the Christmas lesson. Scripture, Isa. 9:2-7.

Christian Endeavor at Work

Des Moines Intermediate Endeavorers recently held a "win-my-chum" week.

New Jersey formed 105 new Christian Endeavor societies last year.

The Lincoln, Neb., Christian Endeavor Union used a big bill-board to advertise prohibition during the months preceding the election.

At Vermont's last convention each day's sessions began with early morning meetings on the campus of Montpelier Seminary.

The first layman ever elected president of the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union is Mr. William R. Sibley, a prominent business man of Columbus.

Los Angeles brought together 1,288 Endeavorers for its city union convention this year, one feature of which was a big parade. Seven young people offered themselves as Life-Work Recruits.

In two New Hampshire towns the only religious services are those held by the Christian Endeavor societies.

Des Moines is after the International Christian Endeavor Convention of 1909.

The annual convention of the Chicago Christian Endeavor Union brought together more than a thousand registered delegates.

During the last twelve months 446 new Intermediate societies of Christian Endeavorers have been organized.

Endeavorers of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church of St. Louis held a missionary meeting in the form of a pageant, presenting the great mission fields of the world.

Missouri has challenged Illinois to a contest in forming Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies.

The Kansas City, Mo., union holds an annual "camp-fire"—outdoors, of course. One society in this union holds annual barbecues.

The Chicago Christian Endeavor Union has twelve divisions, each as large as an ordinary city union.

EDITOR THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY: Upon reading the article by Alva W. Taylor on the "Eight-Hour Law," I find this statement: "A majority of the Republicans in both House and Senate themselves supported the Adamson Law."

Upon reference to Collier's "Important Roll Calls, taken from the Congressional Record, p. 15962, upon H. R. 17700, I find one Republican—LaFollette—supported the law, while 26 voted against it, as did also two Democrats, Clarke of Arkansas and Hardwick.

I do not have at hand a record of the House vote. No doubt Mr. Taylor accepted the similar statement from some of the newspapers. I noticed several so reporting.

MELNOTTE MILLER.

Douglas, Ariz.

Disciples Table Talk

H. J. Loken Leads in Berkeley, Cal., Community Meetings

"A non-sectarian democratic popular religious service" is the way the recent community meeting at Berkeley, Cal., is described by one of the Berkeley papers. The address of the evening was given by H. J. Loken, who spoke on "The Next Great Awakening." Mr. Loken is behind this movement, which contemplates the holding of regular Sunday evening services "of the people, for the people and by the people." The city public school board has offered the use of the high school auditorium for the meetings. Mr. Loken states that these gatherings are not of the conventional evangelistic type, to save men from their sins, but have as their purpose to save them "for service, for righteousness and the Kingdom of God." Mr. Loken recently exchanged pulpits with Robert Whitaker, pastor of the Baptist church at Los Gatos, Cal.

Northwestern Ohio Churches to Combine for Church Extension

Disciple ministers of about twelve counties of northwestern Ohio met last week at Norwood church, Toledo, and after a discussion of co-operative work voted to organize for a united work. The organization will consist of the pastor and three laymen from each church represented. Branches of the Disciples' church will be established in various sections of Toledo, which will receive aid from the combined churches until they are self-supporting. The late meeting was under the auspices of the Lucas County Union of the Churches of Christ. The C. W. B. M. was also well represented at the session. The chief feature of the meeting was an address by John R. Ewers, of East End church, Pittsburgh, who outlined the Kansas City and the Cleveland plans of union.

Pittsburgh Church Will Have Quarter Million Dollar Plant

John R. Ewers writes that western Pennsylvania will at last have, in the Campbells' own territory, a great representative church. East End Pittsburgh, to which work Mr. Ewers has ministered for several years, will invest about a quarter million dollars in a new home, with a special building adapted for Bible school work. On November 26 a gift of $75,000 by the children of the late Margaret Oliver was announced, at which time also other donations totaling $75,000 were made public. Announcement was also made that construction of the new building would begin in a few weeks and that when completed the church and Bible school building will represent an investment of about $250,000. The $75,000 gift of the children of Mrs. Oliver will be used in the erection of a complete Bible school building. The recent meeting of the congregation was the close of a canvass of the membership in the interests of the proposed new building. Gifts reported to date total $150,000, and this is expected to be increased by the proceeds of the sale of the present church property at South Highland avenue and Alder street, for which several bids have already been submitted. It is the expectation that $50,000 will be realized from this sale. It is intimated that an organ for the new church will be donated. The Bible school is to be known as the Margaret Oliver Bible School, and will be an integral part of the new church structure, though separately erected and joined to it by a tower. The whole church plant is to be of colonial design, rather simple in general, and with the tower as the dominant note. It is to be erected upon ground purchased recently. The memorial for Mrs. Oliver took the form of a Bible school primarily, because she had had a lifelong interest in the study and teaching of the Bible. She conducted private classes in Bible study during her life, which ended more than a decade ago. She joined the East End church shortly after its establishment and was an active member about twenty-five years. The donation was made by David B. Oliver, Mrs. Mary F. Holbrook, Senator George T. Oliver, Mrs. Cadwallader Evans, the Henry W. Oliver estate and the James B. Oliver estate. All these were children of Mrs. Oliver. Senator Oliver and Mrs. Evans are now members of the East End church. Six hundred and three new members have been added to the church during the pastorate of Mr. Ewers, which began seven years ago. The enlarged church plant has been made necessary because of these additions.

Texas Christian Lectureship to Be Permanent

Plans were made at the late meeting of the Texas Christian Lectureship at Fort Worth to perpetuate the lectureship in Fort Worth under the auspices of Texas Christian University and to make it an annual affair. The date of the 1917 sessions was fixed for December 3-6, Fort Worth to be the place of meeting.

Franklin Circle, Cleveland, Gives Another Worker to Missions

W. F. Rothenburger, pastor at Franklin Circle, Cleveland, reports another member sent out for missionary service. Lewis Owen has left Cleveland for China to become treasurer of Nanking University. The following is the complete list of men and women who have gone from this congregation to the mission field or to the work of the ministry: A. Shupe, J. J. Tisdall, Fred Cline, Louis Betcher, Harry Knowles, Frank Brown, Edna Settlemeyer, Chas. C. Wilson, Earl Brown, Marion Bradshaw, Miss Cora Hofrichter, John Bradshaw, Norma Williams and Louis Owen. The women of Franklin Circle are reported to be knitting socks for the soldiers on the Mexican border.

George W. Muckley Recovers From Severe Illness

George W. Muckley, of the Church Extension Society, writes to the office that he has fully recovered from his recent serious trouble with gallstones, and is now in Spokane, Wash., with the Men and Millions team. A severe operation was necessary in Mr. Muckley's case. This was undergone at the Christian Church Hospital, Kansas City. Fifteen x-ray pictures were made of the affected portions of Mr. Muckley's anatomy.

Byron Hester Already Busy at Chickasha, Okla.

Byron Hester, newly installed in the work at Chickasha, Okla., is already a very busy man. On Thanksgiving Day he preached at the union service at Chickasha and also at a community meeting in the country. In the evening he preached at Cement, Okla.

Anniversary at Atlanta, Ill., Church

R. H. Newton has served the Atlanta, Ill., church as pastor for six years and his sixth anniversary was duly celebrated by the congregation there last month. This occasion was also in celebration of the third anniversary of the completion of the fine edifice, which was completed under the able supervision of Mr. Newton. Over $3,000 was raised in building pledges last year, leaving only $4,500 yet to be paid. This amount is covered by good pledges. Mr. Newton has been unanimously elected to serve the church for another year.

Modern Sins and Great Hymns Considered at Rock Island, Ill.

M. E. Chatley is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Modern Sins and Their Cure." The "sins" discussed are "The Sin of Pride," "The Sin of Envy," "The Sin of Avarice," "The Sin of Anger," "The Sin of Appetite," "The Greatest Sin of All." Mr. Chatley preludes each of thees sermons with a talk on some great hymn-writer, the following being the poets and composers considered: Charles Wesley, Fanny Crosby, Frances Havergal, Chas. H. Gabriel and Jessie Brown Pounds.

A "Worshipful Service" at First Church, Bloomington, Ill.

Mrs. Ida W. Harrison, of Lexington, Ky., recently paid a visit to First church, Bloomington, Ill., and reports that she finds the order of service of the morning gathering there the most complete and satisfying of any church of the

Notes of Chicago Churches

O. F. Jordan, of Evanston, will attend the meetings of the Federal Council of Churches this week at St. Louis. Mr. Jordan is one of the alternates of the delegation from the Disciples of Christ. He is a member of the Social Service Committee.

The C. W. B. M. quarterly convention is being held on Thursday of this week at Sheffield Avenue church.

Captain Westbrook, of the Chicago Police Department, gives an address before the young men of Jackson Boulevard church this week.

Miss Bertha Merrill, who is studying in the University, has been employed at a salary to assist in the work of the Russian Mission in Chicago.

The young people of Irving Park church are to give the play, "The New Minister," before the Christian Endeavor division in which Irving Park Society is included.

Chas. B. Scott, an elder of the Evanston church, and well known as a "safety first" expert, will speak on this theme at Evanston church on next Sunday evening.

Disciples of which she has knowledge. Unusual features of the morning service are a children's sermon, early in the service, and the observance of the Lord's Supper at the close of the hour rather than earlier, as in most churches. Edgar D. Jones, pastor at First, states that he holds that this feature should be made the climacteric period of the morning worship.

Million Dollar Sanitarium Planned by Texas Disciples

In an address given at one of the meetings of the $150,000 campaign now on in behalf of Texas Christian University, it was suggested that the success of this campaign will practically assure the location in Forth Worth of the million dollar sanitarium being planned for the Southwest by the Christian church. About $40,000 had been raised for the University at last report.

School of Methods at Carthage, Mo.

This week is being held at Carthage, Mo., under the leadership of J. H. Jones, District Superintendent, a school of methods. The faculty consists of W. J. Lhamon, of Drury College; W. J. Clarke, Miss Maus and Miss Lewis, all of the national bible school organization, and Mr. Jones. Mr. Lhamon is giving a series of lectures on the Bible.

Des Moines City Sunday School Institute a Success

The enrollment of the Des Moines Sunday School Institute has reached 190 and it is thought the 200 mark will be reached next semester. Dean Bennett, of Highland Park, has the oversight of the institute. The instructors give their services free to the classes.

Kirby Page Returns to the States

Kirby Page, just returned from England, where he has been for several months with Sherwood Eddy in Y. M. C. A. work among the soldiers, was in Des Moines last week assisting in the campaign to raise funds in Drake for the work among the English soldiers.

Northwest Parliament of Disciples

The Pacific Northwest Parliament of Disciples is meeting in Spokane, Wash., this week. Among the speakers scheduled are Judge Harmon, of Tacoma; Supt. O. C. Pratt, of the Spokane Public Schools; R. A. Doan, A. E. Cory, L. F. Jaggard and W. H. Hanna, of the Men and Millions team. J. E. Davis is president of the Parliament.

Missouri County Churches Give Carload to Orphans

One of the big annual events in the state of Missouri is the gathering together by the Disciple churches of Randolph county of a carload of provisions and clothing for the Orphans' Home at St. Louis. Last year the car carried over 3,000 lbs. of flour, a hundred or two bushels of potatoes, many bushels of apples, several hundred dollars worth of clothing and canned fruits by the barrel; also other miscellaneous vegetable supplies. W. A. Morrison, of Huntsville, has charge of the car this year.

* * *

—Ira C. Smith, of Springfield, Ill., who recently underwent a surgical operation, reports his complete recovery, and states that he is now ready either to locate with some church or to hold evangelistic services. Mr. Smith presents a number of good references.

—H. A. Van Winkle, at Oakland, Cal., church, baptized four members of the Roman Catholic church last week.

—R. E. Henry and First church, Decatur, Ill., will hold a home force meeting early in January. On last Sunday was celebrated at this church the fourth anniversary of the dedication of the new First church building.

—The series of meetings at First church, Frankfort, Ky., closed with 125 persons added to the church membership. Roger T. Nooe is pastor at Frankfort, and W. T. Brooks led in the services.

—In a sermon on "The Religion of Democracy," Frank W. Allen, at First church, Springfield, Ill., made the declaration, "I care not how much you wave the flag, humanity is greater than any nation."

—The church at Marshalltown, Ia., has fallen heir to $4,000 by the provisions of the will of G. W. Calhoun, of that town. Drake University received $1,000 through the will.

—Glendale, Cal., church has called to its work C. A. Cole, who has served Compton Heights church, St. Louis, for several years.

—J. K. Ballou, recently of Modesto, Cal., began a new work at Payette, Ida., on Nov. 19.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—H. O. Breeden, of Fresno, Cal., held a week's meeting at Pomona, Cal., preparatory to an effort to raise $30,000 indebtedness on Nov. 19. Over $24,000 was pledged at the morning service, and this amount was largely supplemented at night. The Pomona church is led by C. R. Hudson, Frank Ward and Mrs. Royal J. Dye.

—The death is reported of William Chapple, for many years county evangelist with headquarters at Columbus, Ind., and also for some time in the employ of the Indiana state board. He was sixty-two years of age at the time of his decease. His death occurred at the home of his son, Garfield Chapple, in Chicago, following a serious illness of a complicated character. The funeral services were held at Tabernacle church, Columbus, and were in charge of W. H. Book.

—Howett Street church, Peoria, Ill., plans to dedicate its new building on December 24, if the remaining $7,000 needed can be raised before that time. Otherwise the dedication will be postponed. A city-wide canvass was recently promoted by this church, with the purpose of raising needed funds.

—F. G. Strickland, of Dayton, O., has been called to the pastorate at Franklin, O. For more than a year Mr. Strickland has been engaged in evangelistic work.

—Mrs. A. D. Harmon, of Bethany, Neb., delivered the C. W. B. M. address on C. W. B. M. day at First church, Lincoln, Neb. Her subject was "Women and the Social Waste."

—George W. Wise, Illinois pastor, recently underwent a surgical operation at Rochester, Minn. Mr. Wise is reported to be rapidly recovering.

—George H. Morrison and the congregation at Coleman, Tex., are erecting a fine brick church in the heart of the city's business district.

—H. C. Garrison, of Danville, Ky., has accepted a call to the pulpit at Magnolia Avenue, Fort Worth, Tex., to succeed E. M. Waits.

—Cephas Shelburne has been elected president of the Texas Christian Lectureship; Colby D. Hall, vice-president; E. H. Holmes, secretary, and W. P. Jennings, treasurer.

—The Student Volunteers for foreign missions at Brite College, Tex., are setting apart and equipping a missionary room at the college. This is being done under the direction of the faculty.

—The Barberton, O., Disciples Bible school has grown from the smallest to the largest school of the town. The building there will accommodate a school of 1,200.

—The Bible school at Platte City, Mo., has increased 100 per cent in attendance during the pastorate of C. C. Davis.

—Seventeenth Street church, Nashville, Tenn., has doubled the enrollment of its Bible school.

—The Foreign Society reports a total of 365 Bible schools in the foreign field, a gain of 54 during the past year.

—Whittier, Cal., church has made a $4,000 improvement to its plant, making provision for a modern school.

—Cleveland Kleihauer and Dr. E. M. Carney, well-known Disciple leaders of Seattle, Wash., are on the faculty of the city's Inter-Church Training School for Bible School Workers.

—Recent changes in Indiana pastorates are the following, among others: W. H. Newlin has gone to Bicknell; J. Frances Ashley to Monticello; W. E.

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure
No Alum—No Phosphate

Moore to Edinburg; M. G. Long to Windfall, and C. E. Scifers to Macy. E. E. Pedicord has come from Illinois to Princeton; H. F. Rector from Cincinnati to Plainfield; John H. Swift from Ohio to Gosport, and Melvin Menges from Pennsylvania to Gas City.

—H. H. Harmon and L. C. Oberlies, of First church, Lincoln, Neb., have been holding a meeting at Enid, Okla. The First church assistant pastor, Lawrence Dry, preached at the home church during Mr. Harmon's absence.

—F. E. Smith, minister at Jackson Street church, Muncie, Ind., writes that this church is first in the state in the amount of its offerings to foreign missions, and not in gifts to general missions, as was stated in a recent issue of The Christian Century.

—T. A. Hall has returned to the States from Winnipeg, Man., and is located in Irvington, Ind.

—C. H. Trout has closed his work at Clinton, Ind.

—Scottsburg, Ind., recently celebrated a homecoming, with former pastors and evangelists present. C. R. Piety leads at Scottsburg.

—Vevay, Ind., congregation has purchased the house of the Universalist church there, and has repaired and renovated the building so that the congregation now meets in one of the most beautiful church homes in Southern Indiana.

—President T. C. Howe, of Butler, is spending most of his time until the Christmas holidays with the Men and Millions team. Vice-president Coleman is in temporary charge of the college.

—The Bible Chair at the Indiana State University at Bloomington, recently celebrated its sixth birthday. Dean Joseph C. Todd is hopeful as to the future of this enterprise.

—A note in the Youngstown (O.) Christian News, states that W. D. Ryan, the pastor at Central church, Youngstown, was soon to be operated upon at a local hospital. No information was given as to the trouble.

—W. E. M. Hackelman has been engaged in meetings near Indianapolis almost continually since the close of the Bethany Assembly sessions. He is now assisting the pastor of the College Avenue Baptist church, Indianapolis. Mr. Hackleman reports that there will be several new features at the 1918 Assembly meetings.

—B. F. Hagelbarger, minister at Kent, O., reports the close of a ten-day series of meetings held by Rev. Filson of Akron. There were 34 accessions besides reconsecrations.

—As one result of the recent evangelistic meetings at Liberty, Mo., led by E. E. Violett and the pastor, Graham Frank, the church there is entirely free from debt. Mr. Frank is now assisting R. W. Wallace in a meeting at Lexington, Mo.

—Miss Vera Adamson, Akron, O., new missionary to China, sailed on November 30 on the "Empress of Russia" from Vancouver. She will be supported by her father.

—Professor Charles T. Paul, of the College of Missions at Indianapolis, gave the C. W. B. M. address at Richmond Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Paul was on his way to New York City for a conference of the missionary leaders of the world.

—The Christian Endeavor Society at Liberal, Kan., has become a life line society, with the evangelist, Kanchedi Lal, at Bilaspur, India, representing it.

—J. Boyd Jones, of Central church, Terre Haute, Ind., gave an address on November 28 at Carlisle, Ind., with the purpose of preparing the church there for a coming revival series.

—The Foreign Society is receiving a large number of orders for the Endeavor Day program, "Life Lines Across the Sea." For the past fifteen years the Endeavor Societies of the brotherhood have been most loyal in observing the day for foreign mission, thus supporting the Damoh Orphanage, India. It is believed that the same deep interest will be shown this year. Supplies are sent free of charge to all societies taking the offering for the work of the Foreign Society. Write S. J. Corey, Secretary, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio.

—John G. Slayter, of Dallas, Tex., read a paper on "The Witch of Endor and Other Witches" at a recent Christian ministers meeting of Dallas.

—The news of the death of Mrs. Diantha H. Taylor, of Lenham, Md., has been received. She had been an annuitant of the Foreign Society for many years and a good friend of the work.

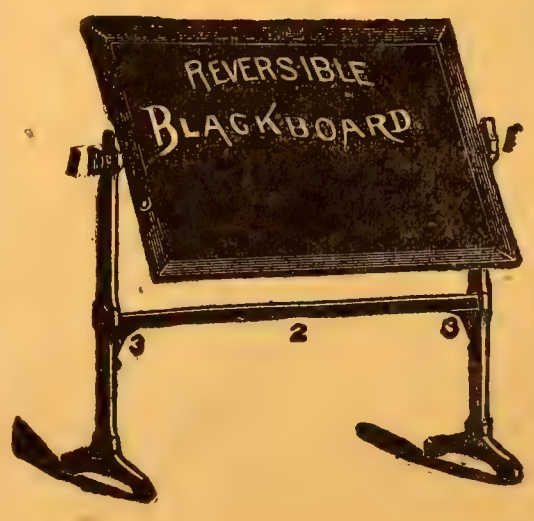
—W. B. Zimmerman, pastor at Mitchellville, Ia., had Congressman Dowell of Iowa, lecture before the men's brotherhood of his church on the theme, "Christian Citizenship."

—Herbert Yeuell will conduct a tabernacle meeting with Ben. E. Ogden next summer. The meeting scheduled for September and this year was postponed on account of an opposition union meeting planned for the same time. Mr. Yeuell will also lecture at Liberal, Kan., at the close of the present meeting being held for Richard Gentry and the church at Winfield, Kan. Mr. Gentry reports that Mr. Yeuell is making a powerful presentation of the plea of the Disciples before his community. Confessions are reported for every evening. During January Mr. Yeuell will conduct a series of meetings at East End, Pittsburgh, with John R. Ewers. In the union meeting held by Mr. Yeuell at Iron River, Mich., where there were a thousand confessions, there were seven hundred men among the number.

—Will H. Brown of California Discipledom recently talked to the four hundred boys of the Preston Industrial School, near Ione.

—W. B. Clemmer of Central Church, Rockford, Ill., has ordered his CENTURY address changed. The fact is, he writes, that he is taking his family into his own home. Mr. Clemmer is serving as chairman of a committee to plan and promote a simultaneous city-wide campaign from January to Easter. All churches of the local ministerial association will cooperate in this effort.

—A religious census was taken of Des Moines on Sunday, Nov. 26, in which all churches, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, cooperated.



—Mark Wayne Williams, of St. James Street church, Roxbury, Mass., has accepted a call to Shawmut church, Boston.

—W. A. Fite of First Church, Ashland, Ky., reports that a very helpful meeting was recently closed at this church, led by M. G. Buckner of Owensboro, Ky., and with Miss Fred Fillmore of Cincinnati, singing. No high pressure methods were used, but there was felt throughout the meetings a deep spiritual influence. Twenty-seven persons were added to the membership. At a rally day held on Nov. 20 the Ashland Bible School made a record of 400 present and $50 offering.

Two Christmas Presents for Price of One

The best family paper and the best fashion magazine—The Youth's Companion and McCall's Magazine, both for $2.10. The Youth's Companion ($2.00 by itself) has for years been one of the best, most entertaining, most useful of Christmas presents, crowded with stories, articles, humor, science, and the progress of the world week by week. McCall's Magazine (50 cents by itself) is the most widely circulated fashion magazine in America. Our two-at-one-price offer includes: (1) The Youth's Companion—52 issues of 1917; (2) All the remaining issues of 1916; (3) The Companion Home Calendar for 1917; (4) McCall's Magazine—12 fashion numbers of 1917; (5) One 15-cent McCall Dress Pattern—your choice from your first number of the magazine—if you send a 2-cent stamp with your selection. —THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, St. Paul Street, Boston, Mass.

"Kraoplate" Blackboards and Material

REVERSIBLE STYLE "D" BLACKBOARDS

"Kraoplate" Blackboards are made of 4-ply wood pulp, cemented under a heavy pressure and are uniform in thickness solid throughout. The surface can be easily cleaned and will not warp or crack if washed. It is the most complete and perfectly portable Blackboard made, and has an oak frame finished both sides. Can be taken apart in a moment and conveniently transported or set aside.

PRICES:

No. 1	2½x3½ ft.	each	$ 7.50
No. 1½	3 x4 ft.	"	8.00
No. 2	3 x4½ ft.	"	8.25
No. 3	3½x5 ft.	"	9.00
No. 4	4 x6 ft.	"	10.00

FOR SALE BY

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago

Harry Munro Tells of Alaska

A Report Made by Harry Munro Concerning His Trip Investigating the Kenai Peninsula, Which Is Larger Than New Jersey or Massachusetts

The summer population of Hope, one of the mining towns of Alaska, is about twenty-five. Of these the wife of one of the merchants, Mrs. Pratt, is a Presbyterian, the wife of the road house keeper, Mrs. Plowman, is a Presbyterian, and her husband an Episcopalian. They are very fine appearing people, would have nothing for the accommodations which they furnished me, and invited me to make their house my home whenever in Hope. They promised their support for any work I would attempt to do there. These were the only church members which I could locate in the town. There are about sixty people now out in the placer mining section around Hope who spend the winter in the town. Among these are Mrs. L. L. Ferrin and her brother, Mr. H. H. Clark, who are Disciples, though I did not meet them; I do not know to what extent we could count on them. Mrs. Pratt is the teacher and has attempted to do a little Sunday School work there.

Located at Seward, the only work I could do in Hope would be to organize a Sunday School there, supply it with literature and visit them during the week once a month. That trip would require the full week, provided the train runs out as far as Mile 34 on Monday and back on Saturday. It would require a walk part of the time on snow shoes for the round trip of 84 miles, and a minimum road house expense at the rate of 75 cents a meal and 50 cents for lodging, which would make a cost of $9.40 for the trip. This supposes that four meals and lodging are furnished free at Hope. This would get me into Hope at Wednesday noon and I would leave there on Thursday afternoon. I could preach in the school house on Wednesday night and confer with the Sunday School leaders. This would really be a great blessing to those people, I am sure, and even at such cost of effort and expense I should like to try it.

We need expect no permanent hold there, however, as the railroad has detracted from those towns not on it, and it is likely that these mining headquarters will be moved to a site on the railroad. However, while there are people on these old townsites they will need attention. Work with them now will probably render the opening up of the work in the new towns easier when the time comes for that.

The town of Sunrise used to be the best mining town in the section, but at present, while there are many buildings there, the summer population is small and the winter population only a little larger. I could learn of no church members with headquarters at Sunrise. If I make trips to Hope I would spend one or two nights en route at Sunrise and could do all that could be done there at no additional expense or effort. There are no children there, however, as there is no school. There is placer mining south of Sunrise and even a one-stamp quartz mill. Some of the properties are now being developed at considerable expense.

Russian and Indian Villages

Kenai, Kasilof and Neulchik are old Russian villages of about 150 population each. This is made up largely of Indians and halfbreeds, with a few whites. Most of the whites are "squaw men" of a very low moral type, who have taken up a marital life. A large per cent of the children are deformed and diseased. The government supports schools for them and the Greek Catholic Church has a building in each town, and a priest makes more or less frequent visits to each town. These towns are practically without religious influence and it seems to me the only hope for them is that the government teacher try to meet the religious need. If, as is often the case, he has no religious interest, the need is not met. A fair quality of lignite coal is being secured near the coast at various points. There are also fisheries and canneries near these towns which bring in a few Japs and Chinamen in the summer and employ some of the natives and halfbreeds.

All that has been said of the above towns applies equally to Seldonia and Port Graham, except that here the population in each case is a little larger and the salmon canning industry much more extensive. The cannery crew is but temporary, works almost night and day and most of the time on Sunday, so it offers no field for permanent Christian work and is very bad in its influence on the residents. Kackemak Bay was once seriously considered as the terminus for the railroad instead of Resurrection Bay. Homer would have been the port. This is an open port, a good harbor, and the railroad in that event would open one of the very best agriculture sections in the territory. Some think that there is still a good chance that the railroad will pass through Hope and Sunrise, then south to Homer. In that case Seward will be deserted and there will be a corresponding town on Kackemak Bay. This I think is very unlikely, at least in the present generation.

Harry Munro.

Some Foreign Society Achievements

In the past year the society has had 187 missionaries and 803 native workers in ten fields. Thirteen new missionaries were sent out; six resigned, and one died. After nearly twenty-five years in China, Dr. Butchart went home to God. Until three years ago he lived and labored in Luchowfu. Each year he treated a very large number of patients in the dispensary; the hospital was always full. The Chinese believe that he raised the dead in hundreds of instances. Being an eye and ear specialist, Dr. Butchart was able to assist all the missionaries in Central China. At the time of his death the people said that no one else had done as much for them, and that he was a foreigner. For three years Dr. Butchart was a teacher in the Nanking University and was superintendent of the University Hospital.

The work of the year may be considered under these heads:

I. Evangelism—The missionaries of every kind and the native workers preached the gospel at 187 stations and out-stations and in the regions round about. They made it their chief business to press the claims of Christ home to the hearts and consciences of as many as they could reach. They preached in their homes, chapels, schools, hospitals, at the public wells, in the shops, on the streets, in the theaters, and wherever they found any ready to listen to the message.

The Sunday Schools conducted by the missionaries number 365; the teachers and pupils number 20,560. Special Bible classes in which the gospels and the life of Paul were studied have been taught. In a goodly number of places there were Cottage Bible classes. Connected with the churches there are 72 Christian Endeavor Societies, with a membership of 4,299.

II. Education—The schools of all grades maintained number 131; the whole number under instruction, 6,013. The work begins in the kindergarten and ends in the university and post-graduate schools. In the 105 day schools 4,468 boys and girls were taught; in the 9 boarding schools the pupils numbered 518; in the four colleges there were 86 students, besides our share in the 500 students at the University of Nanking; in the 5 Bible colleges, 143. In the hotels and dormitories the students are all brought under the influence of the gospel. There were night schools for those who could not attend in the day. Where needed, English was taught. In the colleges for women music and home economics were taught. There were classes for teachers and for nurses, and institutes in which the evangelists reported what they were doing and received such instruction as they needed and could receive.

III. Medicine—The society's hospitals and dispensaries number 25; the in-patients for the year, 2,779; the out-patients, 74,910; the treatments, 230,767. The medical missionary is brought into contact with all the ills to which flesh is heir; from colds and headaches to syphilis, leprosy, cholera, bubonic plague, yaws, venereal diseases, appendicitis, and elephantiasis. Patients come from near and from far, often a distance of two hundred miles. The physicians go out into the homes of the people and go on long tours into regions where the people have no qualified physicians to whom they can go in times of need. In recognition of the good work among the poor and unfortunate, the government of the Philippines gave the hospitals in the Islands $5,900.

IV. Publication—On the four presses owned by the society there were printed between six and eight million pages of Christian literature. Leaflets, periodicals and books in the languages of more than a hundred million people were printed and published. The missionaries translated or assisted in translating textbooks for the schools, hymns, devotional and other works. They have written thoughtful articles for the daily papers and for the magazines. In their work they have made a large use of the printed page.

V. Benevolence—In the four orphanages 222 children were fed, clothed, housed, taught and trained for their life work. The ablest of these will become pastors, evangelists, teachers, colporteurs, nurses, Bible women, wives of Christian men and founders of Christian homes. Others will become carpenters, blacksmiths, tailors, shoemakers, farmers. They are given modern tools and taught how to use them. In India sixty lepers were cared for. This was done in connection with the Mission for Lepers in the East. In the year 11 of these lepers were baptized. In the Philippine Islands there is a leper church of thirty members. Twenty of these were baptized during the year. Strange as it may appear, no meetings are so genuinely happy as those made up of Christian lepers.

VI. Social Service—Lectures on hygiene and sanitation and temperance and afforestation and the reclamation of waste lands have been delivered in a number of centers. Roads have been repaired, the streets cleaned, and the dead buried under the leadership of the missionaries. Efforts have been made to reach the women through classes and conferences on the care of children and the care of the home. Mothers' clubs and Dorcas Societies have been organized and assisted. The hungry have been fed, the naked clothed, the sick and imprisoned have been visited. Through the Door of Hope Mission girls who had gone astray were brought back to virtue and to honor. The women have called at the homes of the people and have visited the zenanas regularly and have received calls from such as were free to call. Plays and playgrounds have been provided for the children. Basket ball and tennis courts have been opened and swings have been installed. In the institutional churches classes on many subjects were taught and the lives of all who attended were brightened and blessed.

VII.—Buildings.—In Manila the Albert Allen Memorial building has been finished and is now in use. This beautiful building is the home of the Bible College in that city. The location is admirable. The students are free to attend the University of the Philippines, which is just across the avenue. This building is the gift of Miss Cynthia Allen of Akron, Ohio. In Tibet three homes have been purchased and repaired; a chapel and a hospital are in course of construction. The high school in Harda, India, has been begun. One home was built in Nanking.

A. McLEAN.

At Russellville, Ark., the Sunday laws are so rigid that the use of a telephone on Sunday is prohibited.

Baptismal Suits

We can make prompt shipments. Order Now. Finest quality and most satisfactory in every way. Order by size of boot.

Disciples Publication Society
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

ILLINOIS NEWS LETTER

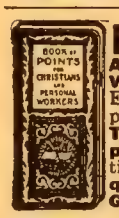
I spent Sunday, November 26, with the churches at Litchfield and Hillsboro.

At Litchfield on Sunday morning I found a large Sunday school and church audience. The Sunday school gave the exercise, "Farthest North," and took an offering of $38 for the joint work of the American Christian Missionary Society and the Illinois Christian Missionary Society. There were six preachers present besides the writer: The pastor, Ivan W. Agee, and W. L. Allen, L. F. Wood, J. E. Masters, W. H. Grener and Chas. J. Upton of Barnett. Mr. Agee has been with the Litchfield church for four years, coming there from Greenville, where he held a very successful six-years' pastorate.

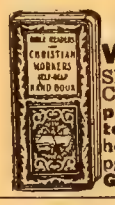
At Hillsboro, in the evening, I met one of the most enthusiastic congregations I have worshipped with for a long time. This is a comparatively young church, but has a membership of 160. The Sunday school goes beyond 100 almost every Sunday and has a fine corps of teachers. Fred Galeger has been with the church one year and is continuing with an increase in salary. The Litchfield church helped them to the amount of $250 in a revival recently conducted by Evangelist Violett. These meetings added some forty or fifty to the membership and otherwise strengthened the church. Hillsboro is the county seat of Montgomery county and a growing city. The Christian church is centrally located and with a new building, which will be erected before long, the congregation will have a leading part in making it a "City of the Redeemer."

H. H. PETERS.

—J. Sherman Hill, pastor at Paola, Kan., assisted by B. E. Ogden and wife, has closed a meeting in the church there with 100 persons added to the membership.



—Clifton E. Rash has begun his new work at Central Park church, Topeka, Kan.



BOOK OF PRAYERS
Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

POCKET S. S. COMMENTARY
For 1917, SELF-PRONOUNCING Edition on Lessons and Text for the whole year. Right-to-the point practical HELPS and Spiritual Explanations. Small in Size, Large in Suggestion and Fact. Daily Bible Readings for 1917, also Topics of Young People's Society, Motto, etc. Red Clo. 25c, Mor. 35c, Interl. for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, MONON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

BOOK OF POINTS
AND TESTIMONIES for use of Christians and Workers in all meetings. Answering Objections, Excuses or Doubts. Helps for leading and taking part in Prayer Meetings and in giving personal Testimonies. Better understanding of hard places in Scripture, etc. Full of practical suggestions. Don'ts for Workers when dealing with Inquirers. Cloth 25c; Morocco, 35; Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Bible Readers and Christian Workers Self-Help Hand Book
Short and plain articles by nearly 100 experienced Christian writers. Just the Help over hard places you have been looking for. How to lead, teach, testify, pray and grow. Young Christians helper, experienced workers' guide. Pkt. size, 128 pgs., Red Cloth, 25c, Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wntd. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

THE TWO BEST LESSON COMMENTARIES
FOR 1917
TARBELL'S GUIDE
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage
PELOUBET'S NOTES
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage

Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

The Lessons for the First Half of 1917 Are on the Life of Christ

50c Postpaid
Satisfaction Guaranteed
Fits Any Pocket
For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Iron-strong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.

U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55 C—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

Kent and Madsen Maps

A New Series of Historical Maps

For Sunday Schools, Bible Classes and Individual Students

Because of the combined attractiveness, accuracy, adaptability, compactness and cheapness of these maps, the series should find a place promptly in the classrooms of every progressive Sunday School.

The maps, both in detail of drawing and coloring, are superb, Size, about 17x25 inches. Not sold separately. Complete set mounted on wooden roller, to fit on music stand tripod. The low price of $5.00 includes maps, tripod, boxing and delivery charges in continental United States.

★ ★

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.

Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.

Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.

Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6 50 Net.

By Express or Freight at Purchaser's Expense.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th. St., Chicago, Ill.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

By Hanford Crawford

Who forgot? You, I, and all of us.
Where? Here, there, and everywhere.
When? For an hundred years or more.

He had been active so long; then suddenly dropped out of sight. Another took his place. We were busy. The world moved on. We forgot.

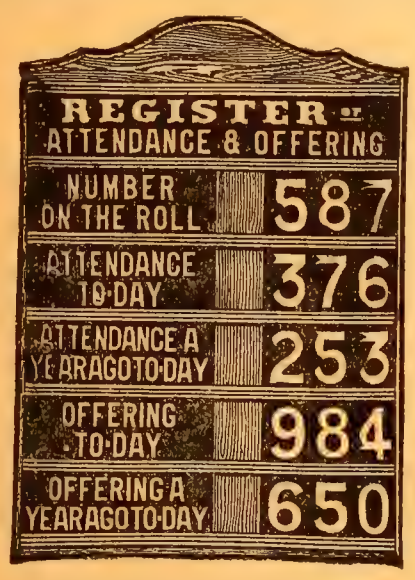
Once in a while we saw him around. His face was familiar; his voice cheery; he made no sign; we thought him one of us; he was; but we forgot.

He came to church; he rarely failed; he lived not far away; we might have called; we might have guessed; but we forgot.

He worked his day; he served us well; he gave his life; he asked no wage; he had to stop; still we forgot.

We did not pay him all we promised; our promise only gave him barest living; we let him wonder how he'd manage; and we forgot.

He and his wife were downright plucky; while the folks they served, simply forgot.



When you know what you have forgotten, you have started to remember; but a memory may be bad or may be good.

The way to make it good is easy. Pay the money that you owe him, the scar-marked Veteran of the Cross, now, before the night comes o'er you, and the Master Preacher speaketh:

"It was I that you forgot."

BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST,
No. 34, 120 East Market Street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Acme S. S. Register Board

A practical and inexpensive board with which comparative records may be made. Is of ash. Size, 30 inches high, 21 inches wide, 3-4 inch thick. The following cards and figures make up the outfit: Register of Attendance and Collection, Register of Attendance and Offering, Number on the Roll, Attendance Today, Attendance a Year Ago Today, Collection Today, Offering Today, Collection a Year Ago Today, Offering a Year Ago Today, Collection Last Sunday, Offering Last Sunday, Attendance Last Sunday, Hymns, Record Collection, Record Offering, Record Attendance, Psalm. Also six each, of figures 1 to 0, inclusive. Letters and figures are white on black background, 3 5-8 inches high.

Price, $3.00. Delivery Extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,
700 East 40th St. : Chicago, Ill.

Grow With Us!

The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY is distinctive in that it stands for IDEALS in religious education. Our purpose is not to make money—no private individuals can make money out of the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY. The Society is not a commercial enterprise. It belongs to the churches and Sunday-schools that patronize it. It is a

Brotherhood Publication Society

*It exists for no other purpose than to provide the finest quality of religious literature—newspapers, books and Sunday-school literature—that can be produced. Its motto is "NOT FOR PROFITS, BUT FOR CHARACTER BUILDING." The principle upon which its business is built is not the ordinary business principle of* CATERING to its patronage, but the principle of EDUCATING its patronage toward the adoption of higher and higher ideals and standards.

Grow With Us

Every Sunday-school, therefore, that gives its patronage to this brotherhood house puts itself in the line of its own growth. The DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY offers every Sunday-school an opportunity for fellowship in GROWTH!

We are a growing enterprise—steadily, healthily and substantially growing. The past year has shown a fine increase in the volume of our patronage. The tokens indicate that the new graded Sunday-school year upon which we are now entering will bring us another encouraging increase in patronage.

Grow With Us

The officers and workers in the DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY take much greater satisfaction in building up a BROTHERHOOD publishing enterprise than in building up an institution for private gain out of the patronage of the churches and Sunday-schools. The Society is steadily becoming a potent and helpful agency in the religious world, not alone in supplying literature to Disciples' schools and churches, but in proclaiming the message of the Disciples to American Protestantism. There is no greater privilege before the Sunday-schools of the Disciples of Christ than to in the increasingly larger service that so surely is awaiting both them and us.

Grow With Us

Disciples Publication Society

700 East Fortieth Street :: :: CHICAGO

A Notable Achievement—in the Field of Christian Unity!

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH
The Disciples Hymnal

THE publishers regard this Hymnal as the most important single contribution they have ever made to the Disciples of Christ and the general Church. A widespread and eager interest in the appearance of this notable work has been already manifested.

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH contains all the great hymns which have become fixed in the habits and affections of the Disciples, and adds thereto the great catholic hymns whose use by our churches has not been encouraged by previous compilers.

In addition, the new book is distinguished by three outstanding features:

Hymns of Christian Unity
Hymns of Social Service
Hymns of the Inner Life

These three features give Hymns of the United Church a modernness of character and a vitality not found in any other book. This hymnal is alive!

The editors have been guided by the purpose to produce a hymnal that will sing the very same gospel that is being preached in modern evangelical pulpits.

Great care has been bestowed on the "make-up" of the pages. They are attractive to the eye. The hymns seem almost to sing themselves when the book is opened! The notes are larger than are usually employed in hymnals. The hymns are not crowded together on the page. No hymn is smothered in a corner. The words are set in bold and legible type, and all the stanzas are in the staves. Everything has been done to make a beautiful hymnal.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY,

An Epoch-Making Forward Step for the Disciples of Christ!

Aids to Worship

Supplementing the hymns are 100 pages of responsive Scripture Readings and other aids to Worship. The Readings are topically selected, and so arranged as to give naturalness to the responses. The American Standard Version is used. Orders of Worship, special forms for the communion service, and many prayers, responses and sentences topically arranged are in this department.

The Construction of the Book

The Disciples Hymnal is a delight to the eye and to the hand. A half-dozen of the best hymnals in existence were taken to one of the best printing houses in the United States with instructions to make a better book than any one of them. No expense was spared. The plates were cast from new type specially purchased for this hymnal. The paper is the best and of good color. The binding is most attractive. Every device known to the binder's art has been used for the strengthening of the back. Old fashioned tapes have been replaced by cloth running the entire length of the back, and by reinforcements of the first and last signatures. The book is made to last a long time!

Price, per single copy, in cloth, $1.15; in half-leather, $1.40.

Especially attractive introductory terms to churches purchasing in quantities will be made in the early days of the first edition. Returnable samples sent to ministers and music committees on request. Write us today.

700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Each One Get Three!

Now is the Time to Get New Subscriptions for the Christian Century

Three New Subscriptions From Each Present Subscriber

Enlarged and enriched beyond anything ever offered in Disciples journalism, the Christian Century is entering upon a new epoch in its history. We desire to have agents in every congregation and will pay a good cash commission for new subscriptions. Yet we know that no paid agents can do the needed service so well as our regular readers. A paper like the "Century," appealing to the more thoughtful and discriminating men and women of our churches grows by the principle of contagion — others catch it from you.

Nine out of ten of our new subscriptions come through our present readers. We have judges and lawyers and teachers and doctors and merchants and ministers and thoughtful homemakers who work for us — not in our employ, but because they believe they are doing their friends a great service by telling them of this newspaper and inducing them to subscribe for it. It is in such readers that the strength of The Christian Century consists, and upon them its hope for future usefulness rests.

We are asking every present reader to get three new subscribers within the next thirty days. It is the easiest thing you ever tried to do!

Just show that two-page announcement of our outstanding features for the coming year (found elsewhere in this issue) to almost any thoughtful churchman or churchwoman you know and ask for two dollars, and you will get it! Testify to your own delight in reading The Christian Century. Tell of the work this newspaper is doing for the broadening vision of the Disciples of Christ. Tell of the most important thing of all—the service this newspaper is rendering in interpreting the sweet reasonableness of the Disciples' plea to the larger Christian world beyond our own communion, and you will be surprised how readily your thoughtful friends will respond with their subscription.

We will reciprocate for this kindness on your part: We will extend your own subscription six months for each new subscription you secure.

Three new subscriptions from every present reader! Our circulation trebled from January, 1917, onward! Is not that a goal worthy of our united endeavor?

Think up three persons who ought to be taking the "Century" and go straight for their two dollars now.

When you send in the names, addresses and cash, address

Subscription Department, The Christian Century

EACH ONE GET THREE

The Christian Century

Vol. XXXIII December 14, 1916 Number 50

The New Search For Unity

Editorial

An Educational Conscience

By Herbert Martin

American Ideals

By Oswald G. Villard

Lloyd George's Vision

CHICAGO

TWO GREAT BIBLE COURSES

FOR ADULT AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLASSES

Hundreds of teachers of adult and young people's classes are looking for the right course of study. Why not consider one of the splendid courses on the Bible which have been especially prepared for class study? One of these deals in Old Testament life, the other with the New Testament.

"The Moral Leaders of Israel"

By DR. HERBERT L. WILLETT

is a course treating in a most attractive way the mountain peak personalities of the Old Testament. Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Isaiah and the other great spokesmen for God are here made to live again in twentieth century life. A thoughtful class will have its interest renewed by this fine course.

"The Life of Jesus"

By DR. LOA E. SCOTT

is a question and answer study of the life of Jesus and is especially adapted to High School and adult age. Hundreds of classes have been built up on the basis of this attractive course.

DON'T WASTE THIS YEAR! MAKE IT COUNT FOR GENUINE STUDY! Send $1.00 for a copy of Dr. Willett's book, 50c for Dr. Scott's, or $1.35 for the two. Then decide which you will choose for this year.

ADDRESS

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII DECEMBER 14, 1916 Number 50

The New Search for Unity

UNITY IS AN AGE-LONG QUEST OF THE CHURCH.

Heresy and schism appeared before the apostolic age was closed. In the book of Revelation are threats at factionalists even in the midst of the persecutions the church was enduring. The Gnostic soon appeared, denying the humanity of Jesus Christ, and the Docetic, who denied His divinity. In St. Augustine's day there was a dangerous infusion of the Persian religion into Christianity.

The Church has never known absolute unity. There was no absolute unity in the apostolic age, as the New Testament clearly shows. There was no absolute unity even in the time of the Middle Ages, when the Catholic Church came to its greatest power. Even then dissenting sects were to be found in various parts of the world. The sect-forming spirit that came with the Protestant Reformation was not a new thing, but only found new opportunity in the freedom of religious thought that followed the renaissance of learning.

Just as the sect-forming spirit has persisted throughout Christian history, so likewise has the search for unity persisted with it. To go no farther back, the Council of Nicea was bent upon a search for unity for the Church. This council tried the experiment of a creedal formulation which was to be the basis of unity. How this creedal method has failed, every student of Church history knows. Zwingli sought religious unity with Martin Luther, but the latter refused to take his hand.

★ ★

In modern times the search for unity has grown more persistent and ingenious. The famous Lambeth quadrilateral was an expression of desire upon the part of the Church of England for unity. It was supposed to be the last word on the subject from the viewpoint of this communion. It conceded much that was dear to the heart of the Episcopalian, though the churches of the world have failed to appreciate that. Its four sides were the Bible, the historic creeds, the historic episcopate and the sacraments.

A recent writer has shown how some of our greatest Christian souls would be outside such a "catholic" church. Abraham Lincoln would be on the outside, for he never submitted to the sacraments. Edward Everett Hale could not qualify, for he opposed the historic episcopate. Charles Sumner would be barred, though he lived and died in the bosom of the Episcopal Church. He doubted the inspiration of the Scriptures. William Ellery Channing wrote against the Nicene creed, which fact would also number him among those who would be wailing and gnashing their teeth, if the quadrilateral definition of Christianity were the last word. Most Christians believe that "Christ's arms reach around more people than does the quadrilateral."

Many things pertaining to our modern life have brought into keener consciousness the quest for unity. Phillips Brooks said that as he walked along one day beside the sea he noticed various little pools. He said to himself, "Here is a Methodist pool, and here is a Presbyterian pool, and here is an Episcopalian pool." They were all swept away when the tide came in.

The mighty ocean of Christian life and activity includes missions. How our missionaries abhor the denominational yoke when they must explain Christianity to the Oriental mind! Were the matter left to them, denominationalism would soon be put to flight.

The same point of view that is fundamental to missions has been incorporated in the Christian social service movement. We have come to believe in an active, serviceable, fraternal religion. The missionaries have been our teachers in doing good in Christ's name.

★ ★

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has come as the answer to prayer. It does not presume much. It does not claim to be Christian union in any ultimate sense.

It takes on strength from its very modesty. It has sought no absolute. Recognizing the changing nature of life, it has sought only to organize such unity as already exists, hoping that the realization of existing unity may prepare the way for the better thing that God has in store for His children.

Thirty denominations have been brought together in this mighty fellowship, in which are included the vast majority of the Protestants of America. Some have come haltingly, as the Episcopalians, others have come gladly and whole-heartedly. What these groups of Christians have already done is important. They have admitted the validity of each other's Christian experience. This is a gain which we are in no danger of over-estimating.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America faces these days the various tendencies to which all live social groups are subject. Some think the organization has gone quite far enough. They say with Prof. Shailer Mathews at St. Louis last week, that what we already have is Christian union, and that denominations are good things to have in the Christian religion. Others know full well the inadequacy of such a view. As we pray for the Federal Council we may well ask that it shall not settle into any static condition of self-satisfaction.

When Christian union is found, will it not come to the Church through prayer and common tasks and a deep loyalty to Jesus Christ?

EDITORIAL

A NOTE

IT IS due to those of our readers who may also be readers of the Christian Standard to state that a recent editorial in the latter paper dealing with the business administration of THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY is a complete falsification of facts. A communication to this effect, and dealing with the misrepresentations in detail, was promptly sent to Mr. Russell Errett, whose initials were appended to the editorial, advising him not only of the erroneous, but also of the libelous character of his statements, and asking that our communication be published in the Standard. This request will without doubt be acceded to, as it is quite inconceivable that Mr. Errett would refuse to correct any misstatement of fact to which the columns of his paper have given publicity. We publish this note at this time in response to a number of inquiries we have received indicating that positive damage has been done the reputation of The Christian Century in certain quarters where no other source of information is available except the Christian Standard. It is to be hoped that the Standard's course in the premises will be such as to render unnecessary any further allusion to the matter or any further action on our part.

PRESBYTERIANS AND DISCIPLES TALK UNION

THERE were some significant conferences at St. Louis last week, between Disciples and Presbyterians who belong to their respective Commissions on Christian unity and comity. As a result of these conferences, there should be a definite effort on the part of both bodies to cultivate a deeper sense of unity.

It was pointed out, not altogether humorously, that in the Catholic Encyclopedia article on Bishop Purcell, he is reported as having had a debate with one "Alexander Campbell, who belonged to the Campbellite wing of the Presbyterian Church."

Some definite proposals were made at the conference. Dr. Peter Ainslie suggested that an effort be made to get Disciple theological students to go to Princeton Theological Seminary. A number are now going to Union Seminary in New York. But if we were going to encourage attendance at another Presbyterian seminary, McCormick Seminary in Chicago would have some claims to consideration.

It was also suggested that a considerable delegation attend the next meeting of the General Assembly at Dallas, Tex., next May, and bear the greetings of the Disciples. This would be followed by a similar delegation of Presbyterians who would go to Kansas City next fall bearing the greetings of the Presbyterians.

It was also suggested that local churches of the two bodies that are in the same general territory might hold union meetings in which they would discuss the common heritage of the Presbyterians and Disciples.

Presbyterians and Disciples alike hold to a religion that is strongly doctrinal. They have a similar organization in the local churches. Each body has shown itself practical and efficient as an evangelistic agency in America. It is along the line of such spiritual affinity as this that unity is to be cultivated. Disciples everywhere will do well to become more familiar with all things which are Presbyterian that they may seek a closer walk with this splendid group of God's people.

REV. R. J. CAMPBELL

A GREAT stir was made in England last year when Rev. R. J. Campbell was received into the Church of England. His many friends and admirers were shocked not only at the change but that he should have submitted to Episcopal ordination, the inference from that act being that he disavowed his former ordination, and practically repudiated his Congregational ministry of twenty years.

That to us is a small matter just now. But we are wondering whether the Episcopal Church, accustomed as it is to boast of culture and sound learning, is not making an unenviable reputation for itself in affording a haven for men who are too timid to face the logic of their own teaching.

It was said of Newman that he had not the courage to face the problems that he had himself created, and sought refuge in retreat. Possibly Dr. Campbell has done the same thing. A thinker, no matter whether we agree with him or not, loses all our respect when he kindles a fire and takes to the woods, leaving others either to put out the fire or to suffer loss.

We affirm nothing in the case of Dr. Campbell, but every man ought to be able to consume his own smoke. In other words, instead of wishing that his book entitled "The New Theology" might be suppressed, Dr. Campbell ought manfully to show why his widely circulated volume is erroneous.

Dr. Campbell in the Episcopal Church will no doubt continue to render service to his day and generation. But it is hardly likely that he will be able to attain great distinction. Had he remained in the City Temple he would have been remembered as one of the foremost preachers of the twentieth century.

THE CONSERVATION OF HUMAN LIFE

OF ALL our American wastes, the worst is the waste of human life. Each human life is the fruit of care and suffering; this makes it infinitely valuable.

Rev. Charles Stelzle is authority for some startling statistics about the waste of life in this country. At any one time there are about three millions of people sick in this country. Statistics reveal this fact. There are in the United States about 500,000 persons who have tuberculosis, and of these 150,000 die every year. A wage earner loses in a year about nine days of time by reason of illness. The cost of treating these men medically is $180,000,000 per annum and the wage loss is said to be a half billion of dollars annually. The average length of human life could be extended fifteen years were preventable diseases controlled.

It is proposed that the church take up seriously the conservation of human life and assist in distributing the knowledge which would result in the lessening of death and disease.

Great corporations have for several years been busy in this work. They have shown the danger of the house fly and have educated the community in riding itself of this pest. A general knowledge of the control of disease would be a godsend to our entire nation. While corporations and public schools can reach many families, unless there is larger cooperation than this the saving knowledge cannot be adequately circulated.

Jesus was interested in the sick. The story of the sick who were healed was one of the apologetics of the early church. Christian Science today finds deep interest in the work of healing sick people. Orthodox churches will be accorded full appreciation in the community for any work done to keep people physically well. Our work is to be promoted, not by setting aside the knowledge that has been uncovered by modern science, but by passing this on in the spirit of Jesus Christ. Perhaps this is the true healing ministry of the church.

THE RELIGIOUS OPPORTUNITIES OF CHICAGO

THERE are but few people that realize the astonishing character of the growth of Chicago. Less than a hundred years ago the commander of Fort Dearborn wished the place given up, for he declared no one would wish to live in the swamps around the mouth of Chicago river.

Chicago is now growing at the rate of about a hundred thousand people a year. This is four to five per cent a year. If this percentage operates according to the principle of compound interest, it will be only twenty years until Chicago has a population of five million people.

In the next twenty years there will be another city built around the present Chicago as large as the Chicago of 1916. The challenge in these statistics to the Disciples of Christ is obvious.

The Disciples, more than any other religious body, are so situated geographically as to be strongly influenced by Chicago. The newspapers, schools, and political influences reach from Chicago into the very heart of Disciple territory.

What will Chicago mean to the Disciples? Will it be the graveyard of our hopes? Will it be the city where thousands will come and be lost to the cause of religion for the lack of conveniently located and well-housed congregations? Or will the Disciples plant themselves in the new territory that is now being built up around the city and redeem in the next twenty years the failures of the past twenty?

It will be a mistake to assume that this is the problem alone of the present Chicago churches. A little group of something over twenty congregations, twelve of them able to support ministers without outside help, is not sufficient for the problems of a city with two and a half millions of people and shortly to have five millions.

The man who raises a factional issue in the face of a religious need like this betrays the cause of Christ. Chicago needs the hearty and enthusiastic interest of the whole body of Disciples.

THE TITHING PROPAGANDA

BEFORE the organized agencies of the Disciples of Christ are allowed to go too far in the tithing propaganda it might seem wise to subject the principle to a very searching scrutiny and study.

The movement is a most radical departure from the accepted point of view. Through the influence of Alexander Campbell's sane distinction between the Old and New Testaments, the Disciples have always held to an anti-legalistic morality. The revival of the tithing principle would seem to involve the displacement of the stewardship ideal which has been coming into increasing influence in the Christian conscience, due to a new reading of Christ's teachings and to the strength of the social motive in modern society.

Does not the current emphasis upon the tithing principle indicate a lapse in ethical insight? Does it not lead the Church up a blind alley, which, though it seems fair at the entrance, ends in a spirit of pharisaism?

The fact that the introduction of the tithing principle raises more money than before is quite irrelevant to one who knows that the important thing about Christian giving is not the amount collected but the type of manhood and womanhood produced by the gift-making.

It seems to some that a false theology, a false biblical interpretation and a false ethic underlie the tithing movement.

It is hardly conceivable that the temporary good involved in somewhat increased collections could outweigh the many permanent and deepgoing evils resulting from a system that is theologically, biblically and ethically erroneous.

It is not intended at this time to argue the case pro or con, but simply to call the attention of certain missionary officials to the advisability of moving with some caution in giving official sanction to a propaganda upon which the Disciples are likely to divide with more intensity of feeling than they display in their division over any other issue with which they are now confronted.

Meantime, if any thoughtful word is offered to us, on either side of this question, we will be glad to give it utterance through the columns of this newspaper.

RECONCILIATION AMONG CLASSES

ONE of the astonishing sentences in the report of the Commission on Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is the following: "The industrial horizon is heavy with the clouds of impending conflict. There is evident a widespread and persistent attempt not only to check the spread of industrial democracy, but also to destroy or nullify those partial expressions of its principles which are now in existence and to substitute for them a control in which the workingmen have no voice."

This has been a year of strikes and rumors of strikes. The conditions have been such that these strikes have been in large measure successful. The workingmen of the country will be demanding larger and ever larger slices of the war prosperity and the capitalists will resist each new encroachment with vigor. There is rumor of a new capitalistic organization to resist unions.

Meanwhile there is need of hand-to-hand contact between the leaders of the workers and the leaders of the capitalists. A socialist of pronounced tendencies declared to his audience the other day that he despised his task, which would come to him in a few hours, of speaking from the same platform with John D. Rockefeller, Jr. When the time came, and when the latter had finished speaking, the socialist was moved to say that he agreed with practically everything the great capitalistic economist had said. What these men needed in order to an understanding of each other was simply to get together and exchange ideas.

The church can be a great reconciler of social classes. It should be the function of every church to bring workingmen and employers into personal contact, especially in times when there is no burning issue to warp the judgment of these men.

Capitalists are not all devils. Labor union walking delegates are not all incendiaries. They are men subject to the human appeal as are all other men. The task that is more fundamental than arbitration is reconciliation. The latter principle can be kept working every day in the year.

THE APPEAL TO ARMS

REV. H. W. ELLIOTT, the genial state secretary of Kentucky Disciples, had a remarkable experience recently in one of his mountain visits. Riding in the coach was a mountaineer who, true to the traditions of his class, was enjoying a smoke to the great discomfort of the passengers. Still, that booted not. The smoker must smoke no matter at what cost.

Mr. Elliott, spokesman of every good cause, gently and casually enough reminded the offender that the smoking car was just ahead. Whereupon the mountaineer jumped to his feet and leveled a huge revolver at the ample chest of the state secretary. Did Mr. Secretary take to the woods, or drop on his knees and beg for mercy? No, gentle reader, he did not. Having had much to do with militant churches and other armed organizations for twenty-five years, that formidable revolver had no terrors for him. It looked as harmless as a shoe horn. His knees did not smite one against the other, nor did the pith go out of his legs. He had ridden into the jaws of death so often that what to ordinary people would have been a dazing sensation, was to him a situation to be met by an established rule of life. He sidestepped and fell back upon his wits.

"I thought you were a gentleman," said the secretary, "and I knew that if you were you would thank me for telling you that you were in the wrong car."

This Hague Conference had the desired effect. It was equal to one of President Wilson's notes that kept us out of war. It was oil upon the troubled waters.

The mountaineer smiled, put up his deadly weapon, held out his hand, and went on into the smoker. The crisis had passed.

As a peacemaker Secretay Elliott ought to be made the editor of one of our religious journals.

OPPOSED TO UNION

DR. THOMAS B. NEELY is a retired bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He recently made an address in Chicago on his attitude toward the union question. He expressed his disapproval of the union of the Methodists with Presbyterians and Congregationalists in Canada. He further considered the union of the Methodists with other denominations in China in educational work and gave his unqualified disapproval. Even the approaching union of northern and southern Methodists was branded as undesirable.

This would all be discouraging enough were it not for the fact that the bishop is now retired and his voice will not greatly influence the policies of his church. He stands as the representative of the dying spirit of denominationalism which has stood pat for all things as they are. This kind of man is to be found in all denominations, but in almost every case he is rapidly passing out of the circle of the men who determine the denominational policies.

Opposition to Christian union has arisen out of the small group loyalties that men feel so keenly. This opposition has defended itself with various weapons.

Sometimes it is stated that some particular brand of union will result in a sacrifice of the truth. The truth that is not to be sacrificed nearly always turns out to be some small dogma which is no longer of much concern to the big world.

Then there are those who have defended division on the ground that denominations are well organized and there would be a loss of efficiency in a combination of interests. In these days of imperial vision on the part of business men, such a point of view does not seem well taken. Combination does not mean a loss of efficiency.

It is further argued on occasion that union means a loss of liberty to some. Perhaps it does. There is always a sacrifice of some sort of liberty when men unite for social action. We are learning these days that even so good a thing as liberty is to be enjoyed in moderation.

THE ABANDON OF THE TRUE CHRISTIAN

IT WAS the sin of Ananias and Sapphira that they held something back. They pretended to a devotion they did not possess. Our Lord insisted that the man who laid his hand upon the plow and looked back was not worthy of Him. He further insisted that in behalf of the kingdom a man might have to forsake father and mother and other dear ones. Religion was to be the one supreme interest in the life of the Christian.

It is just here that the life of the average Christian is very weak. Religion is only one of many interests. The people of the United States spent more in ice cream parlors last year than in religious work. Is this an indication of religious interest? A count of the people in the motion picture houses these days reveals a larger attendance in many cities at these places of amusement than the combined attendance at the churches for the week. Do people estimate the importance of religion by the amount of time they are willing to give it?

In the life of the soul, how prone is the individual Christian to make reservations with regard to religion! Many a young woman has felt the call to go to a foreign field, but the impulse has been resisted. The young man has hesitated between the pulpit and the marketplace and has chosen the latter. There was no true abandon of the soul to the higher impulses.

We are often impelled to believe more than the poor logic of our minds will permit. We shrink before religious enthusiasm lest it lay hold upon us and make us one of the prophets.

There is a deep sense in which the man who follows Christ must forsake all things. The rich young ruler just missed a great religious experience. He had not learned the spiritual secrets that come only to those who practice self-surrender. To be truly great in the things of the spirit, we must find our wills by making them one with the great will of the universe.

THE WIDENING SPHERE OF PREACHING

THE recent decision of Mr. William J. Bryan to give himself to the discussion of moral issues, and to political issues only as they are related to the moral, helps us to understand the wider field into which the function of preaching is passing. Incidentally, some of the great dailies see in this decision the passing of Mr. Bryan. As a matter of fact it marks the coming of Mr. Bryan into the deeper life of the people. He is beginning to reach people at their firesides. When such a man dies the world actually talks itself into silence through excessive praise. His faults will be forgotten. His virtues will be magnified, and others attributed to him that he never possessed. The myth-makers will get busy, no matter what his detractors may do now. He is a great addition to the ranks of the ministry, and to the long line of prophets.

The college baccalaureate in these days is often delivered by men who have never been ordained to the ministry. Wherein differs their utterances from the man who has been ordained?

There are thousands of real sermons preached every year by men and women who make no claim to the title of preacher. There are sermons delivered in theaters today which move multitudes to better living, although the preacher is an actor. Those who have seen Sir Forbes Robertson in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" will understand this.

A sermon is not necessarily a sermon because delivered from a pulpit. The lecture delivered from a Chautauqua platform may be a real sermon. The pulpit these days is having great acquisitions from unecclesiastical quarters.

TIRED OF LIFE

THE metropolitan daily on Monday morning invariably contains the stories of those who have betaken themselves from this world in untimely fashion the day before. When one reflects how unhappy and how lonesome these souls were to be moved to this kind of end, our hearts feel a deep pity, however much we disapprove the deed. We no longer say that all suicide is the result of insanity. There are souls which deliberately balance the question—

> "To be, or not to be, that is the question:
> Whether it is nobler in the mind to suffer
> The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
> Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
> And by opposing end them."

The contagion of self-homicide has gone even into the church, and the solaces of religion have not been sufficient to keep some weary souls with us. Have these felt sufficiently their responsibility to the great Master of life? Pythagoras said a noble word: "We ought not to quit our post without the permission of Him who commands: the post of man is life."

The city needs closer friendships. It needs warmer social life in the churches. It needs sermons with less of speculation and more of comfort in them. It needs a religion with a God so real that He will wipe away all tears from our eyes. He will teach us to bear our sorrows as Job bore his; and better, He will give us the strength to carry our cross as Jesus Christ carried His.

Death comes soon enough for us all. Even were life as comfortless as the unhappy souls who go away untimely think, there would not be many years to endure it.

Whatever life is, it is the world's most precious thing. We think wrongly if we deny it. Whatever disappointment it may bring, life is the great word in our struggling world.

THE CLERGYMAN IN THE MOVIES

HAVE you ever noticed, you who frequent the motion picture plays, that when a clergyman is to play the clown or the "softie" or some other character calculated to draw the contempt of the audience upon the clerical office, it is nearly always a Protestant minister who appears in the role? Whereas, it is a Catholic priest who appears when the role reflects dignity and strength?

There is something very subtle and sinister in the effect of this upon the public mind.

The priest is enhanced in dignity; the minister's reputation is degraded.

Protestantism cannot afford good-naturedly to tolerate the slanderous influence of this mode of treating its ministry.

It is a subject that ought to be preached on until the playgoers are made conscious of the unjust discrimination and are stirred to protest against it.

ON SENTINEL DOME

(Yosemite)

By Harley R. Wiley

Our feet have pressed the upper trail,
  Our hearts achieved a higher birth;
Our souls exchanged their wordless hail
  Across the border peaks of Earth.

We felt a Presence vast— We knew
  The hand that flung the stars abroad,
And white across the mystic blue
  There gleamed a thousand thrones of God.

Ah, then I knew that life is good!—
  My soul was singing: "All is well";—
I spoke with one who understood,
  Ringed round by heights invisible.

Some Force, too deep to be denied,
  In that austerity of space
Had swept the veil of flesh aside
  And set our souls thus face to face.

Your feet were strung for farther heights
  And mine turned on their rugged way;
But in those high, unshadowed lights
  Is limned one white and golden day.

Growing an Educational Conscience

Some Questions Inspired by a Consideration of the Early History of Christian Education Among the Disciples

By HERBERT MARTIN

THAT the Disciples throughout their history have claimed a conscience in the matter of education none can deny. That they have made good their claim some sometimes are given to doubt. This conscience comparatively early in our history found expression in the establishment of schools and colleges. The purposes for which these institutions were founded have rarely been appreciated. This misunderstanding is a regrettable phase of our educational history. The impression has gone abroad and become well-nigh universal that our institutions were established primarily for the purpose of training men for the ministry of the Word. That this is a worthy object we all agree. That such an enterprise has not in a single instance been adequately provided for is a most obvious truth.

WHY WERE THE COLLEGES ESTABLISHED?

This special work, however, a canvass of the charters of our leading colleges reveals, was not the only purpose, nor was it in most instances the primary one for which these colleges were founded. A few selections from their charters and by-laws must suffice:

Bethany: "A seminary of learning for the instruction of youth in the various branches of science and literature, the useful arts, agriculture, and the learned and foreign languages."

Hiram: "Instruction of youth of both sexes in the various branches of literature and science, especially of moral science as based on the facts and precepts of the Holy Scriptures."

Butler: "An institution of learning of the highest class . . . to establish in said institution departments or colleges for the instruction of students in every branch of liberal and professional education; to educate and prepare suitable teachers for the common schools of the country; to teach and inculcate the Christian faith and Christian morality as taught in the Sacred Scriptures . . . and for the promotion of the sciences and arts."

Texas Christian University: "The establishment and maintenance of an institution of learning of university rank for the education and training of students in the arts, sciences and languages, and in all branches of learning, under Christian influence, so that such education shall include due regard to moral and religious development and competent instruction in the Holy Scriptures."

Transylvania: "For the purpose of promoting the cause of education in all its branches, and extending the sphere of science and Christian morality."

College of the Bible: "To prepare young men for usefulness in the church by furnishing them with systematic instruction in the Word of God, in both the English version and the original tongues, and with an accurate knowledge of the higher branches of English literature. While its course of study is especially adapted for those who intend to become preachers of the Gospel, it is not a professional school, its classes being open to all religious young men who wish to extend their knowledge of the Scriptures."

Drake: "An institution of higher learning . . . independent of ecclesiastical control by will of its founders, for the Disciples of Christ are a non-sectarian religious people averse to ecclesiastical government of any kind." (Catalogue.) "The object and purpose of this organization shall be to establish and maintain . . . a university for the education of persons of both sexes in the higher branches. Besides the usual collegiate courses, the Board shall have power to establish and maintain Bible, Law, Medical, Art, Musical, Commercial, Practical, Mechanical and other departments, or schools, at such times and in such manner as they may deem expedient." (Art. II, Arts of Inc.) "All departments of this university shall be open alike for both sexes, and for those of any religion or race." "This university has been designed upon a broad, liberal and modern basis. The articles of incorporation provide that all its departments shall be open to all without distinction of sex, religion, or race. In its management and influence it will aim at being Christian without being sectarian." (Prelim. Announcement, 1881.)

THE FATHERS DID NOT FEAR TRUTH

Such a review reveals the character of the educational conscience of the fathers of our movement. Their vision had breadth. They had faith in, and no fear of truth. They recognized what we have not always so clearly seen, that the destiny of our people is not only inseparably related to education but is dependent upon the education of our youth. Their aim was nothing less than a genuinely liberal education, an education that would free men and women from local limitations and cave prejudices and make possible to them an abundant life, a life universal.

The significance of this adventure in liberal education, in Christian culture, cannot easily be over-estimated. Those men envisioned of God, disciples of the Great Teacher, so conceived and planned their program of Christian education. Christian education was not for them a thing apart, not an aesthetic contemplation, not an other-world enterprise. It not only did not disesteem or disregard any form of human interest, but it consisted of, was identical with, those great vital human concerns, those products of countless souls dedicated to the true, the beautiful and the good in language and literature, in science and art and in religion and philosophy. In short, it included all those forms or channels of human experience in and through which God increasingly reveals Himself to inquiring and aspiring souls.

OUR EDUCATIONAL STEWARDSHIP

This, then, was their concept of Christian education—knowledge of God on the part of our youth, irrespective of sex or race, not perpendicularly and individually acquired, but laterally and socially by the circuitous way of science, art and literature, all supplemented, illuminated and spiritualized by Him who taught and lived as none other, knowledge of whom and the Father means undying life.

In view of such foundation-stones and principles, I call us to give account of our educational stewardship. The fact that we have not apprehended the spirit and purpose, and therefore, have not practiced the program of those princes in intellectual and spiritual realms, this is tragic in the life of our people. For lack of their vision our institutions as well as our people wander, while some perish. Our educational thinking has not measured up to theirs. Only when we deepen and heighten our thought will our practice and program be advanced.

THE EARLY EMPHASIS

This deviation, this departure from the vision and program of our fathers is seen not only in a general neglect, but too often in a positive disesteem of the arts and sciences. The great emphasis in our educational work from that inaugural period until almost the present time has been upon the preparation of the minister. That emphasis was due in some measure, doubtless, to the increasing difficulties our people of the second generation experienced in the progress of their work. It is to be regretted that the urgency of the problem seemed to necessitate so wide a departure from the broad basis originally planned.

Misunderstood and therefore, shall we say, misrepresented they found themselves on the defensive. The will to live proved inspirational. This situation not only gave definition to their cause; it determined the form of their response. Men capable of interpreting and defending the sacred Scriptures constituted the need of the hour.

To this our schools devoted their energies and in so doing under the stress of immediate need, departed from the broad basis indicated in their charters. Throughout this tangential period of our life we sought to qualify men to be the bearers of a content of doctrine rather than, in addition, to make them intellectually competent, and socially effective, mediators to a people of life in all its beauty and richness. This in turn has given fashion to our spirit and made us an evangelistic people unprecedented. Such I feel in a broad general way fairly characterizes the second stage in the development of our educational conscience.

DEMAND OF NEW CONDITIONS

We are now in the morning of the third day. May I say that these stages or periods of our development must not be thought of as exclusive of each other. They must be regarded rather as accentuations. The broad lines of the earliest period have never been completely lost in the later emphasis. Training for the ministry will continue to be a most significant feature of our educational program. With the progress of the age new conditions will demand new emphases.

The newer note of our own day is being sounded compellingly by the Men and Millions movement. Its clarion call to a really consecrated life is being heard by a brotherhood great in resources and possibilities. In this most social age of the world's life it challenges us to the only life worth while, the life of unselfish service. It rightly assumes an affirmative answer to the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" makes it a premise and passes on to exhibit the inferences that follow therefrom. With a fine philosophy and a sound psychology it asks for gifts and givers alike. Either by itself is partial and fragmentary. "The gift without the giver is bare." In its chiefest emphasis upon life it places first things first. Life is all-inclusive. "What will a man give in exchange for his life?" Increasingly I am led to believe that there is no other value comparable to life guided by and consecrated to consciously chosen, ideal, social ends. This is the fiber of the real; this alone is reality.

A BROADER EDUCATIONAL BASIS

Such a program as this necessitates a return to the broader educational basis set forth in the charters of our schools. To qualify men and women to become the bearers of life in all its fullness to a people here and now is a different task from making them the bearers of a definite content of doctrine whose values are realized mainly in the sweet by-and-by. In its demand for college trained men and women it brings to our consciousness a new appreciation of education. The work in the far fields to whose consecration our young life is being called demands engineers, experts in sanitation, in soil cultivation, in building, in government, scientists to fight disease, physicians, dentists, nurses, homemakers, teachers as well as preachers. Their function is legion. The missionary of today is first of all a pioneer in the enterprise of civilization. The task demands the best minds most highly trained, hands that are strong and specially skilled, and hearts of refined and generous sympathies. None other need apply. The influence of this type of work and worker upon our educational theory and practice needs no further comment of mine.

THE ULTIMATE GOAL

To justify their continued existence our schools must provide such a training. But how can they provide this training without equipment? How can they be equipped without being adequately financed, and how financed without the liberal support of an opportunity-seeing and education-loving people? This emphasis by the Men and Millions movement upon the changing character both of the work and the qualifications of the worker marks very clearly a new epoch in the development of our educational conscience.

And yet irresistible as is this program we cannot rest even with its realization. No one who has reflected long upon the philosophy of education and its function and meaning in life will look upon this as the ultimate goal. We are not yet by such a program brought beyond the instrumental view of education. Its goal is objective. It makes education a means. Men and women are being trained as instruments or agents to accomplish ends somewhat external to themselves. Men are not mere means or instruments even to other men. Every man is to some degree an end in himself. In this consists the inherent dignity of the soul. It has worth in itself.

THE MAKING OF MEN

In the later activity of the creative days God said: "Let us make man." This as our motto will mark the highest stage yet attained in the development of our educational conscience. Not the possession of race experience mediated by a broad curriculum, not the preparation of men to be the bearers of a content of doctrine, not the training of men for effective social service, not any of these alone, but all together, sublimated, refined, and interpreted in terms of the creation of man.

Ultimately considered education has no other purpose than the making of men. Our greatest need is an appreciation of education as a process in man-making. We need leaders in education with a prophet's insight, with a prophet's capacity for apprehending and interpreting meanings and values, with a prophet's sympathy, men who understand the psychology of souls, men who have a reflective philosophy of life, who will regard themselves as nothing less than co-operators with God in his creative work.

SELF SCRUTINY NEEDED

May I in a few paragraphs indicate some points whose observance might contribute to a further development of our educational conscience? We have attained such a measure of maturity as time alone makes possible. We have gained deserved recognition and now count as an important factor in the religious life of our day. This maturity and recognition as a member of the society of communions carries with it an inescapable consequence, viz.: submission to the criticism of the members of the group. My interest here, however, is in criticism from within rather than beyond ourselves.

In observing the temper of our people I have wished ofttimes that we might exhibit a larger capacity for impartial self-appraisement. Society is built upon it in principle. The right to self-scrutiny differentiates a democracy from an aristocracy. Public service corporations invite suggestion and criticism. Two friends of mine, strong men, invite criticism of their behaviors that they may become more effective. Weak men are incapable of this. Capacity for self-scrutiny makes progress possible. Criticism belongs to life. The dead we criticize not, for they are dead. Criticism means discernment. It means to face facts, to analyze, to evaluate. Incapacity for this is a sign either of immaturity or decay. My calm and deliberate judgment is that a kindlier recognition and welcome to sympathetic self-criticism would speed the progress and improve the quality of our work.

PROFESSION AND PRACTICE

Another need here suggested is what might be called a moral self-scrutiny, the former being mainly intellectual. I refer to the discrepancy that sometimes obtains between our profession and our practice. Whether from genuine appreciation or from the pressure of environment we claim to desire and esteem education. As an evidence of this we may point to our educational institutions, to the growing enrollment in our colleges, or to the increasing number of our graduates who pursue their studies in the higher institutions of learning. Yet it is a notorious fact that many such persons in seeking later to work with us are regarded by us with suspicion. Such disesteem for training and scholarship means that our churches and schools are suffering a serious "leakage at the top," a loss which we can ill afford.

Do we really desire a trained ministry? What is the answer of our behavior? Do we who possess no more sincerity, who have had no more advantages, who are no more competent than they, stand by them, or over them? Do we desire men of the finest quality of soul, of unquestioned character, of well-trained minds, to set the ideals and direct the thinking of our youth?

THE JONAH TEST

Not a decade ago a young man was solicited with reference to the presidency of one of our colleges. He held the Doctor's degree gained through three years' residence at one of the greatest universities of this land. In addition he had the advantages of considerable foreign travel. According to appointment he met the board in solemn array. An hour's courtesies were exchanged. Later a dinner was arranged at the home of one of the members of the board. The presidential prospect, naive as he was, observed that a local preacher, generously lacking in the qualifications just mentioned, not a member of the board, a Jupiter tonans, directed the inquisition. Among other features of the qualifying process special interest was manifested in discovering the young man's appreciation of that unique mode of transportation, that first sub-sea voyage of history which began somewhere near Joppa and ended three days' journey from Ninevah.

In view of such procedure in all sincerity I ask, are we in earnest when we claim an educational conscience? Is our zeal for education according to knowledge? Are we engaged in verbal juggling? Are we playing an inconsistent game unconsciously? The failure of one's practice to square with his profession is a serious moral situation. Candor, and frankness, and scrutiny are needed here. It is not time for us to realize more clearly that education is a science, and as such that its direction demands trained leaders?

"MORE LIFE"

Once more: a deeper insight into the significance of education for the individual is desired. That the education of the youth is not an incidental thing we must more clearly realize. Failure to apprehend education as essentially a process of soul-building explains our indifference. More life has been humanity's expiring cry, borne to us from unfinished canvas and marble, from verses incomplete, from mother's prayer, from missionary mounds the world over. Education is a life-giving process. Life is its essence, its meaning, its purpose. That we might really believe that souls grow, that education is constitutive of life, that the proportions of the soul vary with it; that our youth might realize that education determines the measure of their life, the size of their world; that our adult life might catch the vision of possibility, of opportunity and privilege that is theirs for themselves and their children through education. Then would humanity behold the sublime spectacle of a thoroughly consecrated people, their eager youth crowding their halls of learning, seeking to possess and thus becoming capable of imparting life, their adults demanding and joyously and bountifully providing every facility for carrying on more adequately the only enterprise of earth, and for which all others exist, the making of man, the fashioning of human life into the image of God.

And the heart-desire and life-effort of humanity's Great Teacher will be more completely realized for He himself came to give life.

Lloyd George's Vision

Editor's Note:—Soon after the opening of the great war the man now become premier of Great Britain spoke in London in prophecy of the effects of the hard sacrifices his people must endure. In his peroration he gave utterance to the following rather daring vision of the social effects of the war:

THE people will gain more by this struggle in all lands than they comprehend at the present moment. It is true they will be free of the greatest menace to their freedom. That is not all. There is something infinitely greater and more enduring which is emerging already out of this great conflict — a new patriotism, richer, nobler, and more exalted than the old.

I see amongst all classes, high and low, shedding themselves of selfishness, a new recognition that the honor of the country does not depend merely on the maintenance of its glory in the stricken field, but also in protecting its homes from distress.

It is bringing a new outlook for all classes. The great flood of luxury and sloth which had submerged the land is receding, and a new Britain is appearing. We can see for the first time the fundamental things that matter in life and that have been obscured from our vision by the tropical growth of prosperity.

* * *

May I tell you in a simple parable what I think this war is doing for us? I know a valley in North Wales, between the mountains and the sea. It is a beautiful valley, snug, comfortable, sheltered by the mountains from all the bitter blasts. But it is very enervating, and I remember how the boys were in the habit of climbing the hill above the village to have a glimpse of the great mountains in the distance and to be stimulated and freshened by the breezes which came from the hilltops, and by the great spectacle of their grandeur.

* * *

We have been living in a sheltered valley for generations. We have been too comfortable and too indulgent, many, perhaps, too selfish, and the stern hand of fate has scourged us to an elevation where we can see the great everlasting things that matter for a nation—the great peaks we had forgotten, of Honor, Duty, Patriotism, and, clad in glittering white, the great pinnacle of Sacrifice pointing like a rugged finger to heaven.

We shall descend into the valleys again; but as long as the men and women of this generation last, they will carry in their hearts the image of those great mountain peaks whose foundations are not shaken, though Europe rock and sway in the convulsions of a great war.

THE SOURCE OF POWER

By H. E. Fosdick

Prayer is the innermost form of the fight for character. As Clement of Alexandria in the second century put it: "The aim of prayer is to attain the habit of goodness, so as no longer merely to have the things that are good, but rather to be good." * * * The profoundest need of the world is clean, strong, devoted personality. We are poor there—not in material prosperity or organizing skill or intellectual ingenuity, but in radiant, infectious, convincing personality. The real poverty is poverty of character, and that is due in how large measure to the lack of those spiritual disciplines and fellowships that are included in genuine prayer.

American Ideals

A Protest Against the Theories of Militarism

BY OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD
Editor of the New York Evening Post

I SPEAK in no other role than that of the son of a family that came to the United States from Rhenish Bavaria when driven out by the guns of the Prussian militarists. No less than two members thereof had the death sentence of treason imposed upon them—fortunately in their absence. They were among the many who flocked to us from abroad to escape the very evils and burdens of militarism which we are now asked voluntarily to embrace. To them as to me, our American ideals have been those of service to humanity and to liberty, to create, not to destroy.

To be a refuge to the oppressed of all nations has been our chiefest aim. Our ideal has been to let the newcomers develop as best they might without putting upon them the great burden of enforced military service, or of supporting a large army and navy. Their happiness upon our soil, the eagerness with which they sought, and seek, our citizenship, the passionate loyalty that a Franc Sigel, a Carl Shurz, a Jacob Riis, or a Mary Antin, brought to our unarmed country, justifies us in asserting that more than any others, our institutions, however imperfect, satisfy the human longing for equality of opportunity, for the right to rise in the social scale in accordance with ability and merit, for equality in Government and in the courts of justice.

TEACHING MEN TO KILL

Now, as one of that stock, as well as the son of a father who followed in the army and navy of the North for four years, from Bull Run to the final campaign, I should be untrue and unfaithful to their spirit, if I did not protest with all my might and power against this new doctrine that our American ideals contemplate a nation in arms, either as a citizenry or as professional soldiery, and against the new-born theory that we must devote a still larger portion of our wealth than the seventy-five cents out of every dollar of our income we now devote to the ignoble business of teaching men to kill by wholesale; that we must hold up to our sons the ideals of the military camp and of the battleship deck, that we must denounce Bernhardism but surrender to its teachings, abhor the gospel but accept of its sacrament as something better, finer, nobler, more worth while than the ideals of peace and good will America has cherished heretofore.

Let no true American believe this. Let no true American believe for a moment that there is anything in the terrors abroad to make us follow in their footsteps of disaster and abjure the wisest teachings of our fathers and forefathers and the founders of our great Republic. Let no one believe that our immunity during one hundred years during which we were unarmed, unafraid and never molested by any foreign nation save the English in the aftermath War of 1812, was accidental.

A CHANGE OF POLICY

Let none consent that we should fling away our peaceful ideals, our traditions, change the policy of all our national existence and abandon the wonderful, the dominating moral position in which the United States today finds itself as the arbiter and leader in the neutral sentiment of the world, without at least waiting for the outcome of the struggle abroad, and reasoning carefully and calmly but in cold blood as to what the cost of a change is going to be.

Without awaiting the finish of the war of nations to benefit by its lessons, we are urged to spend hundreds of millions now, by men who swear by all that is holy, that they alone are patriots, that they alone are the defenders of our national honor and our nationality, and who assert at the same time that they are not militarists, but true pacifists, the greatest lovers of peace we have.

LARGE ARMIES FROM SMALL

How familiar the sound, how familiar the pretense! Those of us who have lived abroad at intervals can say these platitudes over backwards and forwards with our eyes shut. They are all pacifists, the militarists the world over, all merely insurance agents to keep our national edifices from burning down, all custodians of the pristine virtues—the Austrians, the Germans, the French, the Russians, and the Turkish military men and general staffs. They all began the same way; every one of the large armies and navies grew out of small ones.

All this in an hour when no experts the world over are as discredited as the military experts. How have not the prophecies of the professional soldier been made ridiculous by the events of Europe! The Germans themselves have proved through daring and courage of their volunteers that the Prussian worship of regular troops was ill-founded. Von Hindenberg's new armies, so he and the Kaiser boast, have fought just as well and as successfully in Poland against the Russians as have the flower of the Imperial Guard. In trench warfare the recruit appears the equal of the long trained soldier.

THEORIES OF WAR OVERTHROWN

The editors of our own Infantry Journal have been trying to make Congress believe that it takes two years to create infantry soldiers. Lord Kitchener, through his Canadian troops, has already made nonsense of this talk. For years military experts the world over have been telling us that in modern battles there could be no bayonet charges; that hand to hand conflicts were impossible and that the armies would be firing at one another at such ranges as to be practically invisible.

The hundreds of thousands of men now bent on killing one another in trenches so close together that hand bombs and grenades may be thrown from one to the other, are a terrible blow to the finality of this judgment. So we were solemnly told by European experts that cavalry ought to carry the lance for shock contests and now we learn that cavalry has lost practically all its value save as a screen.

So has the submarine falsified the prophecies of the naval experts, and so has the battleship yet to prove in this war that it is worth the horrible price paid for it.

DOES PEACE MAKE WEAKLINGS?

And surely we ought never to hear again such balderdash and stuff as certain prominent Americans have put out, claiming that the profession of arms is necessary to preserve the pristine virtues; that long periods of peace make craven, and weaklings; that military drill is necessary in order to keep alive the manly virtues. From college, factory and shop, from palace and from hovel, have come men by the millions, ready to die for their cause and physically able to withstand any draughts upon their strength.

I believe that I speak in the spirit of historical American ideals, at least as I interpret them as a devoted and loyal American citizen, when I say that the time is near at hand when the masses ought to rise in rebellion against this whole theory of war, demanding freedom of trade and harbors throughout the world, a union of nations where there is a union of States within a nation today, and internationalism as against nationalism. The thing for all sane men to hope, who believe in democracy, in Christianity, in humanity, in the brotherhood of man, is that the masses will refuse to be food for cannon at the behest of any masters, kings or queens or whatever their titles may be.

A REVOLUTION NEEDED

This is the kind of revolution the world needs above all else at this hour—a sweeping, overwhelming uniting against those who rob nations of seventy-five per cent of their income for war purposes, and take it away from the building of cities beautiful without slums, from the reclaiming of waste lands, of our deserts and our swamps, the developing of our waterways, our water powers and our highways, the true education of our masses, the leveling of every barrier of caste and prejudice.

In short, militarism withholds vast sums from the amelioration of the lot of the poor, the ill, the suffering, the wronged, the oppressed, and I am for bitter and harsh words about it now and always; I am for turning upon those who counsel that we shall plot to murder other nations and peoples either for offense or defense as true traitors to the nation, faithless to every American ideal, faithless to every teaching of Jesus, faithless to the God-like in humanity itself.

The Family and Social Welfare

Poverty and Luxury as Foes to National Upbuilding

By J. R. PERKINS

THE American family is threatened and there are forces in play which, if not checked, will result in less and less emphasis being placed on the vital importance of the family in the perpetuity of the state.

One does not have to be a prosy domestic man to value the family as the most potent institution in civilization. The state cannot endure if the family breaks down, so one of the highest duties of the man and the woman is to contribute to the life and health of the state through the family.

A LESSON FROM SHAKESPEARE

Ruskin has observed in the plays of Shakespeare that "the catastrophe of every play is caused always by the folly or fault of a man; the redemption, if there be any, is by the wisdom and virtue of a woman, and failing that, there is none." If the great dramatist's philosophy of sex life is true—and there is a world of truth in it—then the family is threatened by the man and not by the woman.

But while an impartial survey doubtless would sustain the playwright, there are certain other forces of which he did not dream that have been generated under a widely changed social order which involve the woman as well as the man. To look facts in the face, not to sing the praise of either sex, is the task.

ECONOMIC PRESSURE

The first danger that threatens the American home is from economic pressure. Economic pressure often thrusts the woman into industry after she is married. I am not speaking of the woman who chooses deliberately to enter the market place and work there; I am observing the effect on the home of the woman who is forced into the market place to help support the family. There are doubtless thousands of noble women in the wage world, who have volunteered to enter it, and who maintain themselves with dignity therein, but there are other thousands whose going is forced, and this strikes at the foundation of the family.

No domestic relation is safe where both the man and the woman are compelled to grapple in the wage world. I might be prosaic enough to say that no domestic relation is secure where a man goes one way and his wife another at 8 in the morning, and who meet at 6 in the evening to eat out of paper sacks. For the home must be more than a meeting place; more than a place "roofed over and lighted by a fire."

RACE SUICIDE

Race suicide is as much the result of economic pressure as from any other cause. Any woman worker will sustain me in my contention. It is quite useless for the sentimentalist longer to sing about the virtue of big and poor families. Even if quarreling kings do not feed big families to the cannon, poverty slays them. I do not censure any woman for refusing to bear children who knows that she must enter the noise and the dust of industry to support them. Any economic system that forces the mother to the market place as it forces the father is immoral, antiquated, at variance with ethics and religion, and is a breeder of vices that destroy the home and poison the state.

A second factor in the disintegration of the American family is luxury. Here is exactly the opposite side of the whole question. I do not think I am inconsistent here; rather am I unfolding a paradox. Just as there is the American family that is threatened by economic pressure, so there is the American family surfeited by luxury. Poverty is not a virtue, but luxury is a vice.

THE IDLE WOMAN

First, luxury breeds the idle woman in the home. Just as it is a sin and a shame to force a woman into industry so it is a shame and a sin for a woman to have no interests that rise to a task. In days of chivalry the lady buckled the armor on the knight if she did no more. But there are American women so listless with luxury that they are merely mistresses of men who fight battles. Again Ruskin says: "You cannot think that the buckling on of the knight's armor by his lady's hand was a mere caprice of romantic fashion. It is the type of an eternal truth—that the soul's armor is never well set to the heart unless a woman's hand has braced it; and it is only when she braces it loosely that the honor of manhood fails." It is the woman in luxury who has the greatest guilt in modern society for not bearing children.

LUXURY AS AN END

Nothing is so enfeebling as luxury. It begets an appetite that cannot be satisfied. It is the precursor of selfishness. It makes gratification an end of life, not simply a means. It begets in man a haughtiness and a pride in his superior ability to attain luxury. It leads him to a low regard of those who struggle only for necessities. Luxury deadens the intellect, and there are too many fat witted American families in process of decay because of luxury.

Now luxury is nothing more nor less than the result of inequality of opportunity. To have more than you need, and to hold it selfishly because it is yours—that is luxury and it is also degeneracy, making you a petty lord over the narrow empire of your own conceit.

HOLIDAY CHARITY

And now I shall say something that may seem far fetched as a factor in family degeneracy. I refer to the lack of social efficiency in our cities. Through the fault of our economic system, through the fault of environment and through the fault of the family itself every city has a problem of the poor. Witness our antiquated methods to meet given situations! Our methods do but weaken the will of the family to make its own way.

At special holiday seasons we rush to and fro with our offerings and baskets, without system, vision or constructive policy. Or throughout the year each community, working blindly, attempts family relief here and there, and many a man is made a lazy mendicant, many a family is taught idleness and the will of many a group is weakened by expectations of our constant and indiscriminate charity.

The true aim of charity is to strengthen the will of a family so that it will rise above the need thereof. Our cities have no efficiency on that score. They may boast of their individual efficiency, but they have no social efficiency. They do not relate themselves to their social problems. They are too busy making money, and their social problems multiply.

Making the weaker families to become stronger families is a task that calls for as much system and thought as is necessary in banking and factory and shop and store building. We are doing a lot of social bluffing and but little constructive work. We can get together when it comes to marketing our wares, but we lack solidarity when it comes to housing our poor, teaching them sobriety and thrift, the value of work and giving them hope through our earnestness to help them meet their problems.

"SOB STUFF AT CHRISTMAS"

I do not believe we have any very sincere interest in the dependent families of our communities. A little sob stuff at Christmas does not indicate it any more than to feed and clothe our own children but once a year would indicate that we loved them. A vital interest in the weaker families of our cities—and there are quite a few even in times of war wages—would lead us to lay aside our bickerings, our religious prejudices and get rid of a large amount of provincialism and wake up to the fact that the strong in a city have a duty to the weak. Winter is at hand; through our own neglect, if nothing else, we come up to winter and to family problems with no organization, no central authority, no constructive plans and largely no anything else that we should have to strengthen each link of family life.

Our antiquated charity methods in a modern city hurt and hinder instead of helping and developing the indigent family. We lack a social consciousness, and we are so busy buttressing our individual creeds for fear that some of our pet theological or economic theories will be injured that we fail in the very purpose for which economics and theology should exist.

Books for Christmas Buyers

THE SHEPHERD WHO WATCHED BY NIGHT. By Thomas Nelson Page. "They talk of him still in his old parish—of the good he did, and of his peaceful death on the day that of all the year signified Birth of Life." So closes this beautiful tale of the old preacher who took in all the tramps and who was faithful to his little flock, even unto death. An ideal gift for a minister. (Scribners, New York. 50 cents net.)

RHYMES OF A RED CROSS MAN. By Robert W. Service. All who have read "The Spell of the Yukon," that book of poems which sold up into the hundreds of thousands, will want to read this new volume of "the Kipling of America," who is serving in the European war as a "Red Cross Man." From these swinging verses one can learn how the great tragedy impresses a sensitive poet. (Barse & Hopkins, New York. $1.00 net.)

A HANDY BOOK FOR BEGGARS. By Vachel Lindsay. Another book of travel afoot by the poet who preaches the Gospel of Beauty in the homes of the people as he tramps through the country. The present volume tells of adventures in Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This poet's rules of the road are: "Keep away from the cities. Keep away from the railroads. Have nothing to do with money and carry no baggage. Ask for dinner about quarter after eleven. Ask for supper, lodging and breakfast about quarter of five. Travel alone. Be neat, deliberate, chaste and civil. Preach the Gospel of Beauty." Even those who do not become enthusiastic over the poetic flights of Mr. Lindsay must agree that he is interesting in his books of travel and adventure. Many a reader will come to an appreciation of much of his poetry by way of the reading of these prose works. (Macmillan, New York. $1.25 net.)

THE FIRE IN THE SNOW. By Charles E. Jefferson. "What is Christmas but a fire burning in the snow?" writes Dr. Jefferson in this little holiday offering. December is a month which has become a synonym for all that is cold and bleak. But in its midst comes Christmas, with its joys. Like all of Dr. Jefferson's work this is an inspirational piece of writing. (T. Y. Crowell, New York. 50 cents net.)

THE THREE THINGS. By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews. A classic. The three big things that grew like weeds in the garden of Phillip Landicutt's virtues were class pride, unbelief in the God of Christianity and race prejudice. He lost these in the trenches fighting for Belgium. "The greatest story the war has produced." (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.00 net.)

PETEY SIMMONS AT SIWASH. By George Fitch. Another college story by the late George Fitch, who was a genuine humorist, with no suggestion of acid in his nature. Full of good cheer is this story, as are all of his writings. Fitch is a wizard with college slang. Every man and woman who likes to observe human nature will enjoy this story. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.25 net.)

MISS PHENA. By Flora Swetman. "Miss Phena" is one of those sincere, whole-souled individuals who make you wish the whole world were made up of just such people. A good book for boys and girls; also for older young people and younger old people. (American Tract Society, New York. $1.00 net.)

WHEN THE BLIND SAW. By David de Forest Burrell. A Bethlehem story with all the atmosphere of Christmas. An ideal gift for young or old. (American Tract Society, New York. 75 cents.)

LETTERS OF THE DOMINIE. By David de Forest Burrell. The Dominie writes to an intimate friend of the serious problems which confront him in his pastoral work. An excellent gift for your minister friend. (American Tract Society, New York. $1.25 net.)

PAUL THE PREACHER. By John L. Rosser, Ph. M. An entirely new presentation of Paul's career by a new author who deals with the actual preaching of the great Apostle to the Gentiles. (American Tract Society, New York. 60 cents net.)

THE SPELL OF EGYPT. By Archie Bell. Some time ago "The Spell of Palestine," by this same writer, was reviewed in these columns. The present narrative of description of the land of the Pharaohs is both vivid and authoritative. The illustrations are admirable. There are eight plates in full color and many duogravures from photographs by E. M. Newman, the Chicago traveler. This "Spell Series" is one of the most beautiful sets of travel volumes published anywhere. (The Page Company, Boston. $2.50 net.)

THE SPELL OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS AND THE PHILIPPINES. By Isabel Anderson. Another volume of the "Spell Series." An account of the historical and political conditions of our Pacific possessions, together with description of the natural charm and beauty of the countries and the strange and interesting customs of their peoples. (The Page Co., Boston. $2.50 net.)

STEVENSON: HOW TO KNOW HIM. By Richard A. Rice. This is another of the series of books on great authors edited by Professor Will D. Howe. The story of Robert Louis Stevenson is an interesting one and reflects the charm of the inimitable R. L. S. Yet Professor Rice is not blind to the imperfections of Stevenson's work. (Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis. $1.25 net.)

BETTY AT FORT BLIZZARD. By Molly Elliot Seawell. A straight-away army love story of a young officer, and the daughter of a colonel of a far northwestern fort. Mrs. Seawell here maintains her standard as a popular writer for the young. Her recent death will call renewed attention to her work. Lippincott, Philadelphia. $1.50 net.)

ROD OF THE LONE PATROL. By H. A. Cody. The old captain takes into his heart a small boy, teaches him to swim, sail a boat, etc. A fine boy's story, pleasant and entertaining and with the right sort of teaching for developing American youth. (Doran, New York. $1.25 net.)

THE WANDERING DOG. By Marshall Saunders. A book by the author of the famous story, "Beautiful Joe," written over twenty years ago. The hero of this book is a wire-haired terrier, whose adventures take him to the Bowery and also to the homes of the well-to-do of New York City. Miss Saunders, the author, has a world reputation as an authority on dogs. Grown-ups as well as younger readers will enjoy this story. (Doran, New York. $1.50 net.)

FAIRY OPERETTAS. By Laura E. Richards. Several of the nursery rhymes written up in operetta form. For young children. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.00 net.)

[Any of the books mentioned on this page can be obtained from the Disciples Publication Society, Chicago.]

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

A Negro Exodus to the North

ONE of the pre-election scare heads was to the effect that 60,000 negroes had crossed the Ohio River within two months. The supposition was that they had been colonized for the sake of votes in such doubtful states s Ohio and Iniana. Whatever ere the facts egarding Voters' Colonzation," there s an undoubted xodus of egroes to the North of late. There are several reasons assignable, among which are that the boll weevil has destroyed the cotton crop very widely in the South, and cotton is the main dependence of the negro farmer. Another is that the high wages offered by munition plants and in other lines of industry because of the war has lured thousands. The railroads are said to have sent agents into the South and to have enlisted some 60,000 colored men for railroad work. The same is true of the coal fields and other industries where a large contingent of unskilled labor is required. Some of the reasons given by negro leaders are the desire to escape from the humiliation that southern social and political discrimination visits upon them and an opportunity to take active part in politics; in other words, a larger measure of social equality is bringing them north as well as the better opportunities to educate their children in northern schools. Just how far these supposed advantages operate is altogether guesswork, but that there is a drift of the negro population northward is beyond doubt.

The question to be raised is whether it is better for the negro. Will the northern man extend any superior advantages in social equality and industrial opportunity? Let us remember that northern states held slaves until it was found unprofitable, and the South held to slaves because it was profitable. The North need arrogate no superior moral qualities over their southern neighbors in the matter. Let us also remember that the social discrimination practiced against negroes in northern cities is in no whit different from that in southern cities. The real estate, church, school and industrial discriminations are just as keen in the north as in the south where the negro element in the population is great enough to bring these questions to an issue. The negro may find in the end no greater hospitality in the north than in the south and at the same time less paternal interest. Another disadvantage that accrues to the colored population in the northward drift is that they are moving largely from agricultural districts of the south, the most wholesome habitat for the colored man in his present stage of industrial advancement, into the cities of the north, bringing with him the same poverty, lack of sanitary precaution and ignorance that he had before, but which was much more tolerable in the open air of the rural district than in the closed compounds of the congested city quarters.

* * *

Farmers Getting Together in Western Canada

There will be held soon in the city of Winnipeg a congress of 600 delegates representing 100,000 farmers in western Canada, who have organized for co-operation and mutual benefit. The elevator companies have been buying wheat at $1 and selling it from $1.70 to $2. The mills boast that they have made a profit of 30 per cent. The system of grading adopted in the great elevators of the great wheat country of the Northwest yearly take millions of dollars out of the hands of the farmers on the one hand and the consumers on the other through their grading system, whereby wheat is graded low at the receiving elevator and high at the distributing elevator. These Canadian farmers have wakened up. They have found elevator and mill men co-operating for mutual advantage, but to the disadvantage of both the producer and the consumer. This farmers' organization has doubled its membership in the last year and done an actual business of $100,000,000. It has taken control of strings of elevators along the railroads of western Canada and erected a mammoth terminal elevator at the head of the Great Lakes. It has dictated this year the selling of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, and now the farmers are demanding co-operative mills under semi-governmental control for all their section of the Dominion. They propose that instead of wheat, which they sell for $1 per bushel, being turned to the consumer in flour at $10 per barrel, when it could be sold for $6 at a profit, that this enormous profit of the middle man shall be squeezed out and divided between the producer and the consumer. These farmers were the power behind the program to create the Hudson Bay project, through which the government is building a railroad to the bay and establishing a line of steamers to Europe for the sake of moving Canadian wheat cheaply in the season when the ice is out. They will demand also at Winnipeg a system of rural credits such as this government has adopted; free wheat to the United States, in order that the competition of American markets may be enjoyed; the establishment under government auspices of trans-oceanic steamships on both the Atlantic and the Pacific, to be managed in the same manner that Canada manages the railroad systems, and, finally, as the next step, the nationalization of the railroads themselves.

It is good to see the farmer wake up. The man to whom he sells co-operates for the mutual advantage of himself and his competitors, and the man from whom he buys does likewise. The farmer is characteristically an individualist. The old Grange, the Farmers' Alliance, and other attempts to organize the farmers have either failed or succeeded only lamely. The equity system, however, of Mankato and Dakota, founded upon the same economic basis as this Canadian movement, promises greater success. Doubtless the farmer must learn co-operation for economic advantage first, but when he learns it for the sake of dollars and cents the spirit of it will grow and be used in all matters that pertain to rural life, and the school and the church will profit thereby. In no institution of human interest is the spirit of co-operation more needed than in the rural church.

* * *

Dr. William Inge Speaks Out

Dr. William Ralph Inge is a British theologian who speaks out at times. He has recently been reported as saying that the Roman church is to him "this survival of Caesar's Roman empire, to which we owe no homage." He wants to "complete the emancipation which we almost won at the Reformation." The high church party of the English church finds him a valiant antagonist. He has recently insisted that there is no scriptures against pouring old wine into new bottles.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Federal Council Meets in St. Louis

THE Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America met in St. Louis, December 6th, and continued in session until December 11th. Thirty denominations are federated in this organization and almost all of them responded to the roll-call.

The time of the sessions was chiefly given over to the business of considering the reports of the commissions and of the executive officers. The evening sessions were inspirational in character and in these sessions some great men appeared. Among those making evening addresses were Dr. Shailer Mathews, Raymond Robins, Prof. Harry F. Ward, Prof. Edward A. Steiner, Rev. Charles Stelzle and Rev. Daniel A. Poling. William Jennings Bryan spoke at a union meeting on Sunday afternoon.

The sessions of the convention were held in the Second Baptist church, of which Rev. W. C. Bitting is the pastor. Near by were other churches in which smaller meetings were held, especially the Church of St. John the Divine, which is of the communion of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

* * *

The report of Rev. Charles S. Macfarland showed that his position is no sinecure. He has been in Europe the past year on a mission of peace and conciliation and achieved some very splendid results in opening up new lines of communication. During the very sessions of the Federal Council he read a fresh message from the German ambassador, as well as a friendly message from English nonconformists.

His office work reveals marvelous vigor. He has written several books and sends out mail matter by the hundreds of thousands of pieces. He keeps up a well-equipped news service which influences the secular press even more than it does the religious press. Dr. Marfarland complains that very few religious newspapers have a department of interdenominational acquaintance but consume their space on purely denominational matters.

The Rev. H. K. Carroll has been the agent of the organization in Washington. He has been able to secure the passage by Congress of a bill automatically increasing the number of chaplains in the army and navy as fast as these departments of our government increase. There had been no increase in chaplains since before the Civil War.

The Rev. Charles Stelzle also reported an active service as field agent of the Federal Council. He has prepared literature and addresses to show the labor union people that the closing up of the liquor business would not produce a labor panic. He is also responsible for a movement for the conservation of human life.

* * *

The report of the Commission on the Church and Social Service was prepared by the Rev. Worth M. Tippy. This commission has made special study of labor troubles in various sections of the country. The reports made have been printed in some cases and have proved of great significance in the eyes of the whole church. The Social Creed of the churches has been given the widest publicity and is a document which is calculated to bring a reconciliation between the church and organized labor. Some representatives of the commission have attended the meetings of the American Federation of Labor and their speeches have been received with much good will on the part of the labor leaders.

During the past quadrennium, the Commission on Home Missions has turned over its work to the Home Missions Council. The latter is organically related to the great home mission bodies, but provides reports to the Federal Council in the same way as a commission does. The report shows that there has been a great development of the spirit of comity in home mission work. A knowledge of the fields has been pooled and it is now much easier to survey the whole problem of home missions than ever before.

* * *

The report of the Commission on Relations with Japan includes the story of the visit to Japan by Dr. Shailer Mathews and Dr. Sydney L. Gulick. They spoke many times throughout Japan and were received with greatest cordiality. These gentlemen evolved a plan which would seem to guarantee peaceful relations with Japan in days to come by avoiding affronts to her in our immigration laws.

The Commission of the Church and Country Life has grown out of the work of the Social Service Commission during the past quadrennium. It it headed by Gifford Pinchot. The commission has accomplished an extended survey of the state of Ohio which stands as a model for similar enterprises in other states.

Fred B. Smith presented the report of the Commission on Federated Movements. Representatives of all the great common religious organizations, such as the Young Men's Christian Association, Christian Endeavor and the Sunday School, have been called together and certain modes of co-operation have been agreed upon.

There is a commission charged with the task of further local and state federation work. The forming of smaller federated bodies throughout the country has been attended with some difficulty and the present decision seems to be that there will be no effort to impose federation from above when it is not desired by local Christians.

The report of the Commission on Sunday Observance was presented by Rev. Peter Ainslie, the chairman. His report shows that there are 4,500,000 people in this country who work seven days in the week; this is regarded as a reproach to our civilization. The commission calls on Christian pastors to preach against Sunday desecration on the Sunday before Easter.

It is impossible to speak of all the commission reports. It is enough to say that never before in the history of American Christianity has there been gathered together such an assemblage of distinguished religious leaders. The spirit of Christian union was strong among them.

* * *

The organization is now well financed and closed the year with a surplus in its treasury. The budget of Federal Council activities this year amounted to over a hundred thousand dollars.

Dr. Shailer Mathews was succeeded in the presidency by the great missionary leader of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. Frank Mason North. He accepted his election conditioned upon the approval of his mission board and of his wife. His leadership during the next four years, which are probably destined to be the most important in the world's history to date, will have the quality that belongs to the Christian statesman of world-wide sympathies.:

The Sunday School Lesson

Thou, God, Seest Me!

The Lessons in Today's Life*

By JOHN R. EWERS

AND now cometh the end. The year is old, tonight he dies. What a wonderful thing is a year: 365 opportunities tied into a bundle. The procession of the seasons —snow, green hedges, cool lakes, trees filled with red apples. School, vacation, work, play, anxiety, rest, morning light, evening shadows. But it is all over now. "What I have written, I have written."

The tide is going out. Let it carry away, into oblivion, all our sins, all our mistakes. "Let the dead past bury its dead." Tomorrow, a new day, a new year. Let all the virtues came trooping in. "Ring out the old, ring in the new."

* * *

Tonight, as we sit by the dying embers, we shall brood over the past year. We have done some things for which we are exceedingly sorry—why were we so foolish? We have won some fine victories—why did God so honor us? Somewhere I saw this word: "Your small place may be God's concession to your sin." Next year should see you fill a larger place. Can you do it or does your sin hold you back? This is the very hour to look at yourself. What would you think of another who was as selfish as you? as lazy? as careless? as egotistic? as little controlled? as grasping? as cynical? as dogmatic? as fault-finding? There he stands by the chimney—what do you think of yourself? No wonder so few friends! No wonder so much criticism! No wonder such small place!

Something fundamental is wrong. You have been living too much for the eyes of men and very little for the eyes of God. What you need is to write a motto and put it on your desk, "THOU, GOD, SEEST ME." The God-consciousness in business, in social life, in recreation—that is what you need. The unseen must become real. Is there anything more real than God? than Jesus? As the hour grows late satisfy yourself as to the reality of God. The eyes of men—what do they amount to? It is the approbation of God that you want.

* * *

The whistles blow, the bells ring—you are recalled to the world suddenly. It is a real world and tomorrow we enter the same old environment. What we need is not a change of place but a change of self. A self, changed enough, will transform all our environment tomorrow. A new self at the breakfast table will surprise the family; a new self at the office will bring light into the day's work; a new self at the club will shock the fellows into now relations. A new self at the church will open the way for the larger place. "Your sin is the cause of your little place."

* * *

We have had a year with spiritual heroes; what has it profited? Why was Paul great? Why do we remember Peter? What was the secret of Jesus? A whole year going again over these lives and can it be that our eyes have been holden, that our hearts have been stone, that our ears have not heard? Every spiritual hero lived in vital touch with the Unseen. God was real to Paul, Peter, Jesus. That is the lesson for this review. Underneath and above the events which we have studied was God. He was in the shadow keeping watch above His own. "He watching over Israel slumbers not nor sleeps." Repeat ten thousand times, or, enough to impress it upon your soul, "God is real," "God lives." The secret of Paul was, "Christ liveth in me." The secret of Jesus was, "I and the Father are one." The secret for you and me is, "Lo, I am with you always."

*The title of the Sunday school lesson for Dec. 31 is "Christ's Coming and Coming to Christ." The Scripture reading selection is Rev. 22:6-14.

Bible Society Finishes Centennial

One of the closing acts of the centennial celebration of the American Bible Society was a service in honor of Dr. Elias Boudinot at his grave in St. Mary's churchyard in Burlington, New Jersey. He was first president of the society. Dr. Boudinot was prominent in the early life of this nation. He was an officer in General Washington's army, and as president of the Continental Congress signed the Treaty of Peace with Great Britain. He later became Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. His last residence was in Burlington, where he died in 1821.

The Y. M. C. A. Prospers

One of the most outstanding evidences of the virility of Evangelical religion is the Y. M. C. A. It has not been a denominational institution, but has stood definitely for church cooperation. Its active membership, however, has been limited to the churches of more Evangelical faith. The number of Young Men's Christian Association buildings and their valuation have increased from 359 and $21,600,000 in 1900 to 782 and $83,300,000 in 1916. Equipment, endowment, and construction funds now aggregate $20,000,000. Last year twenty-three new buildings, worth $6,000,000, were opened. This year as many more are building. These provide a huge variety of instruction, entertainment, and social service for boys and young men. Over 700,000 of these are members of the Y. M. C. A., while twice as many use its buildings. Vocational evening classes have enrolled nearly 100,000 students. Roomers in its dormitories number 125,000. Pupils of Bible courses or religious studies total 130,000. Users of its gymnasiums reach 350,000 in number. The evolution of the Y. M. C. A. into a social service factor is one of the most interesting events of the past generation.

Gipsy Evangelist Goes Into Association Work

The service of the Young Men's Christian Association in the war zone has been so eminently helpful that certain ecclesiastics of the English church have grown jealous of it and have discussed the possibility of its being the beginning of another "Methodist schism," as many churchmen have participated in its work lately. The attitude of the Free churchmen has been more generous, of course, and some of the most eminent ministers of that group of Christians have shared in the work at the front. Among the latest to go is Gipsy Smith, who will spend the entire winter in France.

THE HYMNAL IN THE HOME

A great hymnal should be in every Christian home. Its presence on the piano will prove a means of culture, and a benediction to the entire household. In

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

you will find the choicest religious poetry of the ages and of our own time. The music of these hymns is the sweetest and richest in the world. Encourage your sons and daughters to play and sing the great hymns of the united Church. Next to the Bible there is no means of grace so inspiring and enriching to the soul as a great hymnal.

Send $1.15 for full cloth edition of Hymns of the United Church, or $1.40 for half-leather edition.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY PRESS
700 East Fortieth Street
CHICAGO

Disciples Table Talk

Kirby Page Tells of European War at Drake Chapel

Kirby Page, just returned from eight months in the army camps of England, spent a few days in DesMoines late in November, renewing old Drake friendships and fellowships. He is reported as having given a stirring address at a special Drake chapel service, in which he told of the ten thousand Oxford university men who are in the trenches. In all twelve thousand have gone from Cambridge. Only "Rhodes" scholars from America and Englishmen who are physically unfit for military service are to be found at Oxford. Many of the college men of England are bearing the brunt of the battles in Europe. Mr. Page was in Des Moines in the interest of the special campaign to raise funds for the work of the International Y. M. C. A., with headquarters in New York City, which is carrying on a magnificent propaganda in the camps and in the trenches of Europe —in England, France, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Turkey, and other of the war nations.

Disciples to Promote Work Among the Negroes of Cincinnati

Hopkins Street church, Cincinnati (colored), aided by the Cincinnati Christian Missionary Society, has secured a splendid brick church building in the center of the negro population of the city. The value of the building, to erect, would be over $20,000. The auditorium will seat over 600, and the Bible school room added will take care of a Bible school of over 1,000. This building is being put in good repair, at a cost of about $600, and was dedicated last month. H. L. Herod, of Indianapolis, was in charge of the service. W. W. Cordell is serving this congregation as minister. November 15, P. H. Moss, superintendent of work among the negroes under the A. C. M. S., began a two weeks' Bible School Institute at this church and will conduct a campaign to form a large Bible school among his people in this city.

Reopening at Seventh Street Church, Richmond, Va.

The week of November 19-26 was observed as reopening week at Seventh Street Church, Richmond, Va., to which H. D. C. Maclachlan ministers. With the improvements that have been made on the building a new epoch begins in the usefulness of a church which has had a most notable history. The church now known as Seventh Street church was organized with 68 charter members on March 2, 1832, by Thomas Campbell, father of Alexander Campbell. At that time Richmond had a population of only 16,860, and there were but nine churches in the city. The Christian church as originally organized was known as the Sycamore meeting house. This was in use for 38 years, and during this period the following pastors served the congregation: John Thomas, James Henshall, R. L. Coleman, W. J. Pettigrew, W. H. Hopson, T. N. Arnold and J. A. Dearborn. It was during the pastorate of Mr. Dearborn that the congregation decided to erect the building on the corner of Seventh and Grace streets, and began the erection of the present granite church building. The main audience room of the new home was dedicated in 1873, during the pastorate of J. Z. Tyler, which began on October 1, 1872. The granite building and the lot on which it stands cost originally about $75,000. J. Z. Tyler writes: "Every stone in that old granite building seems peculiarly sacred to me when I recall the sacrifice by which it was placed there." For the church members were all suffering from the financial ruin wrought by the Civil war. Since 1872 Seventh Street church has become a mother of churches. From it have sprung the Church Hill chapel, the Main Street church, the Manchester mission and the Elba mission. Other pastors besides Mr. Tyler were as follows: R. C. Cave, 1883-85, and 1886-89; H. S. Lobingier, 1885-86; Jabez Hall, 1889-97; Z. T. Sweeney, 1898-99; Carey E. Morgan, 1899-1903; J. J. Haley, 1904-07; H. D. C. Maclachlan, 1907—. The program of reopening week was an interesting one. On Sunday morning of Nov. 19 Mr. Maclachlan preached on the theme, "To What Purpose This Waste." In the evening talks were given by members of the Virginia Methodist Conference. Earle Wilfley, of Washington, D. C., delivered an address at the Monday evening meeting. Tuesday evening was devoted to world-wide missions, and the principal address was given by B. H. Melton, of the Twenty-fifth Street church, Baltimore. Woman's work was featured on Wednesday evening, with the women in charge. On Thursday evening the theme of the meeting was "community service," and Prof. C. W. Kent, of the University of Virginia, delivered an address on "Prophets or Social Engineers." The church school received attention at the Friday evening service, with C. M. Watson, of First church, Norfolk, speaking on "Study to Show Thyself Approved Unto God." On Sunday, the 26th, the afternoon was given over to a very successful every member canvass, and in the evening leaders and canvassers brought in testimony of their experiences. The spirit of the work which the present pastor, Mr. Maclachlan, is doing is revealed in the "Invitation" which the church extends to the Richmond public: "If you have doubts, are tempted, are in trouble, need a friend, or want to redeem a wasted life, this church invites you, in the name of Jesus, to His Rest." His is pre-eminently a spiritual ministry.

The Joke Is on M. E. Chatley

M. E. Chatley, of the Rock Island, Ill., church, sends the following confession: I have been preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Modern Sins and Their Cure." On last Sunday evening I spoke on "The Sin of Appetite." I have been using display advertisements in the local papers. We have a new saloon that claims to have "the longest bar in the world." I told my press agent to announce my theme as "The Sin of Appetite; or, The Longest Bar in the World and the Shortest Road to Hell." To my amazement the ad appeared with these words added, "All are welcome. M. E. Chatley, minister." Mr. Chatley reports that Rock Island is still laughing.

Endeavorers of the Disciples to Aid "Men and Millions"

The Christian Endeavorers of the Disciples, under the leadership of Claude E. Hill, the national superintendent, and Frank Lowe, Jr., the field secretary, have taken as their share in the Millions Campaign one-fifth of each of the campaign items. They have also instituted a campaign of mission and doctrinal education among the Endeavor societies.

School of Missions in Pomona, Cal.

The Pomona, Cal., Church recently conducted a School of Missions which has an enrollment of 250. There were eight or ten classes suited to the various ages and all classes met at the same hour in different parts of the church building. The instructors were Mrs. R. J. Dye, W. E. Garrison, C. R. Hudson and others.

"Georgia's Best Convention in Her Best Church Building"

That is the estimate placed upon the recent convention of Georgia Disciples which was held at Athens. W. O. Foster, of Atlanta, writes that the fine spirit of the Athens church permeated the convention, and that the program was a record one. Voices from outside the state were those of F. W. Burnham, of the A. C. M. S., and Homer W. Carpenter, of Transylvania College. Miss Daisy Trout also brought a helpful message upon the work of the C. W. B. M. Other outside speakers were Belt White, John H. Booth, Homer Cook and R. M. Hopkins. Mr. Foster gives great praise to Claude C. Jones, who is serving the Rome church as pastor, is editing the "Christian Messenger," and is at the same time acting as office secretary of state work. He is making good at each task. The Disciples have but 144 churches in Georgia, which has a population of 2,276,000. There are 17,000 Disciple members. Sixteen churches have full time preaching, 54 have no preaching. There are 89 counties in the state which have no Disciple church. The Southeastern Christian College, of Athens, was represented at the convention by Dean Chastain, several teachers and about fifty students. This school is co-educational and reports 15 ministerial students. The second year shows an enrollment of over 100.

Death of Mrs. John W. Allen, at Spokane, Wash.

John W. Allen, now of Spokane, Wash., but for many years an active pastor in the Christian church, writes of the death of his wife, Sarah Campbell Allen, which occurred on November 4. On June 6 she suffered a paralytic stroke and was helpless until October 26, when she had a second stroke, which proved fatal. The funeral service was held at Central church, Spokane, with J. E. Davis in charge of the services. He was assisted by other Disciple ministers of Spokane. Mr. Allen writes that Mrs. Allen was "her husband's wisest counsellor and faithful helpmeet in all his fields of labor, and was universally beloved by the members of the churches for which he labored." Mr. Allen served the churches at Jacksonville, Ill., and Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, also one of the Cleveland churches. Late in life he preached in Spokane, where he is now living.

Dr. J. W. Young Reports Work in Manila

A few months ago Dr. J. W. Young, a practicing physician of Hutchinson, Kan., volunteered to go to the Philippines to serve in place of some of the medical workers there who were compelled to return to the States for a time. He writes of the work in Manila, especially of the Mary Jane Chiles hospital: "With the hospital I am more than pleased. While in an old building, it is still splendidly equipped in instruments and stock of drugs. The splendid amount of medical work which has already come to the Mary Jane Chiles convinces me of the wisdom of having an institution in this thickly settled Sampalon District, even though the government has such a fine general hospital. The first day I was here I operated on a poor woman, and she sent me a present of a large basket of mangoes. Another grateful patient brought me three cocoanuts."

Indianapolis Churches Support Mission

A laudable work is that of several of the Disciple Sunday schools of Indianapolis, which are promoting a Mission on the West Side of the city. Linn A. Tripp is the living link missionary working there and Mrs. G. P. Rosebrook is the school superintendent. During October there was an average attendance at the school of 163. There is also an Endeavor Society,, with an average attendance of 46. The Sunday evening attendance is usually about 200. Social service is a feature of the work of this Mission, and during October 21 night school classes were conducted.

Promoting Eureka College

Secretary L. O. Lehman and President H. O. Pritchard are visiting the churches in Illinois during this school year, with a view of raising $10,000 from churches and individuals for the current expenses of the college for this year. Each visits two or more churches each Lord's Day. They also go to such churches during the mid-week as are in a position to receive them. They have been meeting with excellent results thus far and there is every indication that the goal will be reached.

Shirley R. Shaw Wins Success at Santa Barbara, Cal.

Shirley R. Shaw, whose name is a synonym for energy and push, came to the Santa Barbara, Cal., work August 1, but already 44 persons have been added to the membership there, six of whom united with the congregation on November 26. On that Sunday evening a pre-Thanksgiving service was held, and so large was the attendance that chairs had to be brought into the auditorium. The unified order of service has been successfully adopted at Santa Barbara. The Wednesday evening hour of worship has been given over to a study of Fosdick's "Meaning of Prayer," about 75 persons being in attendance, on the average. The best work ever done in this church is being done under the leadership of Mr. Shaw.

Ministerial Relief Shows Good Increase

The Sunday before Christmas is Ministerial Relief Day, and W. R. Warren, who is in charge of the promotion of this good cause, urges that all congregations remember the plea for the aged and invalid ministry among the Disciples on this day. There are now 144 names on the Pension Roll of the organization, 31 having been added during the past year. There are 81 ministers, 54 widows of ministers and 9 missionaries. Most of these receive monthly payments, the rest quarterly. Payments range from $5 to $30 per month. The average for the year was $163.98; total for 1916, $22,099.26. In five years this work has been practically multiplied by three, and is even yet only in its beginning. The churches, as churches, gave last year $20,259, a gain of $12,276.61 in the five years. The Bible schools gave $2,177.23. The permanent fund is now $93,732.07.

Secretary Corey Visits Disciples in Yale

Robert Hueston, corresponding secretary of the organization of the Disciples in Yale, reports that Stephen J. Corey made a flying visit to the college on December 6, and that in the short time he was there he made friends of the thirty Disciples who heard him speak. In his forceful way he set forth the opportunities the brotherhood now has in all the mission fields, especially in China. After his address Mr. Corey held personal conferences with students who are Volunteers, or who are considering seriously taking up work on the foreign field.

Well Known Disciple Dies

George S. Bryant, one of the foremost educators in western Missouri, and for many years a member and leader of the Christian church, passed away on December 2 at his home in Independence, Mo. For fifty years Mr. Bryant was known as an educator, philosopher and Bible student. He was actively engaged up to two years ago, when an attack of paralysis caused his retirement. Mr. Bryant was tutored under the direction of Alexander Campbell at Bethany College. For several years he held the position of president of Christian College, at Columbia, Mo. Most of his active years were spent in the field of the public schools.

Christian Endeavor Societies Become Life-Liners

One of the finest features of the Christian Endeavor movement in the Christian church is its service for foreign missions. A large number of organizations are supporting native evangelists in the foreign field or caring for orphans. The society at Goodland, Kan., has recently decided to take care of a boy in the orphanage at Bilaspur, India. The organization at Roseville, Ill., has undertaken the support of a native evangelist in Bilaspur. West Side, San Francisco, society will give $50 to support an evangelist in Jubbulpore, India.

F. F. Walters May Organize Church in Ft. Worth

F. F. Walters, pastor of the Wichita Falls, Tex., church, has been called to Ft. Worth by the executives of Texas Christian University, with a view to his organizing a church for that section. Mr. Walters has been pastor at Wichita Falls for four years, and during this time he erected one of the handsomest edifices in North Texas.

University of Nanking Grows

The University of Nanking, China, in which Disciples are especially interested, opened with a general increase in attendance in most departments, especially in the college. It reaches a wider constituency than last year. Students are constantly coming from new centers. There is an increase of 20 per cent in the college attendance.

"Pleasant Sunday Afternoons for Young People" at Akron (O). Church

A feature of the work at East Market Street Church, Akron, O., is what are called "Pleasant Sunday Afternoons for Young People." These are a pronounced success, writes E. P. Wise, minister at East Market. In the audiences at this

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.
Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.
Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.
Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.
Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6 50 Net.

By Express or Freight at Purchaser's Expense.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th. St., Chicago, Ill.

THE TWO BEST LESSON COMMENTARIES
FOR 1917
TARBELL'S GUIDE
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage
PELOUBET'S NOTES
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage
Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

The Lessons for the First Half of 1917 Are on the Life of Christ

An Ideal Course for Adult and Young People's Classes
Dr. Loa E. Scott's "Life of Jesus"

A study of the life of the Master in 52 lessons. Bristling with questions, and requiring a study of the Bible itself. The finest course yet offered for adult and young people's classes. Price in lots of 10 or more, 40c. Single copy, 50c.

Disciples Publication Society :: :: 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

church there are usually more men than women. Three young men were baptized on a recent Sunday. There are additions reported for every Sunday.

Church More Than Doubled in Ten Months

When W. G. Loucks came from Akron, O., to East Grand Boulevard Church, Detroit, Mich., last February, he found a little band of sixty-eight unorganized members in the congregation and a Sunday School of about 150. Since then the school has more than doubled and eighty persons have been added to the church membership. A C. W. B. M. organization had its first meeting in November, with thirty-three charter members, and there is now a new Christian Endeavor Society with thirty-three charter members. This church is the last to be established by C. J. Tanner and the aggressive Central Church, Detroit.

* * *

—The church at Clarkston, Wash., has paid off an $800 note to the Church Extension Board, and will have all local obligations met by Jan. 1. A. F. Van Slyke leads at Clarkston.

—For more than a year the Ellensburg, Wash., church has been worshiping in rented quarters, part of the time in the local Y. M. C. A. rooms and the rest of the time in a narrow store room, with windowless walls on either side. A month ago the congregation, by unanimous vote, decided to erect a tabernacle which would serve until a permanent building can be erected. The tabernacle was completed in eight days, at a cost of about $800; over $200 of this was donated in labor. It is hoped by F. W. Billington, minister of the church, that the new permanent building can be begun next summer.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—Men from all walks of business in Niles, O., met in the men's club room of the Niles church, to bid farewell to the retiring pastor there, Allen T. Gordon, who, after a service of nine years at Niles, has now begun a new task at First church, Paris, Ill.

—Frank W. Allen, of Springfield, Ill., First church, is leading in a war on unclean motion pictures in Springfield theaters.

—During the meetings recently closed at Galesburg, Ill., church, where R. H. Fife led, nearly 200 persons were added to the church membership. About 130 of these came by confession of faith.

—C. H. Hilton has resigned the work at Healdsburg, Cal., and will assume the pastorate at Baker City, Ore., in about two months.

—H. J. Loken, of the Berkeley (Cal.) Church, gave an address before the Berkeley High School on "Lessons from the Life of Jack London."

—The Men's Brotherhood of Central church at Flint, Mich., has contracted with the Redpath Bureau for a series of four entertainments to be given this winter at the church.

—First church, Paducah, Ky., will have a new pipe organ. Andrew Carnegie will donate a substantial sum for this purpose, the congregation to raise the rest of the funds needed.

—E. K. Van Winkle, the new pastor of Wheeling, W. Va., church, has several young men in his church studying for the ministry. Five prospective preachers are in Mr. Van Winkle's young men's class.

—The members of the eight Disciple churches of Huntington county, Ind., met at Central church, Huntington, two Sundays ago, to hear Allen B. Philputt, of Central church, Indianapolis, on "The Building of the Church." The service was intended primarily for the young people of the churches.

—W. E. Reavis, of Hannibal, Mo., has assumed charge of the work at First church, Ottumwa, Ia.

—The building of the church at Hickman, Ky., near Louisville, burned on December 2, with a total loss, there being no insurance on the structure.

—J. T. Hawkins, for ten years pastor at Elkton, Ky., has resigned this work and will make his home in Hopkinsville. He will preach for the churches at Rich and Liberty, in Christian county.

—A sunrise prayer meeting, breakfast, family style dinner and young people's hike were features of a unique Thanksgiving day celebration at Central church, Dallas, Tex., to which Harry D. Smith ministers. John G. Slayter and M. M. Davis, pastors of other Disciple churches of Dallas, took part in these services.

—H. N. Van Voorhis, recently resigned at East Palestine, O., has taken up evangelistic work, with his headquarters at Hiram, O.

—John G. Slayter, of the East Dallas, Tex., church, recently gave an address before the Electric Club of Dallas on "The Fine Art of Appreciation."

—K. F. Nance, who recently returned to the United States, after some thrilling experiences serving in the American Ambulance Corps among the French soldiers, is making a tour of the East and West, lecturing on relief work in the great war. Mr. Nance was formerly pastor at First church, Hutchinson, Kan.

—East Dallas (Tex.) church has organized a Junior congregation, composed of members of the congregation ranging from 9 to 14 years of age. The meetings are held on Sunday morning in a separate wing of the church building. The entire service lasts about 40 minutes. This is the first church in Dallas to adopt the plan.

—W. H. Allen, of St. Charles Avenue church, New Orelans, La., has received a call to the work at Marion, Ind., but has decided to remain with the Louisiana congregation. At one time Mr. Allen served the church at Muncie, Ind., as pastor.

—W. S. Lowe, of the church at Shenandoah, Ia., recently exchanged pulpits with the Congregational pastor of that town.

—The Louisiana Disciples met in convention late in November, at Alexandria.

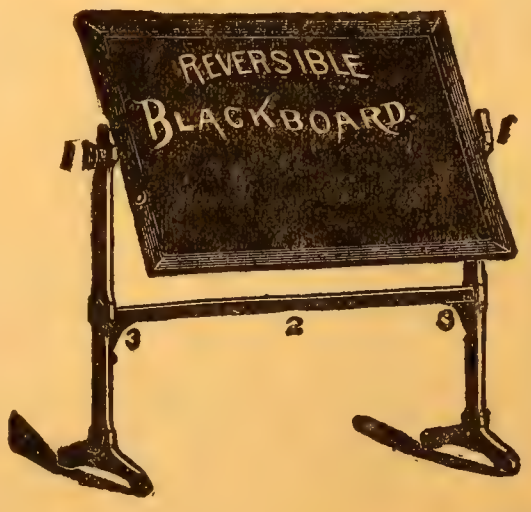
—Pastor Wyatt, who has served the church at Crab Orchard, Ky., for some time, has accepted a call to the work at Ocala, Fla.

—Virgil W. Wallace will leave the work at Corsicana, Tex., Jan. 1, to enter the evangelistic field.

—Prof. A. W. Fortune, of Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky., preached the C. W. B. M. sermon on Dec. 3, at Midway, Ky., his theme being "Woman's Work in the Evangelization of the World."

—Frank Waller Allen spoke before the Fellowship Class at First church, Springfield, Ill., last Sunday, on "Women and Children in Toil, or the New Slavery." On next Sunday he will consider "The Amusement Problem: Social Centers vs. Dance Halls." These talks are two of a series of discussions of "Social Problems."

—B. S. M. Edwards, of Clayton Center, Ill., church, has been appointed Grand Chaplain of the Illinois organization of Odd Fellows.



—Miss Cynthia P. Maus, of the Bible School department of the American Society, spoke at First church, Joplin, Mo., on the morning of Dec. 3. Miss Maus was one of the instructors at the school of methods held at Carthage, Mo., Dec. 4-8.

—The Foreign Society reports that the new Endeavor day program, "Life Lines Across the Sea," is very popular. The unique feature of the program is a sketch representing Christian America, with life lines reaching out to Japan, China, India, Africa, Tibet and the islands. Every society should plan to use this program.

—Harry D. Smith, of Central church, Dallas, Tex., gave an address on "A Heathen Saint" (Socrates), at a recent meeting of the Dallas Christian Pastors' Association.

—The new cylinder press at Manila, P. I., has been installed and is now in

"Kraoplate" Blackboards and Material

REVERSIBLE STYLE "D" BLACKBOARDS

"Kraoplate" Blackboards are made of 4-ply wood pulp, cemented under a heavy pressure and are uniform in thickness, solid throughout. The surface can be easily cleaned and will not warp or crack if washed. It is the most complete and perfectly portable Blackboard made, and has an oak frame, finished both sides. Can be taken apart in a moment and conveniently transported or set aside.

PRICES:

No. 1	2½x3½ ft.	each	$ 7.50
No. 1½	3 x4 ft.	"	8.00
No. 2	3 x4½ ft.	"	8.25
No. 3	3½x5 ft.	"	9.00
No. 4	4 x6 ft.	"	10.00

FOR SALE BY

Disciples Publication Society, 700 E. 40th St., Chicago

operation. It is kept very busy, often running by night as well as by day.

—W. D. Ryan, of Central church, Youngstown, O., who was operated on for appendicitis, is reported as doing well.

—A $10,000 building will be erected for the church at Richmond, Cal.

—"The boys in the Damoh (India) orphanage get their real vacation about the Christmas season, when they go into camp. Although they have six weeks of vacation from the day school in the summer time, yet they do not have any vacation. We allowed them the afternoons of the last week of June and they had a great time. Because of the high water the fish began to come up stream. The boys spent much of their time in the fun of fishing. We saw them spit on the bait, just like an American boy."—Ray E. Rice.

—H. C. Garrison, recently pastor at Danville, Ky., has taken up the work at Magnolia Avenue, Ft. Worth, Tex., succeeding E. M. Waits there.

—Joseph C. Todd, dean of the Bible chair at the University of Indiana, recently preached at First church, Lafayette, Ind., also bringing a special message to the Purdue students' class at the Sunday school hour.

—H. R. Moon reports an extensive trip of survey in the Congo country. He says there is a tremendous unoccupied field in the district of the equator and other unoccupied territory adjacent to the eastward, along the Lomami river.

—Four persons were added to the membership at Rudolph, Ohio, on Dec. 3, reports George W. Schroeder, pastor.

—G. Ventura, a brilliant young man from the Philippines who has been in Drake for several years, is delivering lectures at various towns on the topic, "Conditions in the Philippines Three Hundred Years Ago and Today."

—Preparatory to Decision day at Tabernacle church, Franklin, Ind., Carl A. Burkhardt, the pastor there, is conducting classes of young people for the consideration of questions pertaining to the Christian life.

—Van Zandt Jarvis, of Ft. Worth, Tex., a graduate of Texas Christian University and a trustee of that institution, has contributed $4,000 toward the $150,000 being raised by special campaign for the Texas school.

—W. H. Bagby, of Los Angeles, Cal., is not only a preacher; he is also an inventor, having recently put on the market an ingenious nut cracker.

—George A. Jewett, of Des Moines, made an automobile tour of the "Great American Desert" during November. He went as far south as Enid, Okla.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of Central church, Des Moines, Ia., has decided to give $50 per year for the support of a native worker in either India, China or Africa. Last year the society contributed $25 toward the support of two orphans in India.

—The Sunday school of Central church, Des Moines, has sent a Christmas box to Mrs. Herbert Smith, missionary in Lotumbe, Africa.

—The Drake Volunteer Band recently conducted a prayer meeting service at University Place church, Des Moines.

—On November 26 Chas. S. Medbury, of University Place church, Des Moines, preached to the students of the college at Ames, Ia.

—The engagement is announced of Miss Margaret Medbury, daughter of Charles S. Medbury of Des Moines, to James C. Blackburn. Both Miss Medbury and Mr. Blackburn were members of the Drake, 1916, class. Miss Frances Clarke, daughter of Governor Clarke, of Iowa, is reported engaged to Nile C. Kinnick.

—The "Amity Society," a class of girls of Second church, New York City, conducts cottage prayer meetings during the year for "shut-ins" of the congregation. O. L. Hull ministers to Second church.

—The Iscah Class, of the Christian Sunday school at Petersburg, Ill., has paid in a pledge of $500 toward the work of missions. This class recently held its ninth annual banquet, at which M. L. Pontius, of Jacksonville, Ill., gave the principal address.

—The Sunday school at Nelsonville, O., has over 400 names on its Cradle Roll.

—The men of the Abbyville, Kan., church have seeded 50 acres in wheat for the benefit of the church. Almost all the work was donated.

—C. W. Cauble, state leader of Indiana, reports that the new building at Murray, Ia., which he dedicated, is the best church building he has seen among the Disciples in a town of less than a thousand.

—During this week the Men and Millions team are represented by Dr. Jaggard, David Rioch and R. A. Doan in meetings at Los Angeles, San Diego, Romona, Long Beach and Redlands, Cal.

—The largest Sunday school class in Arizona is W. S. Buchanan's class of men and women at Phoenix.

—In consideration of the good service of its pastor, F. W. O'Malley, the church at Bonham, Tex., has raised his salary $300.

—Prof. W. S. Athearn, of Boston University, has published a booklet on "Religious Education and American Democracy," which is being used as a study course by the Malden (Mass.) City Council of Religious Education. This council consists of a hundred representative citizens of Malden who are interested in the religious development of all the children of the community.

—First church, Bloomington, Ill., is rejoicing over the liquidation of a floating indebtedness of $5,200. Through the kindness of two friends of the church 50 per cent of this amount was given on the

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company

MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which Is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book
FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.

50c Postpaid
Satisfaction Guaranteed
Fits Any Pocket
For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Iron-strong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.

U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55 C—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO

4 CHURCH HYMNALS 4

"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Complete)
"GLORIA IN EXCELSIS" (Abridged)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Complete)
"HYMNI ECCLESIAE" (Part One)

Some Recent Orders:

Central, Des Moines, Ia., 500 "Gloria," Complete
Central, Fort Worth, Tex., 500 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Hopkinsville, Ky., 300 "Gloria," Abridged
First, Athens, Ga., 350 "Hymni," Complete

The sale of these 4 church hymnals in 1915 was larger than any previous year. There is a Reason!

Send for Sample Copies to the Owners and Publishers

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO. Indianapolis, Indiana

condition that the remainder be raised by Dec. 1. This condition was fulfilled. Large audiences are reported to be hearing Dr. Edgar D. Jones' addresses on great reformers of the church. The attendance at Sunday school is averaging about 500.

—It is reported that Louis R. Patmont, who has been in the public eye for several years, will take charge of a church of Christ meeting in the Odd Fellows Temple in Cincinnati. The congregation has about a hundred members.

—Evangelist S. J. White is holding a series of evangelistic services at Uhrichsville, Ohio. Howard S. Saxon is leading in the singing.

—If reports are true, the Men and Millions team has already raised over $4,000,000 of the $6,300,000 to be raised during their campaign.

—Lawrence Dry, the new assistant pastor at First church, Lincoln, Neb., is fitting into his new environment well. He had charge of the union Thanksgiving service of Lincoln, Neb., which was held at First church.

—An informal reception and social evening was given at Central church, Des Moines, on Dec. 5, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of George A. Jewett's connection with Central as clerk of the congregation.

—Long Beach, Cal., congregation will make an every member canvass on Dec. 17.

—The state convention of Louisiana Disciples was held at Alexandria late in November. J. E. Scott, president of the organization, was in charge.

—D. O. Cunningham, missionary in Bilaspur, India, has baptized a Mohammedan, who is a teacher in the high school of Bilaspur.

—One hundred men of Central church, Indianapolis, Ind., visited the 1,300 members of this congregation the last Sunday in November in an every member canvass. The men met on Friday evenings for several weeks in preparation for the canvass. Fifty automobiles were used in the Sunday afternoon's work. The pastor, Allen B. Philputt, preached at the morning service on "The Sending Out of the Seventy," and in the evening on "Their Joyous Return."

—Paul Preston, pastor at First Church, Angola, Ind., reports the close of a successful meeting held there by J. J. Taylor, of Lexington, Ky. Mr. Preston says of Mr. Taylor's work: "His coming is not an interruption, but an intensifying of the activities of the church."

—C. M. Smail, pastor at Beaver Falls, Pa., has been elected president of the ministerial association of that city, which has twenty-one churches represented. Mr. Small reports that a young man of the 'Church of God," with his family, has recently entered the Disciples Church at Beaver Falls, and he will study for the ministry during next year. On Sunday evening, December 10, a missionary pageant, with sixty persons taking part, was featured at this church. The missionary offerings have been increased 10 per cent this year. C. H. Bloom, pastor at Beaver, Pa., will hold an evangelistic meeting at Beaver Falls in January.

—H. M. Stansifer, of Flemingsburg, Ky., has just closed a series of meetings at Rochester (Ky.) Church. Eleven additions are reported. During October Mr. Stansifer held his own meeting at Flemingsburg, with A. L. Boatright of Paris, Ky., singing. There were sixteen additions.

—Miss Fay Crow, a graduate of Hiram College, has been selected to assist F. D. Butchart in the work of Broadway Church, Cleveland, which is located in the heart of the foreign district of the city.

—Ninth Street Church, Hopkinsville, Ky., was host to a "Community Singing" meeting, held under the auspices of the local Civil League and the Wednesday Morning Musical Club.

—Floyd Bash, pastor at Highland, Kan., is advocating a community forum and gymnasium for that town.

ILLINOIS NEWS LETTER

Guy L. Zerby, Donovan, recently closed a good meeting with the church at Bader. There were nine additions and the church was greatly strengthened. This meeting was held through the kindness of the Donovan church, which released Mr. Zerby for the meeting.

H. O. Wilson reports seventy-six additions to the church at Findlay during the past eight months, and that the Sunday school has doubled in this time. A debt on the building has been paid. This has been the best year in the history of the church.

The church at Virginia is planning to make an every member canvass in the early part of this month. C. E. French feels confident they will make a success of it there this year.

The church at Blandinsville, where Ward E. Hall is minister, is now successfully completing a finance canvass on local indebtedness. They recently gave about $450 for the student work at the University of Illinois and are co-operating with President Pritchard to become a Living Link with Eureka College.

The church at Rock Falls is advancing in every department. Special growth is seen in the Sunday school. Ellsworth Thorp has been with the church but a few months and is proving a capable leader.

L. H. Hooe of Bowen reports ninety additions in the past nine months. The Sunday school attendance is the largest since the school was organized.

Onarga is one of our substantial churches. G. W. Zink has been there eight months. There have been sixteen additions to the church. The missionary program includes all our causes and the growth in this activity is quite marked.

Evangelist C. R. L. Vawter will begin a meeting with the church at Virginia, December 31.

The churches at Concord and Berea, in Morgan county, will have the services of C. G. Cantrell for the next year. Mr. Cantrell just closed a fruitful ministry with the Literberry church.

O. C. Bolman of Greenville will assist R. L. Cartwright of Chandlerville in a series of evangelistic meetings in January.

On November 26 the Williamsville church was rededicated after it had virtually been rebuilt at a cost of $5,000. There were five services during the day. O. P. Wright of Elkhart, H. C. Parsons of Hamilton and C. D. Haskell, former pastors, were present and assisted in the services. There were six confessions at the evening service. A series of evangelistic meetings began the 27th and at the first invitation eight made the good confession.

The State Secretary spent Sunday, December 3, with the churches at Concord, Lilly and Deer Creek. Sam W. Crabtree is pastor of the Concord and Lilly churches and is doing a unique work. So important is the work that Mr. Crabtree is doing that the Bloomington Pantagraph recently sent an expert reporter into the community to spend a day and tell the story of his pastorate. Almost a full page was given to this.

H. H. PETERS,
State Secretary.

Notes of Chicago Churches

C. W. B. M. Day at North Shore Church

The Woman's Missionary Society of the North Shore Church, D. Roy Matthews, pastor, assisted by W. G. Winn, Mrs. E. M. Bowman, Mrs. S. J. Russell and Mrs. Minnie Chapman, field secretary of the C. W. B. M., observed C. W. B. M. day with a most interesting program. An offering of about $20 is reported. The beautiful Peace Map, the property of the Interdenominational Committee of the Central West for Missions, was displayed.

Christmas Sale at Jackson Boulevard

On Thursday and Friday of last week a Christmas Sale was held at Jackson Boulevard Church. Over $300 was cleared from the sale. The Loyal Women's Class, taught by Mrs. Austin Hunter, had a Parcel Post booth, with parcels selling at 10 cents each, and the class reports a profit of about $35. Parcels were donated by members and former members of the organization. A giving Christmas will be featured at Jackson Boulevard this year, as usual.

O. F. Jordan at Sunday Evening Club

O. F. Jordan, of the Evanston Church, spoke on last Sunday evening at Oakland Sunday Evening Club at the Memorial Church, his theme being "The Lights and Shadows of a Great City." Mr. Jordan used his own stereopticon pictures. The Evanston pastor will speak before a young people's class at Elkhart, Ind., on Dec. 14. His topic will be "At the Cross-Roads." Frank C. Lake is pastor at Elkhart and Mr. Wilbur Templin teaches this class.

* * *

—D. Roy Matthews of the North Shore Church recently spoke at a meeting held at the Wilson Avenue Theater, on the north side, in commemoration of the ninety-eighth anniversary of Illinois' statehood. The meeting was held under the auspices of the North Side Commercial Association.

—Metropolitan Church is reported to have the only religious postcard newspaper in the world. Metropolitan Church has a strong work among the Chinese of the community.

—The arrival of John Gordon Henry is announced at the home of Edward A. Henry, Disciples Divinity House of the University of Chicago.

—Two confessions are reported for last Sunday at Jackson Boulevard.

Each One Get Three!

Now is the Time to Get New Subscriptions for the Christian Century

Three New Subscriptions From Each Present Subscriber

Enlarged and enriched beyond anything ever offered in Disciples journalism, the Christian Century is entering upon a new epoch in its history. We desire to have agents in every congregation and will pay a good cash commission for new subscriptions. Yet we know that no paid agents can do the needed service so well as our regular readers. A paper like the "Century," appealing to the more thoughtful and discriminating men and women of our churches grows by the principle of contagion — others catch it from you.

Nine out of ten of our new subscriptions come through our present readers. We have judges and lawyers and teachers and doctors and merchants and ministers and thoughtful homemakers who work for us — not in our employ, but because they believe they are doing their friends a great service by telling them of this newspaper and inducing them to subscribe for it. It is in such readers that the strength of The Christian Century consists, and upon them its hope for future usefulness rests.

We are asking every present reader to get three new subscribers within the next thirty days. It is the easiest thing you ever tried to do!

Just show that two-page announcement of our outstanding features for the coming year (found elsewhere in this issue) to almost any thoughtful churchman or churchwoman you know and ask for two dollars, and you will get it! Testify to your own delight in reading The Christian Century. Tell of the work this newspaper is doing for the broadening vision of the Disciples of Christ. Tell of the most important thing of all—the service this newspaper is rendering in interpreting the sweet reasonableness of the Disciples' plea to the larger Christian world beyond our own communion, and you will be surprised how readily your thoughtful friends will respond with their subscription.

We will reciprocate for this kindness on your part: We will extend your own subscription six months for each new subscription you secure.

Three new subscriptions from every present reader! Our circulation trebled from January, 1917, onward! Is not that a goal worthy of our united endeavor?

Think up three persons who ought to be taking the "Century" and go straight for their two dollars now.

When you send in the names, addresses and cash, address

Subscription Department, The Christian Century

EACH ONE GET THREE!

New and Important Books on Religious Themes

Suitable for Gifts to Pastors and Others Interested in Religious Books

ASPECTS OF THE INFINITE MYSTERY

By Dr. George A. Gordon

This strong and interesting book by Dr. Gordon has somewhat of the nature of a confession of faith. The unifying idea throughout is that the good is the inevitable quest of the human spirit.

THE CHRISTIAN ETHIC OF WAR

Principal P. T. Forsyth, M. A., D. D.

This book turns on the centrality of a real Atonement for the Christian Revelation of Moral Redemption and Public Regeneration. The Grace of God in Christ's Cross is not a forensic device, but the moral focus of the Universe. "I do not aim here at expounding that Atonement, but at working out some of its moral implicates and results on the public and national side—a side on which a Christianity based only on Christ's teaching has been criticised as defective." $2.00 postpaid.

THE ULTIMATE BELIEF

By A. Clutton-Brock

In a two-and-a-half-page article in The Outlook of August 23d, Lyman Abbott says: "So much have I been interested in a little book, The Ultimate Belief, and so heartily do I agree with its spirit and its fundamental principles, that I have a desire to introduce it to the readers of The Outlook. According to Mr. Brock, the ultimate beliefs are three—Belief in Morality, Belief in Truth and Belief in Beauty." $1.00.

THE WHOLE ARMOUR OF GOD

By J. H. Jowett, D. D.

Dr. Jowett deftly adapts the lessons and phraseology of an earthly battlefield to a consideration of that higher warfare which men wage victoriously under the Great Captain of their souls. $1.25.

QUIET TALKS WITH THE FAMILY

By Charles E. Jefferson

A plea for the simpler virtues of life. $1.00.

THE MASTER'S WAY

By Charles R. Brown

Dean of Yale School of Religion

Chapters on the Life of Christ. $1.75 net.

THE SYRIAN CHRIST

By Abraham Mitrie Rihbany

Author of "A Far Journey"

An illuminating interpretation of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ by a Syrian who has become one of America's most famous preachers. $1.50.

THE SOCIAL PRINCIPLES OF JESUS

By Walter Rauschenbusch

It is an attempt to formulate in simple propositions the fundamental convictions of Jesus about the social and ethical relations and duties of men. Vivid, Practical, Convincing. 50c.

An Extraordinary Offer

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BIBLICA

Imported and printed on India Bible Paper. First edition issued in four quarto volumes at $20.00 a set.

Issued without abridgment in one volume, printed from the same plates and occupying one-quarter the space of original edition at one-fifth the original price.

Now Offered at $4.00 Delivered or $5.00 monthly payments.

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BIBLICA

Is a Critical Dictionary of the Literary, Political and Religious History, of the Archæology, Geography, and the Natural History of the Bible.

General Editors:

The REV. T. K. CHEYNE, D. D.

Oriel Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture at Oxford University, formerly Fellow of Balliol College, Canon of Rochester; and

J. SUTHERLAND BLACK, LL. D.

Assistant Editor of the "Encyclopædia Britannica" and One Hundred Contributors in America, Great Britain and Europe.

Covers over 3,000 pages. Double column. With many Illustrations and Maps.

Every Pastor, Every Bible Student and Every Teacher should immediately avail themselves of this marvelous offer.

Your Credit Is Good

Pastors and others who wish to purchase this book can pay for it, if preferred, at the rate of $1.00 a month.

WHAT THE WAR IS TEACHING

By Dr. Charles E. Jefferson

A book that gathers up in telling fashion the lessons which the red carnage of Europe should bring home to every American. Cloth, $1.00 net, postpaid to any address.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

Builder of a Civilization

An authorized biography by Emmett J. Scott, for eighteen years secretary to Booker Washington. This story of a great Negro is a dramatic, but accurate presentation and interpretation of the life of one who rose from a slave boy to be the recognized leader of ten millions of people. Illustrated. $2.00, postpaid to any address.

THE SPIRITUAL INTERPRETATION OF HISTORY

By Dean Shailer Mathews

The author seeks to determine from actual events whether history has not in itself spiritual forces which may result in "a renewed confidence in our threatened idealism and a revived confidence in the might of right." $1.50.

A LAYMAN'S HANDBOOK OF MEDICINE

With Special Reference to Social Workers

By Richard C. Cabot

Author of "What Men Live By," etc. A book which should be in the hands of every person interested in preserving his health and highest efficiency, while for social workers, teachers, employers and anyone else in any way responsible for the health of others than himself, it will prove invaluable. $1.50.

THE PICTURELAND OF THE HEART

By William A. Knight

This volume by the author of "The Song of Our Syrian Guest" is rich in human coloring. It brings into view the things which the human heart has pictured for its peace and happiness, lighting up life's way. $1.25 net.

THE GOSPEL IN ART

By Albert E. Bailey

A sumptuous gift-book, containing the great pictures on the Life of Christ by ancient and modern masters, with interpretative text, lists of all the pictures attainable on Christ's Life, short biographical sketches of the artists and other valuable information. 130 full-page half-tones and two pictures in original colors; 300 pp. of text. $3.00, postpaid to any address.

Send for Our Special Quarterly List of Rare Book Bargains.

Next Issue Ready in January.

Send for List of Books on Religious Education and Other Themes of Like Interest.

THE PILGRIM PRESS, 19 and 21 W. Jackson Street, CHICAGO

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII December 21, 1916 Number 51

Christmas and the Soul

Editorial

Is Sacrifice Worth While?

By Burris A. Jenkins

Safety First? That Depends

By E. B. Barnes

The Federal Council

By George A. Campbell

CHICAGO

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

The Christian Century

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find Name.....

$..... Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII DECEMBER 21, 1916 Number 51

Christmas and the Soul

WHAT DOES CHRISTMAS MEAN TO YOU?

Christmas has many meanings. It is an occasion to the sensualist. For him it is one of the great Unholy Days. To the shop girl, it means rest for a weary body. For the merchant, it is a day to rejoice in profits. For families, it may mean reunion. For the children, it stands for Santa Claus and toys.

For the Christian, it should be a time of deepest contemplation of that which many religious thinkers regard as the fundamental truth of Christianity. Whether the Incarnation or the Atonement is the more fundamental doctrine, we leave to the theologians. To Christian souls of the deeper experience, the Christmas time will bring the wonderful gospel of the divine life in man.

★ ★

Christmas brings the story of Mary, blessed among women. Her hands had the sublime task of ministering to that babe in whom the hopes of the race were embodied. Every humble task in the care of that child was glorified by her hopes. She represents to us the way in which our poor humanity may be touched by the divine. We resent any effort to set Mary apart from us in some special miraculous order. She is one of us. All that the Christ Child did for her soul, he may do for us if we will it.

The birth of the Child has shown us the essential divinity of the human. There was once a dualism in religious thinking that made God seem a long way off. The thought of God was blighted with the curse of deism. Now we know that God is not very far from every one of us and that in Him we live and move and have our being.

After the Christmas story has been told, we can no longer despise the humblest of human beings. All alike bear the image of their Maker. They take on a value that gives them an infinite importance as compared with the world of things. The Christmas story, revealing as it does the divine possibilities of our human life, has taken us by the hand and lifted us up to a place of new dignity and power in God's universe.

The Christmas story also tells us that humanity has found its leader for its spiritual battles. The Christ was a hope long deferred. This hope was born in the hearts of prophets who were moved upon by the spirit of the living God. At first they saw but dimly. The picture grew in their minds like the image thrown by a dissolving lantern. It was given to each prophet to draw new detail in the sketch of Israel's hope. The Messianic expectancy enlarged until it outgrew the bondage of its nationalism. There came the lofty hope that the mountain of the Lord's House would be high and lifted up and the nations of the earth should flow into it. When the reality came in the Christ, it was as much more glorious as sunrise is above the mere painting of the coming light.

It was given to David to deliver his people from their enemies and to establish the kingdom on new and abiding foundations. It was given to the Son of David that he should set up a new and a spiritual kingdom which should have no limitation in length of days nor in scope of authority.

Slowly our Lord, born on Christmas day, has been coming into his kingdom. The shepherds' hope that it was the Christ who was born that day in Bethlehem has been vindicated. Though the Christmas bells may seem to have a bitter tone in them this year as they sound forth their tidings over battlefield and armed camp, let us not falter in holding that the kingdom is now nearer than when we first believed.

Men once gloried in war. Now they shudder at it. Even those who lead it deprecate its destructiveness and seek to place responsibility for its existence upon the shoulders of others. Once the feudal order placed the yoke upon men's necks and it was called a divine order of society. Now we see feudalism in the family and in labor gradually yielding to the new age of brotherhood in which Christ's men and women shall be free. These are among the evidences that our Christ was no false Christ. He is even now proving the truth of his Messianic claim to be the leader of the souls of men.

★ ★

The Wise Men of the Christmas story came to worship a king. Kneeling before a helpless babe, they brought the royal gifts which the infant king was unable to command. The three kings of the Gentile world confessed the authority of Christ in a wider than Jewish realm.

The Christ Child needed no army to carry out his behest. His was the authority that goes with an infinite goodness and with a transcending love. He speaks, and men hear him today, not because his words are hard statutes, nor yet because of threats and bans. The power of Christ is as gentle as that of the magnet and as steady.

We cannot keep the Christmas day without a new sense of the royal claims of Christ upon us. All things that would be well pleasing to him we are anxious to bring to pass at this time. In some new effort of our souls, we seek to realize in inner and outer conduct whatsoever would acknowledge anew his power in us.

Let us know that there is no mere lip service which suffices. Men may call him Lord, Lord, and yet never be known by the King. They may memorize his words, and fail in perceiving their meaning. They may even preach his gospel and work miracles of abounding service, only to miss his blessing unless they know the meaning of his kingship.

In the Christmas story are revealed the divine possibilities of humanity, the drawing nigh to us of deity. God and man in Christ are reconciled and united. The Christ of humanity's deepest hopes becomes the King of all Loving Hearts.

EDITORIAL

NEW SUBSCRIPTION RATE AFTER MARCH 1

AFTER March 1, 1917, the subscription price of The Christian Century will be $2.50 per year. The special rate to ministers will remain as at present, $2.00 per year. This slight increase is made necessary by the very great increase in cost of white paper and printing, and by the substantial improvements the publishers contemplate adding to the paper before that date. Among these improvements may be mentioned a higher grade of white paper, which will add more than 60 per cent to the cost of this item alone. This added cost is over and above the increase of 150 per cent in cost of white paper, which all publishers have had to bear since the spring of 1916.

We are determined to make the physical character of The Christian Century equal in every way to the character of its contents. Our readers themselves have brought us to the conclusion that they will support a generously made newspaper more generously than one made with too strict parsimony.

Meantime (that is, until March 1), all renewals and new subscriptions will be accepted at the old rate of two dollars. In soliciting your friends for new subscriptions be sure to advise them of the plans for further beautifying the paper, and make it clear that by subscribing now they are getting the advantage of the old rate. This point applies also to your own renewal. Between now and March 1 you may renew at the $2.00 rate for one year—or longer, if you wish. After that date the rate will be $2.50.

The closing year has brought us much to be grateful for, and by the encouragement and practical co-operation of our readers we are able to face the future with enthusiasm and confidence.

THE PUBLISHERS.

CHRIST OR SANTA CLAUS

EVEN in public school circles there is an interest in restoring Christmas to something of its original meaning. The excessive interest in the Santa Claus legend has resulted in widespread ignorance among children of the true meaning of Christmas.

We shall not say that the Santa Claus idea has no value. We have no sympathy with the old elder who quit going to church because Santa Claus appeared one evening before his Sunday school with robe and bells. His point of view was, "They acted a lie in the church." This good old man was simply lacking in imagination. If he had his way, this old world of ours would be a desert of dreary fact. But had he said that the Sunday school had its annual celebration of Christmas without due reverence to the Christ Child, we would have been willing to join in his protest.

The Christmas story of the gospels should be told over and over again these days, for it is full of beauty and teaching of spiritual reality. It should be told in the home, where the custom of telling Bible stories is in danger of falling into misuse. Around the family circle, the children themselves should learn to tell of the Christ Child. There should be no lack of freedom in the schools to tell the story there. It is a queer sort of education that would not dare to interpret such a widespread idea as Christmas. Above all, the church and Sunday school should make this a time in which to lift up our Lord in the story of his birth.

Saint Nicholas does have something to teach us. His jolly good humor and his love of the children should be a part of our holiday spirit. We have seen several peevish shoppers lately who added much to the burdens of the shop girls. They knew nothing of the Santa Claus spirit.

But it is the Christ Child who teaches us the deeper things. In him the love of God is brought close to us. Santa Claus symbolizes for us the social joys, but Jesus Christ brings to us the deep things of the spirit.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER

THE Week of Prayer this year is a call of peculiar urgency. The calendar has been adjusted to make the prayer services follow immediately after the holiday season this year.

The schedule of topics was provided by the World's Evangelical Alliance and has been taken over by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The topics are deeply suggestive of the world's need of peace and good will. They grow in importance in the light of the formal proposal for peace which has been made by the Central Allied powers.

The Week of Prayer furnishes an opportunity in many communities for union effort. If there is anything Christians can do it is to pray together for the peace of the world.

The topics of the Evangelical Alliance would make sermons for these union meetings which would be preached with power and effectiveness. They would doubtless be received with deep and prayerful interest on the part of the co-operating congregations.

DO YOU USE YOUR CHURCH PAPER?

ORIGINALLY the church paper was designed to be an evangelistic agency of the people whom it represented. We shall never know to what extent the Christian Baptist was responsible for the leavening of the Baptist denomination with the ideas of Alexander Campbell. The Millennial Harbinger was strongly marked with a purpose to extend the faith of the people it represented.

In recent years we have grown apologetic about our papers. We have not enjoyed hasty criticisms of men in the ranks. It has not seemed to many of the Disciples that either a dull paper or a paper of factious spirit could be used in propaganda, and the church paper has remained hidden away in our homes.

It is clear, however, that a bright, interesting and loyal paper expounding the ideals of the Disciples of Christ might be made to serve a splendid purpose in propaganda. A pastor of our acquaintance sees to it that his favorite church paper is kept on the reading files of the Young Women's Christian Association and of the public library. The local church pays for this service and the amount is less than would be spent in a single effort in an advertising campaign; and yet it is far more effective. The church paper should be found in the railway stations. A young people's class wanting to do something significant, without spending money, could gather up the church papers one week old and keep them in the barber shops of the town, after having marked them with the name and address of the local church responsible for the campaign. Individuals who are anxious to win some friend to the cause might well send the paper as a Christmas present to the person to be reached. These are but a few of the possibilities of the evangelistic use of the church paper.

The Christian Century aspires to be a paper which will set forth the plea of the Disciples in a proper light. We hope to convince any unbiased reader that the Disciples are deeply religious. The essential liberty of our plea combined with its enthusiastic loyalty to the evangelical fundamentals is to be continually exemplified in our pages. The Christian Century may be counted upon as a strong support of such a propaganda of a local church.

FEAR OF THE INTELLECT

THERE is now a certain kind of fear of the intellect in obscurantist religious circles. Though most religious sects profess to believe in education in some kind of way—even the Holy Rollers organize things they call colleges—yet these religious people have a suspicion that intelligence and a devout religious faith do not go together.

Of course, the story of the history of human thought has enough horrible examples of men of intellect alone who missed some of the deeper things of life. The whole rationalist movement of a previous century was superseded by a deeper and more satisfying way of looking at religion and life. It was not that the race found out at last that it was better to be irrational. It was simply that cultured people discovered that not all truth was compassed by the intellect.

A cynic has divided all humanity religiously into three classes, the rationalists, the irrationalists and the "hoorationalists." Were we shut up to a choice among these three, we would most certainly choose the first of the three. Fortunately, there are some better possibilities.

The service of the intellect in religion has been both destructive and constructive. The hurtful superstitions that grew up by the side of religion have been killed off one by one by the processes of criticism. Foolish doctrines have been laid on the shelf after criticism has done its work.

On the other hand, the intellect in religion has found new reasons for being religious. It has organized the religious material in such a way that men need not take offense at it.

He who declares that great universities and learned people are opposed to the true faith, has himself done much to undermine faith. Christianity dares to court the white light of investigation always.

A WIDER PUBLICITY FOR OUR FUNDAMENTALS

WE DISCIPLES have fallen into a rut of routine in the methods we employ to commend our message to the big public in any given community. We have occasional evangelistic efforts, sometimes costing more than a thousand dollars, but no continuous weekly service looking to the creation of a favorable knowledge of our principles and aims in the community.

Our fathers believed more in the printed page as a basis for evangelism than we seem to, although we see organizations all around us using printed sermons and tracts with effectiveness. The Unitarians are so small a sect that they might be as little known as the Plymouth Brethren but for their Post Office Missions, circulating free literature all over the country. The Millennial Dawn movement found its chief power in the printed page. The Adventists rescued themselves from hopeless obscurity by this method. If these organizations which have so difficult a message to float in the world have gotten so far with this kind of thing, what could not Disciples do with their big message of unity and liberty and charity as the watchwords of the Christianity of the new age?

The local newspapers will gladly furnish space for some kinds of addresses. They will furnish very favorable advertising rates for the publication of a sermon. This is the cheapest way of circulating the message in a community and one in which the Christian Scientists have found great effectiveness.

There is need, however, for a more permanent form for the message which is provided by the sermon or tract in booklet form and convenient to the shape of a man's pocket. The Christian gospel put into this form will travel to strange and unforeseen places and accomplish things that the writer may never dream of its doing. We have been too slothful every way in preaching our gospel. In the renewal of our zeal, there should be a place for this kind of propaganda.

THE COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE

IN MANY communities this year there will be a community Christmas tree. In one of the suburbs of Chicago the Elks have given the big tree which is erected in the central park. The electric light is furnished by the local company. Everything is donated in good will, even to the printing of thousands of the song leaflets which contain the Christmas carols.

Groups of children from the Sunday schools and public schools will gather at 6 o'clock on Christmas eve around the big tree and the carols will be sung. The groups of children will go home singing the glad songs announcing the birth of the Christ Child. In each home of the city a candle will be lighted and placed in the front window. During the evenings of Christmas week the big tree is to be illuminated. It thus becomes an object of wonder and delight to the whole population.

This particular suburb has been often criticized for its lack of community spirit. Its men make their money in Chicago. They ride on the suburban train to their rural retreat and spend their evenings there with little care for the community which provides the environment of their families. There are various ways in which a community fosters the community spirit. This building of sentiment in the community around an essentially religious idea is a thing in which all the churches should take the deepest pride .

There is rather a sad sequel to this story. In the suburb we mention, two pastors of leading churches have opposed the Community Christmas Tree because they feared it might injure their 8 o'clock service, which in each case is attended by about a hundred people.

It is thus demonstrated that the Community Christmas Tree must convert even these pastors from their rather individualistic conceptions to the thought of unity in service to the town. No better thing can come to any town than for it to turn out en masse to sing the joy of the Christian faith.

THE VOLUNTEER SERVICE OF THE CHURCH

THE trustees of the Chicago Christian Missionary Society are planning to give a dinner soon to the volunteer workers of the Russian Mission in their city. They have wished not to spoil the volunteer quality of the service by making any gift or remuneration, but they have desired to recognize the outstanding importance of the work of those who have come to the help of the mission out of love for Christ and his people.

Volunteers in religious work have tended to diminish in numbers in recent years in city churches. After it became the custom to pay the choir in the church, even the boy blowing a cornet in the Sunday school orchestra has expected pay. With the hiring of religious directors in some Sunday schools will come possibly the proposition to fee the teachers.

It will be a sorry day for the church, however, when there is no longer any voluntary service. In the early church every man seems to have been a church worker. "When they were scattered abroad, they went everywhere preaching the word." This spontaneous interest on the part of the disciples was the glory of the apostolic age.

The efficient church of today should consider the efficient handling of its potential energies. It is not enough to figure to a nicety how to handle a publicity campaign. The handling of the human energy of the organization is perhaps the greatest problem. The pastor who is a real general will know how to utilize the labor of boys and girls in building up the cause. He will know in just what ways the young people can be led to co-operate. He will make a list of the unemployed women of the parish who have by the good fortune of life been given special opportunities of leisure. These might as well be busy building up religion as spending all their talents in the work of some local club.

The local church should recognize and honor its volunteer workers from time to time. We all like to know that our efforts are not misplaced but are appreciated by the people we seek to serve.

WILL WE DEGRADE THE ORIENT?

THE recent visit of Rabindranath Tagore to this country has brought vividly to our attention the fact that all is not well with our civilization, nor is everything ill with the Orient. This man, who has taken a Nobel prize in literature and who interprets the aspirations of a section of the new Orient, looks upon much of our boasted Occidental progress with loathing and disdain.

The Orient was the original source of the spiritual tradition. No great religion was born in the Occident. We have been efficient in war and industry. We have made money. But for thousands of years we have been poor in the things of the spirit. We have never ceased to sit at the feet of Orientals in the things of the inner life.

And now tidings come of the rapid progress of Occidental ideas in China and Japan. What will be the effect of this influence? We think at once of our drinking habits which have been carried across the waters of the Pacific. Japan has learned to be a warlike nation under the tutelage of the West. It is said that the students of both China and Japan are rapidly taking up the obsolete philosophy of Herbert Spencer. Under these influences, the Orient would soon lose its glory. The West would overwhelm the East with its own shame.

The truer kind of influence would be an exchange of the best things in each civilization. We have developed justice in government superior to the Oriental brand. We have a reverence for human life that is lacking in most Orientals. Our consciousness of the obligations of social service are among the glories of our achievements.

These we would gladly send on to the Orient. In the spiritual commerce of man, we might learn something of the Oriental's independence of things. Even in poverty the Brahman does not admit that he must forsake the pursuit of the things of the spirit. There is a depth to the religious spirit of the East which we could wish might characterize our own experience of religion.

KEEPING A LIVE MEMBERSHIP LIST

MANY churches are thinking these days of the revision of their membership list. In some communities this work has not been done in many a year. It is often done by the new pastor who wishes to begin his work with the padding all removed from the list. One church of a thousand members was scaled down to three hundred by the incoming man. This process was deeply discouraging to the church. It would have been better to have had a continuous correction of the list.

Some churches separate their membership lists into the people living in the community and those living at a distance. In these days of easy travel, there are people, especially in the city, that are of uncertain abode. They are always on the wing and it is hard to say where they live. There are also members of the church who have lived at a distance for years, but out of love and loyalty to the institution have kept up a pledge to the church. It seems wrong to catalogue them as anything but active members.

Someone has suggested that the churches unite in an "Exchange of Membership Day." If on the first day of January every pastor in the land would go over his list and gather the names of absent members and absent adherents and send them to the interested pastors, there would be a great gain throughout the churches. There would be thousands more Disciples saved than our evangelists could induce to walk down the sawdust trail in many weeks.

The scattered Disciples in some instances go to other denominations. In that case they are not lost to the service of Christ. In more cases by far, they cease to be active in religion. They drift ever farther away from their first love and become the castaways of the faith. The pastors could prevent this big loss.

HAS YOUR MINISTER SUCCEEDED?

THE time of the annual reports is soon at hand. Church newspaper offices will have an abundance of news when the statistical reports are in. When these reports are read in some congregations they will present an opportunity for the pessimist to get in his work against the minister. It is said that figures never lie. That is least true in religious work. Figures often lie shamelessly. There is no kind of statistics invented that can properly appraise the value of a piece of religious work.

Do you think your minister has failed because the accessions to the membership of the church have been few? That may reflect upon the faithfulness with which the minister has preached the gospel, or it may reflect upon the kind of a church he has invited people to take membership with. A quarreling church, a dead church or a reactionary church people will flee from if they recognize its true character.

Do you think your minister failed because the church reported a deficit last year? More than one church has changed ministers to help the budget fund out, only to be out of the frying pan into the fire. In the long run a spiritual ministry will finance itself, but in a given year it may fail to do so, especially when a lukewarm church is not yet aroused out of its sloth.

There will be failures made clear and brought definitely to the attention of the church by the annual reports. It will be shown that some ministers have not made many calls. We wish it could be revealed how many books your minister read last year! Perhaps that is made plain every Sunday to alert listeners.

The church which has a minister who is a hopeless failure will know what to do. Unless this man has entrenched himself with the unspiritual elements of the church, he is easily removed.

More mistakes are made, however, from hasty condemnation of the work of ministers than otherwise. Try to find some things in the annual report that are encouraging.

SHALL A STEEL MILL RUN ON SUNDAY?

IN NEW YORK the laws relating to the operation of industry on Sunday have been strengthened in recent years and a commission appointed to enforce them. This commission has been given power to make exceptions to the law where its strict enforcement would lead to results that were palpably unjust or unreasonable.

The Lackawanna Steel Company has applied to this commission to exercise its powers and allow its employes to work in the steel mills on Sunday. Among the reasons which the company gives why this permission should be granted is that the competitors of the company in other states are working their men seven days in the week. It is urged that the nature of the business is such that it is difficult to close the mills one day in seven. It is further alleged that the company is not able to secure the labor which it needs to get out its product.

If the request is granted, it will help to standardize a seven-day week throughout the country for this industry, and if it is refused, the sentiment in other states will be strengthened to limit the days in a week to six.

The question is one which touches the welfare of man on every side of his being. A seven-day week breaks down the health of the men. It prevents their having a home life such as they should. It is clear that such men have no energy left to read and improve their condition. Above all, the religious opportunities are taken away from a man with no Sunday.

It would be absurd to say that wealthy America must have her factory operatives work like beasts. There never was a time like now to strike out boldly for better working conditions in all the industries.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE

THE minister has for a long time been a favorite study for literary men. He has been praised and lampooned and lectured. It is only lately that the human possibilities of a study of the minister's wife have been discovered; we now have her as a heroine of fiction.

It is not to be forgotten that most of these women definitely chose to be wives of ministers, for the average minister does not choose his profession after his marriage. The woman who shares his life faces the poverty and the burdens that belong to this calling.

After she is married she finds that financial sacrifices must be made. Women who have lived softly in their girlhood days learn to do the menial labor of a household because of the low salary her husband receives and the multitude of demands upon the family purse. Yet who ever heard the minister's wife complain?

She carries a multitude of responsibilities that other women, wives of professional men, know nothing about. She plays the part of telephone girl. She helps with the office work. She performs the lesser duties of the minister and supplies for him with classes and speaks at meetings. All of this builds up the credit of the senior partner of the concern.

The Angels' Anthem

By Harry Kemp

THERE was music on the hillside and singing in the glen
And anthems heard in meadows when Christ was born to men:
The King slept on in blindness, though troubled in his sleep;
The High Priest's ancient wisdom held no such lore in keep;
The Trader and the Merchant so bound by gain and rule
And all the learned Scholars who founded school on school,
The Consul and the Soldiers, their eyes were sealed that night,
And only on the Shepherds there burst the wondrous sight:
The Shepherds heard the singing that charmed the listening air;
The Shepherds saw the glory; the Shepherds were aware:
There was music on the hillside and singing in the glen
And anthems heard in meadows when Christ was born to men.

—The Independent.

Is Sacrifice Worth While?

A Study of Today's Life in the Light of an Eternal Principle

BY BURRIS A. JENKINS

AS A nation grows in population, in education, in sophistication, it naturally has less use for the principle of sacrifice than it had in its earlier days. In pioneer times when men are fighting the wilderness, the desert, famine and the hardship of frontier life they realize the necessity of giving and taking help, of going out of their way to serve one another, of denying themseves individually, to supply one another, but as population increases and the wilderness is driven back, as congestion occurs in great centers, as increasing plenty comes, as the organization of husbandry and industry is developed, men begin to question whether it is necessary to deny themselves for the sake of others. They naturally begin to feel that it is "each man for himself," which is the law of civilization; and that the state depends for its safety upon the individual's care of his own interests.

"THE STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE"

Darwin has contributed very greatly to this feeling on the part of the civilized world, which I take to be an increasing feeling since the latter half of the nineteenth century. Darwin's conception of the "struggle for existence," of the "survival of the fittest," percolating into the thought of all the nations, voiced so clearly of late in the German literature from Nietzche to Bernhardi, has led the world to feel that every man must fight for his own existence and for his own development; or, as we love to say in America, that personality is the supreme desideratum in human life. Darwin's idea has so impressed us within the last fifty years that we have begun to wonder whether sacrifice has any place at all. This German literature to which I have referred, regarding the superman, has insisted that the life of trade is competition, ruthless and relentless; the life of nations is warfare to the utmost; the life of the individual is the assertion of himself, the dominance of himself and the yielding of nothing to anybody else or to humanity at large.

It would surprise us, I fancy, to find how widely this philosophy has influenced even our own young nation, almost pioneer in its thought and life. Most men are saying to themselves today, What is the use of sacrifice in the world anyway? The advancement of the individual > "Except a grain of wheat or a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth by itself alone, but if it die, it beareth much fruit."

and the advancement of society come best by self-assertion. It is mine to get and mine to have and to hold, if I can, either pelf or place. It is mine to make of myself the best product that it is possible for me to make, and all the rest of the world to do the same for itself; so is progress attained. That idea of life, I fear, is very widely current, and men wonder whether or not sacrifice has any place in our modern civilization.

THE VIEW OF CHRIST

Let us turn to the Lord Christ to find the answer to the question whether it is worth while or not. A grain of seed wheat is a very small and insignificant thing out of which to bring the statement of a truth that strikes to the very roots of civilization. But, no doubt, Jesus held just such a seed grain in his hand when he talked to the little company of his disciples and said: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." There is his statement of the whole philosophy of sacrifice.

Now, there are three things that may happen to a grain of seed wheat. Mark you, I say, seed wheat. There is a fourth thing that may happen to the ordinary grain of wheat. It may be eaten, it may go into human blood and bone and nerve and muscle, but seed wheat was what Jesus was talking about, and there are just three things that may happen to such a grain of wheat. It may lie in a pyramid or in a sarcophagus for generations, for a millennium, and come out just what it was when it went in. You know we are told that in the early excavations in Egypt was found a handful of wheat, which was perhaps six thousand years of age, and those kernels of wheat were just the same at the end of six thousand years as they were at the beginning.

LIFE FROM DEATH IN THE SEED

A second thing that may happen to a grain of wheat is to rot in a damp cellar, in an unused barn or bin, exposed to the elements, to rain and snow; it may burst, it may blacken, it may die.

There is, however, a third possibility; a grain of seed wheat may be placed in rich loam and then, fed by the elements of the soil, warmed by the sun, sheltered by the snow, softened by the dampness, its skin may blacken and shrivel and rot and die, but the little germ of life within it will reach up for the light, and will come to the light, and will bear fruit thirty, sixty, one hundredfold.

These are the three things that may happen to a human life, and that is what Jesus meant when he took up this grain of wheat and held it before his followers.

There are three possible attitudes which we may assume upon this subject of sacrifice which broadens out as we begin to think about it, which is, after all, the subject of our relation one to another and to humanity at large.

THE PRINCIPLE APPLIED TO MAN

First, we may draw our arms about ourselves and, as the superman with the theory of salvation for him who fights his own battle alone, we may hide ourselves from the world and in a selfish egotism seek the advancement only of our own ends and the development of our own life; this is to be like the wheat in the receptacle. We may refuse contact with the world, refuse service to the world and each by self-assertion try to make the world his servant. Such a grain of wheat abideth alone, says the Master; such a life lived in self-assertion abides alone, says modern experience. We may seek our own advancement materially, or with regard to position, place, ambitions; we may use the world only as a stepping-stone upon which to rise toward our end and aim; we may tread down our fellow mortals, their feelings, their desires, their expectations, their rights, and we may walk over their prostrate bodies with seven-league boots to the success which we covet—and abide alone. We may amass riches, we may attain position, we may become the thing that we want to become; any man can become what he sets out to be, and then we may die alone, like the wheat hidden from contact with sun and soil.

WHO CAUSED THE GREAT WAR?

We have laid upon the shoulders of one man or one house the burden of the present conflict in Europe. We have insisted that it is the war lord and his degenerate son who have caused all the disaster and turmoil. We are right in attributing it to one man; but we have chosen the wrong one. I think we must go back a full century to find the one individual, a cold, hard, covetous man. He was this same sort of super-man who served nothing else but himself, and who died alone upon the island of St. Helena. It is he who is responsible for the condition of affairs in Europe at this hour. It was he who isolated Prussia; it was he who drove the little states of Germany together; it was he who taught them, without intending to do so, to develop and to train the finest army the world has ever seen. It was he, with his selfish ambition, with his cold, selfish purpose in life to set himself upon the wide throne of the universe—it was Napoleon Bonaparte the ruthless, who died alone and left us this heritage of woe. Think what one life can produce of destruction!

Furthermore, one may seek not merely possessions, place and power; he may seek the pleasures of this world to reach out and grasp them all and take them for himself. He will die alone. He will die with the ashes of Sodom in his mouth. As he grows older and older the pleasures will pall and he will lose his strength and he will find himself without friends, his life isolated. Seeking and associating with men and women for the purpose of his own pleasure alone will lead him to a solitary old age, to a tasteless, declining decade, then to a lonely grave, unwept, unhonored and unsung.

HIDING FROM THE WORLD

There is, again, a second possibility; the grain of wheat, in a dark, damp cellar, may dampen, rot, wither and fail to produce; and a human life may so destroy itself, may so flagellate itself, may so isolate itself from sunny contact with the world at large, with fellow human beings, that it also will fail to send up the little germ of life to light and to fruitage. Men may seek sacrifice for itself, as an end in life. They did it in the early ages of Christianity. Men set themselves apart in desert caves; men built little cavernous homes and lived in them; men refused to make homes and a family life. They prayed all night upon the stone floors or the wooden floors, or the bare ground. They beat themselves with scourges. They bore crosses, too heavy to be borne, day in and day out, sleeping with them upon their shoulders. Their lives withered, shriveled, rotted. Now, one who seeks sacrifice as an end in itself, abideth alone; he cannot bring forth fruit.

Why, you say, that idea of life is all a thing of the past; the monastic system is gone centuries ago; there is no longer any people or community of people who seek sacrifice as an end and aim in life. But we meet the monastic in the streets and social life of this present day. Men and women are crucifying themselves and thinking they are doing something pious by doing it, congratulating themselves upon their unselfishness, just because they are suffering and suffering to no purpose in the world. There are some people who are only outwardly religious; that is the monastic system reborn and redeveloped. It does not do anybody any good to make sacrifice without an end in view. It is wicked and useless unless there is a point to the sacrifice and a purpose in it. Sacrifice must be intelligent; must be purposeful; must be wise, or it may do more harm than good.

SACRIFICE IN HUMAN LIFE

Now, let us turn to the last possibility. There is a third thing that may happen to a grain of wheat and to the soul of a man. It may be planted in the rich loam, where the sun and the elements of the soil and the rain may be brought to bear upon it, and it will expand and grow and reach up to the higher life and bear fruit. There is a real and valid place for sacrifice. "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." Jesus, no doubt, looked forward and had in mind the close of his own life when he spoke these words. He saw sacrifice round about him, voluntary and involuntary, just as we see it at this hour.

Darwin has done this one thing for us and for our time; he has taught us that whether we will or not, nature is so organized that we must sacrifice for the benefit of others. It is our life, it is the law. It is part of the work and life of social existence for the individual to sacrifice for the life of others. Humanity suffers in the sacrifice of its reproduction. It goes steadily onward toward the grave, in bringing up its kind. It sacrifices for the sake of its children yet unborn and to be born. This is the law. We must die for our children's sake, and we do not know what love is until children have come to bless our lives. You say, men and women love each other; and they do, in a certain way, but few men and women know what deep, yearning love is until children have stood at their knees. We die that others may have life. A woman gives herself to the life of her children; through the long watches of the night she pours out her life in unstinted flood for the little helpless thing upon her breast. She does not deserve any particular credit, it may be, because the tigress does the same. It is the law; it is involuntary sacrifice.

DOES THE WORLD APPRECIATE SACRIFICE?

There is, however, another type of sacrifice, and that is volitional, willing sacrifice, in which men and women gladly give themselves for the benefit of those sick, helpless, distressed, poor round about them; where one takes the place of another and suffers for him. There is a place for voluntary sacrifice. "Except a corn of wheat falleth into the ground and die, it abideth alone." No one knows what life is until he has thus given himself for some one else. They say there is no place for sacrifice? Why is it, then, that we give medals to the engineers who risk their lives to save the lives of others? Why is it that we decorate the firemen who go into burning buildings in order to save the lives of those within? Why is it that we give pensions to the old soldiers? Why is it that the heroes of the race are held up before the minds of the young for admiration if it is not that we recognize the beauty and the value of sacrifice?

WHY CHRIST LIVES

Why is it we weep over stories of self-sacrifice? Because we recognize that greater love hath no man than this; that a man lay down his life for his friend. It is because we know in our heart of hearts that sacrifice lies at the root of being; that is the law.

Why has Jesus Christ such a hold upon the world? It is not for His words alone, wise and beautiful as they were. It is not for His deeds alone, graceful and compassionate as they were. It is because He died for the truth He uttered and the good deeds that He did. It is because of His sacrifice that He draws men to Him. It is because He fell into the ground and died that He does not abide alone.

Safety First? That Depends

A Good Principle, but One That Has Often Fallen Down

ELLIS B. BARNES

"SAFETY FIRST" is a necessary warning in our busy world. Doubtless it has saved the lives of thousands of people and caused thousands to look before they leap. It has caused even the careful to cultivate caution.

But despite the best efforts of the guardians of our welfare, people are killed every day. Accidents will happen. Even the unexpected happens when every possible precaution has been taken. A random shaft is now flying toward the heel of Achilles. It is not possible to immunize humanity against danger. Wherever there's a glass house there's a stone crying out to be thrown. But the menacing probabilities are being reduced.

"THE WORLD IS FULL OF SNARES"

The fact is that in a world like ours safety is an unrealizable goal. The brick is now lying fallow in America that is to fall on a head in some far off continent. But that does not relieve us from sounding the alarms on all occasions. If the warning saves we applaud the foresight that put the signal where it could be seen; if we did not see and the blow falls, or the aforementioned brick—well, the neighbors feel sorry and assist in those exercises that attend the gathering of us to our fathers. "Safety first" reminds us that the world is full of snares and pitfalls and interurbans and railways and submarines and Zeppelins and small boys and toy pistols and parlor matches and the dry leaves of autumn and electric wires and regrets. Not only is it true that in the midst of life we are in death, but in the language of the old hymn,

> As soon as we begin to live,
> Then we begin to die.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that the sure path to safety is for one never to be born. All who have played "safe" to that extent will please say "I."

SAFETY FIRST AND REFORM

Now, there are some spheres of human action in which "safety first" is not a warning but a menace, not a guide-post but a chain. If the reformer binds that slogan as frontlets to his eyes he ceases to be a reformer. Safety is the one concern of his life which he must fling to the four winds. The anti-reform forces have a monopoly on safety appliances and know too well how to use them. The reformer counts the cost, and all temporal considerations are "ground up in his paint." If William Lloyd Garrison had made a truce with safety he would never have been dragged through the streets of Boston with a rope around his neck. If Columbus had counseled "safety" he would never have steered his ship for the open sea; but he took a chance and the chance threw him on the shores of the new world. "Safety first" is a contradiction to the battlefield, to the heroism of the fireman, to the physician in the plague-stricken zone, and wherever the occasion involves so many more issues than life. The warning has in it the essence of selfishness, self-preservation, me, mine, our interests.

PROGRESS TAKES A CHANCE

The slogan has little value for the thinker. For if one thinks "safety first" thoughts only, there could be no life, no progress, no inventions, no discoveries. Thinking that gets the world anywhere takes a chance; it is willing to be volcanic if it may be dynamic. It cannot always fit its environment; as often it has to create its own. Thought is like a prairie fire—no telling what the results will be when once started. But in the long run it will be beneficent, grateful to the world as winds that sweep in from the ocean, carrying with them the mystery of vast distances and scattering away the malarias of the low lands.

Said our American sage, Beware when God lets loose a thinker! Such thinkers are troublesome and rare and since God lets them loose they are his earthquakes to break deep fissures into the hard crust of the world. They make miseries for a time, but the miseries turn out to be for the healing of the nations. The plague has in it its own cure.

REVOLUTIONS PACKED AWAY IN THOUGHTS

The thinker has a way of invading our neighborhood satisfactions which we keep all properly labeled on the shelf of tradition for the benefit of posterity, as housewives put down the preserves for the winter. Such thoughts as these immortals release to the world have revolutions packed in them—churches, universities, battlefields, hospitals, Hague palaces—and these, in turn, reach out to farms and firesides and cities and mines and printing presses and factories and governments and the whole world of love and hatred and strife and bloodshed and healings and devotions and prayers and to the farthest bounds of heathendom.

How can a man think for the future and provide himself with a buffer against all opposition? If one thinks great thoughts he throws himself into the antagonisms of his age, never into the arms of safety. He makes the great adventure. His age may kill him or starve him or hoot at him or drive him mad with its unmeaning flatteries, but every law of the universe works with posterity to make him immortal. That universe seems to say, "You may put him in the grave, but I'll set him on your parlor tables and on your mantels and beautify your walls with him and adorn your fine eloquence with his name." Justice will be done, no matter at what cost.

THOMAS CAMPBELL

Established interests of every kind run the "safety first" flag clear to the top of the mast whenever the thinker appears. He is an unknown quantity, a pioneer who has not been schooled in the wiles of the safe and the sane. These interests scent danger in the new and see in every innovation a revolution and a crisis. But the thinker goes through every wall they rear against him, and when the sounds of strife have died away everybody is on his side. Establishments are meant to mark boundaries, to celebrate ancient triumphs, to bar the door against all whose coinage does not bear a certain image and superscription, to hold fast their crown long after its luster has disappeared.

Suppose Thomas Campbell had taken "safety first" for his guide. Where would the Disciples movement have been? It came into being because, like all reformers and pioneers, he went out not knowing where he went. His brethren in the church that he left begged him to "bear the ills he had rather than to fly to those he knew not of." But he had no desire to play safe—except with his own soul. He turned the prow of his ship toward the boundless deep—in hope. Safety waved him a farewell from the shore. He was gone.

PHILOSOPHY AND "SAFETY FIRST"

Anaxagoras, born about 449 B. C., was the first Greek philosopher who taught that the sun was not a god. He was persecuted and sentenced to death, but his friend, Pericles, had the sentence changed to a heavy fine and banishment. He boldly declared that a philosopher should tell what he believed to be the truth. He was the next greatest teacher and scientist after Pythagoras. He was the first Greek philosopher who taught that there was one great Intelligence ruling the universe. He was a seeker after God. Yet he was punished for atheism! Suppose he had lived according to the rule of "safety first!" He might have lived longer, but not so uprightly. He held that truth was dearer than life.

THE SUREST WAY TO SAFETY

"Safety first" had no place in the life of Jesus. He saved others, himself He could not save. His followers were not to think of their ease or comfort or safety first. They were to think of themselves last of all. "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake the same shall find it." He taught us that the surest way to safety in his service is to lose ourselves in activities that have for their object the saving of others.

The child of God who does his Father's will needs no safety device.

The Federal Council and Ourselves

How Union Is Being Sought, Not by Way of Doctrine, but by Way of Song and Service

BY GEORGE A. CAMPBELL

THERE were twenty-nine distinct religious bodies represented at the recent St. Louis meeting, and the representatives talked together, morning, afternoon and night for a week. They sang and prayed together, lunched and laughed together, and in all grew nearer to one another. The representatives were as official as the polity of their respective bodies would allow.

Rev. Geo. A. Campbell

QUESTIONS FOR CONSIDERATION

The work in hand was the Master's world-wide interests. Is there division where there ought to be union? Are there dangers threatening the home? Is there intemperance in our midst? Is the curse of war upon the world? Is the American Sunday being Europeanized? Is there wasteful competition among the denominations? Well, all these and every other question of common human interest may legitimately come before the Federal Council for consideration.

The Council is an effort to assert the mind of American Christianity. The problems are too tremendous for any single body.

A TENDENCY TOWARD UNITY

The tendency for centuries has been toward division. It is now toward union. Once it was the fashion, if anyone got a new idea, or a new interpretation, to build around it a separate people. It was commonly held that unless we agreed intellectually we could not worship and work together. The emphasis is shifting. We have ceased to be so sure of the intellect. Religion is of the soul, and the soul has deeper fellowships. Christians will probably never all think alike or interpret alike. We are coming to feel that loyalty to Christ does not altogether consist in correct syllogisms.

Hence, the tendency today is not to separate because of new ideas. All modern conceptions are unifying. The final unity of Christ's Church will rest on the deep common instincts of the soul and on Christ's catholic answer to these instincts.

ARGUMENT LEADS NOWHERE

We used to try to reach unity by arguing; but sooner or later all things that do not bring results will be discarded. Arguing did not bring results.

We are now seeking unity by walking and working together, and praying together. Two souls that really pray together can no longer be rivals. Two souls who unite in the service of clothing the naked, in redeeming the drunkard, in stopping the nation's making drunkards, in cleansing the world of war, can never again walk so far apart. As with individuals, so with religious bodies.

The Federal Council is unifying the prayers, the plans, the work, of the churches of America. It seeks union not by way of doctrine, but by way of song and service.

IS IT CHRISTIAN UNION

Some one will say, "But it is not Christian union, and, therefore, failing to reach my ideal, I cannot give it my support." No, it is not Christian union realized. It is not the ideal. We will all do well, however, to remember that this is not an ideal world. No church is ideal, no man, no situation is ideal. We are always combating, always doing things by halves, always halting, always compromising. Good and evil, saint and sinner, though opposed, usually mix up a good deal.

The New Jerusalem is a perfect city, but the way leading to it is often rough and thorny to the pilgrim's feet.

The Federal Council is the way to better things. It points right. I am enthusiastic over the way the light of the celestial city shines upon it. It stirs me to think of the representatives of all the Protestant bodies in America treading this unitive path. Surely, Christ must Himself walk therein.

REAL BUSINESS TRANSACTED

It was good to be in St. Louis. Reports of the commission that visited Japan, a wireless from Germany, a cable from London, gave us the sense of a world body grappling with mighty problems.

Our delegates were younger than those of any other body. I think our men would not average over fifty, while no other body of representatives would average less than sixty. We have done well by our preachers in the days of their physical magnetism, but we have not sufficiently honored those of older years and maturer judgment and experience.

The gathering in St. Louis did business. It was a deliberative body. The morning and afternoon sessions were devoted to business. Standing commissions do their work seriously. Their work covers such vital subjects as temperance, education, family life, peace, social service, Sunday observance, etc. The reports are printed and distributed before being presented to the convention. The commission plan makes it possible to have many men studying the work of the Council, and certainly is more efficient than the plan of leaving everything to a resolutions committee.

Our national gathering would do well to have commissions seriously studying its work. It would also do well to devote its mornings to business. We must use more of the latent ability and we must have more interchange of thought. The average person attending our conventions does not need to be preached to, but to be deliberated with.

Another good feature of the St. Louis meeting was the business committee. All matters of importance went before this committee. It might have been overloaded, but this plan prevents unwise and hasty action.

There were thirty delegates of our people there. Certainly all of these must have been impressed with the conduct of the meeting. Its good influence cannot help but react upon our gatherings.

* * *

All Disciples attending, I think, must believe that this great organization is helping to answer Christ's prayer for the oneness of His followers. It is not the answer, but it is a help toward that answer.

The Hymns We Sing

From the Continent

IN THE frequent and familiar discussion about songs for young people, very little has been said about the hymnology of the adult congregation. Its general excellence has been taken for granted, and many have earnestly pleaded that its high standard be maintained for the young people as well. The fact that church hymnals are so much more enduring than the lighter books and are therefore prepared with greater deliberation, doubtless explains in large part their higher standard. Yet it does not do to take too much for granted even here. Ministers and other church leaders ought to study carefully the hymnology of the time. That is the easier to do since there are so many excellent books available.

TRUTH IN HYMNS

From the church's point of view the primary test of a hymn must be its truth. More theology is taught in hymns than in pulpits. Creeds are not so impressive as the words of hymns sung over and over again, inevitably making their impression. Many church people who have heard scores of sermons on the doctrine of the Trinity fail to retain any lasting impression of them.

When the average believer tries to explain the doctrine of the Trinity, he finds difficulty in expression. Hymns simply assert, and the average believer somehow feels that the doctrine is true even if he cannot explain it. He has sung the hymns which speak of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, "God in three persons, blessed Trinity," has lifted his voice to "the great One in Three," and without his will it has become a factor of his religious thinking. More is taught the average congregation about the cross of Christ in hymns than in sermons. The faith of the church about the future life has been influenced more by its hymns than by the formalities of its creeds. It is the same with almost or quite every doctrine of the church.

It may even be said that for a legion of men and women the hymns they have sung have been larger factors in their religious thinking than the Bible itself. The earliest form of literature was lyrical, Professor R. G. Moulton finds, and there is something about the rhythmical phrasing of hymns, with their short lines, rhyming in quick succession, which touches a primitive chord in all men. If the average man can remember anything verbally, it is sure to be poetry. Faster than verses of Scripture, verses of hymns are apt to stick. Many men can recall the little jingles they learned in Sunday School, when all the prose they have enjoyed is forgotten.

This makes it profoundly important that the teaching of hymns be true. It was after a hymn in his prayer meeting, called for by someone in the congregation, that Henry Ward Beecher settled back in his chair with a sigh of relief, saying, "That's a lie, thank God!" Other men have had the same feeling at times. One honored minister comes to mind who stopped a congregation in the midst of a hymn, saying, "Brethren, you are about to sing a bit of blasphemy from which I would like to save you."

There are occasional hymns which congregations sing with gusto which are simply not true, if the Christian faith is true. It may be that the hymn presses one phase of truth too far; it may be a figure of speech which is dangerous if it should be taken literally; it may be the survival of an expression which was once understood properly, but has now gone wholly aside from its original meaning. The error may be incidental, or it may be fundamental. The hymn is tolerated only by refusing to take the lines at their face meaning.

REVISING HYMNS

Of course, there will always be danger of revising hymns to fit a mood of thought, whereas a really great hymn is not a matter of moods at all, but deals with some fundamental aspect of truth. Indeed, revision of hymns is a fairly thankless task better left undone. Most hymns are unities in themselves, and if there is error to be avoided at all it is generally as well to avoid the entire hymn. Nor has a leader the right to impose on a congregation his personal quirks or limitations of religious thinking. It remains of grave importance that hymns be selected primarily for their downright truthfulness.

Then, close following on that, must come literary merit—worthiness for use in lifting the hearts of worshipers to God. Plenty of true rhymes are not worthy of place in hymnology. They may be true enough, but they are not substantial enough to uphold the hearts of worshiping people. The ideal for which the leader looks is a helpful Christian truth in a worthy setting for worship and fellowship.

THE BATTLE SONG OF TRUTH

By Thomas Curtis Clark

What though the day be lost, and every warrior slain!
A million years are His to win the field again.
The triumph is to God, however long the strife;
For sin and death must yield to him, the Lord of Life.

The planets are in league against the hosts of night;
The sun itself goes forth to battle for the right.
The ages fight for God! Shall we the contest yield?
Arise, ye sons of truth, and sweep the hostile field!

The Christmas Message

OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA

THIS Christmas season finds our homes in a happiness and comfort, not only impressive in their profound contrast to the distress and grief of homes in other lands, but also enlarged beyond our own ordinary measure.

The world is not unlike the Holy Land of twenty centuries ago. For while we follow the wise men to the Eastern Star and bring our gold and frankincense and myrrh to the cradle of the Infant Christ, in other lands Herod rules and dying children cause lamentation and weeping and great mourning; Rachels weeping for their children, and who will not be comforted because they are not.

The Christmas sun this year shines only upon our half of the world. May we not, without lessening the joy of our homes, deepen it and make it radiant with the spiritual light of a sweet unselfishness by remembering:

The little children who lead their blinded fathers by the hand in Italy and Russia, Great Britain, France, Austria and Germany, and other lands;

The starving and unsheltered infants in stricken Serbia, and her many neighbors;

The million children in Belgium, worse off than they were last Christmas, dying of the white plague because they cannot get the "extra meal a day" which the Commission is trying to secure for them;

That long-suffering Poland, without early and generous help, will soon have a childless Christmas;

That little Hebrew boys and girls in all lands are having an already full cup of suffering run over—and that Jesus was a Hebrew boy;

That a million Sunday school children in Belgium and thousands of Huguenot boys and girls will have no joyous Christmas tree;

That the "Christmas ship" to Armenia and Syria will be the only Christmas joy in those Eastern lands of pitiless persecution;

That there are numberless other children of other races whose faces wear no smile of happiness.

Our homes would not be any happier if we should forget these "little ones."

We would persuasively suggest:

(1) That at some time during the hours of public worship on Christmas Sunday, December 24, prayer be made to God and entreaty to the souls of men, for an enlarged compassion in our own hearts, and for peace and justice and good will among men;

(2) That in the Sunday school on that day there be a Christmas service in behalf of the children across the sea;

(3) That at these services offerings, from young and old, be received which shall not be a mere interchange of gifts between ourselves, but a great expression of Christlike unselfishness;

(4) That to every Christmas-tree gathering such gifts be brought;

(5) That at the family altar of every Christian home, on Christmas Day, gifts be made equal in value to those given in the family circle, for some home in the Near East or the Far East—a home for a home;

(6) That each church, in appropriating expenditures for its own Sunday school Christmas, set apart also an equal gift for a school of children across the sea;

(7) That for every Christmas dinner a gift of equal value be made for the starving children of Europe and Asia.

SHAILER MATHEWS,
PRESIDENT.

CHARLES S. MACFARLAND,
GENERAL SECRETARY.

Peace on Earth as it is in Heaven

James Austin Murray

There comes a Voice from o'er the Sea
That brings to all humanity
A hope, this Christmastide.
Now, let the Angel choir sing
While pealing chimes of gladness ring
And herald far and wide
A mandate from the Prince of Peace
That Hell's turmoil forever cease
And Peace on Earth abide!

Lord! from our hearts purge hate and sin
And let Thy Spirit dwell within,
All Truth and Charity.
Thou see'st from Thy throne on high
Thy erring children fall and die
By cruel War's decree;
Father of Mercy, in Thy might
Direct our rulers' hearts aright,
Thy light, O let them see!

In place of hate, and greed, and pride
Let Love within their hearts abide:
Good will to all on Earth.
Then, swell the Angel choir and sing
A glorious anthem to our King
In gratitude and mirth.
Lo! let this message come to them
Bright as the Star of Bethlehem:
Peace! blessed Peace! on Earth.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

The By-Products of the War

WHEN we read of the inconceivable sums being spent in the great war and of the almost inconceivable numbers of men who are being killed and wounded we have only the beginning of the war's toll told. The by-product of its destruction is even greater than the direct product. International law is supposed to make war civilized, though the use of the term civilization in relation to war is somewhat ironical. The world is waking up to the fact that war is not a normal necessity of human life, but like other atavistic returns of nature to primitive forms is a slipping back of civilization into savagery. The abject destitution which afflicts no less than 25,000,000 around the battle lines is the main by-products of this war.

In Belgium 3,000,000 are suffering. In Northern France 2,000,000 are practically barefoot and shivering as winter begins. In Serbia an entire people of 5,000,000 are destitute. In Poland, most pitiable perhaps of all these, there are 11,000,000, among whom few children under five years can be found because poverty and suffering and the inhumanity of mankind to man have made a nation destitute. In eastern Prussia, where the armies have trampled back and forth, are another million and a half whose fortune is perhaps a little better because they are within reach of their countrymen. A million are left in Armenia unmassacred but destined to the slow death of starvation unless help can reach them; while in Albania, least talked of but perhaps even more desperately pitiable than any, are a million and a half slowly perishing of starvation.

Here is a total of more than 25,000,000 people rendered helpless by the great war machine. In some of these lands where corn is a common product it is now selling for $50 a bushel, flour for $80 a sack and macaroni for $5 a pound. Ambassador Morgenthau startled us when he returned from Armenia and asked for $5,000,000, but now the Jews are raising $16,000,000 for their fellow sufferers alone. England and France have already contributed in the past year more than $25,000,000 and there is a movement under way in this country to ask the people who have profited so tremendously by war's necessities to give fifty or even a hundred million dollars to save that innocent civilian population that is destined to death if relief does not come.

With our national wealth through war business approaching the $200,000,000,000 mark, $50,000,000 would be a small sum for American philanthropy, but tragic as it is the men who are making their millions out of the war are the men who can look on with grim tearlessness while multitudes die for the lack of the succor they might give.

It is gratifying to report that the Armenian Syrian fund is nearing the $2,000,000 mark and that a great Christmas ship will be sent from this country, but our gratification turns to sadness when we realize that this munificence is niggardly in sight of the remarkable wealth the war has brought to our shores, and is only a beggarly pittance in the light of the need of the war's sufferers.

* * *

A United Effort For Labor

The recent meeting of the American Federation of Labor in Baltimore found organized labor more united than ever before in its history. The railroad brotherhoods have never joined the American Federation. They have clung steadfastly to the old trades union type, that is, each trade being organized to promote its own craft's welfare without organization to promote the welfare of labor as a whole. The leaders of these brotherhoods appeared upon the convention platform at Baltimore and acknowledged that the time had come when all labor must stand together and fight for the common cause. It is probable that steps will be taken to join the federation in course of time.

Within the convention there were the usual number of jurisdictional difficulties to settle, but that is only inherent in the federated form of organization. Samuel Gompers was re-elected for the thirty-fourth time as president, and his fighting declaration against the tyranny of the injunction when applied to labor as if it were property, brought the convention to its feet with enthusiastic applause. The time has just about come when human beings can no longer be treated as property through either a legal or economic construction of work and wages in property terms. The leveling of the injunction as a restraint upon the free right of individuals simply because they happen to be workingmen will also have to go. It is applied in such a way to no other class of human beings today.

*

The convention declared against compulsory arbitration. Here the labor leaders are due to fight public opinion with the hope of nothing more than a compromise, for the public, the big third party to every strife between capital and labor, is rapidly becoming convinced that judicial processes must be substituted for strife with its consequent loss to the public. The worker construes compulsory arbitration as a delimitation of his liberties because it may compel him to work when he does not wish to work. President Wilson pointed out in his recent message that no such revolutionary step was contemplated, but conciliatory methods must be pursued instead of those of violence.

The convention accepted the challenge to war given by the National Conference Board, which was recently organized as a successor to the old National Manufacturers' Association with the direct declaration that it was out to fight organized labor. This "Board" represents eight billions of dollars of capital and employs seven million men. These things constitute signs of internal warfare. There is no doubt that the spirit of peace and conciliation is growing mightily in the minds of the people of this country, just as the spirit of peace was growing mightily in the minds of the common people of Europe two years ago, while at the same time the organizations of government under the tutelage of political leaders were tightening for the fight, and just so it appears to be in the industrial world today. The spirit of peace grows in an unorganized fashion, and the determination of the organizations at headquarters to fight more bitterly bids fair to engulf the spirit of peace.

Union Churches

In order to break down the sense of isolation which exists among churches, and to let workers in this field know of the progress of the movement toward unity in other communities, we are maintaining this open forum. We wish to present plans of organization and work of united, federated and community churches, and to chronicle the progress of the movement as a whole. We ask any reader who knows of any union that has not previously been reported in this current series to send us information concerning it. Address: Howard E. Jensen, care of "The Christian Century."

The Awakening Interest in Church Unity

AN indication of the magnitude and momentum which the movement toward church union is attaining is the constantly increasing space devoted to it in the various journals dealing with country life. "Rural Manhood," the official organ of the county work department of the Y. M. C. A., has recently set aside a number of pages for the discussion of religious unification, similar to that which we are maintaining in The Christian Century. The following letter is clipped from the October number:

Believing that there is such a thing as a town of about 900 inhabitants having too many churches, there is a growing sentiment among the members of the Congregational and Christian churches that a union of the two churches on a basis of federation is desirable. Each church has a resident membership of about seventy. With the exception of about two months, the Congregationalists have had a resident pastor and were planning to secure a man to come about the middle of September, when it was learned that the people of the Christian church, whose minister's term expired last Sunday, were not planning to retire him and did not plan to call any other man.

* * *

It can truthfully be said that neither church is at the present time in a very flourishing condition. The result has been that in spite of bitter opposition on the part of a few, committees have been elected from each church to draw up a union agreement for a federated church. These committees met and were able to agree on points of doctrine without contention and devised a plan whereby the two churches should agree to hold union church and Sunday school services, as well as prayer meeting, Ladies' Aid meetings, etc., for a year, to be supervised by a joint council or committee elected from both churches. If at the end of that time things seemed to be moving harmoniously, they would draw up a permanent agreement. It was also thought best by the committees to hire as pastor a man belonging to neither Congregational nor Christian denomination.

(Signed) A PASTOR.

P. S. It has occurred to me that I didn't mention the fact that there is a Methodist church of about 100 members, some of the most influential of whom favor uniting with the Congregational or Christian churches.

Progress at Parma, Mich.

At Parma, Michigan, there is a federated church of Baptist and Presbyterian interests. Four years ago the respective churches were so low in membership, interest and attendance that they were on the verge of disbanding. By wise denominational guidance they were united in a federation, though each church maintains its individuality.

The fourth annual anniversary of the union was celebrated on November 9. A feeling of true Christian harmony prevailed. The church acted in all matters as a unit. Reports showed that fifty-two members had been received during the past year, thirty-one Presbyterians and twenty-one Baptists, mostly on confession of faith and baptism. All bills have been promptly paid and a balance left in the treasury. More than $100 has been given to missions, about equally divided between the denominations. The Ladies Aid expended about $100 and has a like balance. The Sunday School has more than doubled its attendance during the past year, having an average attendance of nearly 100. A men's class has been organized and is well attended. The church council, a body to guide the finances of the church, consisting of four members, was elected by the entire church for the ensuing year. The church has now a combined membership of 160 members.

A hearty vote of appreciation was extended to the pastor and his salary substantially increased. The church is planning an extension campaign to reach the unchurched during the coming church year. A recent every-member canvass conducted by twelve men resulted not only in increased offerings for the local work and for missions, but an increased sense of fellowship and responsibility for the success of the Kingdom here.

GEORGE H. WAID, PASTOR.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, the new Chinese ambassador to the United States, is a graduate of a Christian college, Shanghai. He is also a devoted Christian.

Recent Books

THE PICTURE LAND OF THE HEART. By William Allen Knight. In this ideal gift book the author, best known for his earlier "Song of Our Syrian Guest," has woven together the charm of the typical modern village and of Bible scenes. The light of the Gospel story is thrown upon the life of today, with its problems and mysteries. The Old Dominie is charming. (Pilgrim Press, Boston. $1.25.)

SALT WATER POEMS AND BALLADS. By John Masefield. Readers of poetry who have tired of the freakisms of much of the so-called verse being written in America will find what they have been longing for in the swinging sea poems of Masefield. He is a realist, and at the same time a poet—which many long-haired verse librists are not. The thing about Masefield which impresses you as you hear him reading from his own works is that he is first a man, then a poet. (Macmillan Company, New York. $2.00.)

DANTE: HOW TO KNOW HIM. By Alfred M. Brooks. This is a successful attempt to make this most wonderful Word of the middle ages live again for modern readers. The prose translations of much of the Divine Comedy is exceedingly helpful toward a comprehension of the work. (Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. $1.25 net.)

WHAT THE STARS SAW. By Caroline Kellogg. This little book tells with great charm the stories from the life of Christ which appeal most to young readers. The book is beautifully illustrated and will please any child. (Bobbs-Merrill Company. 50 cents net.)

THE BOYS' BOOK OF MECHANICAL MODELS. By Wm. B. Stout. The ideas collected together in this attractive volume are the fruit of several years' work with boys. There is no more attractive gift for Junior boys. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston. $1.50.)

TOYS AND OTHER THINGS. By Herbert Booth. A series of talks to parents, teachers, young people and children on the principles associated with playthings. Excellent for use by pastors supplementary to sermons in evening services. (George H. Doran, New York. $1.00 net.)

THE ROMANCE OF THE MARTIN CONNOR. By Oswald Kendall. Mr. Kendall is a young Englishmen, who has had a wide experience as a sailor. He has acquired a wealth of material, and is in this book making his first attempt to put down for others these thrilling experiences. His place is assured as a writer of sea stories. The present volume contains the adventures of an American tramp steamer that sailed from Galveston to the head waters of the Amazon on business connected with rubber importation. There is much humor in the book, and great descriptive power is shown. (Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston.)

MOTHER GOOSE CHILDREN. By Mary F. Blaisdell. For children of 6 to 9. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston 50 cents net.)

GALLIPOLI. By John Masefield. The English poet states in his introduction to this book that he was asked by so many people in America why the attempt had been made to land and fight at the Dardanelles that he was moved to prepare a statement of the case as he sees it. Mr. Masefield served in the Dardanelles campaign, and knows whereof he speaks in this volume. The book is in fact a prose epic, written in Masefield's rare style. It will live as one of the dependable records of the Great War. (Macmillan, New York. $1.25 net.)

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Evangelistic Movement for Chicago

The Chicago Church Federation Council, of which Dr. H. L. Willett is president, is asking the evangelical churches of the city to participate in a city-wide evangelistic movement in the period between January 1st and Easter. Each church is asked to stress the evangelistic note at this session. The churches are also asked to provided for a series of nightly meetings extending over two weeks or more, in which there shall be special effort for the conversion of those out of Christ. The recommendations this year suggest that each pastor be his own evangelist, and that each church furnish its own personal workers. Rev. Charles K. Carpenter is the chairman of the Evangelistic committee.

Professor Deissmann on Arbitration

Professor Adolf Deissmann, the celebrated orientalist of Germany, has replied by wireless to the inquiry of Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, with reference to the attitude of Germany toward the future arbitration of international disputes. After quoting Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg as favoring this, he adds the following comment: "Of course, if attempts to form an international alliance for maintaining lasting conditions of peace are to be practically realized, the mental and spiritual atmosphere within the great powers must change. The gangrenous ulcer of hate which poisons international relations must be burnt out and the intellectual heads of nations, above all the Christian leaders, must under full recognition of the bona fides of their opponents, be ready to forgive one another's thoughts as well as words and deeds, whereby they have hurt and wounded each other. Then they would be able to succeed in fully entering into the problem of reconstruction. In creating this atmosphere, which is pre-requisite to every step towards a better mutual understanding, neutral Christians have a great mission. Without pharisaism and by the proper attitude which avoids everything that might pour oil into the flames of war, they should regard combatants as suffering brethren, nurse their wounds and reconsider the attitude of their hearts and minds."

Open Church Succeeds

The First Baptist Church of Los Gatos, Cal., will soon celebrate the fifth year of what it calls its "emancipation" on December 31. Five years ago the church decided to lay side every ritualistic test of membership and to admit good friends of Jesus Christ with whatsoever kind of baptism they might have. It was even provided that people might unite with the church with no baptism at all. The ecclesiastical machinery brought suit in the court to oust the church from its name and property, but these suits were not successful. The church has grown nicely and will soon hold its "Springtime Conference," which this year will consider the question of tax reform. Since the Los Gatos church opened its membership, several Baptist churches in the east have followed suit.

Want to Share Christmas with European Children

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America wishes that the churches of this country should share their Christmas joys with the children beyond the sea. A remarkable message has been sent to the churches to be read on December 24, which asks that the Christmas giving be on the "fifty-fifty" plan, so the children beyond the sea may have their share of the Christmas blessings.

Two Presbyterians Resign

Two leading Presbyterian preachers of the Chicago group have recently resigned. They are Rev. Martin D. Hardin, for nine years pastor of Third Presbyterian Church on the west side, and Dr. George N. Luccock, who has been pastor in Oak Park. Dr. Hardin will take a year for rest in the state of Virginia, and Dr. Luccock has accepted the pastorate of the Westminster Church in Wooster, Ohio.

Federal Council Simplifies Organization

One of the direct results of the meeting in St. Louis of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has been the simplification of the organization. Several commissions were abolished, including those having to do with home missions, foreign missions, family life and Sabbath observance. The commission on state and local federations and the commission on federated movements have been combined. Every effort is being made to keep the machinery of the organization in active and serviceable shape.

Methodist Missions Makes Records

The Methodist Episcopal Church has its mission headquarters in New York. There has been great rejoicing in the Mission rooms this year over an increase of receipts of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The total receipts for the year were $1,933,000. This does not include the money raised by the Methodist women; this would bring the total well up toward three millions of dollars. In spite of this seemingly big total, Methodist newspapers are reminding the people that this is only about seventy-five cents a member in their denomination for missions and efforts will be made to increase the offerings.

Y. M. C. A. Holds Conferences

Winter conferences, which undertake to bring to city Young Women's Christian Association members something of the inspiration found in the well-known Summer Conferences at Silver Bay, Lake Geneva, Seabeck, etc., are being held in Bangor, Buffalo, Denver, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Portland and a dozen other cities at this time. They mark the tenth anniversary of the organization of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Associations in 1906 and consist of classes in Christian Fundamentals, Personal and Social Evangelism, Bible and Mission Study and Talks to Girls on the Abundant Life in Christ Jesus. These are held at the particular hours convenient for employed young women, older school girls and women at home. National secretaries, local pastors and Association leaders make up the staff for these five-day conferences, which begin on a Tuesday evening with community fellowship and close on the following Sunday afternoon with an appeal for World fellowship.

The Sunday School Lesson

The Light of the World

The Lesson in Today's Life

By JOHN R. EWERS

THE First Christian church in Youngstown, Ohio, has wonderful art glass windows. They were chosen by George Anderson, who for thirteen years was minister of that congregation. He was an Englishman and had a high ideal of the place and value of worship. Under him the order of worship was rich and uplifting to a degree. Among other beautiful windows in that church one particularly dwells in my memory: "The Light of the World," by Holman Hunt. The thorn-crowned Christ stands before the oaken door of a house. In his hand he holds a lantern. He is gently knocking upon that solid door. Such sympathy has the artist put into that picture that it always inspires in me à keen feeling of pain —how long before that door will be opened? Someone once criticised the picture in Holman Hunt's presence, saying, "There is no knob on the door." "Yes, there is," replied the artist, "It is on the inside."

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock," but if the door is ever opened the man within must voluntarily open it. Jesus will not ruthlessly smash that door. He will patiently wait for a time and then he will move on down the street. The day of grace will be over. I am haunted yet by that patient figure standing before that fast-closed door! What song so tenderly appealing as the one beginning:

O Jesus, Thou art standing
Outside the fast-closed door,
In lowly patience waiting
To pass the threshold o'er;
Shame on us, Christian brothers,
His name and sign who bear;
O, shame, thrice shame upon us,
To keep him standing there!

O Jesus, Thou art knocking;
And lo! that hand is scarred,
And thorns Thy brow encircle,
And tears Thy face have marred;
O love that passeth knowledge,
So patiently to wait!
O sin that hath no equal,
So fast to bar the gate!

What so dramatic as the Lord of Heaven before your closed door! What so tragic as your refusal or neglect to open it! Are you counting your pile of gold and can you not hear that gentle rapping? Are you poring over your book, that your attention is preoccupied? Is the noise of your merry revel so loud and boisterous that the persistent knock, knock, knock of Jesus cannot be heard? The Lord Christ at the door of your heart! What response?

An old lady lived in a hamlet not far from London. She had always loved Queen Victoria but had never seen her. Her one ambition was to see the Queen. One day an open carriage stopped before her door. A heavy rain was just beginning. The coachman asked for the loan of an umbrella. Now the old lady had two umbrellas, one of silk, the other of cotton. For a moment she weighed in her simple mind the ponderous question as to which one she should loan to the rich woman who waited in the rain without; then with characteristic selfishness she handed out the old, bleached, cotton umbrella and the carriage drove rapidly away. A few days after, the coachman stood before the door again. He was returning the old, faded umbrella and as he handed it back he said, "Queen Victoria wishes me to thank you for the loan of your umbrella!" Prudent selfishness again defeated.

* * *

Yes, Christ is the Light of the World. He shineth, like the sun, upon every one born into the world, but if you hide in the dark cellar of your selfishness, that light is not for you. The other day you took your flowers into the cellar. There they will become pale and sickly, like a tenement child. Next spring when the warm days come again you will take these flowers out into the sunlight and again there they will grow daily into wonderful beauty. Live in the light. Let the sunlight of Christ's personality shine upon you so that you may naturally develop into spiritual strength and beauty.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

will be the theme of the International Uniform Sunday School lessons for the first six months of next year. There is no other course of study that offers such an opportunity as this for interesting and profitable work in adult and young people's classes. There is no better method of conducting Bible class work than by the question method. This is the plan of study followed in the best text on Christ's life published—

"THE LIFE OF JESUS"

By Dr. Loa E. Scott

SEND 50c FOR A SAMPLE COPY OF THE BOOK.
IT SELLS IN LOTS OF 10 OR MORE AT 40c.

Disciples Publication Society
700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO

Disciples Table Talk

Winfield, Kan., Church Starts New Year Right

Not every evangelistic effort leaves a church in better condition than it was before the meetings, but that is the case at Winfield, Kan., where R. W. Gentry ministers, and where Herbert Yeuell has just concluded a most successful series of meetings. At the final services $800 was raised in the congregation to pay off an old indebtedness and, writes Mr. Gentry, "the church goes into the new year with a clean slate and fond hopes." Considering the fact that Winfield, an ultra college town, has almost invariably proved a Waterloo for evangelists, Mr. Gentry speaks in words of the highest appreciation of the service Mr. Yeuell has rendered the church and community; for not only were there confessions every evening, but also the preaching of the evangelist was "a great strength and inspiration to the church." Devoid of cheap methods, Mr. Yeuell's style is popular. His lectures and recitals were well patronized and the profits from them easily took care of the expenses of the meetings.

Danville, Ind., Church Gives Christmas Gifts to Children

Chas. O. Lee, of the church of Danville, Ind., which church is also called "The Danville Community Center," has conceived an unusual plan for bringing cheer to the children of the town. The Community Center season tickets, including privileges of both gymnasium and club rooms, sell at from $2.25 to $4.05. During December the management of the Center proposes to give these tickets to citizens of Danville at half price, on the condition that they be presented to boys or girls of the community who are not now enjoying the privileges of the Center. The Danville church is coming to be a shining light in the Indiana town, as well as in a wider range.

Bowling Green, Mo., Church Dedicates

Bowling Green, Mo., is known as the home of Speaker Champ Clark, but it is also known for the good work being done by the Disciples church there, under the leadership of Arthur Stout. C. H. Winders, who led in the dedication of the new $20,000 building at Bowling Green, says of the pastor: "The one man who led so wisely and faithfully, and to whom the chief credit is due, is the honored and beloved pastor, Arthur Stout. He is held in high esteem by the entire community and loved for his real worth by every member of the church." Mr. Winders found $6,000 yet needed to take care of the expense of the building and succeeded in raising the entire amount in cash and one-year notes. In a two weeks meeting, held after the dedication, 23 persons were added to the church membership. Mr. Stout writes that the evangelist won the heart of the community and strengthened the spiritual life of Bowling Green.

Kansas Pastor Leads in Civic Enterprises

F. W. Lynch, minister of the church at Sharon, Kan., has recently been elected secretary and a member of the Executive Committee of the Sharon Commercial Club. Mr. Lynch believes in taking an active part in all civic enterprises. The result of this interest on his part are seen in a greatly increased church attendance and a doubled Sunday school during his brief ministry of eight months at Sharon.

Seventy Men Conduct Evening Service

The every-member canvass at University Place church, Des Moines, which was carried through with great success on December 3, assures the largest offerings for current expenses and missions in the history of the church. At the evening service on that day the seventy men of the team had entire charge of the program, Mr. Medbury, the pastor, being allowed to sit in the pews. A pleasing feature of the service was the singing of old hymns, led by the chorus of seventy men.

California Disciple Endeavorers Excel

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Oakland, Cal., church carried off the county union efficiency banner at the recent monthly Endeavor gathering, held at the Oakland Y. M. C. A. headquarters. The Intermediate organization of the Fruitvale church captured a like honor among the Intermediates. There were between 40 and 50 societies contesting.

High Aims at Carthage, Mo.

Among the "Aims" of First church, Carthage, Mo., to be realized by 1920, are the following: Church debt paid; 1,000 active members; 1,000 active members in the Sunday school. During the present year the congregation will strive to reach an active membership of 700, a Sunday school membership of 500, a Christian Endeavor roll of 150, a prayer-meeting attendance of 100, a C. W. B. M. auxiliary of 125 members and an average church attendance at both services of 400. Chas. H. Swift is the new leader at Carthage.

Finance Achievement at Somerset, Pa.

S. G. Buckner has served the Somerset, Pa., church only four years, but during this time over $15,000 has been paid by the congregation on the church debt. Only $3,500 remains against the church. Crayton S. Brooks will lead the Somerset church in a meeting during February.

Educational Day Next Month

January 21 has been set apart throughout the brotherhood as Educational Day. Special sermons on education will be preached in the churches and offerings will be received for the work of the national board of Christian Education.

D. R. Dungan Meets With Accident

D. R. Dungan is reported to have met with an accident while on his way over to Hawaii. A fall caused by the lurching of the vessel on which Dr. Dungan and wife had passage, made it necessary for him to enter Queen's Hospital, in Honolulu for several days.

A Busy Texas Secretary

Secretary Clifton S. Weaver, of the Educational Movement among the Disciples of Christ in Texas, has himself visited 120 churches during the campaign which began June 19.

Special Sermons for Men at Franklin, Ind.

Claude A. Burkhardt, of Tabernacle church, Franklin, Ind., has sent out to two hundred citizens of Franklin a list of eight questions, to be answered and returned to him. Upon the basis of the replies received Mr. Burkhardt will prepare a series of sermons to be delivered to the men of the community, beginning with the new year. The following are the questions put to his fellow citizens: "Are you a member of any

Mrs. Harry Munro Reaches Alaska

This letter, from Mrs. Harry Munro to Secretary R. M. Hopkins, sent under date of November 22, will be eagerly read by all interested in the new Alaska mission, to be conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Munro:

"We arrived in Seward yesterday morning early, on the Watson. We had a delightful trip, with good weather and sunshine all the way. It seems that we just missed the storms all along. The sun has been shining since I came, for the first time this fall. Mr. Munro took a picture of the new church building yesterday.

"I was treated with every kindness and consideration by the good people in Seattle, making my trip very easy.

"Yesterday I received quite a number of calls from the ladies here. I am sure we will like this work.

"I found the weather here quite a change from southern California. Anna Laura is afraid of the ice, for she slips on it. The wind is too bad to trust her out of doors very much.

"The Christmas presents that could be used here would be any good books, scientific or fiction; subscriptions to good magazines for the reading room to be opened; subscriptions to the Sunday papers of various cities; a good kindergarten magazine for the kindergarten to be opened; kindergarten equipment of any kind; Mr. Munro needs tools to use with his manual training classes. Express and freight are so high that things sent here have to be confined mostly to things which can come by parcel post.

"Coal is $28 a ton here, so if any one lives where it is cheap, he might send a chunk or so of that.

"Mrs. Harry C. Munro."

Mr. Hopkins writes that "our newest Bible school, the one Farthest North, sends its first offering for home missions."

"Seward, Alaska, Nov. 26, 1916.

"Dear Brother Hopkins:

"Enclosed find a check for five dollars, the offering for home missions of the Seward Christian Sunday school. We had an attendance of twenty and a little program of recitations and special music. We used part of the material furnished by the Board. Everything is fine.

"Harry C. Munro."

church? Why?" "Do you attend the services of the church as regularly as formerly? Why?" "Do you consider that the churches have a real work to do in Franklin? What?" "Has the church of today a program that is big and vital enough to challenge the intelligent support of busy men of affairs?" "Do you think men generally are coming nearer to or drifting further away from the church? Why?" "If you are a Christian, approximately how many men have you tried to interest in the church in the past year? If not a Christian, how many have tried to interest you?" "What noteworthy criticisms of the church have come before your notice in the past year?" "Can a man be a Christian and voluntarily live apart from the church?"

Another Disciple Minister Writes a Book

F. Lewis Starbuck, pastor of Howett Street church, Peoria, Ill., has had considerable experience in journalistic work, having written several short stories, which have been published in Canada, Australia and Norway, as well as in the United States. He has written an allegory in three parts which has recently been published under the title "Dan."

Educational Week at Springfield, Ill., Church

Mention was made in an earlier number of The Christian Century of the "Educational Week" which has been planned by First Church, Springfield, Ill. The date is January 7-14. Frank W. Allen, who leads at Springfield, sends further details of the plans. On Sunday, January 7, C. C. Morrison, of The Christian Century, will speak at the morning service on "The Continent of Opportunity—South America." On Monday, Religious Education Day, Dr. H. F. Cope, general secretary of the Religious Education Association, will lead in conferences and will speak in the evening on "Making a New World." Tuesday will be Social Service Day, and leaders will be O. F. Jordan, of Chicago; H. H. Peters, of the Illinois state work, and A. W. Taylor, of Columbia, Mo. The C. W. B. M. will have charge of the meetings on Wednesday. Miss Bertha Lacock and W. C. MacDougall will lead in daily conferences and speak at the evening service. Thursday will be Foreign Mission Day. The church dinner will be held in the afternoon, with addresses by A. McLean and two of the missionaries in the evening. American Missions will be featured on Friday, with afternoon conferences and an address in the evening by F. W. Burnham. Mr. Burnham will also preach at the church on Sunday morning, this being the annual ordination service of newly-elected elders and deacons.

Eight Years of Good Service at Alliance, O.

C. B. Reynolds began his ninth year of work at Alliance, O., on last Sunday. The eight years of Mr. Reynolds' service have been years of achievement. Among the tasks that have been undertaken with success are the following: Mortgage on church building burned; church became living link, both in the foreign and home field; completed parsonage; church building repaired; a secretary added to the payroll; a tabernacle erected to give more Sunday School room; contribution of $300 to state missions. During these years the pastor has received into the church fellowship 582 members. George B. Baird is serving the church as its living link in Lu Chow Fu, China; V. L. King is the home field living link, ministering to the church at Kensington, Pa.; and E. S. Farmer serves the church at Sidney, O., as the state living link of the Alliance Church. As Mr. Reynolds says: "The sun never ceases to shine on the work of the Alliance Church. When it is night in America the sun is shining in China. When Farmer, King and Reynolds are sleeping, Baird is busy in his China field."

Disciple Minister Preaches in Jewish Temple

Perry J. Rice, of First church, El Paso, Tex., had the novel experience of preaching, two weeks ago, in the new $75,000 Jewish temple of his city. The occasion was the felicitation service, which was held as the closing service of the series of dedicatory services. Mr. Rice writes that Chaplain James T. Moore, of the Second Georgia Infantry, preached the C. W. B. M. sermon at the El Paso church. Mr. Moore is a son of A. R. Moore, pastor at Savannah, Ga.

Large Annuity Gift for Ministerial Relief

Secretary W. R. Warren writes that on the eve of the annual observance of Ministerial Relief Day, Christmas Sunday, it is encouraging to report that a friend of many years has given this fund $10,000 on the annuity plan. Others are known to be planning to take out annuity bonds at an early date. With one of these it will be the third within two years. Churches and Sunday Schools are promising greater offerings than ever before. Miss Emma Newcomer, of a family that has constantly helped, has become an Individual Living Link by giving $100. Mr. Warren writes further: "Let all friends remember that the roll grows rapidly and that large gains in regular receipts must be made to avoid actual suffering. Only the interest on the $10,000 mentioned above, or any other annuity gift, can be used, and even that must go to the donors until their death."

C. R. Stauffer to Lead in Cincinnati Evangelistic Campaign

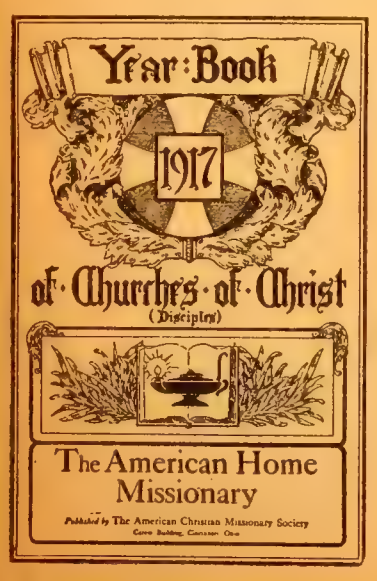
C. R. Stauffer, the energetic pastor at the Norwood Church, Cincinnati, O., has been appointed "Prayer Captain" of the city-wide evangelistic campaign being undertaken by the Federation of Protestant churches in Cincinnati. Under his leadership the city has been divided into twenty-five districts and hundreds of cottage prayer meetings will be conducted for four weeks, beginning January 14. The subject of prayer was discussed from many pulpits in Cincinnati two weeks ago, in anticipation of the evangelistic effort.

Records of Northern Illinois Ministerial Institute Wanted

B. H. Cleaver, of Canton, Ill., has been elected secretary-treasurer of the Northern Illinois Ministerial Institute, and writes that he would like to have, if possible, the programs of the sessions of 1909 (at Decatur) and of 1914 (at Eureka), which he finds were lost from the records. He will return such programs, if they should be sent to him.

Washington Pastor Lectures on Shakespeare

Earle Wilfley, pastor at Vermont Avenue church, Washington, D. C., is delivering a course of lectures before the Shakespeare Society of America in Washington. He is discussing several of the plays of the Avon poet. Mr. Wilfley is a Shakesperean scholar and a very able reader of the Shakespeare plays.



Eighty Year Old Sunday School Attendant

The Loyal Men's Bible Class, at Leroy, Ill., has a member, John Patterson, who is eighty years of age; he has been present at the class sessions every Sunday for the past three years. This class recently banqueted, and H. H. Peters, of the state organization, made an address.

* * *

—R. D. Smith of Sherman, Tex., has accepted and begun a new work with the Winchester, Tenn., church.

—The Paris, Ky., church building came near being destroyed by fire a few

The Year Book for 1917

Will be ready early in January.

This is the most valuable single publication among the Disciples of Christ.

It gives the annual statistics for the churches, and their missionary, benevolent and educational work all over the world.

The supply is regulated by the demand. Order your copy now.

No advance in price, fifty cents. This includes one year's subscription to THE AMERICAN HOME MISSIONARY.

The American Christian Missionary Society

CAREW BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO

The Year Book is a fine publication to put in the hands of canvassers before making the Every-Member Canvass

EDUCATION DAY, JANUARY 21, 1917

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Trains laymen
Trains ministers
Trains missionaries

For the Christian Church

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Contributes students
Contributes money
Contributes moral support

To the Christian College

A More Efficient Church A More Efficient College

Result

Does your Church rise with the rising tide of college support or do you, Mrs. Partington like, attempt to sweep back the sea with a broom?

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST

70 Layman Avenue Indianapolis, Indiana

days ago. Damages amounting to about $2,000 are reported. A bird's nest in the loft is held responsible.

—J. H. Stidham, until recently pastor of First church, Wagoner, Okla., has been elected county superintendent of the Christian churches in Callaway county, Mo., and has begun his work. Mr. Stidham succeeds C. K. Gillum, who resigned to accept the pastorate at First church, Beardstown, Ill.

—H. G. Burgess has resigned the work at Canton, Mo., his resignation to take effect March 1. Mr. Burgess has led in the Canton field about a year and a half.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—Manson E. Miller has resigned the work at Kearney, Neb.

—The church at Iowa City, Ia., to which work Fred S. Nichols ministers, has decided to expend about $10,000 in remodeling and improvements.

—During his two years' pastorate at Fort Smith, Ark., J. D. Arnold has had the pleasure of seeing over 200 persons added to the church membership. Mr. Arnold has been enthusiastically called to continue this work for another year.

—James C. Burkhardt, of Muskogee, Okla., will begin a series of meetings at First church, Tulsa, on December 31. F. R. Brotherton will lead the music, and will have as a special feature of the meetings a chorus of about a hundred high school students. J. W. Darby ministers at Tulsa.

—George E. Lyon, who leads the state work in Kansas, dedicated a new $7,000 church building in Dighton, Kan., leavnig the church free of debt.

—W. M. Mayfield of West Side church, Kansas City, Mo., has resigned to accept the pastorate of the Roanoke church in Kansas City. Mr. Mayfield has been very active in opposing the saloons of the west side residence district of the city.

—Harold E. Monser, former Illinois pastor, who has entered the field of evangelism, is in a meeting at Mineral Wells, Tex.

—At the dedication services of the Lonoke, Ark., church, J. S. Zeran, state superintendent, preached in the morning and B. F. Cato, of First church, Little Rock, in the afternoon. The new house cost $6,000, and all obligations are now provided for.

—A. Homer Jordan, called from Marion, Ind., to Pine Bluff, Ark., will begin his new task on January 1.

—Ernest C. Mobley, of Amarillo, Tex., recently gave an address before an Olders Boys' conference, held at Bryan, Tex.

—V. W. Wallace has resigned from the Corsicana, Tex., church to enter the evangelistic field. During Mr. Wallace's two years' pastorate the Corsicana Sunday school has doubled in attendance, and all departments strengthened.

—Randolph Cook, of Stephenville, Tex., had the misfortune to lose a part of his library by a fire. Some valuable manuscripts of Mr. Clark were destroyed.

—Lawrence Williams, of Canadian, Tex., has been called to succeed E. C. Boynton at Belton, Tex. Mr. Boynton is now serving the Hyde Park church, Austin, Tex.

—J. F. Ghormley will minister to the church at Green Bay, Wis.

—George L. Snively will hold a series of meetings at Cairo, Ill., during February.

—Claude E. Hill, of Chattanooga, Tenn., delivered a lecture, "A Man With Four Faces," at the Shelbyville, Tenn., church on Dec. 14.

—W. F. Richardson, recently resigned from First church, Kansas City, Mo., will hold a meeting next month at Maryville, Mo.

—The Bedford, Ind., congregation, ministered to by Gerald Culberson, will dedicate their new building on January 13, with G. L. Snively in charge.

—John L. Brandt, of First church, St. Louis, will begin a series of meetings at Central church, Terre Haute, Ind., on January 8. Miss Hazel Lewis of the national Sunday school organization, gave a talk at Central church school two weeks ago, and held a conference in the afternoon with the officers and teachers of the younger departments.

—W. O. Foster, of West End church, Atlanta, Ga., who has accepted a new task with the Hartselle, Ala., congregation, reports that during the past two months there have been ten confessions at the Atlanta church.

—M. Lee Sorey, of First church, Hutchinson, Kan., gave a talk at the Hutchinson high school on the significance of "Fathers and Sons' Day," which was observed in all the churches of the city on December 10.

—The Danville, Ind. church had Mrs. David Rioch, the well-known missionary, with them on the evening of C. W. B. M. day.

—Chas. O. Lee, of the Danville, Ind. church, reports meetings recently held in Hancock county, as follows: At Plainfield, by H. F. Rector; at New Winchester, by E. B. Scofield; at Maplewood, by M. V. Grisso; at Stilesville, by J. V. Coombs.

—Geo. W. Titus, for the past five years connected with the Anti-Saloon League of Indiana, has accepted the work at Mishawaka, Ind.

—H. H. Harmon and L. C. Oberlies, of First church, Lincoln, Neb., closed a series of meetings at Enid, Okla., with about sixty persons added to the congregation.

—Central church, Anderson, Ind., has adopted the unified program of church services.

—H. K. Pendleton is preaching a series of sermons at Valparaiso, Ind., dealing with the world war in prophecy.

—During the second year's service of R. H. Heicke, at Grandview church, Kansas City, Kan., there have been 112 members added to the congregation.

—H. J. Loken, of the Berkeley, Cal.,

50c Postpaid

Satisfaction Guaranteed

Fits Any Pocket

For Ladies & Gentlemen

Extra Lines Gold Stamping 20c. Fraternal Emblems 25c

100,000 "AMERICAN BANKROLLS" ready for your Christmas Gift-buying. Combination Bill-fold, Coin-purse and Card-case of Finest Genuine Black Leather with the show and elegance of a Dollar Article for only 50c postpaid ($5.40 per dozen). Any name (or names) beautifully engraved in 23-Karat Genuine Gold. Ironstrong, yet wonderfully limp and flexible. Measures 3x3½ inches closed. Has glove fastener, 1917 calendar, bill-pocket, coin-purse, stamp-pocket and two extra card-pockets. In handsome gift box ready for the TREE. If unable to get money order or bank draft, send postage stamps. 11th annual catalog of high-grade GUARANTEED LEATHER GOODS and NOVELTIES free with orders for "Bankroll," or sent alone for 5c postage.

U. S. LEATHER GOODS CO. Est. 1906, Inc. 1910 Mfg. Dept. 55 D—Ravenswood Ave. 5247, CHICAGO church, reports that the second of the popular services held at the local high school auditorium on Sunday evenings, was a success. Miss K. J. Everetts of the University of California gave readings, and there were solos and choral music. The singing of old familiar songs was a feature. Mr. Loken is leading in this enterprise, with a view to promoting a common feeling in the community and the development of a higher civic life.

—At the close of four weeks of the evangelistic series at First Church, Canton, O., 331 persons had been added to the church membership.

—George L. Snively raised $2,500 at Milton, Ill., thus clearing up the indebtedness on the building of the church there.

—J. M. Rudy, formerly pastor at Quincy, Ill., is now representing the American Temperance Board.

—Roger T. Nooe completed five years of service at First Church, Frankfort, Ky., on December 10, and a record-breaking attendance at all services was planned for, in token of appreciation of Mr. Nooe's work.

—Thirty-nine teams of two men each carried through a successful every member canvass at Central Church, Jacksonville, Ill., on December 10.

—Thos. H. Adams of Central Church, Richmond, Ind., is one of a committee of pastors leading in an inspection of the city's play houses.

—F. B. Thomas, evangelist of Danville, Ill., writes that at the end of the second week of his meeting at Heyworth, Ill., 84 persons had been added to the church membership.

—Cotner University has enlarged its work by opening a new branch in the teachers' college, a model kindergarten in which the students may gain practical experience while still in school.

—O. J. Cohee, of Indiana Avenue church, South Bend, Ind., has accepted a chaplaincy on the Mexican border.

—F. F. Walters, recently resigned at Wichita Falls, Tex., will serve the church at Hopkinsville, Ky.

—President Bates, of Hiram College, who was recently operated upon at a Cleveland hospital, has recovered sufficiently to return to his home.

—W. Garnet Alcorn, of the Hot Springs, Ark., church, was invited to preach at the community Christmas service, at which a men's chorus of a hundred voices will furnish the music. He also preached the annual Thanksgiving sermon for the Hot Springs churches. A home force meeting, recently held at Hot Springs church, resulted in twenty additions to the membership.

—"Damoh Doings' is the title of a new 60-page illustrated booklet, composed of interesting stories and incidents of happenings at the Damoh (India) Orphanage. Historical, biographical, full of human interest, it is the best thing that has been published on the orphanage. For nearly twenty years the Endeavor societies have provided for this most interesting and Christlike work. Splendid results have been accomplished. This booklet is neatly bound and sells at ten cents. Every society should gather up the dimes and place it in the hands of all its members. Write S. J. Corey, secretary, Box 884, Cincinnati, O.

—The Missionary Intelligencer reports Herbert Smith, of Lotumbe, Africa, as writing that not long ago one of the African missionaries married sixty-seven couples on one day.

—On last Wednesday evening C. J. Tanner of Central Church, Detroit, Mich., gave a talk at Richmond Avenue Church, Buffalo, N. Y., on "How to Prepart for the Billy Sunday Meetings." Buffalo is soon to have the famed evangelist, and Detroit has just closed a series of meetings under his leadership.

ILLINOIS NEWS LETTER

Church Dedication at Sterling, Ill.

The Disciples of Christ have 700 churches in Illinois; 600 of these are in the southern two-thirds of the state. Northern Illinois has always been regarded as missionary territory for our people. We have had a few good churches in that part of the state for a long time; but church building, even among these, has been difficult. Among the more important churches is the one in Sterling. This congregation has a membership of 200 and has an unbroken record of good works. Three persons actively engaged in our work in Illinois received their religious training in this congregation: S. H. Zendt, pastor of Third church, Bloomington; L. O. Lehman, Field Secretary of Eureka College, and Mrs. Silas Jones, secretary and treasurer of Eureka College.

The new church building is constructed of rough-edged red brick, and cost $20,500. Before the congregation began to build, $10,000 was subscribed; $8,500 had been paid. This left $12,000 due on the building, with $1,500 in unpaid pledges. The State Secretary arrived Friday evening before dedication Sunday. In a conference with the finance and building committees it was

BOOK OF PRAYERS

Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentence Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

POCKET S. S. COMMENTARY

For 1917, SELF-PRONOUNCING Edition on Lessons and Text for the whole year. Right-to-the point practical HELPS and Spiritual Explanations. Small in Size, Large in Suggestion and Fact. Daily Bible Readings for 1917, also Topics of Young People's Society, Motto, etc. Red Clo. 25c, Mor. 35c, Interl. for Notes 50c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, MONON BUILDING, CHICAGO, ILL.

BOOK OF POINTS

AND TESTIMONIES for use of Christians and Workers in all meetings. Answering Objections, Excuses or Doubts. Helps for leading and taking part in Prayer Meetings and in giving personal Testimonies. Better understanding of hard places in Scripture, etc. Full of practical suggestions. Don'ts for Workers when dealing with Inquirers. Cloth 25c; Morocco, 35; Agents wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

Bible Readers and Christian Workers Self-Help Hand Book

Short and plain articles by nearly 100 experienced Christian writers. Just the Help over hard places you have been looking for. How to lead, teach, testify, pray and grow. Young Christians helper, experienced workers' guide Pkt. size, 128 pgs., Red Cloth, 25c, Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wntd. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

Collection Plates

WOODEN COLLECTION PLATES IMITATION BLACK WALNUT.

Imitation walnut, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, Price, $1.25 each. 12 inches in diameter, $1.50 each. Expressage extra.

OAK, HOLLOW RIM, COLLECTION PLATES.

Oak, hollow rim, velvet lined; 10 inches in diameter, a handsome plate. Price, $2.00 each. 12 inches in diameter, $2.50 each. Expressage extra.

QUARTERED OAK AND BLACK WALNUT HOLLOW RIM COLLECTION PLATES.

A finer grade plate, made of light, quartered oak, or solid black walnut, plush lined. The rim is hollow, giving a rich appearance. Two sizes, 10 inches in diameter, $2.50 each; expressage extra. 12 inches in diameter, $3.00 each; expressage extra.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 East 40th St. : Chicago

BUILD!

You have wondered perhaps why your school does not grow. It has about the same attendance as it had this time last year. One question: Have you made any definite effort to build your school? Have you a plan? Does your plan extend over a long enough time? Our have been published to put your school—and thousands of others—on a growing basis.

Attendance Builders

Do This:

Send 10c in stamps or coin for full set of samples of these cards; or better send 75 cents for 100 assorted cards. We'll show you how to make your school—

BUILD!

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST FORTIETH STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

decided to raise $12,000. This looked like a big task, as many of the members felt that they had given all they could on the first $10,000. But the committees were willing to make the effort and plans were outlined. Sunday morning saw a large crowd at Sunday school and at the morning worship. Things went rather slow at first, so far as money raising was concerned. The total raised at the morning service was $4,891. A conference following indicated that the people were willing to make a tremendous pull in the afternoon. Two $500 pledges at the morning service were conditioned upon the raising of the entire $12,000 during the day. We have never been willing to consider conditional pledges at dedicatory services, but this was the best that could be done. The afternoon service opened at 2:30 with words of good cheer and greetings from the local pastors and from Mr. Brownrig, pastor of the Tampico church, and Mr. Thorpe, pastor of the Rock Falls church. After these greetings we announced the amount raised in the morning and stated that in order to dedicate the church free of debt we would have to have at least $7,000. This amount was raised, and just at 5 p. m. the church was dedicated. At the evening service $270 in additional pledges was raised and the writer preached on "Yesterday and Tomorrow." The services closed with great enthusiasm and all felt that it has been the greatest day the Sterling church had ever experienced.

The success of the enterprise is due to J. W. Robbins, pastor of the Sterling church. The congregation has been talking new church for a number of years and several efforts have been made to build. But the undertaking seemed too large for the limited resources of the congregation. When Mr. Robbins accepted the call to the church three years ago he did so with the conviction that a new building would have to be erected. Mr. Robbins has had a successful career as pastor and evangelist.

About three years ago he came to Sterling and his ministry has been eminently successful. Mr. Robbins organized the church at Mt. Vernon, Ill., under the auspices of the Illinois Christian Missionary Society.

The Sterling Gazette, in speaking of the dedicator, says: "Rev. H. H. Peters, who is a master hand in this work, was very pleasant in all his appeals and brought gratifying results. His efforts were directed principally toward providing for the sum of $12,000, and he stuck to the original thought of no dedication until the money was subscribed, and he won, and it was with a grateful heart that he delivered his sermon of dedication."

H. H. Peters,
State Secretary.

OHIO SECRETARY'S LETTER

Ohio Disciples have begun to register their zeal for a Christian Ohio in an offering from the churches for state missions. The offerings come in with many a cheering word; many of them are larger than last year; some of them, unfortunately, are smaller. This work had only begun. Let those churches that have not yet made their offerings see that they reach or surpass the apportionment. Do not be afraid to surpass it. The country church (Pleasant Grove) that gave the largest offering last year has increased it nearly 65 per cent this year—because the leaders worked diligently to that end.

W. H. Boden, as state evangelist, held a good meeting at Sandusky, assisting B. C. Lemon. Their work set the church well ahead. Twenty-three members were added, thirteen of these being men.

I. J. Cahill,
Cleveland, Ohio. Cor. Sec.

CHRISTMAS SUNDAY IS MINISTERIAL RELIEF DAY!

But why provide pensions for preachers? They have rendered a service whose value is beyond price or estimation, and most of them come to disability or old age with little or nothing laid by, or, dying in the midst of their labors, leave such legacies to their families.

He should not have gone in debt for his education? But otherwise most of our ministers would not now be preaching!

He should not have bought so many books? But he had to feed and lead his people—lawyers, doctors, teachers and all!

He should not have given away a tenth of his salary? But a "close" preacher makes a stingy people, and "covetousness is idolatry"!

He should have required the churches to pay him better?

But 99 out of 100 churches owe their existence to the self-sacrificing, missionary labors of their early preachers!

Somehow he should have saved a competence? But maybe if he could have hardened his heart enough to do that, he could have hardened it enough to resist the call to preach—and to have made us all glad that he did! It is fact, not theory, that we face!

CHRISTMAS SUNDAY IS MINISTERIAL RELIEF DAY!

A Great Book for the New Day

In this day of tremendous issues in national and international life, of the remaking of the entire civilized world, there is need for a reconsideration of the great messages of the prophets of Israel, those spokesmen of God to nations and men. Dr. Willett makes these wise seers live and speak anewfor the modern world in his

"Moral Leaders of Israel"

Here are some of the qualities of Dr. Willett's book as seen by well-known publications: "Ripe scholarship", "Popular interpretation" (The Advance, Chicago). "Comprehensive", "Popular" (The Continent, Chicago). "Vital"," Lucid" (Christian Endeavor World, Boston). "Definite" (Christian Work, New York). "Brilliant", "Clear and sane", "Winsome and sincere" (Heidelberg Teacher, Philadelphia). "Vivid", "Simple and clear", (The Living Church, Milwaukee). "Clear and interesting" (Christian Advocate).

The book is in two volumes. Volume I is out at $1.00, postpaid. Order your copy today.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. FORTIETH STREET, . . CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE HYMNAL IN THE HOME

A great hymnal should be in every Christian home. Its presence on the piano will prove a means of culture, and a benediction to the entire household. In

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

The Disciples Hymnal

you will find the choicest religious poetry of the ages and of our own time. The music of these hymns is the sweetest and richest in the world. Encourage your sons and daughters to play and sing the great hymns of the united Church. Next to the Bible there is no means of grace so inspiring and enriching to the soul as a great hymnal.

Send $1.15 for full cloth edition of Hymns of the United Church, or $1.40 for half-leather edition.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY PRESS
700 East Fortieth Street
CHICAGO

Each One Get Three!

Now is the Time to Get New Subscriptions for the Christian Century

Three New Subscriptions From Each Present Subscriber

Enlarged and enriched beyond anything ever offered in Disciples journalism, the Christian Century is entering upon a new epoch in its history. We desire to have agents in every congregation and will pay a good cash commission for new subscriptions. Yet we know that no paid agents can do the needed service so well as our regular readers. A paper like the "Century," appealing to the more thoughtful and discriminating men and women of our churches grows by the principle of contagion — others catch it from you.

Nine out of ten of our new subscriptions come through our present readers. We have judges and lawyers and teachers and doctors and merchants and ministers and thoughtful homemakers who work for us — not in our employ, but because they believe they are doing their friends a great service by telling them of this newspaper and inducing them to subscribe for it. It is in such readers that the strength of The Christian Century consists, and upon them its hope for future usefulness rests.

We are asking every present reader to get three new subscribers within the next thirty days. It is the easiest thing you ever tried to do!

Just show that two-page announcement of our outstanding features for the coming year (found in our recent issues) to almost any thoughtful churchman or churchwoman you know and ask for two dollars, and you will get it! Testify to your own delight in reading The Christian Century. Tell of the work this newspaper is doing for the broadening vision of the Disciples of Christ. Tell of the most important thing of all—the service this newspaper is rendering in interpreting the sweet reasonableness of the Disciples' plea to the larger Christian world beyond our own communion, and you will be surprised how readily your thoughtful friends will respond with their subscription.

We will reciprocate for this kindness on your part: We will extend your own subscription six months for each new subscription you secure.

Three new subscriptions from every present reader! Our circulation trebled from January, 1917, onward! Is not that a goal worthy of our united endeavor?

Think up three persons who ought to be taking the "Century" and go straight for their two dollars now.

When you send in the names, addresses and cash, address

Subscription Department, The Christian Century

EACH ONE GET THREE!

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Vol. XXXIII December 28, 1916 Number 52

The Old and The New
Editorial

"That They All May Be One"
By Bishop Bashford

In the Pittsburg of Japan
By Guy W. Sarvis

Tagore on the Woman Movement

CHICAGO

"The Training of Church Members"

IS THE TEXT BOOK YOU ARE LOOKING FOR

IF you have a Sunday-School class of young people or adults whom you wish to inform concerning the fundamental principles of our own movement.

IF you are desirous of making your mid-week prayer meetings worth while. Don't let your prayer meetings languish. Give your people something to really study. Try this helpful little book.

IF your Christian Endeavor Society needs something definite to work at this year. Why not teach these impressionable young people the things they should know concerning the church?

IF you are planning to organize a Pastor's class for winter's study.

IF you are organizing a teacher-training class.

Why not make a feature of your evening preaching service this winter a brief study from this important little book?

Send for a sample copy of "The Training of Church Members," and see how perfectly it fits into your needs for the new year of work.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

700 EAST 40th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Subscription Price—Two dollars a year to all subscribers, payable strictly in advance.

Discontinuances—In order that subscribers may not be annoyed by failure to receive the paper, it is not discontinued at expiration of time paid in advance (unless so ordered), but continued pending instruction from the subscriber. If discontinuance is desired, prompt notice should be sent and all arrearages paid.

Change of address—In ordering change of address give the old as well as the new.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN THE INTEREST OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Expirations—The date on the wrapper shows the month and year to which subscription is paid. List is revised monthly. Change of date on wrapper is a receipt for remittance on subscription account.

Remittances—Should be sent by draft or money order, payable to The Disciples Publication Society. If local check is sent, add ten cents for exchange charged us by Chicago banks.

Entered as Second-Class Matter Feb. 28, 1902, at the Postoffice, Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, PROPRIETORS, : 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO

Disciples Publication Society

The Disciples Publication Society is an organization through which churches of the Disciples of Christ seek to promote undenominational and constructive Christianity.

The relationship it sustains to Disciples organizations is intimate and organic, though not official. The Society is not a private institution. It has no capital stock. No individuals profit by its earnings.

The charter under which the Society exists determines that whatever profits are earned shall be applied to agencies which foster the cause of religious education, although it is clearly conceived that its main task is not to make profits but to produce literature for building up character and for advancing the cause of religion.

* * *

The Disciples Publication Society regards itself as a thoroughly undenominational institution. It is organized and constituted by individuals and churches who interpret the Disciples' religious reformation as ideally an unsectarian and unecclesiastical fraternity, whose common tie and original impulse are fundamentally the desire to practice Christian unity with all Christians.

The Society therefore claims fellowship with all who belong to the living Church of Christ, and desires to cooperate with the Christian people of all communions, as well as with the congregations of Disciples, and to serve all.

* * *

The Christian Century desires nothing so much as to be the worthy organ of the Disciples' movement. It has no ambition at all to be regarded as an organ of the Disciples' denomination. It is a free interpreter of the wider fellowship in religious faith and service which it believes every church of Disciples should embody. It strives to interpret all communions, as well as the Disciples, in such terms and with such sympathetic insight as may reveal to all their essential unity in spite of denominational isolation. The Christian Century, though published by the Disciples, is not published for the Disciples alone. It is published for the Christian world. It desires definitely to occupy a catholic point of view and it seeks readers in all communions.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY, 700 EAST 40th STREET, CHICAGO.

Dear Friends:—I believe in the spirit and purposes of The Christian Century and wish to be numbered among those who are supporting your work in a substantial way by their gifts.

Enclosed please find $.....

Name.....

Address.....

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON, EDITOR. HERBERT L. WILLETT, CONTRIBUTING EDITOR.

Volume XXXIII DECEMBER 28, 1916 Number 52

The Old and the New

WE ARE ALL A YEAR OLDER.

The passing of the years becomes a more solemn fact as life proceeds. The child is impatient with life that it moves so slowly to the goal of his opportunity. The old man tells out his days as a miser spends his gold, with reluctant hand.

We shall welcome the new year according to our underlying attitude toward life. The modern Epicurean will be as noisy and as drunken in a cafe as the law allows. Some will sit late into the night taking a trial balance that they may know the profits of 1916 before the morning light. Some will allow the day to pass with little note, for to some persons nothing is very serious or important anyway. A few will wait for the beginning of the New Year in prayer. For them the business of life is essentially religious.

There will be disappointment in many hearts in reviewing the achievements of the past year. We do not speak of financial matters, nor yet of the ambitions of life. Morally earnest people will feel a sense of disappointment that the old evil is still with them. Religious people will be disappointed that the closer walk with God has not been found this year.

We need to be taught the essentially evolutionary character of life. It is not often that God does his work by cataclysm. With the life of the soul it is first the blade and not till later the green corn in the ear. We are changed into the image of our Lord from glory to glory. The business of walking is taking one step after another. Even so, the business of finding life everlasting is to be wrought out from year to year.

★ ★

Few mistakes are irreparable. A mistake of judgment means a broken arm for some man. But the healing processes of nature heal his arm for him and after awhile the broken place is stronger than any other. As we look back over the past year we are not to regard any single evil thing as final. No one event can settle the destiny of a soul. It is our habits, rather than any one outstanding event in our lives, that need to concern us.

Are you any better than you were a year ago? It is not always possible to answer. Is your child any larger than he was then? It is not always possible to look at him and say that he is. Some day, perhaps, while he stands by the side of a table you realize that he has grown an inch or six inches. In things of the spirit we have no such convenient methods of determining growth.

Reviewing the old year, we deplore its mistakes, but we rejoice in its victories. It is the spirit of New Year's day to take quite seriously Paul's slogan, "forgetting those things which are behind and pressing forward to those things which are before."

It is clearly our duty to live our lives from the viewpoint of their total meaning. Some biographies are a series of connected events. There was but little in the life of Phillips Brooks which did not arise from his loyalty to his religious message. How the life of Lloyd George unfolds as an expression of his deep interest in democracy and social progress in England! There are lives which are only a succession of incongruous events. The man who knows what he lives for, who has a deep and underlying loyalty, will spend the new year as he spent the old, in the accomplishment of the things which are all the world to him.

★ ★

Living is a more complicated business than it used to be with our grandfathers. The pioneer farmer a hundred years ago met his social obligations easily. In our day, we are not always sure of our duty. We shall feel that this is true particularly in the coming year with its adjustments in the presence of world emergencies.

It is a time for the deepening of the big loyalties of life. While evil men and misguided social philosophers seek to lessen the family bond, there is need for Christians to glorify the family idea. It is the family which has been responsible for a large part of the spiritual achievement of the world.

The new epoch of our world history will need intelligence in political action; this can only be assured if citizens take an interest in the problems of the age. It may be that in the new year peace will come to the world. That will be only the beginning of big economic and moral problems that will tax the strength of the race to solve.

Especially will the new year need a strong and vital church. The pendulum is swinging back again to religion. It is not just the old religion we seek, but the old religion interpreted for modern needs. The church is the body of which religion is the soul. Soul and body have mutual dependence. The Christian can make sure of the future of religion in no better way than in building strong the walls of his local church.

If our lives are swiftly passing, they are being spent in a momentous time in human history. Never before did the common man have so large a part to play. There are tools in the hands of us all, if we but use them, which will enable us to do something toward the construction of the glorious future for which the race waits.

Our New Year should be a happy one. We are glad for life as it is. May God make all our hearts strong for our tasks!

EDITORIAL

BARTON W. STONE

IN A FEW churches it was recalled this year that the birthday of Barton W. Stone fell upon December 24. A few words concerning his career may not be out of place.

Mr. Stone was born in Maryland in 1774. He was much perplexed by the theological warfare which surrounded his youth. He went to school in Guilford, North Carolina, and while there he was converted and joined the Presbyterian church. He joined, however, with many reservations. He said: "My mind was continually tossed on the waves of speculative divinity, the all-engrossing theme of the religious community at that period. Clashing religious theories were urged by the different sects with much zeal and bad feeling. There is no surer sign of the low state of true religion."

It was in 1801 that the Caneridge, Kentucky, revival took place. It was from the first a kind of "union" effort. Barton W. Stone was the preacher, however. In this period of evangelistic awakening in this country, the revival in Kentucky was one of the most outstanding for its success. It was reported that 20,000 people were converted in many counties; many came to the meetings from other states.

The period was an auspicious one. It is said that over a hundred copies of Paine's "Age of Reason" were sold on the streets of Lexington, Ky., at this period. Infidelity was spreading all over the country and in the midst of the tidal wave of unbelief, there came to the church a great period of refreshing, Barton W. Stone contributing his part.

Barton W. Stone had as his fundamental religious interest a passion for unity. He submitted to immersion in order to unite with the movement of the Campbells, though it is quite certain that not all of his followers who came with him into the movement did so.

Barton W. Stone brought to the Disciples' movement a spiritual influence that was invaluable. The debates and intellectual activities of Alexander Campbell needed the corrective of the prayer-loving soul of Barton W. Stone.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE CITY

IT IS fallacious to talk as if the Disciples must to the end of the story be doing their chief work in rural districts. During the past ten years some states, such as the State of Iowa, have decreased in population. It is the rich agricultural states that are likely to lose in this way under the pressure of the application of new machinery to agriculture. While Iowa declined in population, Chicago has been growing a hundred thousand a year. It already has a larger population than many states. Indeed, there are only nine states in the Union having a population larger than Chicago now has. It is clear that the Disciples' constituency is going to the city in large numbers. What will be done with these people when they reach the city is still the question.

If Iowa with its two and a quarter millions of people had only twenty-four Disciple churches and missions in all its borders, this fact would challenge us to the most strenuous activity. We would appeal for home mission funds all over the land to meet the need. Certainly we would not seek to exploit Iowa in place of helping her. Disciples home missions are now being managed without any adequate perception of the central fact of the city.

There is no immediate prospect of big increases of population in the rural districts. There is the self-evident fact that the big cities are growing by leaps and bounds. A missionary society is not in the business of evangelizing acres but people. Heads are more significant than square miles in a plan of operation for making America Christian.

There are few matters of policy among the Disciples today which are of such central significance as an adequate home mission policy. Every year we fritter away time and money with a policy which accomplishes nothing in the cities, but aids in eliminating us from the effective religious forces of America. We are being tried in the balance. We may follow our people to the cities with churches, or we may choose to be a second-rate power among the religious bodies of the land.

AN HONESTY TEST

APPLYING laboratory methods to morals is a part of the growing scientific spirit of our age. The January issue of McClure's Magazine contains a rather astonishing account of various tests that were made of men and women with reference to simple honesty. Contrary to rather often repeated charges, the women showed a slightly better average on the test than the men, but in both cases the average was lower than might have been expected. A dollar bill mailed to these persons seemingly by mistake was returned by some and kept by others. It was not surprising that saloonkeepers made such a poor showing or that teachers had an extra good record, but it was rather disappointing for business men and doctors to make no better record than they did.

There is also given in the magazine an account of the dropping of pocketbooks on the sidewalk, the people who found them being followed by the investigators. Less than half of the pocketbooks were returned, although they contained the addresses of the owners.

All of these facts should be sufficiently informing to the only institution that works much at teaching ethics—the church. It is quite clear that the big fundamentals of our job are still to the fore. The human virtues of honesty and truth-telling and the like continually need an advocate.

Many people are pessimistic about ethical living. They profess to believe that a rascal can succeed better in business than an honest man. It cannot be said too often that this is not true, but the church can put into the support of ethical living some bigger principle than "Honesty is the best policy." We can and should say that honesty and truth and clean living are well pleasing to God. This consideration is still powerful with millions of people.

THE MARTIN LUTHER QUADRICENTENARY

ONE of the outstanding religious interests of the year 1917 will be the celebration of four hundred years of history since the posting of the theses by Martin Luther on the church door at Wittenberg.

This is an event that has long since passed beyond the interests of the Lutheran church. All Protestantism claims Martin Luther and will gladly do their part in doing him homage.

There is something that strengthens our democracy when we contemplate this wonderful man coming up from the ranks of the poorest in Germany's life. He was a true peasant and carried many of the peasant's virtues and weaknesses throughout his life. He knew nothing of a courtier's ways, but he did know the deep convictions of the peasant life.

Martin Luther left a wonderful cultural influence on Germany. The printing of the German Bible might be called the beginning of the intellectual movement in Germany which in our day has brought such a wonderful fruitage.

The controversial note in early Protestantism was essential to the time. The church was corrupt and decadent. Nothing but the stimulus of criticism could bring new life. The celebration of the centennial does not need, however, to revive the hostility of the Protestant to the Roman Catholic church. It is possible to be thoroughgoing Protestants without regarding the history of the Roman church as barren of any spiritual results for the race. The controversies of Martin Luther with his antagonists were only a by-product of a deeper tendency in his age.

The great spiritual contribution of Martin Luther to the world was to revive the principle of Paul which had also found an exponent in St. Augustine, "The just shall live by faith." This plea for the innerness of religion as opposed to the idea of a religion of ceremonies and works is one which the world still needs and which finds increasing defense at the hands of the truly religious people of our age.

THE PASSING OF HUGO MUENSTERBERG

THE death of Prof. Hugo Muensterberg, of Harvard, removes from the university life of Cambridge a most interesting figure. Evangelical Christians have often been compelled to dissent from the professor in his utterances, especially when he dealt with the liquor question. He seemed to cut a sorry figure as a defender of the drinking customs of the world. There is, however, much of good to be said of him.

Professor Muensterberg was much criticized for his open advocacy of the German cause in America. Some persons suggested that his resignation would be pleasing to Harvard authorities, but he found by experiment that this was not true. Without expressing judgment concerning the merit of his views, we cannot but admire his loyalty in defending an unpopular cause in his section of the world. Though we were Englishmen, we would like him none the less for his loyalty to the land of his birth.

Among the last utterances of the great psychologist were some words that we would like to hope were prophetic. He said: "After the war no hate will remain. Men will look one another in the face with astonishment; the spell will be broken. Unless all psychological signs deceive us, after this war ends peace will really be lasting—and I feel sure the end of the war is near."

Professor Muensterberg was born at Danzig and was a professor in Freiberg-im-Breisgau before he came to Harvard in 1892. He wrote a number of books in the field of philosophy and psychology, and was prominently connected with the development of experimental psychology. His writings in the field of sociology showed a great deal of the acuteness that goes with the German philosopher's mind.

His presence in America for these years has furthered a great deal the commerce of ideas which should go on between the nations of earth.

Professor Muensterberg was lecturing before the women of Radcliffe college when he was stricken.

THE OUTRAGES IN BELGIUM

OUR fear of violating neutrality was an obsession in the early part of the war. We were anxious to preserve our skins whole and keeping silent seemed a good way to do this. We have earned much contempt in all European countries for our lack of conviction.

The neutral countries by their protests are able to affect vitally the conduct of the war on the other side of the ocean. All the great nations involved are anxious for our good will. When it is found that a given course affects neutral opinion unfavorably, it is quickly abandoned.

One does not need to become out-and-out pro-English in order to protest against the recent outrages in Belgium. The enslaving of a population conquered in war was a common practice in the days of Roman dominion, but we had supposed that no civilized nation of the world would any longer countenance such a program.

The protests of such eminent Belgians as Maeterlinck and Cardinal Mercier can leave no doubt as to what is going on over there. Families are being broken up. Astonishing indignities are being shown to Belgian women and girls. The men are being scattered over Germany and put to forced labor, which is an indirect way of making them fight against their countrymen.

After the war is over, the violation of Belgian territory will stare Germany in the face for a hundred years. There is a principle involved in the whole situation which has much to do with the whole future of civilization.

Jack London well said with reference to the conduct of the present war, just before his death: "I believe that the foundation of civilization rests on the pledge, the agreement, and the contract. I believe that the present great war is being fought out to determine whether or not men in the future may continue in a civilized way to depend upon the word, the pledge, the agreement, and the contract."

THE MANSE

THE Presbyterian denomination is noted for the length of its pastorates and for the solidity of its work. In Ahorey, Ireland, there have been but three pastors since Thomas Campbell left there to come to the new world. If Presbyterian pastorates in this country are not so long as this, they are yet of such stability as to challenge the rest of us.

One of the secrets of the length of the Presbyterian pastorate is to be found in the fact that the pastor is so often given a house of his own in which to live. There are 9,953 northern Presbyterian churches and about half of these now have a manse. There were 317 manses built last year. The denomination is definitely conscious of fostering this movement to furnish a home for the minister.

There are, of course, a considerable number of church-owned homes for ministers among the Disciples of Christ. That we have fewer than the Presbyterians may be due in part to our youth and to the excessive burdens we have borne for twenty-five years in building new church buildings. The time must come, however, when we shall be definitely interested in building homes for the minister.

The manse is known to the community. People always know where to find the minister. The manse is provided by the church and the church cannot say that the minister is either housed in too great luxury or with too little regard for the proprieties. The manse is a kind of endowment that in most communities helps out the minister's salary, which is nearly always too small for his needs. It is possible to build a manse that will be peculiarly adapted as the home of the minister, furnishing him with special conveniences for his work.

A minister living in an apartment misses something of the atmosphere which should characterize his work. A stately church building means a more religious congregation. In the same way we believe that a manse might be built which would deepen the religious attitudes of the minister. Day by day its architecture might bear witness.

THE OFFICIAL BOARD MEETING

WHAT does your official board talk about? The meeting of the board is a private affair in most churches. Sometimes there grows up a line of cleavage in the congregation, as the board is opposed by a clique outside the board. The people wonder what is done behind those closed doors besides voting the petty bills of the church. The Congress of the United States has a gallery. The interested public can come in when it desires and observe how its money is voted away and hear the wise speeches of its representatives on public questions. If we had a gallery so the church people might come in at times, what would they hear?

Of course the temporalities of church life are well taken care of, but does the average church board seriously consider the deeper problems of the religious life of the church? A board was once discussing a candidate for its pulpit. A certain minister had been called successful. When the speaker was challenged as to his standards of success, he said, "I call a minister a success who can fill up the church book and the pews and the collection plate." It may be that the remark was half in jest. It is a too common way business men have of conceiving church life.

Suppose a church board should grow careful and scientific in its business, and undertake to discover and interpret its real religious losses and gains. It is a job that a minister cannot do for obvious reasons. They might find the disgruntled people offering a suggestion now and then for the good of the whole church.

What if a church board would set out to find out the attitude of the community toward the church? The business and professional people might be encouraged to speak their opinion. From the big outside public there might come reactions of great significance.

The church board knows how to raise and spend money. It often lacks a vision of what it should accomplish by this process. Let us have board meetings where the members talk about religion.

IS ENGLAND GOING DRY?

ARTHUR HENDERSON, the labor leader member of Lloyd George's military council, is also the leader of what is called the Labor Temperance Fellowship in England. One of the effective things expected of the new premier is a much more severe restriction, if not indeed the total prohibition, of the liquor traffic during the time of the war. All the world remembers his saying that England has three enemies: Germany, Austria and drink and that the greatest of these is drink, and will not be surprised if with a single blow he fells this greatest enemy. Mr. Henderson has already declared himself in favor of such a movement.

The Rose and I

I saw a rose the other day:
Its petals now have fall'n away.
Its fragrant beauty still I see,
For that is now a part of me!

I had a friend the other day:
He now has died, and gone away.
But while I live and beauty see
My loved one lives—a part of me.

—C. O. Reynard

How Much Do the Disciples Count?

A THING the Disciples of Christ cannot understand is the almost total unconsciousness of the Christian world with respect to their testimony on behalf of Christian union.

Three facts stand out in the average Disciple's mind. He believes that the Disciples' movement was providentially called into being for the primary purpose of pleading for Christian unity and practicing it.

He knows that the movement has been in existence for over a hundred years and that at present it numbers in its fellowship over a million and a quarter souls—as many as the Northern Presbyterians, for example, several hundred thousand more than the Episcopalians and nearly twice as many as the Congregationalists.

The third fact is the intense interest of the modern Church in Christian unity, as contrasted with the fatuousness with which the idea was regarded in the first and second generations of the Disciples' movement. Then nobody dreamed of a united Church save only the Campbellian reformers. Now the whole Church is not only dreaming of it, but bit by bit coming into a realization of the dream.

What is easier, more inevitable, than that Disciples should conceive their relation to this great change in Christian sentiment as one not only of priority but of pre-eminence?

It awakens, therefore, mixed feelings of resentment and humiliation when a writer treats of Christian unity and leaves the Disciples out, or lumps them off in a job lot with certain other praiseworthy movements on behalf of unity whose names, however, are too obscure to list.

The following correspondence between Rev. Ellis B. Barnes, of Richmond, Ky., and Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D., Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and author of the very notable book, Unity and Missions, will deeply interest all of us who have staked everything on the conviction that Thomas Campbell's way of looking at Christian unity was essentially sound and had in it the solution of the problem of the Church's divisions.

October 28, 1916.

Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D., New York City.

Dear Doctor Brown: I am very much interested in reading your book, Unity and Missions. So far I have carefully studied the fourth chapter. I am at a loss to know why in that chapter, after mentioning the good service rendered by Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Baptists, and Methodists, you make no mention of the Disciples of Christ, whose right to exist is based upon their plea for the union of all God's children. You, of course, know that Thomas and Alexander Campbell were pioneers in this great cause in America, and you are familiar with our growth and present developments. I think your reference on p. 51 is to the Disciples, but why should you drown us in a sea of anonymity? Were not the book dealing with "Unity" you could do so in all good faith, but why should the pioneers be asphyxiated with such an allusion to which I have referred?

Believe me, I am writing for information and not in any captious spirit. Bishop Hurst, some years ago, published a book dealing with the subject of Christian Union, and while he mentioned many who had contributed largely to the movement, John Durie, "the greatest peacemaker of the seventeenth century." Grotius, John Owen, and Richard Baxter, he also includes the name of Abraham Van Dyke, Esq., who in 1836 published a book entitled, "Christian Union; or an Argument for the Abolition of Sects," which provoked considerable discussion. The Bishop's book has been before the public several years, as above intimated, but it would puzzle even you to know why the unknown volume of Abraham Van Dyke should be included, and the fifty volumes or more from the pen of Alexander Campbell, bearing directly or indirectly on the subject, should be left out. By what strange process of seeing does it happen that the Bishop could see one book and could not see fifty, that he could see the forgotten Abraham Van Dyke, and could not see the historic figures of Thomas and Alexander Campbell, or the million and a quarter men and women who are identified with the work of these two men, with their growing influence and institutions? It looks to me as if the obscure forces in Christian Union were colossal, and that the colossal were obscure. The present gains for Christian Union in this country are due to the persistence of the Disciples of Christ more than to any other cause, for it is on record that in the days of the Campbells that was a most unpopular cause, and now it has grown to such popularity that movements similar to theirs are clamoring for recognition on the ground floor. It may be that if the popularity produces many more union programs some genius may have to start a movement to unite the unifiers.

Please tell me what we have done, or what we have not done that compels honest and true men like yourself to deny us recognition beyond the suggestion of a recognition. There are many of us Disciples who wonder when such books as yours appear, loud with that ominous silence to which reference has been made, if we have so transgressed in any way that would justify our exclusion from contemporary history, or if capable men like yourself deem our effort in the field of Union a failure, or what is the cause. We feel that it is bad to be damned with faint praise, but what word can express the feeling when we are damned to oblivion by the way of silence? So, Doctor Brown, I am moved to write you this letter. When we read such helpful books as yours, we can't be blamed if we have a sense of misgiving about ourselves. Maybe it is our fault that we are treated as we have been in books. But we are not conscious of any wrong-doing; we think we have done well, despite many errors, which we are certain will never be committed again. And we want you to explain this damning silence to us at length, so we will know how to amend our ways, if that be the means of saving us in the future; and if the fault be not ours it would be a gilt-edged certificate for us to know that men like Bishop Hurst and yourself simply forgot. I shall be glad to hear from you at your earliest convenience.

With my kindest regards and best wishes, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

E. B. Barnes.

October 30, 1916.

The Rev. Ellis B. Barnes, Richmond, Kentucky.

My Dear Mr. Barnes: I have carefully read your important letter of October 28th, regarding my book, Unity and Missions, and I heartily thank you for your frank and friendly words. I gladly assure you that I had no thought whatever of discriminating against the Disciples of Christ. I could not mention all the many communions in America and Great Britain and I naturally, although perhaps unwisely, referred in detail to those of which I have seen the most and which have the longer history. I do not mean that I am ignorant of the history of the Disciples of Christ, for I have read with keen interest of the circumstances in which your communion arose and I have kept track as best I could of its rapid progress. I hope you will pardon me when I say that while I know of the strong protests against sectarianism in the volumes to which you justly refer and while I also know of the growing influence of an element in the communion which takes broad views on relations with other communions, I have found that in actual practice the communion as a whole insists upon specific interpretations and practices which make it quite as denominational as the Presbyterian, Baptist and other denominations. I have been a student of the movements toward Christian unity and co-operation for many years and have been in a position which has enabled me to keep in touch with some of them, but I confess that it never occurred to me that, to quote your words, "the present gains for Christian union in this country are due to the presence of the Disciples of Christ more than to any other cause."

Nevertheless, I thank you very heartily for your letter. You have enabled me to see that it is possible for a reader to place a construction upon my book that I would regret. I am placing your letter in a special folder in which I am collecting suggestions and criticisms for another edition.

I may add that I have the privilege of counting among my warm personal friends a number of eminent members of your communion, notably those in the Mission House and College in Indianapolis and in the Board of Missions; men and women for whose breadth of view and catholicity of spirit I have come to have the highest admiration. If their point of view, as I have had opportunity to observe it in my personal contacts, is characteristic of the communion as a whole, I thoroughly agree with you that I should have given greater prominence to the Disciples of Christ in my book.

Cordially yours,

Arthur J. Brown.

Here is a wound that no apology or explanation can heal. All of us are as much interested as Mr. Barnes in inquiring of a Christian leader like Dr. Brown why it was that he seemed unaware of the Disciples' presence when he was making an inventory of the forces in the American Church making for unity.

But nothing that Dr. Brown can answer will bring comfort. Whatever his reason or his justification, the fact remains that the Disciples were not seriously thought of as a factor in the great progress Christian unity is making in our time. If we had really occupied the place some of us fondly imagine belongs to us, we could not have been overlooked. If the Disciples' movement had been indeed, more than any other factor, the cause of the present gains for unity, as Mr. Barnes with characteristic loyalty asserts, a man in Dr. Brown's position would have known it and known it in such a way that when he came to write his book on unity he could not have forgotten it.

Why not let us face the fact, and learn from the fact what it is intended to teach us, that the Disciples of Christ are not thought of at all by the Christian world as a Christian union movement? We are simply conceived as another denomination having a certain system of doctrines and practices to urge upon the rest of the Church, just like any other denomination, and perhaps with even a larger portion of the denominational spirit than some of the rest.

A more wholesome reflection could not settle upon the mind of our people than steadily and bravely to face this fact.

Out of it would come new visions and duties and convictions, and perhaps a new program, which would make us a new people.

"That They All May Be One"

Denominationalism a Repudiation of the Church's Charter of Universalism, Brotherhood and Service.

BY BISHOP J. W. BASHFORD, of the Methodist Episcopal Church

THE late William R. Huntington of the Protestant Episcopal Church wrote: "The two chief concerns of the twentieth century are international arbitration and the unifying of the Christian Church. * * * It was a unified church which in our mother land created out of the heptarchy a realm; and it may be the achievement of a united church to transform the vast welter of competing forces we call the world political into a true cosmos, a united system of states which shall reproduce on a far larger scale the ancient Christendom."

Recent events add great force to Bishop Huntington's suggestion. It is not true to say that the rivalries of the Christian churches are the cause of the European war. But it is true that the Christian forces of Europe have through ecclesiastical divisions failed so to restrain the political and economic rivalries of Europe as to prevent the European war. An incalculable loss is falling upon the world which might have been prevented by a united Christendom.

SPIRITUAL WEAKNESS FROM SEPARATION

Our separations from each other and from God have led to spiritual weakness, and we have failed to convince the world that God was in Christ and that He still abides in us. Christ's whole prayer shows that that which Christ covets for us goes far deeper than mere external uniformity. It is a real, spiritual union of believers with each other through their common fellowship with God. Wesley made two great contributions to modern Christendom: One, the doctrine of Christian experience corresponding to Bacon's doctrine of scientific experiment. As Bacon taught that we learn what is true of the material world—not by a priori speculations, but by experiments, so Wesley taught that we may know the truth of Christ, not by theological discussions, but through Christian experience, by the witness of the Spirit following our obedience to God's commands. Wesley thus puts Christianity upon an experimental basis, and in some measure in line with modern science; but this is possible only through the conscious union of the soul with Christ.

Wesley's second contribution to Christendom is his recovery for the modern church of the ancient doctrine of sanctification. If we adopt entire obedience to God as our working plan of life, to be realized here and now by the aid of the Holy Spirit, and maintain uninterrupted fellowship with Him, even the world will soon recognize supernatural power flowing down from and through the church. Such a union with God and with each other as would long ago have convinced the world that God is in His church, such an influence over the conscience of Europe by the united spiritual forces of Christendom as would have prevented the world-war, and such a union of the Christian forces in our towns and villages as would enable us to double the laborers for the spiritual conquest of the world—these are some of the facts which help us to understand Christ's desire for Christian unity.

THE ROOT CAUSE OF DIVISION

The root cause of ecclesiastical divisions is ambition. If even Jesus wrestled with this passion, shall we either as individuals or as churches hope to escape the struggle? Upon the contrary, may we not expect to find ambition strong in proportion to our strength as individuals or as churches? Religious and political ambition are the keys to the Maccabean wars, to the long struggle between the Roman Catholic Church and the civil governments around the globe. Political authorities have tried to control religion because they recognize, in the language of Professor Seeley, "religion as the great state-building principle."

Because religion brings tremendous political power, every Roman sovereign claimed to be the Pontifex Maximus; and every Chinese Emperor usurped the place of Christ and claimed to be the Son of Heaven, i. e., of God. On the other side, because civil government is so powerful an instrument of human control, Judaism repeatedly in her history, Taoism and Buddhism in China and the Roman Catholic Church have made—not the emperor, but the High Priest or Pope, the supreme power on earth.

ECCLESIASTICAL AMBITION NOT DEAD

While the hope of the church for political domination is doomed, ecclesiastical ambition is not dead. If any church can become the viceregent of God, or even the favorite channel of the divine grace, it may look forward to the control of the human race for time and for eternity. If any one therefore dreams that ecclesiastical ambition is dead, he has small knowledge of history and no insight into human nature.

Ecclesiastical ambition is all the more dangerous, because it hides the naked hideousness of personal and worldly ambition behind the mask of loyalty to God and devotion to His Church.

CURE OF OUR DIVISIONS

The first principle essential to spiritual fellowship and co-working is the recognition of the inherent equality of us all before God. This is the conviction which underlies all struggles for religious and political freedom; it is the fundamental principle of Protestantism, of democracy and of industrialism; and it has so fully survived in the history of all nations and races as to demonstrate its divine origin.

The aristocratic element, which exists in all races and invades all religions, denies this inherent equality of men. Caste is the basis of Hinduism; and Buddhism was the democratic protest. Judaism fell by exalting itself to the headship, not by service but by divine election. Caste invaded Christendom and attempted boldly to root itself in the New Testament through a false interpretation of the power of the keys. Christ clearly shows that the power of the keys is the power of prayer, and that the power of prayer is the power of His presence in the hearts of believers.

Jesus after his resurrection meets the body of the disciples in the upper room. He breathes on them and says: "Receive ye the Holy Spirit; whosesoever sins ye forgive they are forgiven; whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained." The promise of the power to forgive rests upon the reception of the Holy Spirit.

LOVE IN SERVICE

A second principle upon which Christian co-operation depends is the law of love manifested by service.

The family is a divine institution whereby God calls us out of pure individualism into love manifested by service, at least of the clan. "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh."

But beyond the family is the nation; and the Bible teaches us that the nation also is a divine institution whereby God calls us out of the narrow love of the family into the broader love of our particular race. The powers that be are ordained of God. Millions of brave men in all generations, and never more than now, have abandoned ease and pleasure, have even been drawn from the service of their families, and have laid down their lives upon the altar of the nation. These, too, have been following—at a distance and unconsciously perhaps, but no less really—in the footsteps of Him who saved others while Himself He could not save.

THE CHURCH'S COMMISSION

But above the family and above the state is the church, and the church also is a divine institution whereby God calls us out of the narrow love of the family and the broader love of the nation into the universal love and service of the entire race. What is the Church's charter? Jesus Christ hath "tasted death for every man." What is the church's prayer? "Our Father"—a recognition of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. What is the church's commission? "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations." Upon what does the commission rest? Upon the New Testament revelation, God "made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth."

Thoughtful men in the light of the European conflagration are beginning to see that Christianity is neither an outworn philosophy nor an iridescent dream. Jesus' teachings are not only practical, they are the only practical solution of our world problems, because they are the only teachings which can secure national, race and economic equality, conserve civilization and save humanity.

CHURCH IMPOTENT TODAY

Denomination in the Church is a reversion to nationalism. It is a repudiation of the Church's charter of universal brotherhood and service in the interest of a section of the race supposedly elected by God to special privileges and authority. What a pity that at this crisis when nations are in a death struggle and the interests of humanity are being sacrificed, the church is impotent! What a thousand pities that our failure to lead the nations to reconciliation is due to the fact that we have failed in fellowship among ourselves!

How can we lead the nations to a European peace when we ourselves have not reached unity in Europe or in any other part of the world? How can we summon with any divine power races to supreme allegiance to Christ, while we are rendering supreme allegiance to our denominational organizations in the face of our Master's cry for the unity of believers? Surely in the divine order a united Christendom must precede a federation of the world.

WRONG AND RIGHT METHODS

An additional principle must be recognized if a cure is to be effected, viz.: Present action along practicable lines rather than indefinite waiting for impossible conditions. Our Commission on Faith and Order is asking the churches what concessions in doctrine they can make for the sake of unity. The motive here is worthy of all praise, but I fear that the method is wrong. The method of mutual approach is not along doctrinal lines. The intellect discriminates, distinguishes one phase of truth from another; hence the intellect is always divisive in its tendency. Action calls for power; it feels the need of co-operation, hence action tends to union. Labor seeks combinations; business tends toward trusts; war makes alliances a necessity.

There is no present hope of the reunion of Christendom upon a credal basis. The church must turn from speculation upon the basis of union, and enter upon her labor of Christianizing the world, must begin doing business for the Kingdom, must engage in a war against Satan; then, like John Wesley, she will speedily cry for a "league offensive and defensive with every soldier of Jesus Christ."

A SUMMARY AND OUTLOOK

The equality of all Christians before God is not only the specific teaching of the New Testament, but the inevitable outcome of the Christian life. Despite the attempts of the priestly party in the old dispensation and of the Judaistic party in the early church, despite the attempts of sacerdotalism in the church of the Middle Ages, and of kingcraft and episcopacy in Europe since the Reformation, despite the attempts of capitalism in modern industry, and of the white races to dominate the political world, and despite the attempts of masculine authority in all ages—the irrepressible movement of the new humanity in Christ is toward religious freedom and equality, toward political freedom and equality, toward equality of economic opportunities and equality of races and sexes; and under the divine providence these movements are as irresistible as are the incoming tides.

We are recognizing a new phase of evolution. As the human race is multiplying and filling the earth, we need all the land for our support. Hence all dangerous and even useless species in the animal and vegetable kingdoms are being rooted out, while wheat, rice, corn, and the domestic animals which supply man's needs are multiplying. What is this but an inevitable and increasing stage of evolution in which we have the survival of the fittest in the sense of the most serviceable?

WILL CHRISTIANITY SURVIVE?

The new evolution is operating among civilizations and religions. God has thrown Christianity into the welter of the pagan world along with Buddhism, Hinduism, Confucianism, Mohammedanism, and said, Let the fittest survive.

But the fittest is the most serviceable. Mohammedanism, with its belief in one God and its hope of the future life, in many places swept out paganism, because it did more for the people who accepted it than paganism could do. But Mohammedanism with its paralyzing doctrine of fate and its degrading practice of polygamy and slavery and its contempt of modern science is doomed; and already five-sixths of its more than two hundred million people are under the dominion of so-called Christian governments. Judaism has survived in this struggle of religions because the Old Testament does more for the race than any other ancient faith, and Reformed Judaism is teaching the ethics of the Sermon on the Mount.

Who doubts that Christianity with its fatherhood of God and brotherhood of men, its provisions for sin through Christ, and its indwelling Holy Spirit, its law of love and its hope of heaven—will supplant all pagan faiths, simply because it does more for those who accept it than these faiths can possibly do? So in the struggles within Christendom for any single church or nation or race to dream of universal sway through some divine election or natural superiority is for that church or nation or race to repeat the program of Satan with its inevitable banishment from the Kingdom and the life of God.

A RACE WAR

If we can effect this union with each other and with God through Christ, we can exercise such moral influence during the twentieth century as will save the nations from a race war which, if it comes, will desolate our globe. The white races constitute fifty-two per cent. of the population of our globe, and the yellow races thirty-six per cent. With the decreasing rate of birth among our white races, and an increasing rate among the yellow races, the population of the globe before the close of the century will be fifty per cent. white and forty per cent. yellow. But the white races now control politically every continent upon our globe; and the yellow races are shut out of Australia, out of North America and through our example practically out of South America, out of Europe, out of Africa—pre-eminently the colored man's continent, and through Russia out of Northern Asia. We submit whether the exclusion by fifty per cent. of the population of forty percent. from five continents, not all of which are effectively occupied by the white races, and their restriction to one-half of one continent has the warrant of either Christianity or statesmanship. Japan already feels keenly the injustice of these universal restrictions, and the dissatisfaction of China and India are inevitable, and not distant.

WHERE GREED WILL LEAD US

If we persist in this greedy policy we shall soon consolidate the yellow races, while we white men are divided into bitter camps fighting each other to the death. Only as the Christian churches rise above their present divisions, unite with each other in unselfish love and, above all, with Christ, can the power of God so pour down upon Christendom as will prevent a race war in comparison with which our present European struggle will prove a skirmish.

Above all, Christ's prayer was for not a merely external union, but for the union of our souls with God. The supreme need of the church is the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The reinforcement of our personality by Christ, the development of the spiritual superman, the evolution of a new humanity in Christ will convince the world that God was in Christ and that He abides in us even as He dwelt in Him. "That ye may all be one." "I in them and thou in me that they may be perfected into one."

Tagore on the Woman Movement

WOMEN are striving for economic, political and, in fact, total independence. The woman's movement in the United States was concerned first with winning for women control over their property and their children; now they are opposed to all barriers which laws and customs have interposed between them and their freedom in society and their homes. They wish to break the shackles which society through the centuries has made. Once free, they will have political duties like men, educational and industrial careers like men.

REVOLUTIONS IN THE EAST

Those demands are many and may sound forceful to some men and women, but remember that in China the women have revolted against the bandaging and crippling of their feet; in my own country the women no longer mount the funeral pyre with their dead husbands. It is well that women demand their right place in society, because nature intended that they should express themselves in all departments of society, and the home is only one of the places in which nature intends that woman shall find her full expression.

If we would have a real civilization and a beautiful society we must have both women's influence and men's influence ever present. Man and woman are two different forces ever acting on each other and on society. If they are not ever present and acting, then society, no less than the individual, is the loser.

MEN AND WOMEN DIFFER

I suppose there are certain women who think there is no real division in the sexes and no difference in the influences they have on society and on each other. This mistake is so obvious that it need not be discussed.

The difference between man and woman is the principle of creation itself, a difference full of beauty and dramatic surprises. It is a blessing and offers an immense attraction to men and women and to the society in which they move. The differences, for they are many, are so essential that to get rid of them were a pity. Women show a different make-up physically, mentally and morally in the home, in society and wherever they play an active part—in politics, the economic world or in war.

WOMAN IN THE WORLD'S WORK

Woman wishes to conserve, while man seems bent on destruction.

Wherever woman's influence is felt the work takes a higher standard. The fields she has not entered are only half tilled and the flowers bloom there only in partial beauty.

The same applies to man and his work. The home is supposed to be woman's governing domain, and still man's influence is needed there to make the home permanent and illuminating. When men and women look upon themselves as reactionary lights and influences this cleavage will disappear. This wrangling between the sexes is purposeless, and was never intended to be.

COMPETITION BETWEEN THE SEXES

There is, and perhaps always will be, competition between members of the same sex, men and men, women and women, whether found in political or social life, but it should not exist between men and women, because it is contrary to nature and her laws.

I hope the time is close at hand when women will find themselves free, for they will be happier and their growth will be less stunted. Until women find themselves or express themselves as nature intended they should they will be restless, and it is natural that they should be.

FREEDOM OF THE SOUL DESIRED

I believe the women in the Orient, especially in my own country, are eager to free themselves and to express themselves, but their expression and desires are different from those of the women in the West. The women of India are looking for and are struggling for the freedom of the soul. It is the freedom of the soul and the mind that make for beauty and contentment.

This principle is not to be overlooked by western women in their struggle to find themselves, economically, politically and socially.

At present millions and millions of women are stricken with sorrow and suffering, they are facing economic responsibilities, they are giving their backs and strength to work which nature never expected of them. Though many have faltered by the wayside and many more will falter and die from want and suffering, something better and nobler will flower from this burden and the good effect will be felt.

Perhaps from all this suffering and clash of arms against arms and men against men, out of all this debris will come a beautiful dawn, and rising above it all the new woman, who has borne her suffering and her losses in silence, who is happy because she is physically, mentally and spiritually strong, ready and anxious to help and to caress suffering humanity.

In the Pittsburg of Japan

How the Modern Spirit Is Making Inroads Upon an Ancient Civilization—Being a Record of Ten Days' Impressions in the City of Osaka

By GUY W. SARVIS
(Disciples' Missionary to China.)

AFTER all I had heard of Japan as the garden of the world, I was still surprised and delighted to see how literally like a garden it is. From the moment we sighted the trim lighthouse and smug little fishing village at the entrance to the Inland Sea to the time we arrived in Karuizawa there was nothing to mar the impression and neatness and cleanness.

Perhaps it was all the more striking to us from China, because whatever are the virtues of the Chinese, cleanliness is not one of them. No matter whether we were riding on the train through the country or visiting a cotton mill, we saw no unsightly heaps of rubbish and no tumbledown dwellings or factory buildings. I have hardly seen a patched garment in Japan. Even the beggars (and these are few, partly because the police have suppressed them) rarely wear ragged garments.

WE TAKE OFF OUR SHOES

The esthetic feeling of the people is everywhere evident, both in the form and color of their houses and clothing. The attention to scrupulous cleanness is strongly accentuated when one comes to a public building such as a temple, or to a private home, and is suddenly reminded that he must take his shoes off. The threshold is of polished wood, and beyond it is the floor covered with spotless light-colored straw matting upon which the people move about noiselessly in their white stocking feet, leaving their shoes at the door. One removes his shoes or wears cloth coverings specially provided even at the theater.

Even the superficial traveler, however, can see that modernity is making inroads on this medieval daintiness. Modern factories will belch forth clouds of smoke. The products of the factory will contaminate the streams of the city.

However, even the smoky railroad cannot extinguish the desire for cleanliness, and one of the interesting sights by the way is the numerous washing places out on the open platform at many of the railway stations. To these the passengers go and wash face and hands while the train stops. In addition, excellent lavatories are provided at least on the first and second class cars, on the trains. In the cities bath-houses are to be found everywhere. Probably one would not find anywhere in the world a cleaner and less offensive crowd of people than in Japan.

Guy W. Sarvis

JAPAN'S COMMERCIAL "ARRIVAL"

We came to Japan in a Japanese steamer owned and operated by the Japan Mail Steamship Company, a concern which owns and operates some of the finest lines on the Pacific, and on the run between Japan and Europe, as well as many smaller steamers for the coast trade between Japan and China. The service on our boat was beyond criticism for a boat of its class. The railway and steamship companies in Japan make it a point to please their patrons. In addition to this great company, there are many others. In fact, Japan has "arrived" commercially, and is modern and up-to-date in all kinds of commercial organization. A very complete system of state railways covers the country and the accommodations on these roads are excellent.

In the city of Osaka the street railway system is remarkable. It is complete, speedy, and comfortable. You can ride anywhere in the city and transfer any number of times on a ticket which costs 3½ sen, or about 1¾ cents gold—and the city makes money on the system! I understand that all the larger cities have good street car systems. Horses are few and freight is usually transported on two-wheeled carts drawn by men. Our 800 pounds of baggage was transported on one of them, drawn by one man. The streets are smooth and therefore large loads can be hauled in this way. We noticed all through the country between Osaka and Karuizawa roads built through the country for the use of such vehicles. Automobiles are increasingly popular in the cities.

A MODERN CITY

One of the most astonishing things to me on going about Osaka was the very great number of fine modern business buildings and the wide streets. A few years ago the city was like any other Oriental city, but an enterprising man was put at the head of the street car system; property was condemned and bought by the city on the streets where it was desired to establish street car lines, fine bridges were built, and new buildings replaced the old ones—and all this was made commercially profitable.

Another most striking thing was the number of factories. I visited only one, a cotton mill. Of course Japan has the same labor problems as the rest of the world, and I am not in a position to speak of the really typical conditions in factories, but certainly what one could see on a hasty visit to this cotton mill was most encouraging.

Of the mill itself I need only say that there were about 4,000 employes and that it is thoroughly modern in every respect.

FACTORY CONDITIONS

Of especial interest to me was the residence for the employes. Of course the great majority of the workers are girls. These come from the country in most cases, and the company furnishes their food and home. Everything about the dormitory was neat and clean. There was a beautiful garden, and plans were being made for educational work. The wages of the most poorly paid workers were 30 sen a day, and the company charged them 9 sen for food, bedding, room, light, baths, and all necessities except clothing. It is true that the hours of work are excessive—nearly twelve per day—but this is the universal custom in factories here and in China. It cannot be changed except by legislation, and there is promising agitation in this direction now. The Japanese know of the modern social legislation in the western world and are anxious to be equal to the foremost. I have not learned as yet just what laws are in existence, and I am aware that a two-hour visit is insufficient as a basis upon which to establish any valuable estimate of conditions, but it is at least significant that even such a visit did not reveal such evils as can usually be seen at a glance.

"THE PITTSBURG OF JAPAN"

Osaka is known as the Pittsburgh of Japan, and the statement is made that they can make anything there, whether it be an ocean liner or a locomotive, a pin or a lead-pencil. In short, externally at least, Osaka is a surprisingly modern and progressive city. This means, of course, a constantly rising standard of living. It costs a Chinese twice as much to live in Osaka as in Nanking. The salaries of servants and teachers are about double, although, interestingly enough, the salaries of university teachers and men of similar rank are much less than in the government institutions of China—but they are abnormally high there on account of the scarcity of good men.

I was able to visit the public library, the zoological garden, the playground, and a combination theater and moving-picture show. The average attendance at the library is 900 per day. All these pay from one to five sen for the privilege of reading in the building whenever they come. There are in addition regular members who can draw books out in the ordinary way. Perhaps nothing that I saw impressed me as being more typical of the New Japan.

WORLD LITERATURE IN LIBRARIES

In the old days, libraries if they existed, were for private use and were little frequented. Here in this beautiful public building, the gift of a philanthropic Japanese, were the most modern books on all subjects, and hundreds of students were coming daily to study them. The rooms where people could go and read for one or two sen were full and people were waiting outside for places. On the shelves were books in Japanese, English, German, and French, and in the sociology and economics sections, at any rate, were excellent selections of the most recent literature.

The zoological garden was a surprise to me because of its completeness. It would compare favorably with all except the largest in America. The public playground has recently been opened. The city put about $10,000 into it.

MUSIC AND MOVIES

Near the zoological garden is a bandstand where a military band plays weekly in the season. I attended a concert and heard excellent renderings of selections from Wagner and Mendelssohn, as well as from other classical authors and from modern American popular music. There must have been 5,000 people present, most of whom stood during the two hours of the concert. There were two Japanese selections on the program. The moving-picture show presented a thrilling American film full of hair-breadth escapes and dramatic situations, and followed this by a short Japanese play based on one of the old historical stories, the moving-picture machine being called in to supplement the acting.

One of the interesting features of the theater was a revolving stage, arranged so that the scenery for one act could be set up while the preceding act was being given.

We were very fortunate indeed in Osaka to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Erskine. Mr. Erskine was located for several years in one of the interior stations in Japan, and while there he made a special study of Japanese religions. He gave us a great deal of time during our visit, showing us the most famous temples in Osaka, Kyoto, and Nara. On our trip to Kyoto we also visited the tomb of the late Emperor Meiji. This is one of the most impressive sights I have ever witnessed, and reminded me forcibly of the tomb of Napoleon in the Hotel des Invalides in Paris, although the latter is in a splendid building of marble and granite, while the former is out in the open air.

A REMARKABLE TOMB

The two are alike, however, in their majestic simplicity. One leaves the interurban station and rides perhaps a mile along a beautiful wooded road through the park which is set apart in connection with the tomb. Then he dismounts and walks along a wide gravel road with beautiful cedars on either side, and climbs a hill forty or fifty feet high, and passes to an open space directly in front of a series of stone fences and broad steps. It was raining on the day when we visited the tomb, but when we reached this point we were obliged to remove our hats and lower our umbrellas.

On looking up the hill we saw simply a huge black mound, covered, apparently, with asphalt and gravel. There was no mark on the tomb. The mound was perhaps thirty or forty feet in diameter. No one is allowed to approach it, although officials and relatives are permitted to come much nearer than ordinary travelers.

"THE SPIRIT OF JAPAN"

The national religion of Japan is nature-worship connected with the worship (or more correctly, veneration) of the Emperor, and he would be callous indeed who could stand by that mountainside and look at that tomb and realize all that had come to Japan during the lifetime of the dead Emperor without being awed and solemnized to a degree.

The whole scene was so typical of the dignity and beauty of so much in Japanese life that I was deeply impressed by it.

We who live in China have every reason to dislike the Japanese as a nation, and we do not trust them in their policy toward China, but there is something tremendously impressive and admirable about their nationalism and their faith in their destiny. They have been great imitators and appropriators of western culture, but they are still Japanese first and last, and this simple but magnificent tomb seems to me beautifully typical of the Spirit of Japan.

Appeal to the Church

By JESSE ELWARD HEINS

Oh Church, ease-loving and with vast maw filled,
How sleep for damning dreams of those you left
Starving with emptied hands and hearts bereft,
Or, the dying moans of millions killed?
Or how, when waking, can you spend your powers
In wrangles o'er the petty points of creed
That have no meaning in this hour of need,
When God is shaking down all tottering towers?
The scribes of old tithed mint while you tithe hairs,
Splitting them o'er and o'er! What boots it, fools,
The use of psalm or hymn, a drop or pools,
To kneel or stand when mumbling useless prayers?
Behold the tasks He piles before your eyes!
Church of the Toiling Christ, arise! arise!

Our Readers' Opinions

TITHING AND LEGALISM

Editor THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY:

In response to your editorial on "The Tithing Propaganda," in the issue of The Christian Century of December 14, I take pleasure in accepting the invitation to say a word on the subject of tithing. The editorial does not surprise me, for, knowing the position of the "Century" on legalism, such a word might have been expected. I have been a reader of the "Century" for years. I understand the position of the editors on the various questions which they discuss. I am conversant with what is usually called "modern Christian thought." I appreciate the catholicity and the Christian spirit which breathes in the pages of the "Century." I know how bitterly it resents any species of legalism which might arise among the Disciples. I share this feeling.

But I am not an advocate of tithing on the basis of legalism, but of love. Our Lord said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." And the apostle Paul said, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Jesus implied that there were some commandments to keep, and Paul implies that there is a law to fulfill. The New Testament teaches that the will of God is to be motived in love rather than in law.

If I understand the position of the "Century," it is, for instance, that baptism and the Lord's Supper should be kept, not as legalistic ordinances, but as the expression of responsive, affectionate and obedient hearts to the will of Christ. The "Century" would not deny that our Lord gave these ordinances. Of course, if he did not, then there is no use to keep them at all. If he did, then the only question is, in what spirit should they be kept—in the spirit of legalism or of love? The "Century" says love. So do I.

But inasmuch as the two ordinances are sometimes kept in the spirit of legalism, the "Century" would not say that they should be abolished. It is true that tithing is sometimes done in the spirit of legalism. There can be no doubt but that the Pharisees so tithed. This is the very thing our Lord sought to correct. He did not rebuke them for tithing, for He plainly said, "This ye ought to have done" (Mat. 23:23; Luke 11:42), but He did rebuke them for doing it in the spirit of legalism. A good thing may be abused or done in the wrong spirit, or with a bad motive; but certainly this is no argument for doing away with it altogether. Who would advocate the abolition of the laws against murder because, perchance, some persons may be kept from the deed of murder because of the laws? The Christian does no murder because he loves his fellow-men. He keeps the law from a sense of love. And so our Lord did not abolish the law of the tithe, but He did advocate that we keep it in the spirit of love.

You rightly say, "The Disciples have always held to an anti-legalistic morality." True, and I believe they always will. But to insist on the "will of God" in the matter of giving should not lead us into a legalistic morality. I would be as far as the "Century" is from advocating a propaganda which would end in the spirit of pharisaism, for I hate it as much as the "Century" does. But I believe that if our people had been taught that they should have devoted not less than a tithe of their income to God's work—and more when possible—we would have had less of the spirit of legalism in reference to baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Your editorial opposes tithing not only on the ground of legalism, but also on the ground of what you call a "false theology and a false ethic." The Disciples care very little about the theology of it. We want a "thus saith the Lord." However, theology is on the side of the tithe. The Church Fathers endorsed it, and many of the Church councils at various times since proclaimed it a Christian obligation.

Is it a false ethic? Is it right to give at least a tenth of your income to the Lord? Jesus said it was. Paul said it was. The author of Hebrews so states. It is a strange ethic which would teach that the Christian with his missionary religion should give less than the ancient Jew. The early Christians went beyond the tithe; modern Christians fall far below it.

You also state that the "revival of the principle of tithing would seem to involve the displacement of the stewardship ideal." Tithing and stewardship are not inconsistent. They are not antagonistic, but supplemental. Stewardship is an Old Testament doctrine as well as New. God saw no inconsistency in teaching both in the Old Testament, and Jesus saw no inconsistency in teaching both in the New. If one will think through both propositions, this will be evident.

As for the "type of manhood and womanhood produced by gift-making," is it not a fact that the finest characters are among those who make it the principle of their lives to devote not less than a tenth of their incomes to the Lord's work? Tithing, as the minimum of our gifts, in the spirit of love, is a cure for covetousness. God's curse rests upon covetousness. "For the iniquity of his (man's) covetousness was I wroth and smote him; I hid my face and was wroth: and he went on forwardly in the ways of his heart." Isa. 57:17.

Ashland, Ky. W. A. FITE.

* * *

THE TITHING PROPAGANDA

Editor THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY:

What you say about tithing should bring home to the Disciples the dangerous mistake being made by such unscriptural teaching and practice. It is certainly going back to Judaism with a rush. Paul says we are bought with a price. All that we have or do must be held and done to the honor and glory of Christ. Not one-tenth, but ten-tenths.

Now as to the so-called union. Do we not know as a people only the one way, the gospel way, which began at Pentecost: Christ the Door, organization completed then and there? Any institution this side Pentecost can be nothing but human—must not be added to or taken from. Nothing material ever did or can enter into the building not made with hands—must be a new creation, a spiritual building, a called-out, separated people by the word of truth.

Detroit, Mich. A. G. TEBBS.

An Appreciation

Editor THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY:

My sympathy is with you in your efforts to enlarge the vision of our great brotherhod, which we all love so well. Our love for truth and a fair reading of the Book will enable us to see the light eventually.

Croton, O. STANTON E. HOOVER.

* * *

"To the Man About to Quit"

Editor THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY:

I wish to express my deep appreciation of the editorial entitled, "To the Man About to Quit." It should be published in tract form. It would give new life to many a disheartened worker.

MRS. W. B. PARKS,
Texas Christian University.
Fort Worth, Tex.

* * *

From a Contemporary

The last issue of The Christian Century was called "Disciples' Publication Society Number," and considerable space in that very readable publication, one of the most readable of the large list that comes to our desk, was devoted to the interests of the paper. It is both courteous and courageous.

We congratulate the Christian Century upon its list of very splendid contributors for the coming year, including such as President Chas. T. Paul, Edgar D. Jones, Edward S. Ames, Dr. Finis Idleman and Orvis F. Jordan.—From The Christian Courier, Dallas, Tex.

* * *

Bits of Good Cheer

"I should dislike to miss the communion and inspiration of The Christian Century."—M. B. Wood, Bayamon, Porto Rico.

* * *

"The 'Century' is surely a great paper. The most thought-provoking articles I find anywhere I read in its columns."—L. W. Finley, Madisonville, O.

* * *

"I am interested in your work, and find profit in reading 'The Christian Century.'"—Peter Ainslie, Baltimore, Md.

EDITOR, THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY:

Kindly permit me to offer an emphatic denial of a statement made in the Christian Century of November 16, on the authority of an English woman, that changes have been made in Mrs. Eddy's writings. Her works are exactly as she left them without change of any kind.

Mrs. Eddy is referred to in the same item as writing "poor English" and manifesting "crudities" of thought and expression. Her writings do not warrant such a criticism.

Mrs. Eddy's style is and always had been a very individual one. Many competent critics consider her use of the English language both remarkable and admirable, and those who accept her teachings uniformly approve it, but questions of taste always offer a wide margin for difference of opinion. Candor, however, compels recognition of the fact that of the hundreds of writers on Christian Science topics, many of them of marked literary attainments, none has equaled her ability to express Christian Science, and this is the final test of literary merit. AVERY COONLEY.

Social Interpretations

By Alva W. Taylor

Lloyd George As Military Dictator and Social Prophet

Before the war began David Lloyd-George was the one figure in the politics of the world who had shown himself both a man of social vision and a statesman who could effectually put through a social program that was fairly revolutionary. The war put an end to his salutary labors on behalf of the common people and the working classes of Great Britain, and his great talents were enlisted to save England from the disaster her "muddling" threatened. In times of peace his radical program met strenuous and bitter opposition; in times of war, as the nation faces a crisis, his very enemies have turned to him as the man of the hour. But some have thought the war experience was rapidly making him a conservative and that he would ally himself with the aristocrats of England rather than the common people, because aristocracy lends itself much more easily to dictatorships.

But evidently the great Welshman has not in the least confused the issue, and he enters his military dictatorship for the sake of meeting the emergency without any loss of his democracy. It is remarkable how he has maintained the confidence of the Laborites. They were first of all the groups to vote him confidence, and from them he has chosen several members of his cabinet and made Mr. Arthur Henderson a member of his war committee, or "dictatorship," as it is called. One of the very first acts of his administration was to take over the Irish railways, thus putting into effective administration the Laborite program, which asks that the government take control of all mines and transportation during the war.

Their further program calls for state control of all industries necessary to effective mobilization of the nation's resources and the "conscription of wealth." The premier was cordially despised by the wealthy classes of England because of his land and industrial program, and there is little doubt that his fingers have been aching to get hold, with real authority, of the money-mongers who have increased their fortunes by millions while their neighbors were giving their lives at the front. It is the belief of many that all who profit by the war will be compelled to give up the entire excess of their profits over normal income for the sake of paying England's vast war expenditures. Any consideration of England's program from the human rather than the dollar standpoint would certainly demand nothing less. The number of taxable incomes in England has doubled in the past two years, while the number of men who have no income to tax but who are offering their lives at the front has run into the millions.

* * *

Dare the Allies Try to Negotiate?

Whatever may be Germany's reasons for offering to negotiate peace, the neutral world will not look with approval upon any blanket refusal of the Allies to negotiate. Germany has deprived her enemies of the suspicion, which was aroused upon her first announcements, that she was merely playing for an armistice that she might recoup her armies, by offering to meet in a peace conference without an armistice. The question may resolve itself frankly into one of whether or not the Allies dare try to get together on a counter offer of terms, for we must not forget the ancient diplomatic warfare between England and Russia for advantage in the Near East and Central Asia. Russia demands Constantinople, and but for England's jealousy she would long ago have taken possession of it and put an end to the Terrible Turk and the unspeakable atrocities he has been visiting upon the Armenians and the Syrians.

The war radicals may talk as they please about Germany's internal difficulties and about the surmise that she now realizes she cannot win, but the cold facts remain, as neutral observers inform us, that her internal difficulties are not insuperable, that her people are a unit in support of honorable peace terms or war to the end, and that they are confident Germany can never be "beaten to her knees." John Bull will have to surrender his talk about "bleeding Germany white" and that there can be no end to the war until the Allies' armies are on German soil. The power of defense in this war is so much greater than the power of offense that reason will have to be used or the war will become a stalemate. Neither does it bear well upon neutral opinion to read in British editorials that Germany's navy must be destroyed and her colonies expropriated. This is too patent a part of the "Britannia rules the waves" business that has prevented the calm minds of America from becoming over-partisan to England's fight on German militarism. Reason and humanity both demand negotiation and an attempt at least to substitute reason for the organized murder of the present situation.

* * *

President Wilson's Epoch-Making Opportunity

Germany offers to meet her enemies in a conference at the Hague without an armistice and there is every reason to believe that she expects President Wilson to furnish the umpire. To many promoters of peace President Wilson's failure to call a standing conference of the neutral nations has remained a mystery. His enemies have been unkind enough to say that he wished to gather in the glory of the final settlement personally, but this is too terrible a charge for even an enemy to seriously believe. Rather it is, no doubt, because such a movement would break all precedent.

Is not that the need of the world today, that our President shall have the boldness in regard to peace that Lloyd-George has had in his career in regard to both social reform and the conduct of the war? President Wilson can be the umpire to referee between the contending diplomats when they meet to settle the matter after the historic war or he can furnish from the neutral nations of the earth a jury that will try the case on its merits. The old way will seek to settle the question along the lines of the balance of power and other historic formulas. The other way might lay foundations for permanent peace by daring to break all precedent and settle the war by destroying "balance of power" and other diplomatic programs. Let us hope that the President will not wait too long in fear of a premature move, but rather risk erring on the side of boldness for the sake of injecting a new ideal of peace.

"I have just received the last 'Century,' and find it full of good things, as usual."—P. J. Rice, El Paso, Tex.

The Sunday School Lesson

A True Witness

The Lesson in Today's Life

By JOHN R. EWERS

"And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God." John seven times in this chapter is a witness-bearer. What nobler occupation? "And I saw." One can only bear witness to that which he has actually experienced. That is the weakness of the average church member. He has not tasted and found by first-hand experience that God is good. If you have seen the Grand Canyon you can talk about it. If you have been in love you know what romance is. If you have been lost in some strange country you know the joy of finding familiar objects again. If you have been desperately hungry you know the keen pleasure of finding food again. If you have known the sting of conscience you know the joy of forgiveness. If Christ has taken away your sin, the word Saviour is the sweetest to you in the English tongue. "We speak what we have seen and heard."

* *

Nothing can take the place of Christian experience; and it is just because the average church member's experience is so thin and colorless that his weak-voiced testimony amounts to so little. We need to sit up and think the problem through until we see how Christ has saved us and is saving us. Do you feel that Christ is today keeping you from sin? He has become your ideal. You cannot permit yourself to do these wrong things.

In 1793 the Paris mob took Louis the Sixteenth to the Guillotine. Not long afterward they crossed the Seine and, from her prison tower, brought, in the tumbril, the dauntless and beautiful Marie Antoinette to a similar fate. Then they hastened after the little Dauphin. As the mob bore him along toward the Place de la Concord from the Tuilleries palace, someone shouted from a balcony, "Give him to Old Meg." Now "Old Meg" was the vilest old hag in Paris. Her hair was dishevelled, her mouth toothless, her eyes bleary, her language horrible. The idea pleased the mob, so it is somewhere reported, and to "Old Meg" they delivered the little prince. She stripped him of his fine attire and clad him in rags. She fed him from the ash-boxes. She taught him low things. But they say that sometimes when she would demand of him some particularly evil thing he would rise to his full height and, stamping his little foot, would cry, "I will not, I will not; my father was the Emperor." His ideal saved him. It is even so with us. Tempted to do something unworthy of our name, our soul within us cries out, "I will not, I will not; the Son of God is my Saviour." Talk about ideals being impractical! Nothing is practical save ideals.

* *

Not only must we experience; we must also bear record of our experience. At this point we find a strange reticence. It is not true in any other realm. Finding a good insurance policy, we hasten to advise our friends. Finding a good investment, we hurry to have our neighbors informed. We tell of winter resorts, golf-links, lecture courses, musicals, books, restaurants, hotels, churches—but when it comes to the best and highest and most priceless possession in all the universe, some way we want to keep that all to ourselves. Why not bear witness? Why not joyfully go forth to win your friends and neighbors to the Christ? Why not cry with the early disciples, "We have found Him, we have found Him!" First we must be sure of our experience. It must be very sane, very real, very natural. Then we must tell. "Come see," "Go tell"—that is the gospel way. Can Christ save us? Come and see. Has He saved you? Go and tell.

I can tell you the reason why you hesitate to go and tell. You fear being accused of hypocrisy. This affair of your religion is so high and holy; the ideals are so lofty and difficult; you are so conscious of your own shortcomings that you simply lack the face to go and tell. You fancy that after you have gone, the one whom you interviewed will remark with a sneer: "A pretty fellow he is to be talking religion to me—I know him too well." There is plenty of truth in this. One does have to clean up before one does effective personal work—that is the fine feature about it. But Christ can use imperfect instruments. If you wait until you are perfect, you will do no personal work in this world—and in the next it may be too late. Tell your story now. Say what Christ has done for you. Certainly he can and will do more—as much as you will allow him—but tell what He has done to date. Think of what you would be but for him!

* *

There can be no doubt, however, that the character of the witness counts mightily. Not long ago I heard a minister utter empty, pious phrases that filled me with disgust. I knew him. I knew how base and unworthy he was. To me his words were not only empty; they were blasphemous. I was glad to get out under the stars. On the other hand the story is told of an old minister who for fifty years had been pastor of one church. "Why do you keep this old man? How can you listen to him?" asked a stranger. "Why, you see," was the reply, "We know that back of every word he utters is fifty years of Godly life." That is the man behind the word.

We have entered the season of soul-winning. As a teacher, as a church member, what are you doing? Do you see Jesus? Do you tell of him? Long, long afterward, Jesus said of this brave witness: "No nobler man was ever born." Would you have the Master speak thus of you?

The above article is based upon the International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for January 14, "John the Baptist and Jesus." Scripture, John 1:19-34.

A Christian Endeavor Society has been started in the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Booneville, Ark.

American Series of Five Maps

These are lithographed in four colors on muslin of superior quality, and measure 36x58 inches. Large lettering of names of places is a special feature of all these maps. Each map has distinctive features, but all have large type, clear and bold outlines.

The maps are as follows:

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the Old Testament and the Land as Divided among the twelve tribes.

Map of Palestine—Illustrating the New Testament.

Map of the Roman Empire—Illustrating the Journeys of the Apostle Paul.

Map of Assyria and the Adjacent Lands—Illustrating the Captivities of the Jews.

Map of Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula—Illustrating the Journeyings of the Israelites.

Any of the above maps sold singly and unmounted at 1.00 each, postpaid.

These maps are also furnished in a set of 5 that are mounted on one specially constructed wooden roller, which is arranged to rest securely on the top of the upright bar of the stand. The stand is collapsible and is made of steel, finished in black Japan.

Entire Outfit, $6 50 Net.

By Express or Freight at Purchaser s Expense.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY

709 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

The Larger Christian World

A DEPARTMENT OF INTERDENOMINATIONAL ACQUAINTANCE — BY ORVIS F. JORDAN

Stonemen Go to New York

The Stonemen of Philadelphia visited New York recently 7,500 strong. There were ten bands with the delegation, which paid their own expenses to attend. In the parade a Bible was carried on a small desk. A number of the ministers of the city were given the first degree in James Methodist Episcopal church. Among these were Dr. John F. Carson, a Presbyterian, and Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis. The various denominations of the city were invited into the movement and Dr. Stone of Philadelphia was invited to a conference at a later date in which the plans for the movement in New York will be discussed. The Baptist pastors of the city did not co-operate, so far as can be learned, and it is expected that at an early date they will publish their reasons for refusing to do so.

Methodist Editor Becomes an Octogenarian

Rev. James M. Buckley, the veteran editor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was eighty years of age on December 16. He has been a scourge to heresy in his denomination and has vitally affected the denominational history. He is held in great esteem by his Methodist brethren.

The Bishop Cheney Memorial Service

On Sunday, December 3, a memorial service in honor of the late Rt. Rev. Charles Edward Cheney, D. D., was held at Christ Reformed Episcopal Church, Chicago. The service was presided over by Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D. D., presiding bishop, and was attended by clergymen and laymen of many churches. The Rev. James S. Stone, D. D., rector of St. James' church, represented the Episcopal church, and made an address appreciative of the character and labors of the late Bishop. Addresses were also delivered by the Rev. Samuel M. Gibson, D. D., Bishop Cheney's successor as rector of Christ church; the Rev. Johnston Myers, of Emanuel Baptist church; the Rev. James G. K. McClure, of McCormick Theological Seminary; the Rev. James M. Gray, Dean of Moody Bible Institute, and William P. Sidley, vestryman of Christ church. Resolutions of appreciation and respect adopted by the Chicago Church Federation were read by the Rev. W. B. Millard.

Week of Prayer Topics

The whole Christian world will be using common prayer meeting topics the first week in January. They are furnished by the World's Evangelical Alliance and are as follows:

Monday, January 1: "Thanksgiving and Humiliation." Psalm 103:1-5; Romans 8:31-39; Psalm 51; Revelation 3:14-32.

Tuesday, January 2: "The Church Universal—the 'One Body' of Which Christ Is the Head." Isaiah 54:2-5; John 20:19-23; Acts 2:1-4; I Corinthians 12:4-7.

Wednesday, January 3: "Nations and Their Rulers." Psalm 24; Psalm 101: I Timothy 2:1-8; I Peter 2: 13-25.

Thursday, January 4: "Missions Among the Heathen." Psalm 2; Luke 4:40-44; Romans 16:25-27.

Friday, January 5: "Families, Schools, Colleges and the Young." I Kings 3:5-15; II Timothy 3:14-17; Matthew 19:13-15.

Saturday, January 6: "Missions at the Home Base." Psalm 2; Luke 10:25-37; Romans 11:13-24.

Unitarians Moved by Billy Sunday

One of the by-products of the Billy Sunday campaign in Boston is that the Unitarians, who are not in harmony with the evangelist's theology, have set out to give their city a constructive statement of the religious convictions of their denomination. These have had less of the critical and more of the constructive note than is usual with

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL HYMNAL EVER PRODUCED BY THE AMERICAN CHURCH

HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH

Edited by CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON and HERBERT L. WILLETT

FOR THE USE OF CHURCHES OF ALL DENOMINATIONS

CONTAINS all the great hymns which have become fixed in the affections of the Church and adds thereto three distinctive features:

Hymns of Christian Unity
Hymns of Social Service
Hymns of the Inner Life

These three features give HYMNS OF THE UNITED CHURCH a modernness of character and a vitality not found in any other book. This hymnal is alive!

It sings the very same gospel that is being preached in modern evangelical pulpits

Great care has been bestowed on the "make-up" of the pages. They are attractive to the eye. The hymns seem almost to sing themselves when the book is open. They are not crowded together on the page. No hymn is smothered in a corner. The notes are larger than are usually employed in hymnals. The words are set in bold and legible type, and all the stanzas are in the staves. Everything has been done to make a perfect hymnal.

Price, per single copy, in cloth, $1.15. In half-leather, $1.40

Write today for further information as to sample copies, etc.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY PRESS
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET
CHICAGO

Unitarians. On December 3, every Unitarian church in the city set forth the Unitarian doctrine. One of the widely quoted utterances was that of Dean W. W. Fenn of Harvard Divinity School, who said: "With all the suffering and sorrow in the world, if we but stop and really consider the history of the human race and the message of Jesus Christ, with its beautiful story of love and sacrifice throughout the ages, we must take comfort—for the only rational explanation of the wonderful life of the Saviour is found when we thoughtfully say—'Our Father.'"

New York to Hear Billy Sunday

By Finis S. Idleman

IT was one of those unique texts for which Dr. Jowett is gifted. Sometimes the text is crafty and beguiles him into a less filled pocket. But the discovery of it, and the daring to inscribe it on his banner is always interesting. This text was, "Now Hannah spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard; therefore, Eli thought she was drunken." His theme was "The Deadly Peril of Religious Judgments." With that inimitable witchery of speech he traced its peril, first in misjudgments of another's conversion, contrasting that of the jailer and Lydia, found in the same chapter. "Earthquake and walls falling!" exclaims Lydia, as she hears the jailer's testimony. "Impossible, for mine was an evening zephyr beside lapping waters." Second, the contrast between forms of worship. The peril of the high churchman to pronounce the Quaker's service "piffle" and the temptation of the Quaker to call out to the high churchman, as Cromwell to the officiating priest at the altar, "Come down out of there, sir, and quit your fooling." Third, the contrast in preaching. Here he pronounced himself on the long-looked for utterance. After a classic description of John Henry Newman's style, as being without gestures, in lyric tone and chaste prose-poetic phraseology, he turned quickly to read, from a now familiar volume, a flaming paragraph of Billy Sunday. It had all the "true to nature" characteristics of pulpit leaping, chair breaking, dervish whirling, fist banging, lava disgorging mannerisms of Sunday's preaching, so familiar to all who have heard him. Dr. Jowett closed the book to add: "If Newman by any means could be transported into Sunday's meetings, he would exclaim, "He is drunken." If Sunday could hear Newman, he would say, "It is a frost." In a vein of fitting charity and illuminating the text, he added: "Before Mr. Sunday's methods I stand amazed. But there must be a vine where there is so much fruit, and I pray to be delivered from the deadly peril of misjudgment."

SUNDAY BEGINS IN APRIL

So Billy Sunday comes at last to New York City. His first note was struck at the Hotel Astor, December 11, before 800 ministers and representative laymen. At this dinner, Dr. Jowett, true to his text, was present and returned thanks. The campaign opens next April to continue three months. There is not a concerted unanimity upon the part of the evangelical ministers and churches. Some prominent Baptist, Methodist and Congregational churches do not see their way clear to co-operate. Wealthy and liberal individual laymen are financing the campaign, chief among whom is John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The Episcopal churches are rallying to Mr. Sunday as in no other city where he has been.

* * *

There is no minister who would not welcome any legitimate means to challenge the city to the claims of religion. There is real confusion of mind whether a large city gets the permanent value that results from such a campaign in a smaller center. Many contend that Philadelphia and Baltimore have not answered as favorably as Des Moines or even Kansas City. That Mr. Sunday will draw immense audiences, no one doubts. There is no place where the spectacular draws as it does here. But like another Athens, it is too largely a curious hearing accustomed to seek "some new thing." The constant church attendants are less variable than the average. Their quiet devotion and heroic sacrifice is encouraging. But we shall doubtless depend afterward, as now, upon the sacrificial lives of those who are not trusting in storms nor in earthquakes, but wait as of old for "the still, small voice."

AUTUMN ACTIVITIES

The autumn activities of the churches of New York are marked by many and varying signs. Among them the celebration of ancient anniversaries is prominent. These communions that were transplanted from England and the Continent found their earliest homes on Manhattan Island. Such was the history of Methodism. Old St. John's Methodist Church is celebrating its one hundred and fiftieth anniversary. It occupies the first spot of ground bought by the Methodists in America. Three church buildings have occupied it. The building now standing is antique and quaint. Crowded between the great commercial structures on a narrow canyon. off lower Broadway, it keeps its daily testimony of the spirit to the throngs that pass. For thirty years a daily noon meeting has been held in its chapel. It is the shrine of all American Methodists, of whatever name. It is serving this week in the unique capacity of common meeting ground for many Methodist bishops, both north and south, in the discussion of the union of those two great bodies. It is fitting that the promise of the ultimate union of the church should have part of its expression on this hallowed spot. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis gave one of the leading addresses of the week's celebration. It was full of patriotic and Christian optimism.

* * *

Presbyterianism is celebrating also. Dr. Duffield is enjoying two celebrations in one. Along with the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of his church, he is completing the twenty-fifth year of his ministry in the old First church on lower Broadway. This church has prestige, but is marooned in a section of the city deserted by big business, and unsuited for residences.

St. Paul's Parish has been celebrating also. Dr. Manning of Trinity Church preached the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary sermon. It was a stately pageant that emerged among the tombs of this ancient enclosure. The navy and army were represented by officers in full uniform and the band added its swelling volume to that of the great organ. Although St. Paul's Parish is in a far down town section, yet it was described by an English visitor when built, as being "in a beautiful location near New York City." Dr. Manning was true to his environment that day, if not true to the spirit of the Nazarene. He flayed our neutrality. "We have been neutral, but we have not been great," he declared. He advocated preparedness with the earnestness of a Roosevelt. Compulsory training found in him a warm friend. The Rooseveltian policies wore the ermine that day. Yet the text was not forgotten. Amid a great and notable company of public officials, and financiers, the preacher pled for a renewal of true religion as the only foundation of national life. "A democracy to endure must be a theocracy." His text was: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" When we came out of the church the great monuments to world conquest stood towering on every side, making the church a comparative pigmy beside its fellows, a fitting symbol of the proportionate measure of devotion our age renders to Caesar and to God.

New York City.

Disciples Table Talk

P. J. Rice Visits New Mexico Indian Town

With a view to investigating the conditions among the Indians of the southwest, and to ascertain whether it would be desirable and practicable to promote missionary work among them, P. J. Rice, of First church, El Paso, Tex., recently visited the Zuni Indian Reservation, located in northwestern New Mexico. The Zunis, he writes, are farmers, but all live in the town of Zuni. They number about 1,800 souls and as yet have not yielded to any Christian influence, although a missionary of the Christian Reformed church has been among them for twenty years. Mr. Rice states that he feels that under a proper sort of missionary effort the tribe might all be won for Christ. During his visit among them occurred the annual religious festival of the tribe, called the "Sheliko." The dancers—men only—gave evidence of elaborate training for this celebration. The whole affair, writes Mr. Rice, was primitive and picturesque in the extreme.

Frontier Churches Unite in Every Member Canvass

The churches of the Niagara Frontier section undertook the every member canvass in concert this year. The preparation had likewise been concerted, several meetings in conference taking place between representatives of the various churches, and each benefiting by the measures the others were employing. Central church, Buffalo, increased its offerings in every way in a wholesome proportion. Central church, North Tonawanda, doubled their missionary pledges, and First church, Tonawanda, will probably succeed in entering the living link class under the Foreign Society. There are now half as many living links on the Frontier as there are congregations. Payne Avenue, North Tonawanda, increased pledges for local expenses by 25 per cent, and for missions by 50 per cent. Notable among the facts brought out in the canvass was the enlistment of 117 givers out of a total membership of only 157 in Glenwood, one of the mission churches in Buffalo, ministered to by Harvey Bream. Preparatory to the taking of their canvass, Richmond Avenue, Buffalo, John P. Sala, minister, observed the Wednesday immediately preceding as a unique prayer day. Five prayer meetings were held at the church through the day, beginning with one at 6:30 a. m. for the business men and women, and closing with the regular evening prayer meeting. One hundred and sixty-five persons attended one or more of the services of the day. This contributed largely to spiritualizing the canvass.

A Children's Choir at Wellsville, N. Y.

Wellsville, N. Y., church has been developing a children's choir, from which it is now benefiting very definitely. Another notable feature of the worship at Wellsville is the printing in the parish paper of a brief biographical sketch and appreciation of the composer of the organ voluntary with which the service opens. The Wellsville Sunday school made plans to recognize both the Old People's Home at East Aurora and the Cleveland Christian Orphanage in its Christmas gifts this year. The minister, Wm. A. Young, secured from each institution a statement of the things especially needed and published this in the Temple Times.

Men's Prayer Meeting in Buffalo Church

A strong feature of the work of Central church, Buffalo, N. Y., for which B. S. Ferrall ministers, is a men's prayer meeting, which meets regularly on Friday evenings at the home of some one of those interested. Mr. Ferrall and his men are enthusiastic over the success of the series, which has been running for about a year.

Christian Endeavor Thrives at Richmond Avenue, Buffalo

Richmond Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y., has been making a special point of its Senior and Intermediate Endeavor work. The church now has the second largest intermediate society in the city of Buffalo, and a very successful senior society. Fifteen of the intermediates have formed a prayer circle, meeting weekly, apart from the regular service, for the purpose of prayer. They call themselves the "Inner Circle."

Serves as Church Clerk for Fifty Years

The first general social function held in the newly appointed parlors at Central church, Des Moines, Ia., was a meeting in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the election of George A. Jewett to the clerkship of the church. Since 1866 Mr. Jewett has served this church in this position. The recent celebration was made a notable one in the church's history. W. A. Shullenberger, the pastor, presided, and five speakers gave expression to the abiding regard in which Mr. Jewett is held by the organizations of the church. The decorations for the occasion were beautiful; a special musical feature was an instrumental quartet of young men from the Christian Endeavor Society. Mrs. E. O. Ashley spoke for the women of the church; Dalton Cole, president of the Senior Endeavor Society, voiced the feelings of the four hundred young people of the church; John W. Gratton, of Highland Park church, bore the greetings of the Disciples' congregations of Des Moines; President Bell, of Drake University, with which institution Mr. Jewett has been connected as secretary of the board for thirty-three years, spoke for the university, and J. W. Hill represented the men of the church. Mr. Jewett made an interesting and informing talk. He stated that when he began attending the Christian church in Des Moines the meetings were held in what was then the new court house. There were at that time fifty members in the congregation. Mr. Jewett imparted the interesting information that during the period from 1860 to 1916 there have been 8,267 persons received into the church. During the fifty years of his clerkship he has issued 4,230 church letters. Of those who were members at the time of Mr. Jewett's election to office there remain but nine who have their membership with Central. Other offices have been held by Mr. Jewett. He has served as usher, deacon, elder, church treasurer, Sunday school secretary, superintendent, librarian, treasurer and teacher. For over thirty years he has served as elder. Mr. Jewett has also acted as publisher and associate editor of the church paper, "The Christian Worker," for thirty years.

Governor Clarke Elected to Deanship in Drake

Hon. George W. Clarke, for four years governor of Iowa, has been elected to and has accepted the position of Dean of the College of Law of Drake University. He will assume the duties of his new position June 15th next, succeeding at that time Dean E. B. Evans, recently resigned. Governor Clarke will give all of his time to the local school, but will spend the summer in Chautauqua work, for the coming season of which he already has signed contracts. It is also his plan to continue to make educational, religious and sociological addresses, a form of public service in which he has been unusually successful throughout his political career.

Governor Clarke will bring to the law school of Drake University training as a lawyer, a legislator and as an executive. He has been in rapid sequence a successful attorney, a member of the house of representatives, speaker of the same body, lieutenant-governor and president of the senate, and governor of Iowa. For twenty years he has been a part of the law-making or the law-enforcing departments of the state government and is familiar with the whys and wherefores of Iowa's statutes. His work also has occasioned a deep search of the laws of other states. His experience of over thirty years in the practice of law has given him the widest knowledge of the details of legal work, especially those forms of legal work which occupy the attention of 90 per cent of the attorneys of the country. This varied training in practice, in legislation, and as an executive, coupled with several years of early experience in the class room, is considered by the Drake authorities to make him especially competent to guide the work of the law school of the university.

Governor Clarke has been interested in Drake almost from the foundation of the school. He is a graduate of Oskaloosa college, the foundation school which later was moved to Des Moines to become Drake University. His wife also is a graduate at Oskaloosa. The four children of the home all have been students of Drake and three found their future helpmates while at the local school. Following his graduation from Oskaloosa, Governor Clarke entered the law school of the State University, from which he graduated in 1878. His was an exceptional education forty years ago in Iowa, an education, incidentally, which he acquired for himself without outside financial assistance.

Governor Clarke comes to the Drake University College of Law at a time when, in the opinion of the university authorities, it is at the beginning of its best growth. The faculty has been largely strengthened in the last ten years with men who are familiar with all the best in present day methods of legal instruction, while the practical attorneys and jurists who have been successful teachers have been retained. In addition to its faculty, three of whom hold the Doctor of Jurisprudence degree, the great strength of the school is in the opportunity of its students for the observation of court work, city, county, state and federal and the exceptional library facilities to be found in Des Moines.

Illinois Church Believes in the Play Idea

The basement of First church, Springfield, Ill., is a busy one these days, reports the pastor, Frank W. Allen. The main play room of the basement, with some 5,000 square feet of floor space, has been converted into a gymnasium, or an indoor playground, and opportunity is afforded the young people and children of the community to play to their heart's content, under proper supervision. Basketball, indoor baseball, volley ball and indoor tennis are only a few of the games which may be played here. A large dining room may be thrown open and used in connection with the playroom. Raised above the level of the playroom and opening on to it is still another room that may be easily converted into a stage and the basement made an auditorium, where plays and entertainments of all kinds may be given. On Monday and Thursday evenings, Mr. William Smothers, previously associated with the First Presbyterian church and the Y. M. C. A. at Davenport, Iowa, in a similar capacity, conducts the classes in boys' work. About 50 boys and young men, ranging in age from 12 to 20, are regularly enrolled as members of the classes. On Tuesday and Friday afternoons and evenings, Miss Hickox, who has been specially fitted for the work in a course at the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy, has charge of the girls' classes. More than 100 girls belong to the classes for young ladies. In speaking of the work, Mr. Allen says: "It is supervised play, more than physical training. In teaching them how to play ideas of fair play, the square deal and team work are taught. The boys are learning something more than how to keep well and handle their strength. They learn, by actual experience in play, the meaning of the 'square deal' and the fact that it pays. We started this work two years ago. Then our classes were only for boys. This year we opened the girls' section. The number of young people that are interested is constantly increasing." The expense of the playroom is borne by the Fellowship organization of the church.

J. E. Davis Goes to First Church, Kansas City

W. F. Richardson, who recently resigned from the work at First church, Kansas City, Mo., reports that his successor has been elected. J. E. Davis of Spokane, Wash., is the man, and his presence in the pulpit there two weeks ago gave great satisfaction and abounding confidence in the future of this work under his leadership, reports the retiring pastor. He begins work February 1. There are some great plans on hand for this downtown field of the Kansas City Disciples.

* * *

—During the pastorate of A. F. Roadhouse, recently resigned at San Bernardino, Cal., the church has been put out of debt and the membership of the congregation has been greatly increased.

—Chas. E. Cobbey, of First church, Omaha, Neb., recently preached at Beatrice, Neb., where he began his ministry. He exchanged pulpits with C. F. Stevens.

—C. F. Rose, of Junction City, Kan., has been called to the work at Abilene, Kan., and has accepted.

—C. R. Neel, of Bethany, Neb., church, will continue the meeting of the East Side church, Lincoln, Neb., which was closed for a time, owing to the illness of J. W. Hilton, pastor at East Side, who had charge of the services. The second "installment" is dated for Jan. 7 on.

—It is reported that the little son of J. E. Davis, pastor at Spokane, Wash., has infantile paralysis.

NEW YORK A Church Home for You. Write Dr. Finis Idleman, 142 West 81st St., N. Y.

—F. B. Cope, of the Lebanon, Kan., church, has accepted the work at Peru, Neb., succeeding Lawrence Dry in the pulpit there.

—During the first ten days of campaigning in Spokane, Wash., the Men and Millions team raised $25,000.

—First church, Youngstown, Ohio, L. G. Batman, pastor, is reported to be negotiating for a site for a new building.

—M. L. Pontius, of Central, Jacksonville, Ill., will give a stereopticon lecture on "Where the Other Half Lives," next month. This is one of a series of lectures on industrial and economic subjects.

—H. H. Wagner, of the Frankton, Ind., church, addressed an open meeting of the Men's Association of the Elwood church. The members of the Methodist Brotherhood attended in a body.

—A. N. Glover, who leads the Van Alstyne, Tex., church, dedicated the new church building at Moody, Tex., early this month, reducing the church indebtedness to about $450. Mr. Glover feels an especial interest in the work at Moody, as he held a meeting there last year and reorganized both church and Sunday school. The Van Alstyne congregation appreciate their pastor, and have recently called him for another year, at an increase in salary.

—G. W. Watson, of First church, Lafayette, Ind., gave the address at the Jefferson high school convocation. His theme was "Choosing a Proper Vocation in Life."

—Three of the Bible classes of First church, Lincoln, Neb., gave a "white Christmas gift" to the library of Cotner University. The Woman's Educational Council also sent out letters to the women of the state, asking them to make a love gift to Cotner for the library and home economics department.

—M. L. Anthony, of Richland Springs, Tex., has accepted the work at Center, Tex.

—P. J. Rice, of First church, El Paso, Tex., preached a sermon on December 10 on "When a Man's a Man." On the 17th President Waits and C. S. Weaver, of Texas Christian University, gave addresses at First church.

—Miss Cynthia P. Maus, secondary superintendent of the Bible School Department of the A. C. M. S., will speak at the Knoxville, Pittsburgh, church on January 7, and will hold an institute in the same place on the afternoon and evening of the following day.

—President F. W. Burnham attended all the southern conventions this year, except that of South Carolina. A. R. Moore, of Savannah, Ga., represented the American Society there.

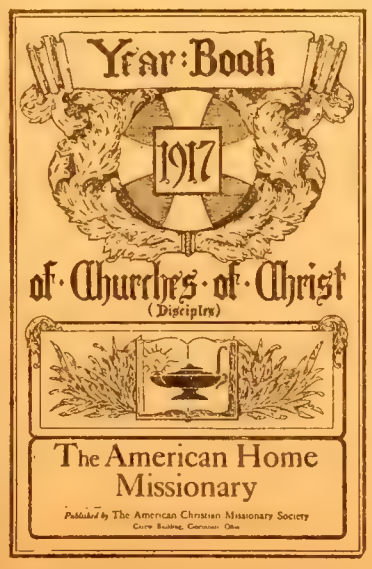
—The Workers' Conference text-book for the use of the Sunday schools during 1917 will be Cope's "The Evolution of the Sunday School."

—The church at Chico, Cal., has purchased a site for a new building, to be erected at some future time.

—President E. M. Waits, of Texas Christian University, will address the January 8 meeting of the Christian Pastors' Association of Dallas, Tex.

—The Beatrice, Neb., Disciples congregation, led by C. F. Stephens, is the largest in the city, having a membership of 1,365. Of the $8,000 raised by this church during the past year, one-fourth of it went for missions.

—F. F. Walters, who has been called from Wichita Falls, Tex., to Ninth Street church, Hopkinsville, Ky., will begin his new task the first Sunday in January.



—F. N. Calvin, of Central church, Waco, Tex., recently preached on "The Golden Rule as Applied to the High Cost of Living." A special invitation was extended to the wholesale and retail merchants of the city.

—W. A. Brundige, of Lima, Ohio, has been called to the pulpit of Indiana Avenue church, South Bend, Ind., to succeed O. J. Cohee, who recently accepted a chaplaincy in the army.

—H. C. Connelly, of Central church, New Albany, Ind., recently exchanged pulpits with a Presbyterian pastor of the city.

—C. W. Cauble, of Indianapolis, preached the sermon of dedication at Cicero, Ind. He was assisted by R. W. Crouch, the pastor; L. C. Howe, of Noblesville, and others.

—The Foreign Society reports that the new booklet, "Damoh Doings," is selling rapidly. It is of great interest to Endeavorers, especially as the Damoh Orphanage has been their especial work

The Year Book for 1917

Will be ready early in January.
This is the most valuable single publication among the Disciples of Christ.
It gives the annual statistics for the churches, and their missionary, benevolent and educational work all over the world.
The supply is regulated by the demand. Order your copy now.
No advance in price, fifty cents. This includes one year's subscription to THE AMERICAN HOME MISSIONARY.

The American Christian Missionary Society
CAREW BUILDING, CINCINNATI, OHIO
The Year Book is a fine publication to put in the hands of canvassers before making the Every-Member Canvass for nearly twenty years. This book is neatly bound and sells at ten cents. Write S. J. Corey, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio.

—S. J. White, of Joplin, Mo., has accepted the work at Shreve, Ohio.

—Osceola McNemar has resigned from the pastorate at El Paso, Ill. Mr. McNemar has served in this field for seven years, and has had unusual success with the young people.

—L. D. Anderson, who leads at First church, Fort Worth, Tex., is preaching a series of sermons for young people. The general theme is "Some Factors That Shape Character and Determine Destiny." Four of the sermon topics are: "Habit, Friend or Ally," "Companions," "Books and Reading," and "Amusements."

—The Society of First church, Marion, Ind., has become a Life-line in the Foreign Society, supporting Ishikawa Mitsu San, at Akita, Japan.

—Oliver W. Stewart, of Chicago, talked two weeks ago at Second church, Bloomington, Ill., on the work of the "Flying Squadron Foundation."

—Forest Avenue church, Buffalo, N. Y., has extended a call to A. R. Adams, of the Decatur Street church, Memphis, Tenn., to become its pastor. No decision is reported.

* * *

ILLINOIS NEWS NOTES

J. E. Pritchett of Kansas has accepted a call to West Frankfort and will begin the first of the year.

Report comes from Pike County that there are a number of part-time churches vacant in that section of the state.

Talmage Defrees is doing the work of his life at Mulberry Grove and Patoka. He was formerly pastor at Greenville and East St. Louis, but is finding great delight in his present arrangement.

G. W. Foley is closing a successful pastorate at Catlin, to take the work at Christopher the first of the year.

Geo. L. Thorpe of Atlanta is prepared to hold institutes on the life of Christ. He has a large number of charts and diagrams. The institute lasts from five to seven days.

J. A. McClees, Potomac, while pastor of the church at No. 10, Vermilion County, did a splendid work with the church at No. 8 by preaching at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoons.

Arthur is thriving under the faithful ministry of Victor W. Dorris of Paris. This church has a number of college and university graduates in its membership, and while not large in numbers, is strong in the things of the Kingdom.

Ernest H. Reed of Pontiac says he has invented something somewhat revolutionary in the matter of church finances. I hope he will astonish all of us with a new program for all our churches.

B. H. Sealock, Illiopolis, maintains that he has solved the problem of church finances. They have collection boxes in the doors of the church and the offerings for all causes, including the Sunday school, are made as the people come or go from church.

W. H. Waggoner, the missionary institute man, whose permanent address is Eureka, is one of our men. He is a graduate of Eureka College and is in the closest sympathy with all our work. The only objection I have to Mr. Waggoner is that he does not work in Illinois enough, but he says that is because other states take more interest in his work than we do. Brethren, I think this is a good hint. Address him at Eureka.

The Shelbyville church is making a great success of the Every Member Canvass. It is solving the financial problem of the church. The Sunday school observed a Giving Christmas.

In connection with his work at Buffalo, Bro. W. H. Kern is trying to save the work at Dawson by preaching as he has opportunity.

L. H. Hooe of Bowen reports frequent additions to the church, a Christian Endeavor averaging thirty-five in attendance, a Sunday school going beyond two hundred, and a mid-week prayer meeting with an average attendance of seventy.

The roll call at Versailles, conducted by the pastor, Major K. Griffith, was a great encouragement to the church because of the large number responding.

E. C. Harris, Decatur, who has recently come to this state from New Castle, Pa., preaches one-half time for the church at Gays, and could be secured by some good church in central Illinois for the other half-time.

Clayton makes good progress in the Kingdom. It is not difficult to tell the reason. B. S. M. Edwards is just beginning the seventh year of his ministry.

The Gibson City church is planning to become a Living Link with the Illinois Society. We need six or eight Living Links pretty badly.

The church at Eureka has recently become a Living Link with Secor, and plans, in co-operation with the church, to make this a notable village congregation.

A letter from Wm. G. McColley, 3149 Cherry street, Maplewood, Mo., says that he can hold two meetings in Illinois in 1917. We would like very much to have brother McColley hold these meetings for us. Who will write him?

The church at Kell, Marion County, has closed its doors. J. F. Rosborough, pastor at Salem, asked them to let him preach for them. A three weeks' meeting resulted in three additions, the Sunday school revived and a preacher employed.

Prof. A. C. Gray of Eureka College has been called to preach for the church at Deer Creek during the coming year.

The report has reached the office that our good church at Harristown contemplates a new building next year.

H. H. PETERS, State Secretary.

CHURCH EXTENSION RECEIPTS

During October and November 355 churches sent $4,080.65. This is a falling off of $1,459.11 in receipts from the churches and 35 less contributing churches than last year.

Our individual receipts show a gain of $8,668.83 over last year. This leaves a gain of $7,209.72 over the same period last year.

Since the last board meeting two new name funds have been paid in cash of $5,000 each. An annuity of $1,000 was received from Caroline M. Nelson of Karnes City, Tex.

The Board of Church Extension sends the following greetings to all the friends of church extension and to those whom we wish to make our friends:

A Merry Christmas wish to you—
A very Happy New Year, too—
And Health and Wealth the New Year through.

Send remittances to G. W. Muckley, corresponding secretary, 603 New England building, Kansas City, Mo.

THE LIFE OF CHRIST

will be the theme of the International Uniform Sunday School lessons for the first six months of next year. There is no other course of study that offers such an opportunity as this for interesting and profitable work in adult and young people's classes. There is no better method of conducting Bible class work than by the question method. This is the plan of study followed in the best text on Christ's life published—

"THE LIFE OF JESUS"

By Dr. Loa E. Scott

SEND 50c FOR A SAMPLE COPY OF THE BOOK.
IT SELLS IN LOTS OF 10 OR MORE AT 40c.

Disciples Publication Society

700 East Fortieth Street - - CHICAGO

Early in the New Year

The Christian Century will begin two series of vital and interesting articles the first announcement of which has already begun to attract new subscribers to the paper as no feature we have ever offered has done. Note the following:

A SERIES ON THE BIBLE

By Prof. Herbert L. Willett

Beginning with the issue of January 11.

This series will undertake to show the average Christian how the Bible grew; who its authors were; how the books came to be gathered into a single book; what is the relation of the Bible to other books; what Biblical Criticism means and what it has accomplished for the Bible; the lands, monuments and versions of the Bible; what is meant by the inspiration of the Bible; the authority of the Bible; the Bible in literature and art; the Bible and the public schools; the purpose and message of the Bible; typical modern uses of the Bible, etc.

These are but hints of the immense fund of practical knowledge about the Bible which Professor Willett will pack into twenty intensely interesting articles. Every Christian person who is in earnest with the Word of God will want to follow these articles week by week.

A SERIES ON THE DISCIPLES

By Charles Clayton Morrison

Beginning the middle of February.

The Editor of The Christian Century will tell in a series of articles why he is a Disciple. In bearing his testimony on this subject he will treat of the vital and urgent issues which today confront the Disciples of Christ, speaking with great frankness on such questions as The Present Trend of the Disciples' Movement; Outstanding Dangers; Doctrines and the Disciples; The Program of the Disciples; Are the Disciples a Denomination?; The Disciples and the new Age; The Disciples and the Future Church; What do the Disciples mean by Christian Unity?; Wherein are They Distinctive in Their Approach to the Problem of Unity?; etc. etc.

These articles will be constructive, discriminating, sympathetic and unusually candid in their treatment both of the Disciples and of conditions in the general Church.

Now is the time to introduce the "Century" to your friends.

Think up some of them and go after their two dollars! They will thank you every week throughout the year for calling their attention to these constructive and attractive features of this most vital religious newspaper.

Send names, addresses and cash to

The Christian Century

700 East 40th Street Chicago, Ill.

THE YEAR BOOK

One of the greatest contributions which the American Christian Missionary Society makes to the work of our churches is the presentation of their annual statistical report. This is called the Year Book, and it is the January issue of the American Home Missionary, the publication of the American Society. In its issuance all the missionary, benevolent and educational boards participate, so that it is really the one joint missionary magazine published among our people.

The new Year Book for 1917 will contain:

1. Brief statements concerning each state, provincial and national boards.
2. Complete list of all preachers and evangelists.
3. Statistical statements for each church and Bible school identified with the restoration movement.
4. Reports from the United States, Canada, Australia, England; indeed, from all the world.

It is the one indispensable book published for preachers and all church and Bible school workers. Many churches supply missionary committeemen, Bible school teachers, and other leaders, with this most valuable publication. Advance orders must be placed before the Year Book is issued.

The supply is regulated by the demand. Order your copy now. Address the

American Christian Missionary Society,
Carew Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A CORRECTION

In the Joint Apportionments which have gone out to the congregations, the budget of the Ministerial Relief Society is placed at $35,000, when it should have been $45,000. This increase of $10,000 was authorized by the convention at Des Moines, but was overlooked in the printing of the Joint Apportionment cards. Churches considering their apportionments should take these new figures into consideration.

The Joint Apportionment Committee.

NOTES FROM THE FOREIGN SOCIETY

Last week a friend in Ohio sent us $100 on the annuity plan. This is the ninth gift from this good friend. We are trusting that during these Christmas days many will remember the Lord's cause with annuity gifts and direct gifts.

The Mary Chiles Hospital, conducted by the Foreign Society at Manila, is rapidly becoming one of the leading centers of medicine and education in that city. The number of patients treated in one month is 2,600. Dr. J. W. Young, formerly of Hutchinson, Kans., is in charge.

The church at Bellefontaine, Ohio, Traverce Harrison, minister, becomes a living link in the Foreign Society and will in the future support their own missionary on the foreign field.

A. McLean will have been with the Foreign Society thirty-five years on the fourth of March next. That is the date of the annual offering in all the churches for foreign missions.

Bert Wilson will take up his work with the Foreign Society in the office at Cincinnati, January 1, 1917.

R. A. D[illegible], David Rioch and Dr. Jaggard are [hol]ding a series of very successful r[alli]es on the Pacific coast. This is the f[irst] time the Foreign Society has held [ral]lies in that part of the country. T[hey] are selling large numbers of book[s a]nd securing many subscriptions to the Missionary Intelligencer.

After the holidays the two teams will hold r[alli]es in the central part of the country. W. H. Hanna, C. P. Hedges and F[rank] McCall will cover Ohio, Indiana [and] Michigan. President McLean, Dr. O[liver] Wood and W. B. Alexander will cover [Illi]nois and Iowa. A series of rallies [will] be held also in western Pennsylvan[ia] West Virginia and Kentucky.

S. J. Corey, Secretary.

WE APPEAL
TO THE LOYALTY OF OUR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES

ALL ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES of the Disciples of Christ should give their loyal support to their own NATIONAL BOARD OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR by presenting the

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DAY PROGRAM ON THE LAST SUNDAY IN JANUARY, 1917
Which is Christian Endeavor Day

THE PROGRAM—"Voices from the World Field"—prepared for the use of our own societies on Endeavor Day, is in many respects the best program ever issued by this Board.

The program is a series of short addresses prepared especially for the young people of the Churches of Christ by the leaders of our Missionary, Educational and Benevolent agencies. There is also an address by Dr. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore on the "HISTORY AND POSITION OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST." IT IS THE MOST COMPLETE AND HELPFUL program ever offered our societies and with a little planning and preparation will make a great Christian Endeavor Day meeting.

THIS PROGRAM will be sent FREE in any desired quantity to all Endeavor Societies making application, on condition that an offering be taken during the meeting and forwarded to the National Board of Christian Endeavor.

DISCIPLE ENDEAVORERS get in line now for the greatest Christian Endeavor Day in our history, by sending your order at once for the Endeavor Day Program.

Address CLAUDE E. HILL, Nat'l Supt. Station Chattanooga, Tenn.

THE TWO BEST LESSON COMMENTARIES
FOR 1917
TARBELL'S GUIDE
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage
PELOUBET'S NOTES
$1.15 Plus 10c Postage
Disciples Publication Society
700 EAST FORTIETH STREET CHICAGO

The Lessons for the First Half of 1917 Are on the Life of Christ

The New York Christian Advocate says: "This is probably the most important in English on the place of Baptism in Christianity written since Mozley published his 'Baptismal Regeneration' in 1856."

THE MEANING OF BAPTISM

By Charles Clayton Morrison

Editor The Christian Century

Central Christian Advocate: "A profound scholar, a deeply spiritual follower of the Master, a [Me]thodist): "A profound scholar, a deeply among men, something of a mystic, we could well believe that if any p[erson] could show the way to Christian unity, Charles Clayton Morrison belongs [to] the select few."

The Presbyterian Advance: "The editor of this paper welcomes the appearance of this volume, for it enables [him] for the first time in his life to answer a question which has often been [ask]ed of him by correspondents and readers—"What is the best book on baptism?"

The Continent (Presbyterian): "It required courage to publish this book. It is by a minister of the Disciples [Ch]urch, which has been peculiarly strenuous in behalf of the scriptural necessity of immersion, and he writes that 'the effect of our study is absolutely to break down the notion that any divine authority whatsoever stands behind the p[rac]tice of immersion.'"

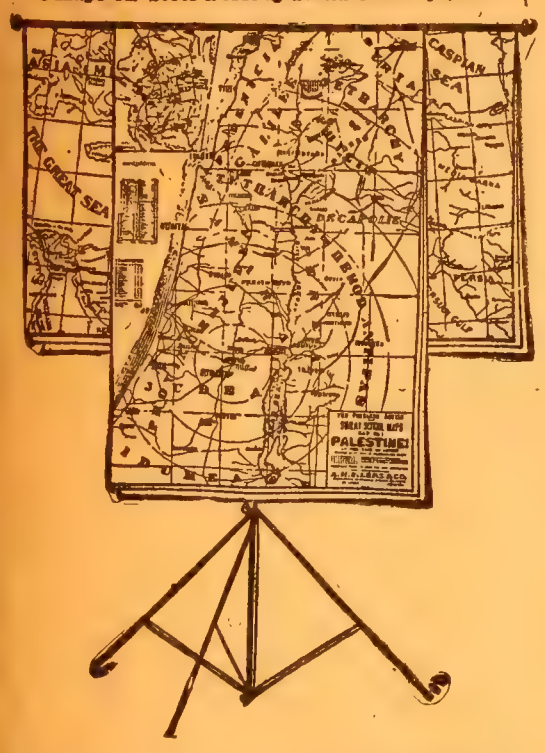
The Congregationalist: "[Sh]ining and splendidly Christian piece of work."

The Homiletic Review: "The spirit of the book is delightful and raises new hopes where none had seemed p[os]sible"

Price Per Copy, Postpaid

Disciples Publication Society, 700 East 40th St., Chicago

An Ideal Course for Adult and Young People's Classes



Dr. Loa E. Scott's "Life of Jesus"

A study of the life of the Master in 52 lessons. Bristling with questions, and requiring a study of the Bible itself. The finest course yet offered for adult and young people's classes. Price in lots of 10 or more, 40c. Single copy, 50c.

Disciples Publication Society :: :: 700 E. 40th St., Chicago, Ill.

The Peerless Series of Sunday School Maps

6 Maps on Steel Folding Stand for only $3.50.

The special feature of this excellent set of maps, are, their clearness. The names of places in large print, feint mountains, various styles of lettering so as to be pleasing to the eye and the tone of the colors, which are both attraactive and harmonious. From the latest explorations and discoveries

This grand set of six Maps consists of the following:

New Testament Palestine — Old Testament Palestine — Roman Empire showing Pauls Travels — Bible Lands of the Old Testament — The Exodus, Egypt to Canaan — Ancient Jerusalem.

Printed on linen finish cloth in 6 colors size 19x27. Mounted on folding steel stand can be raised, lowered or turned in any direction on the revolving frame so the largest classes can see them, being on a line with the faces of Scholars when seated. Making them the most practical Helps in Student and Class Work When not in use can be easily folded up Price $3.50 net and for 30c extra will be sent prepaid to any Express office. Single maps of the above sent prepaid on receipt of 60 cents.

Similar to abov on a larger Scale are 5 Eilers Sunday School Maps on a very strong Revolving Adjustable Steel Stand about 6½ feet high, 36x48 to 36x57 on linen finished loth These Five thoroughly up to date Maps Consist of the following

New Testament Palestine,—Old Testament Palestine,—Roman empire and Bible Lands, showing Pauls Travels by Colored lines.—Lands of the Old Testament, from the Great Sea, to the Persian Gulf —The Exodus, Egypt, showing by Colored lines the wanderings of the Isreelites. Price of any single Maps $1.00

On account of its portability, this Stand and Maps are the most helpful aids in teaching Bible History. To avoid errors in ordering specify Eilers Maps on Revolving Steel Stand Price $6.50 will be sent prepaid to anv Express office for 60 cents additional.

DISCIPLES PUBLICATION SOCIETY
700 E. 40th St., : Chicago, Ill.

Baptismal Suits

We can make prompt shipments. Order Now. Finest quality and most satisfactory in every way. Order by size of boot.

Disciples Publication Society
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

We Read and clip for you daily everything printed in the current country and city press of America pertaining to the subject of particular interest to you.

Newspapers contain many items daily which would inform you exclusively of where you can secure new business, an order or a contract; where a new store has been started, a new firm incorporated or a contract is to be let. A daily press clipping service means more business.

For You Send Stamp for Booklet

The Consolidated Press Clipping Company
MANHATTAN BUILDING, CHICAGO

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

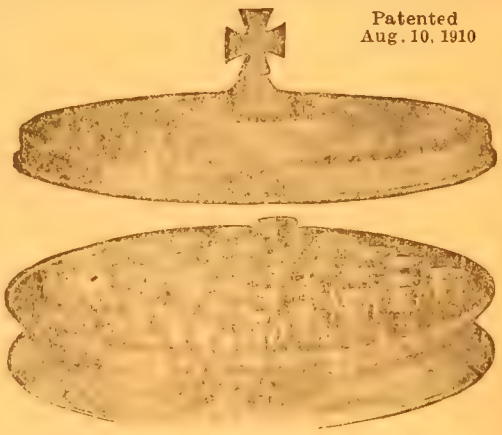
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 27
(Established 1858)
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY - - HILLSBORO, OHIO

625 NEW Bible STORIES
Illustrations & Scripture Anecdotes
Short Stories Illustrating Bible Truths. Indexed for Teachers, Ministers, Students and Speakers in Meetings. Ever ready Stories to Emphasize your point. Fine for General Home Reading and Instruction of Children. Vest Pocket size, 128 pgs. Cloth, 25c. Mor. 35c, postpd. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Have you read the startling truths in the Book

FROM THE BALL ROOM TO HELL
A Dancing Master's experience. 25c postpaid. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago.



750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies; for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Vest Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT
Which is the Word of God
Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Spiritual, Scriptural, vest pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postp'd; stamps taken. Agts. wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

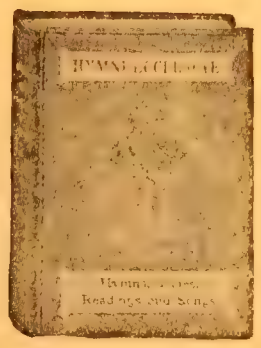
The Peerless Communion Service

Patented Aug. 10, 1910



Send for our complete circular

Disciples Publication Society
700 E. 40th St. Chicago, Ill.

HYMNS OF THE CHURCH

OUR LATEST CHURCH HYMNAL

Edited by Dungan, Philputt, Excell and Hackleman

One Book for All Purposes

This Hymnal is used in hundreds of our large and small churches in lots of 100 to 500 copies

Athens, Ga.	Third, Ind'p'lis, Ind.	Bowling Green, Mo.
Visalia, Cal.	Seventh, Ind'p'lis, Ind.	Walla Walla, Wash.
Madisonville, Ky.	Englewood, Ind'p'lis, Ind.	Kentland, Ind.
Sixth, Ind'p'lis, Ind.	Macon, Ga.	Washburne, Ill.
New Castle, Pa.	Bristol, Tenn.	Birmingham, Ala.
Newport. Ky.	Cleghorn, Ia.	Jackson, Miss.
Dayton, Wash.	East Liverpool, O.	Waxahachie, Texas.
Gary, Ind.	Enid, Okla.	Sullivan, Ind.
Bluefield, W. Va.	Mankato, Minn.	Fayetteville, Ark.
Rock Island, Ill.	Mt. Pulaski, Ill.	Wellsville, O.
Fowler, Cal.	Lancaster, Ky.	Newark, O.

E. L. Powell's Church in Louisville, Ky., Uses 600 Copies!

Part One: STANDARD HYMNS and TUNES and RESPONSIVE READINGS. 352 pages.

Part Two: GOSPEL SONGS selected from America's best writers—best the world affords. Published with Part One Only, making 544 pages.

RETURNABLE SAMPLES TO PASTORS OR CHOIR LEADERS

Bound in Silk Cloth and Leather Back with Beautiful Side Title.
Well sewed with extra Tape Hinges, and durable.

PRICE { Part One and Two: Cloth $75.00; Leather Back $95.00 } Per { Part One Only: Cloth $50. " " 65.00 } 10

AFTER MARCH 1, 1917

The subscription price of

The Christian Century

will be $2.50, payable in advance. Until that date subscriptions, both new and renewal, will be accepted at the old rate of $2.00 per year for one year or longer.

¶ In addition to the recent enlargement and improvement of The Christian Century, it is the purpose of the publishers to further increase the attractiveness of the paper before the new rate goes into effect.

¶ This slight increase in subscription rate does not apply to ministers, whose subscriptions will continue to be received at the old rate of two dollars per year.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY
33
1916

DATE	ISSUED TO